Report Counter Proposals Made to Russian Plan

Russia is Urged For Pledges of Aid In East Europe

Immediate Declaration That Military Aid Will be Given is Sought of Russia

RUSSIAN PROPOSALS

Chamberlain Says No Compulsory National Register Would Replace Voluntary Register

By J. F. SANDERSON
Canadian Press Staff Writer

London, May 1—(CP Cable)—The British and French governments have made counter proposals to Russia's plan for a triple alliance to stop aggression in Europe, it was reported on high authority tonight.

Informed sources declared Russia had been asked to make an immediate declaration that her military resources would be placed at the disposal of any eastern European state which was attacked.

The declaration would be interim protection to countries fearing aggression and would be similar to pledges by Great Britain and France to aid in the defence of Poland, Rumania and Greece.

"With Dispatch"

Earlier today Prime Minister Chamberlain told the House of Commons that conversations with Russia concerning enlistment of Soviet participation in the anti-aggression bloc are being carried on "with all possible dispatch."

Following a special cabinet meeting at which the progress of conversations with Russia was dis-

Why the Weather!

By Major A. H. Thiessen
Science Service Meteorologist

May Day! In former time May Day was widely celebrated; it was a public holiday, and all classes, young and old, went early to the woods bringing back branches of trees and flowers; and a May-pole of birch. In this case the pole was temporarily set up, but in larger towns, the May-pole was permanent. As May Day was generally considered the end of winter and beginning of summer, another feature was a mock battle between one party of young folks representing the waning winter and another the more vigorous and coming summer. Both sides were gaily and appropriately attired to represent the two opposing seasons. This drama always ended by the triumph of summer.

NEWS ODDITIES AND BRIEFS

RACING PIGEON TAKES SLOW RIDE ON TUG

Port Stanley, Ont., May 1 (CP)—The wheelhouse roof of a fishing tug was the perch of a hitch-hiking racing pigeon for 30 miles. When the vessel docked here, the bird, which was fed by members of the crew, took up its flight towards its destination. The pigeon was not tame enough to be handled and the number of its legband was not ascertained.

COWS PLAY ROLE IN MAY-DECEMBER ROMANCE

Pittsburgh, May 1 (AP)—Three cows played cupid's role in this romance. Mrs. Maude Short, 61, asked Charles Dowling, 36, to take care of her cows after her second husband died in 1937.

"He's been coaxing me to get married for a year, but I keep holding out. Finally I broke down," said the widow.

Mrs. Short's first husband died before Dowling was born.

ADVERTISES FOR HOUSEKEEPER IN BARREL OF APPLES

St. Martins, Guernsey, Channel Islands, May 1 (CP)—Inside a barrel of Canadian apples sent to a firm of fruit merchants here warehouseman T. Carre found a note, "Housekeeper wanted. Farm well stocked," bearing the address of a farmer in Kingston, N.S. Carre has written to the farmer, saying the domestic servant shortage is as acute here as it is in Canada.

POLAND WOULD FIGHT SAYS POLISH MINISTER

Halifax, May 1 (CP)—Antoni Roman, Secretary of State and Minister of Trade and Commerce for Poland, said Sunday in an interview his country would "fight to the last against any invader."

PLEADS GUILTY TO FALSE STORY OF HOLDUP

Cornwall, Ont., May 1 (CP)—Eli Gauthier, Cornwall, was remanded by Magistrate P. C. Bergeron for a "joke he tried to pull on police that backfired" after he admitted that a story he told police of being held up by a gunman April 22 and robbed was false. He was fined $20 and costs on a charge of "wilfully and knowingly giving false information to police."

HEAVY EARTHQUAKE FELT ON JAPANESE ISLAND

Akita, Japan, May 1 (AP)—An earthquake, described as the strongest in 25 years, today disrupted traffic, cut communication lines and caused other damage throughout northern Honshu, the main Japanese island. The shock lasted 27 seconds. Its epicentre was believed to be in the Japan Sea.

World War Foreseen Senator Expects Attack on Poland

Toronto, May 1—(CP)— State Senator Stanley Nowak of Detroit thinks British labor forces have placed themselves in a contradictory position by their opposition to conscription in Britain.

"Labor was the strongest critic of the vacillating policy of the British government in its relations with the authoritarian states and now that the only possible definite stand has been taken, it is still the loudest critic," Senator Nowak said.

The Polish-born Senator said he felt his native land would be attacked next by Germany. "I know that if Poland is invaded or a hostile move made against her, she will fight. In that event there will be nothing for Great Britain and France to do but go to her aid and that will mean a world war."

TORONTO TAXIMAN SHOT IN ABDOMEN BY YOUNG BANDIT

THREE HOLDUPS

Toronto, May 1—(CP)—A minor crime wave in Central and Western Ontario during the week-end left two men in Toronto General Hospital with bullet wounds and police with three unsolved hold-ups on their lists.

The most concentrated police action in Toronto since the murder of James Windsor in January followed the shooting of Lawrence Owen, 25-year-old taxi-driver who got a bullet in the abdomen when he defied a young gunman's orders to hand over his money. Hospital authorities said Owen's condition early today remained unchanged and critical.

Police Concentrated

The shooting at Church and Granby Streets, almost in the heart of the city, brought a concentration of police in the district and resulted soon afterwards in the capture of an alleged auto thief. Police shot at a stolen car near where Owen was wounded and hit one of three men in the car in the thigh. He gave his name as Kenneth Smyth, 24.

Smyth's condition was not serious. His companions escaped.

The man who shot Owen, described as well-dressed, slim and young, was believed to be the same man who broke into a home in suburban Swansea and was chased out by Hilda Fox shortly before telephoning Owen's company to pick him up in the west end of the city. Miss Fox said she disobeyed an order to

FREDERICTON RINK BURNS

Fredericton, N.B., May 1—(CP)—Fire of unknown origin last night destroyed the Arctic Rink and for a time threatened the heart of this capital city's business district. Loss was estimated at $25,000.

Two Bombing Planes to be Used To Refuel Trans-Ocean Planes

Montreal, May 1—(CP)— Built originally for war purposes, but now converted into peace-time usefulness, two large bombing planes were towed across the St. Lawrence River to Longueuil today, ready to be assembled as refueling planes for trans-Atlantic clippers.

The planes—Handley Page Harrow bombers with twin Bristol engines—were lifted in sections from the freighter Beaverford yesterday. They will be assembled at Longueuil and flown to Newfoundland to take their place as important cogs in Imperial Airways' trans-Atlantic machine.

Flight Lieutenants H. C. Johnson and D. D. Atkinson of the Royal Air Force Corps reserve will fly the ships to Newfoundland airport in about two weeks, in readiness for opening of trans-Atlantic mail service sometime in June. The planes will be based at Newfoundland airport, a giant airport hewed out of dense forest at what was formerly known at Hattie's Camp, 300 miles north of St. John's and a short distance by air from Botwood, a stop-off place for the Clippers.

Refueling of the trans-ocean planes while in flight would mean the difference between a pay-load and a losing-money flight, Johnson said when he arrived here.

Refuel in 15 Minutes

"High wing loading, as we call it, makes it possible for a plane to carry sufficient fuel to take her across the Atlantic and carry a pay-load as well," he explained. "While the air-liner is in the air, our planes will transfer fuel weighing in all 7,000 pounds, an additional weight that it would be impossible for the liner to lift from ground-level with safety."

The transfer of fuel will take about 15 minutes. Eastbound planes will make Botwood their last stopping point on the west side of the Atlantic. Taking off with a full load, they will receive between 950 and 1,000 gallons of extra gasoline from the refuelers as they head out across the Atlantic to Eire.

Fuel will pass from the tanker plane to the clipper at a 130-gallon-a-minute rate through a 700-foot length of rubber hose, fastened by an automatic grappling device to the port wing-tip of the clipper.

MILITARY PARADE IS LARGEST EVER HELD IN MOSCOW

Russia Celebrates 50th Anniversary of International May Day

600 PLANES IN FLIGHT

Defence Commissar Emphasized Soviet Preparedness for War

Moscow, May 1—(AP)—The biggest military display ever seen in Moscow's red square stressed the Soviet's armed preparedness today as Russia celebrated the 50th anniversary of the international May Day.

Six hundred warplanes—including 360 two-engined bombers, 144 combat planes and a number of new types such as the four-engined "flying battleship"—roared over the Kremlin as the soldiers of the red army marched through the square.

Artillery and tanks thundered across the square in quantities hitherto unequalled in the Soviet and the bayonets of tens of thousands of soldiers flashed in the bright sunlight.

Stalin Reviews Troops

Joseph Stalin, according to Soviet officials, reviewed the parade of armed might from the top of Lenin's tomb. From the press and diplomatic sections of the grandstands, however, he could not be seen.

BODY RECOVERED FROM THE RIVER

Father of Child Believes Mother Also Died With Child

Cornwall, Ont., May 1 (CP)—Recovery of the body of a six-months-old baby boy from the St. Lawrence River here yesterday led police to believe his mother, Mrs. Frank Wilhelm, 35, may also have drowned.

Her husband told police she had an obsession about being forced to return to Germany. On April 9, the day before she disappeared with the child, Mrs. Wilhelm said she would "go to the river before returning to Germany."

While police dragged the river in possibility of finding her body, Mr. Wilhelm, who identified the child, said he could not explain his wife's fears of being forced to return to

Duke of Connaught Celebrates Birthday

Bayshot, Park, Surrey, England May 1 —(CP Cable)—The Duke of Connaught, son of Queen Victoria, today observed his 89th birthday quietly at his home here.

The Duke had hoped to go to London for the day, but owing to his health and advanced age he changed his plans. He is keenly interested in the trip of the King and Queen to Canada where he served as Governor General during the Great War. Their Majesties visited him yesterday.

TORONTO YOUTH DROWNED

Toronto, May 1 — (AP) — Jack Vickers, 17, was drowned last night and two companions rescued when their punt capsized in Lake Ontario off Ward's Island.

Calvert Nutt, 16, and John Graham, 17, clung to the side of the punt for several minutes when they were picked up by two men from the island. Vickers, who elected to try for shore, went down in four feet of water close to land.

LARGE GOLD SHIPMENT REACHES OTTAWA

Ottawa, May 1—(CP)—A shipment of gold, reported to be the largest ever to reach Ottawa, arrived in the city today. Closely guarded by 12 plainclothes officers, the shipment was believed to be from Great Britain. Bank of Canada officials declined to disclose any details of the shipment.

COMMANDS ROYAL SHIP

Admiral Sir Dudley North will command the Canadian liner Empress of Australia, which is shortly to be commissioned as a "royal yacht" to carry the King and Queen to Canada.

PARLIAMENT MAY BE PROROGUED BY KING ON MAY 19

Course of Budget Debate Will be Indication of This Action

LITTLE LEGISLATION

Ottawa, May 1—(CP)—Course of the budget debate, which resumes in the House of Commons today, may give the most definite indication whether or not parliament will conclude its work in time for prorogation by the King on May 19.

Only the desire of members to register their views on actions or inaction of the government delays proceedings in parliament. On the budget debate there is a wide latitude for such expressions, and it is possible members will decide to content themselves with this opportunity and restrict further debate to the technical aspects and the principles of what legislation remains to be disposed of.

From all parties there have been statements of willingness to co-operate to the extent that prorogation by His Majesty may be possible but with the qualification from the Social Credit and C.C.F. members that they frown on any appearance of haste and that they still have ideas they wish to present for possible adoption by the government.

New York, May 1 —(AP)— A Canadian Scotsman won the Screwy News Sweepstakes by five lengths this week—he sent the government 10 cents because he'd been filling his fountain pen in post office inkwells for 20 years.

A man armed with six lollipops tried to hold up J. P. Morgan and Company for $1,000,000....A Pennsylvania man built a bird cage in his cellar so big he couldn't get it out....

A New York prisoner's bail was reduced so he could take the police examination .... Jesse James' nephew was appointed a marshal in Liberty, Mo.....some Pittsburgh pickets put on roller skates....

A Massachusetts girl walked four miles in her sleep, and an Ohio man slept right on while burglars took his wallet from under his pillow....an Oregon golfer hit a 20-inch trout, which he took home for supper....an Illinois sheriff finished giving out 16,390 candy bars to children to fulfill a campaign promise....

A Missouri jury was locked up at night while the defendant was allowed to go home.... a race was staged in Texas between a cow pony and a bicycle.

RUSSIAN FLIERS REACH OBJECTIVE WITHOUT PLANE

LOST THEIR COURSE

Compass Froze When They Went to 27,000 Feet to Escape Fog

New York, May 1—(CP)— Two Russian aviators, Brigadier-General Vladimiar Kokkinaki and his navigator-radio operator, Major Mikhail Gordienko, reached their objective today—the New York World's Fair—after having been forced to break a projected non-stop flight from Moscow at bleak Miscou Island on New Brunswick's eastern shore.

The Soviet airmen landed here last night from Moncton, N.B., in a 14-passenger plane chartered by Russian officials and piloted by Russell K. Tlaw. Earlier yesterday Kokkinaki and Gordienko were "ferried" to Moncton by Canadian Airways planes from the scene of the crack-up.

CAUSE OF DEATH TO BE DETERMINED

District Coroner Says Usual Signs of Strangulation Missing

Wakefield, Que., May 1—(CP)—Solution of how William Bates, 63-year-old retired farmer, met his death rested today upon the result of an autopsy to be performed by Dr. J. M. Rousel, medico-legal expert from Montreal.

A quarter-inch rope, a blood-stained sledge hammer and a blood-smeared pocketknife were all considered potential instruments of death.

He was found hanging from a rafter in his barn, but Dr. Josephat Isabelle, district coroner, said there were no signs of strangulation. Over the man's right eye was a deep wound which police considered may have been caused by the sledge or jackknife found on the barn floor.

Coroner Isabelle said the indentations the rope made in Bates' neck did not indicate death had been by strangulation, neither were there such other usual signs as protruding tongue and darkened face. Bates' left hand was covered with blood and so was his face.

Around Neck Twice

The rope had been wrapped twice around his neck and knotted, suspending him from a rafter with his toes barely touching a milk stool.

The Bates family could not identify the jackknife. They said the sledge belonged to the victim but was usually kept in another shed.

Ill for some months, Bates arose as usual Sunday and lit the fire in the kitchen stove. His wife was unable to dissuade him from his announced intention of going to church later in the morning. He went out into the farmyard, and 30 minutes later Mrs. Mary Elder, his sister-in-law, found his body.

Wakefield is 15 miles north of Ottawa.

Says Germany is to be Aggressive If She Thinks Opposition Weak

London, May 1—(CP-Havas) — Chancellor Hitler's Reichstag speech Friday has led some observers here to deduce that Germany "may wait until August or September before taking decisive action against Poland," the diplomatic correspondent of the Sunday Times (Independent) wrote yesterday.

Responsible opinion in London, he added is "very insistent that Britain, if she were to fight, would not be fighting for Danzig but for the balance of power in Europe since if Germany succeeded in neutralizing the east, she would then be strong enough to dictate her own terms in the west."

The diplomatic correspondent of the Observer, Conservative, said :—

"The simplification of the Polish problem in its turn is understood to have further confirmed Rumania's community of outlook which resulted from Foreign Minister Gafencu's visit to London last week, for Rumania's problem is akin to Poland's."

Scrutator, commentator on foreign affairs, writing in the Sunday Times, declared:

"What Hitler says matters less than what he does. It is reasonable to assume that Hitler is sincere in wishing to avoid a clash, at any rate with the two great powers of western Europe.

"Our new policy is based solely on the conviction that Germany's policy towards her neighbors is governed largely by the amount of force that it has to overcome.

"If Germany thinks it is negligible and that in no circumstances can weaker powers count on our help, as she must have thought before she annexed Czecho-Slovakia, her policy will be one of violence."

Speeches Delivered To German Youth, Reich Workers

Says Youth Must be Prepared to "Conquer to Win Our Rights, and, of Necessary, to Defend Them"

GERMANY ARMING

As Chancellor Speaks, Nazi Diplomats Pressed Efforts to Isolate Poland in Attempt to Make Her Yield

Berlin, May 1—(CP)—Chancellor Hitler today disclaimed any desire for war shortly after he had told more than 100,000 members of German youth organizations that they must be prepared to "conquer to win our rights and, if necessary, to defend them."

Speaking to the Reich's "brawn and brain" workers, the Chancellor hit out in the second of his two May Day addresses at charges Germany desires war and said:

"We love peace....I have enough grounds to want peace to complete enterprises that need 10 to 20 years."

"International agitators," the Fuehrer told the workers, "are working against Germany with all their means and I am arming Germany with all my means."

The remark was greeted with loud applause.

As the Chancellor spoke, Nazi diplomats pressed efforts to isolate Poland in an attempt to make her yield to German demands.

Unify Nazi Reich

The Chancellor and his lieutenants seized upon May Day celebrations to unify the Nazi Reich and strengthen the offensive against "international enemies" which Hitler began with his Friday speech.

The Chancellor told 132,000 members of the Hitler youth organizations to place no faith in "slogans poinsoning peoples and seeking to destroy us."

"The world speaks of rights; but for long years it denied them to us," the Fuehrer said. "The national resurrection has put an end to this epoch. It is you who will terminate it definitely.

"Others are not thinking of giving our people their vital rights. If some day they try to attack our liberty, the youth who stand before me would become millions of men. The world will fail, as it has always failed, thanks to German unity."

Special Units Participate

Participating in the demonstration were special units of the youth aviation groups, the motorized corps and the youth naval organizations.

$150,000 FIRE AT ALEXANDRIA BAY

Two Hotels and Two Business Buildings Burned

Alexandria Bay, N.Y., May 1 —(AP)—Two hotels and two business buildings burned and several nearby buildings were damaged in a fire which raced through part of the business section here yesterday. The loss was estimated at $150,000.

Destroyed were the St. Lawrence Inn, the Carlton Hotel and two adjoining buildings.

Henry Gokey, operator of both hotels, said the fire was started by a cigarette left on the top floor of the Carlton. He said the Carlton, owned by Joseph Garlock of Boonville, was destroyed at a loss of $35,000 and that the loss in the St. Lawrence Hotel, owned by the Clayton National Bank, was $50,000.

POLAND MAY SEEK CONTROL DANZIG TO BLOCK NAZIS

Newspaper States This Would Forestall German Annexation

Warsaw, May 1—(CP-Havas) — Another German-Polish clash was reported here today as the press expressed the conviction that Foreign Minister Joseph Beck would not limit himself to a mere rejection of German demands on Poland when he addresses parliament this week.

A number of Poles were reported to have been beaten and injured by Nazis in a clash which occurred in the town of Appeln, German Silesia, according to dispatches in the newspaper Kurjer Warszawski.

The violence flared up when the director of a Polish theatrical troupe was clubbed by Nazis. A group of Poles who had planned to attend the performance and attempted to aid Sobianski also were attacked, the dispatch said.

Public Sentiment

At the same time it was understood that Beck would go beyond a mere rejection of the German claims on Poland regarding Danzig and an extra-territorial passage through the Polish Corridor.

Such an attitude would be in line with public sentiment in Poland which feels that in countering a German "offensive" it is more suitable to take an offensive rather than a defensive attitude, observers said.

"The Danzig problem would not exist if in 1920 General Haller and his troops had occupied Danzig, which would not have been a difficult matter," the Kurjer Warszawski commented.

Warsaw, May 1—(AP)—Possibility that Poland might seek control of Danzig Free City to forestall any German action toward annexation by force was raised today by the official gazetta Polska.

The newspaper, citing what it termed violation of international agreements by Germany, said "the policy of Berlin creates a situation which will cause the Polish government to further its demands concerning establishment of new guarantees for Polish rights and Polish

DEPUTATION EXPECTED TO ATTEND MEETING

Mayor Jamieson Bone was advised this morning that a deputation of citizens will attend Monday evening's meeting of the city council which deputation will, it is intimated, voice strong opposition to any suggestion of the Board of Education that a $50,000 addition to Queen Mary School be constructed this year.

Board of Education at last evening's meeting agreed that an official and formal requisition for the issuance of debentures to care for this addition will be made. In the event of refusal of council to authorize this, Board of Education, under the Ontario School Act, it was stated by one Board member, may have the perogative of having this debenture issue for $50,000 put to the vote of the citizens of Belleville.

NEW TOURIST FOLDER CONTAINS MAP AND LIST TOURIST CAMPS

Featured by an entirely new and more complete road map of Hastings County district showing the complete network of main highways west to Port Hope, north to Sturgeon Falls and east to the new International Bridge and Perth section, the new 1939 tourist folder prepared and issued jointly by the County of Hastings and City of Belleville was made available this week at the office of the Chamber of Commerce. Hundreds of the folders will be mailed to various sections of the United States as well as in Canada. The book also lists tourist camps and locations through the district.

94 BOXES CHEESE SOLD SATURDAY

First cheese sale of the season from a district factory, has been registered at the local office of J. L. Irwin, Dominion dairy grader. The sale of 94 boxes from Cloverdale factory was made to W. R. McCreary, Belleville buyer, on Saturday, but the purchase price was not announced.

Majority of factories of the Central district were expected to be in operation this week, it is reported by the office of the grader.

KINGSTON TO PROVIDE SPECIAL ROUTE FOR THROUGH TRAFFIC

Residents of the city and travellers are advised that special arrangements are being made at the city of Kingston for the handling of through traffic on May 21st during the time of the visit of the King and Queen there. At a conference of city council and road officials, it was decided that traffic will be skirted around the edge of Kingston to avoid downtown congestion.

Traffic travelling east will detour at the Bath Road and Princess Street, down Concession Street, then turn left on Division Street, and proceed to what is known as Elliotts Road, then turn left and proceed to Kingston Mills, and then go south on to Highway No. 15, afterwards turning left to Highway No. 2 and then continue east. The traffic going west will follow the same route.

This detour will go into effect on Sunday morning, May 21, at 9 o'clock and highway officers will be stationed at each end of the detour to mark the turning off point.

GOVERNMENT DOCK READY FOR CARGOES

The "open for business" sign figuratively hung on the knob of the Harbormaster's door at the Government dock this morning and for the first time this season an air of activity permeated the harbor. No ship arrivals are immediately scheduled on the harbor logbook, but it is expected that the first call of the steamer Glen Allan, now loading in the east will be made at about the end of the present week. Queries were being made this morning by Harbormaster Jos. Waddell regarding the probable arrival of the first colliers and tankers with solid and fluid cargoes for local companies.

The harbor gauge shows the present level of the bay about two feet higher than summer normal, with no apparent drop observed since the Spring break-up.

Repainting of the warehouse on the dock was commenced this morning in order to have the job completed before fly time.

APRIL CUSTOMS FEES TOTAL $93,193.04

An increase of $9,929.37 in fees collected at the local Port of Customs was registered for the month of April just ended over those collected during the same month one year ago. Total collections for April, 1939, as reported by Col. E. A. Geen, in charge of the local office, reached $93,193.04, as against $83,263.67 for April, 1938.

FIRST DANDELIONS START TO APPEAR

Golden heads of the season's first dandelions have appeared above ground on vacant lots of the city, and on Sunday afternoon a colorful handful of the weeds was carried by a little girl up Front St.

Wild flowers are also reported blossoming in the nearby woods, and on Sunday car loads of local and district residents invaded the woodlots in search of the first flowers but with indifferent success, it was stated by one family.

APRIL BUILDING PERMITS TOTAL $2,455

Spring building experienced a fair start during the month of April, a total of $2,455.00 being involved in permits issued during the month by the local office of the building inspector. The outlook for the season appears more promising it is reported in building circles.

During April new permits were issued at the city hall to: G. W. Clarke for the stuccoing of a home at 30 Ridley Street, estimated $225; W. S. Northcott, tool storehouse, 15 Railway Terrace, $80; Howe and Hagerman, reconstruction of salesroom and warehouse at 185 Pinnacle Street, $200; Miss Margaret Nova, new cottage, 46 Gordon St., $1500; Wm. Cooke, new store front, 223 Front St., $400; H. Harris, 18 Burrell Street, cottage, $450; P. R. Wotten, sleeping porch, 53 Catherine St., $100, and to W. Simmons for the construction of a new cottage on Burton St, at $500.

HIGHWAY REPAIRS STARTED TODAY

Extensive repairs to Highway No. 2 in the vicinity east of Belleville are being carried out with work on the road commencing today, Motorcycle Patrolman Sam Ervine announced today. The repair work will continue over the new 4-lane highway immediately east of Bellevilel and continue as far east as Marysville. An additional fifty men will be employed on the project and will be under the supervision of Superintendent Wilson of the Highways Department. "Work on the west end of the project, where it is needed most, will commence immediately, Officer Ervine revealed today.

Police Blotter

Several cases of minor stealing were reported to Belleville police over the week end.

A. Wonnacott, 292 Front St., reported the theft of a fog light from the front of his automobile. The vehicle had been parked at the rear of his business establishment on Saturday night, at which time the light was stolen.

Duncan Lewis, Dunbar St., reported the theft of a motor rug from his parked car on Front St., late Saturday night. The rug was taken during Mr. Lewis' absence while shopping.

Wesley Potts, 81 South Front St., reported the theft of a generator from off his bicycle. The generator was used to generate power for a bicycle light.

Dan Mumby, Shannonville, complained of the loss of several parts of his motorcycle, which he had been forced to park on East College St., while making repairs on Saturday night. Several valuable parts were stolen while Mr. Mumby was away making the necessary repairs, he discovered upon his return.

P. C. Ellis, investigated the report of a shooting in the vicinity of East College St., over the week end. The officer later discovered a teen-aged boy had been discharging a .22 calibre rifle, which was annoying residents nearby. The lad was warned to discontinue such practices in the future.

Minor property damage resulted when a motor car driven by Stephen Bowerman, Bloomfield, collided with the rear end of another automobile on Highway No. 14, four miles north of Belleville early Sunday morning. Frederick C. Norman, 143 Pinnacle St., Belleville, was proceeding southerly and was slowing up to stop when Mr. Bowerman collided with the rear of the Bowerman vehicle, as both vehicles were proceeding in the same direction. Motorcycle Patrolman Sam Ervine investigated and revealed today that charges were pending.

Three persons, including a woman, were apprehended over the week end on charges of intoxication.

THE PLANETARY configurations bearing rule on the affairs of this day are interpreted as generally adverse. Static or congested conditions delays and disappointments may have a frustrating effect, even though drastic action is taken to break up such tenacious obstacles. Elders may prove an opposing force. Use strategy; shun impetuosity.

Those whose birthday it is are confronted by a year in which progress and good fortune depend entirely upon judicious and diplomatic conduct. These traits should be employed in breaking up crystallized conditions, even when an impediment or adverse situation makes forceful action necessary.

A child born on this day, although having a methodical, studious and deep nature, may also be fiery and impetuous.

OBITUARY

CLARE C. CASEMENT

Clare C. Casement, a former resident of Belleville, and for some time past a travelling salesman for barbers' supplies, with residence at 8½ Tyndall Avenue, Toronto, was found dead in his truck near Cannington, Ontario, on Saturday evening, April 29th. The truck was noticed at the side of the road by two men going into Cannington, and as it was still there upon their return they stopped and upon investigation they found the body of Mr. Casement. Death was due to a heart seizure.

The late Clare Cecil Casement was born 34 years ago near Frankford, his parents being Mrs. Hattie Casement and the late George Casement. For some time he was engaged as a barber in this city and was well and favorably known. Old friends will regret to learn of his sudden passing. At one time he also resided in Napanee and for the past four years he had made his home in Toronto.

Surviving him are his wife, who prior to her marriage was Miss Norma Ballard, and his mother, Mrs. Hattie Casement.

The body is resting at the Martin Funeral Home, Church Street; the funeral announcement is made elsewhere in this paper.

MRS. SAMUEL P. SINFIELD

Saturday afternoon the funeral of Mrs. Samuel P. Sinfield took place from the family residence, 236 Moira Street, to Holloway Street United Church where service was conducted by the pastor, the Rev. R. E. Newman, assisted by the Rev. J. D. P. Knox. During the service a vocal duet was rendered by Mrs. S. P. Hagerman and Mrs. James Cordes.

Interment was made in Belleville cemetery. The bearers were Messrs. Fred Harper, Howard Akey, K. Earl, H. Sager, J. Livesey and Albert Foster.

GEORGE PERRY

After an illness of one month's duration George Perry passed away at his late residence, 138 West Bridge Street, early Sunday morning, April 30th.

The late Mr. Perry had reached the advanced age of 94 years. He was born in Montreal, his parents being the late Mr. and Mrs. George Perry. Sixty years ago he came to Belleville and during his long residence here he was held in high esteem. Over a long period of time Mr. Perry was engaged as an egg buyer. In the early days when the best exchange the egg producers could obtain for their eggs was groceries at the country and city stores, George Perry could always be depended upon for ready and welcome cash. Often on a Saturday in those days he would buy one thousand dozen eggs for shipment to Montreal. He was also engaged in the sign business, being an expert in lettering and he was also agent here for ready made enamel signs. Many of the store fronts carried the names of the proprietors in signs either done personally by him or sold by him. The sale and the putting up of awnings was also a part of his business activities.

The late George Perry was a man of fine character and was upright in all his dealings. For some years he had been living retired, but up until a short time ago he was frequently about the business section of the city. He will long be remembered by many friends. In religion Mr. Perry was an active and faithful member of Bethel Hall.

The funeral announcement is made elsewhere in this paper.

GLORIA J. DIMINIE

The death occurred at the Belleville General Hospital on Sunday afternoon, April 30th., of Gloria Joyce Diminie, age nine days, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Diminie, 62 West Moira St.

The funeral took place this Monday afternoon from the Belleville Burial Company Funeral Home, Campbell Street. The service in the chapel and at the graveside in Belleville Cemetery was conducted by the Rev. A. Beauchamp Payne, Vicar of St. Thomas' Church.

The parents will receive the sympathy of friends in their bereavement.

MRS. ANN KITCHEN

Napanee — Following a brief illness, there passed away early on Friday morning, Mrs. Ann Kitchen in her 86th. year and the funeral service, which was held from the home of her daughter, Mrs. Marshall Hudson, Sunday afternoon, was in charge of Rev. Dr. R. T. Richards of Grace United Church. Interment was made in the family plot, Deseronto cemetery.

Despite her advanced age Mrs. Kitchen until Sunday last had been enjoying exceptionally good health and returned home from Tweed a short time ago where she spent some time with her stepson, Sidney Kitchen, and Mrs. Kitchen. Before her marriage she was Miss Ann Hill daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. William Hill of Fredericksburg.

In her early years she resided with her parents near Deseronto and later on the Reserve where she attended Christ Church. She was a life-long member of the Anglican Church. Her husband, who died eleven years ago, was for a long period of years connected with the railways and was section foreman for many years.

Three sons of Mr. Kitchen by his first wife were in the railway service since they were young men. J. W. Kitchen of Smith's Falls, held an important executive position with the C.P.R. and was superannuated a year ago. Sidney Kitchen of Tweed, superannuated a few weeks ago and Andrew Kitchen is with the Canadian National Railways in Belleville.

Mrs. Kitchen was very fond of reading and for the most part did not have to use glasses. One of her favorite hobbies was crocheting, sewing and quilting and two years ago made a beautiful quilt which was presented to the Napanee Women's Institute. She was a devout Christian and was held in very high esteem by her friends.

She leaves an only daughter, Mrs. Marshall Hudson, with whom she had resided for the past eleven years; three step-sons, J. W. Kitchen of Smith's Falls; Sidney Kitchen of Tweed and Andrew Kitchen of Belleville; a brother, Neil Hill of Fredericksburg, and grandson, Robert Kitchen of Belleville.

MRS. ANNIE BROWN

Roslin

Mrs. Annie Brown, widow of Dr. W. E. Brown, passed away this Monday morning at the residence of her daughter, Mrs. (Dr.) H. E. Welsh, in Roslin. She had been in failing health for some time.

The late Mrs. Brown was born, 68 years ago at Codrington, in Northumberland County. Prior to her marriage she was Miss Annie Ames. Most of her life was passed in Peterboro, where her late husband practised medicine for many years. She was a member of the United Church and when residing in Peterboro she was active in church and charitable work. By all who knew her she was held in high regard. Seven years ago she moved to Roslin to reside with her daughter.

Surviving here are one son, Dr. Harold Brown, London, England; one daughter, Mrs. (Dr.) H. E. Welsh, Roslin; one sister, Mrs. Jas. Belford, Fort William, Ont., and one brother, Mr. Wellington Ames, Manitoba. Her husband died 22 years ago in Peterboro.

The funeral service will be conducted in the MacMillan Funeral Parlors at Roseneath, Ont., Wednesday afternoon, May 3rd, at 2 o'clock. Interment will be made in Roseneath cemetery.

(Peterboro papers please copy.)

LATE MRS. MARGARET A. WEIR

The funeral of Mrs. Margaret Ann Weir, widow of John C. Weir, took place from her late residence, 63 South Front Street this Monday morning to St. Michael's Church where Requiem Mass was celebrated by the Rt. Rev. Monsignor Nicholson, V.G. During the offertory Mr. Edward Brown sang "Nearer My God to Thee". Many friends were present in the church.

Interment was made in St. James Cemetery, the committal service was said by the Rev. Father Collins.

Alleged Poker Game At Stirling Raided

Six residents of Stirling, including one Chinese and in whose restaurant a gambling game was raided by Provincial Police on Sunday, were apprehended on violation of the Lord's Day Alliance Act yesterday. Provincial Constables W. E. Smith and A. Stark, headed the raid and walked quietly into the front of the restaurant, continuing into a rear room where a card game, commonly referred to as poker, was in progress. The officers merely informed the gamblers to sit quietly, as Constable Smith gathered in some $6.40, the amount of the hand's "pot." The names of those participating in the game were taken and the game broken up. Charges of gambling on the Sabbath will be preferred against the six men, the officers stated today. "The men were so much taken up with their game they did not hear us enter the main part of the restaurant," explained the officers today.

The Sacrament of Confirmation was conferred on a class of 77 at the Church of St. Michael the Archangel on Sunday morning by His Grace, Most Rev. M. J. O'Brien, D.D., Archbishop of Kingston, following ten-thirty Mass celebrated by Rev. C. E. Baker.

A large congregation was present and the church was beautifully decorated for the occasion. Music was by a choir of sixty-five children who sang very sweetly a group of well-known hymns including "Ecce Sacerdos" (Gounod); Confirmation Hymn (Montani); Ave Verum (Gounod); Panis Angelorum (Keon) Ave Maria (Bottezzo) Regina Coeli; Come, Holy Ghost; and Holy God We Praise Thy Name.

Cordial greetings on behalf of the parish were extended His Grace by the pastor, Rt. Rev. J. F. Nicholson, V.G. In addressing the Confirmation class, His Grace asked all the children to make three good resolutions as is his custom, to be faithful in saying their morning and night prayers to receive Holy Communion at least once a month; and to promise total abstinence at least until they are twenty-five years of age.

Commenting on these good resolutions the Archbishop said they would be the safeguard of faith and morals; not to look to governments to legislate people into good lives but rather to exercise their liberty as children of God to live lives pleasing to God. He exhorted the parents to make their homes the sanctuary of prayer and good example.

Commenting upon a recent letter of His Holiness the Pope inviting Catholics throughout the world to pray in a special manner for peace during the month of May which is dedicated to the Blessed Virgin, the Queen of Peace, he urged all and particularly the innocent children so dear to Christ to beseech Heaven for that grace of peace which armaments cannot bring and which it would seem is impossible of attainment by the diplomats of the world. In passing, the Archbishop remarked that General Foch had said to him in 1920". The war has settled nothing'.. Another war will bring about the destruction of civilization.

Former Teachers, Officers And Scholars Return to S. S. For Holloway Street Reunion

Sunday School Rooms Crowded for Unique Occasion on Sunday Afternoon

MEMORIES REVIVED

On Sunday afternoon Holloway Street United Church Sunday School had a unique session, when a reunion was held of former teachers, officers and pupils. The Sunday School rooms had been nicely decorated by the C.G.I.T girls with ferns, spring flowers and several cages of canaries and love birds, giving the whole atmosphere a cheerful and springlike tone.

By 2.30 the room was filled to capacity, and the superintendent A. C. Campbell called the school to order and the following program was carried through.

Call to worship and hymn "Jesus Loves Me" by the school. Prayer by Rev. L. S. Wight a former pastor of the church. A short Welcome recitation by Master Robert Howard, assisted by 5 small girls of the beginners' class, Barbara Rose, Barbara Guest, Eleanor Mitchell, Shirley Aman and Margaret Seed.

A hearty welcome was extended the visitors by the Minister Rev. R. E. Newman, when he said the pleasure was ours in being able to entertain the ex-teachers and officers, those who had served in the past and built such a good foundation for the present staff to work on. When we stop to realize the sacrifice the past had made to provide such a nice church school for us to use—and to think of the character of the men and women the Sunday School had sent out—we feel very grateful and challenged and can only say—Thank you; and are glad to have you with us today.

The Superintendent then gave some impressions he had received as he had studied some of the old records of the school. Among other things was the fact of the fine fellowship that had existed among the teachers and officers of different periods in the past, and the resulting effect on the school, such as increased attendance, greater activity and a deeper sincerity. These fellowships, created then, although in many cases broken by death and by the separation of distance, still mean much in the lives of those who are left.

A list of the past superintendents as could be gleaned from the records available were: First Supt.—1879 xJames Ross, xJ. E. Flewwelling, xH. J. Osborne, xJ. H. Paull, 1895 P. W. Fairman now living in Trenton, xW. J. McGrath, G. T. Woodley, xP. F. Canniff, xA. E. Bailey, xO. S. Hicks, B. O. Frederick, C. L. Frederick, Russell Woodley, James Hudgins, Everett Fairman, H. B. Fetterly.

Those marked (x) have since passed away.

Two of the original pupils of the Sunday School under the first superintendent were present namely, Mrs. James Hudgins, Mrs. Minnie Quincey Routley.

Mention was also made of some of the old names that ran through the records for years, and the mention of them brought back memories, and to the present school a realization of the debt they owe to those who have served before.

Mr. Donald Henderson gave two fine selections on his electric guitar, an instrument assembled by himself and of fine musical qualities.

Mr. Everett Fairman, a former superintendent read the scripture reading, which was followed by the hymn "What a Fellowship."

Rather than have the classes go to their separate rooms, Rev. Dr. Hyde of Chicago, an old member of the once noted Hallelujah Band gave the Sunday School a short talk, although short, it contained real inspiration and challenge and at the same time was so interwoven with stories and humor, that even the youngest received a message. He emphasized the high calling of Sunday School teachers, who are dealing with children, "the stuff that men are made of" and illustrated it with an incident in the life of James Garfield, one time President of the United States.

He also told of a penal institution in Michigan where records showed that of 5,000 boys in that institution only 5 percent had ever attended Sunday School. This emphasized the influence the Sunday School has on youth, and also leaves the challenge of the Christian influences.

After the report of the secretary, Mr. S. Nighswander, and a hymn, Rev. E. Farnsworth, another member of the Hallelujah Band and a co-worker with Rev. Dr. Hyde at that time, pronounced the benediction.

Following the Sunday School session the teachers and officers entertained the visitors, old records were perused and memory brought back many faces and events, some with sorrow when it was realized their faces would be seen no more in this life, and some with a thrill of pleasure, at the remembrance of some happy occasion.

Some pictures of groups were taken, and most of the visitors registered their names and addresses, so that the occasion may be remembered.

All expressed themselves as delighted with this opportunity of renewing acquaintances, and the pleasure of meeting once again in the old schoolroom.

Letters of regret at being unable to attend were received from Mr. W. W. Allison, Toronto, Ont., exteacher 1913-17 and at that time on the local Y.M.C.A. staff; Mrs. A. M. Climo, Cleveland, Ohio; Mr. and Mrs. Ed. Ashley, Cleveland, Ohio, all of whom were very active workers in the Sunday School. Incidentally Mrs. Climo and Mrs. Ashley are both sisters of Mrs. B. McMurray and Miss McCrudden of 107 Bridge Street W. Belleville and Mrs. McMurray placed a beautiful bouquet of flowers in the school in honor of her sisters and of Mr. McMurray's sisters, all of whom had served very faithfully when they were here.

"stick 'em up" because she thought the thug's gun was a toy.

Man Pulled Gun

Owen thought the same when the man pulled a gun after suddenly ordering him to stop driving, jumped from the back seat and opened the front door. Owen got out of the cab and despite two warnings, that he would be shot if he kept advancing, the taxi-driver continued to walk slowly toward the gunman.

About 50 feet from the parked taxi, the gunman levelled the revolver and fired point-blank at the driver. Crowds of shoppers rushed to the spot and William Hughes gave chase. He ducked behind a parked car when the gunman threatened to shoot him, too.

Peter Owad, 21, and John Bernat, 23, were arrested in Windsor 10 minutes after John Kennedy and Ed Desjarlais were held up in Kennedy's car and relieved of $5. Kennedy told police one man hid in the back seat while the car was parked and two others joined the gunman when he flashed his revolver and told Kennedy to stop in a dark alley.

Struck Glancing Blow

The man with the revolver sent a bullet between Kennedy and Desjarlais and struck Kennedy a glancing blow with the gun when he didn't comply fast enough with an order to take off his trousers.

Another taxi-driver holdup in Hamilton, where two armed men also held up Mrs. A. C. Thorne in her husband's grocery store and got $6, netted a lone gunman $3. He stuck a gun in John Barty's ribs after they were driving a short while and rubbed his fingerprints off the car window before running off.

W. B. Waters, manager of a Chatham theatre, was held up and robbed of $130 by two masked and armed men who stopped him and Margaret Allison, the cashier, as they were going up a stairway from the theatre to the office on the first floor of the building. Miss Allison ran into a nearby room with $35 in the cashbox and was not molested.

POLAND MAY SEEK

property in Danzig."

Gazetta Polska's article was interpreted as meaning Poland might ask the League of Nations—nominally the highest authority in Danzig—to transfer certain of its rights to Poland. The League could invest Poland with police powers in the Free City, which already lies within the Polish customs administration.

Inhabited by Germans

Although Danzig, detached from Germany by the Treaty of Versailles, is predominantly inhabited by Germans, the port handles a great deal of Poland's foreign trade. It is at the Baltic end of the Polish Corridor and at the estuary of the Vistula.

It was reliably reported that Chancellor Hitler had followed up his demands of last Friday regarding the Free City and the Polish Corridor with more details of what he wants, including setting the width of the proposed trans-Corridor German highway at no less than 25 kilometres (15.5 miles). The traditional details were said to have been conveyed privately to Poland.

Rejects Offer

(In his Reichstag speech and in a note to Poland, Hitler denounced the 1934 Polish-German non-aggression treaty and said his "one and only offer" had been that the Free City be returned to Germany and that Germany be given a highway and railway connection across the Corridor to connect East Prussia with the rest of Germany. In return a 25-year non-aggression pact was to be given. Poland rejected the offer.)

The League of Nations, although possessing full legal authority over Danzig, is inactive. The High Commissioner is on indefinite leave and the governing power has been assumed by Nazi party members, many of whom were said to have been sent to Danzig from Germany for that purpose.

Annexation Recalled

Gazetta Polska, in commenting on the possibility Poland might seek control, recalled how Germany annexed Memel, denounced the Anglo-German naval treaty and abolished the Polish-German non-aggression pact.

On April 27, the day before Hitler's speech, the Polish government let it be known it was willing to rearrange the status of Danzig, to share it with Germany. That proposal was aimed at abolishing the technical authority of the League and giving political authority to Germany and economic control to Poland. Gazetta Polska's article was taken as indicating Hitler's denunciation of the Polish-German non-aggression treaty ended this proposition so far as Poland was concerned.

LOCK SMASHED TO ENTER STORE

Foxboro Hardware Store Robbed of Goods on Friday Night

Foxboro, May 1 (Special)—Effecting an entrance through the simple expedient of smashing one lock and being in possession of a key which apparently fitted the second, burglars walked into the local hardware shop of Mr. J. Daniels last Friday night and made a successful getaway with a quantity of cigarettes, tobacco and many articles of small hardware. Upon completing an inventory of his stock Mr. Daniels stated on Saturday evening that some articles of clothing and a pair of boots were also missing and that altogether some twenty-five dollars worth of goods had been taken.

Discovery of the break-in was made by Mr. Daniels himself when he came to open his place of business on Saturday morning only to find the store had been broken into and his show-cases looted. Police authorities were notified but upon arrival, the officers could find no clues as to the identity of the thief or thieves, but from the mode of entrance and also from the amount and nature of the goods taken it is believed to be the work of amateurs rather than of professionals who doubtless would have been more thorough in their ransacking.

This is the sixth of a series of break-ins which have occurred in this village within recent years and the third time which Mr. Daniels has been victimized. Last summer the general store owned by Mr. R. B. Hamilton was entered on two different occasions with the till being robbed and on the last occasion considerable damage was done when safe-crackers ruined Mr. Hamilton's safe with a charge of nitroglycerine.

"I'D LIKE AN ADVERTISEMENT PLEASE!"

Suppose you had to BUY each advertisement you see in the newspapers now! Suppose you had to PAY to learn where and what and how about food, furniture, clothes!

You'd be mighty sure to read each advertisement thoroughly—digest every bit of important information it offered!

It's STILL a good plan to absorb all the facts from advertisements—even though they come to you free, along with your news! For here manufacturers tell you how to make a dollar do more work . . . how to spend wisely . . . how to go farther on less. Through the printed word, they proffer their finest wares. It's much to your advantage to listen as they speak.

YUGOSLAVIA

The Yugoslavian situation is an uneasy one situated as that country is on the Adriatic and with Germany and Italy beside her. New York Times comments as follows on the developments in this country: "Italy on the west; Germany, Hungary and Rumania on the north; Rumania and Bulgaria on the east; Greece on the south—thus lies uneasy, unhappy Yugoslavia. Serbs, Croats, Slovenians, with a "King" of less than 16 years, 14,000,000 of population, 95,000 square miles. After twenty years of discord these children of the Slavic race have reached an agreement whereby Croatia is to enjoy autonomy, with Slovenia and Dalmatia included. Bosnia and Serbia are also to be autonomous. For many centuries the northern and southern portions of the elements which compose this country have been at odds. The Croats, then Austrians, fought for Austria in the war; the Serbians, for the Allies.

"But external menace has now brought the quarreling elements into a degree of unity hitherto unattained. Together, they are threatened in many directions. Italy sees in the Dalmatian coast a remnant of the glories of ancient Venice. Bulgaria and Hungary have definite ideas of frontier revisions. And in the north side Germany, which can, at any time, have the deciding voice in any reorganization of or control over the country. Germany might, conceivably, one day wish to pass that way to the Adriatic. There are here however, no sons of the Fatherland to be redeemed and Germany hay have at present all the Slavs on her hands that she cares to have. Yugoslavia is now fairly unified as regards externals, but no people in Europe is faced by more difficulties in the preservation of national entity."

GLOVES FROM SEA LIONS

Sea lions may have their uses after all. They're a nuisance, and worse, in some of the fishing areas off British Columbia but skins from a number of them that were captured last summer have now been turned into leather gloves of apparently quite good quality. Whether or not the manufacture of gloves and other leather goods from lion pelts would be commercially feasible remains to be definitely determined as the production so far has been entirely experimental and such questions as the cost of production and the durability of the leather have not been gone into with care. Salmon fishermen particularly, however, would hail with satisfaction any development likely to have the effect of lessening the number of sea lions preying on the salmon runs and crashing destructively through fishing gear.

As it is now, the Dominion Department of Fisheries seeks to control the size of the sea lion herds to some extent. The control measure is to conduct an annual hunt for the troublesome mammals at some of the points which the creatures frequent along the British Columbia coast or, in other words, at what are popularly known as the lions' "hauling out places." None of the animals from which skins were obtained for the leather-making experiment were obtained through the departmental hunt, of course. The skins were taken from lions killed by the crew of a boat sent out for the purpose by a British firm interested in the possibility of turning the hides into useful articles of commerce.

SLANG OF AUTOMOBILE FACTORIES

"A complete automobile finished and ready to run, has a wishbone and a gooseneck. It also has a snowshoe, a dog collar, a hairpin and a tin hat", says "Automobile Facts".

"You won't find these terms in the books but out in the shop, where, with a knack for the descriptive and a fine disregard for technical words and the authority of the dictionary, factory workers name things their own way, and call them as they see them.

The big machines that perform extraordinary operations with accuracy and speed, pop up with such names as Big Bertha, Player Piano Percolator, Hay Bailer, Jack Rabbit and Corn Popper. To those who see them work the names match the action of the mechanisms and leave no question as to what's being talked about. Call them by technical terms and an engineer may be needed to interpret.

A curl is put in steel rings by the Permanent Wave machine. Coil springs are squeezed into place by a Robot. The Merry-Go-Round's spindles rise and fall, machining motor blocks that roll round its face. Only the tune is missing.

The list of oddly named parts in the average car is fairly long. While the car's Tin Hat is worn on the rear axle the Hair Pin holds pedal springs in place. Besides the Dog Collar which proves to be a muffler clamp, there is a Baby Band supporting the transmission.

Lamp guards are known as Fish, while down around the shock absorbers a set of Horseshoes is found. There's a Bottle Cap on the engine water jacket, and elsewhere a Pancake, a Spider, a Snowshoe and a Banjo.

There's humor as well as accurate description in motor factory slang. Little Percy is the appreciative name given a three-foot pipe wrench, while a device that puts pressure on drills to make them bore through carries the authoritative title of Old Man. Higher mathematics are put in place by terming the slide-rule a Guess Stick.

YESTERDAY AND TODAY

It seems like only yesterday that winter winds blew chill
And the frost laid icy fingers on lowland and on hill,
But lo! to-day the world is green and gay with sights untold,
And from a sky of azure the sun is dropping gold.

It seems like only yesterday the lake was clothed in mail,
The little brooks were voiceless and loud the winter gale;
But now the lake is limpid now sings the silver stream
While showers of limpid music pour from the hills of dream.

It seems like only yesterday the frost held earth in thrall—
King Winter swayed his sceptre o'er cottage and o'er hall,
But now the maple blushes, and down the leafy lane
In glory gleams of sunshine, resounds the robin's strain.

It seems like only yesterday the hand of sorrow lay
With heavy weight upon the heart where now but joy holds sway;
So, in eternal Springland, beyond life's sunset glow,
The storm and strife of yesterday will pass like winter's snow.

CON MEN FROM NEW YORK TO SAN FRANCISCO are laying plans for a killing at the New York World's Fair fleecing credulous visitors out of their Fair money. Manhattan police are also laying plans to circumvent these gentry and make Manhattan safe for the many million visitors they expect this summer to see "The World of Tomorrow", which the New York World's Fair has been christened. Ringling Bros. Barnum and Bailey's Circus went them one better calling the big circus "The World of the Day After Tomorrow." Thousands of policemen and detectives will be on the job at the Fair Grounds and throughout the city to protect visitors. The great white light of publicity has been turned on the crooks and their wily ways exposed. Precautions have been printed and a list of DONT'S printed for visitors, by the National Better Business Bureau, which include the following:

DON'T flash large sums of cash. Use traveller's checks, or leave your money in the hotel safe. Never in your room.

DON'T authorize the hotel to accept any package C. O. D. Specify if you expect one.

DON'T accept the apology of the stranger who opens your door by "mistake". Report him at once to the management.

DON'T forget that "lush" workers specialize in drunks and can be very tough indeed.

DON'T ask a cab driver for advice. Ask a policeman.

Elementary, my dear Watson, elementary—but when one realizes that last month a retired Metropolitan police lieutenant with an experience of twenty-four years behind him, and a thorough knowledge of racketeers and their ways was swindled out of $22,800 by a stranger whom he met on a train, it gives us to think. If you think it is only the Yankees who are such easy marks mention might be made of two astute business men of a small Ontario city who met some plausible strangers while on a motor trip between Detroit and Miami and fell for the old "beat the races" trick to the tune of five thousand dollars. These con men know their business and don't mind taking plenty of time to land the big fish.

LOOKING BACKWARD

20 YEARS AGO

May 1st, 1919.

At a meeting held in this city for the purpose of discussing the bay bridge matter it was decided to take steps to have the bridge made free. Prominent Retail Merchants' Association were in attendance, as well as members of Ameliasburg Township Council and prominent farmers. Mayor Platt occupied the chair. A free discussion took place and the unanimous opinion was that the Purchase will be worked out later. A committee representative of the city organizations, the Township of Ameliasburg and Prince Edward County, was selected to meet at the call of Mayor Platt. The following will compose the committee: City Council,— Mayor Platt, Ald. Ostrom and Ald. Riggs; Board of Trade,— Col. Marsh, Col. Ponton and Mr. John Elliott; Retail Merchants, — Messrs. C. M. Reid, D. V. Sinclair and E. R. McBride; Township of Ameliasburg, Messrs. W. Barber, Grant Sprague and D. W. Robinson; County of Prince Edward,— Dr. R. H. Fox, Messrs. Cole of Demorestville and Jones of Hillier.

Wings Over North-West India

Restrictions placed on aerial bombardment along the North-west Frontier of India are stressed, and critics effectively answered, by Air Commodore N. H. Bottomley, who in the years 1934-37 was in command of squadrons on active service there. In an address delivered at the Royal United Service Institution, Whitehall, he described the methods strictly followed by the R.A.F. pilots—methods which soldiers of experience have termed "fantastically soft-hearted."

Offensive air action against tribesmen, he explained, is confined to those actually engaged with troops on the ground. If airmen observe tribesmen approaching troops with manifestly hostile intent or waiting in ambush no air action is permitted till the tribesmen have definitely started the offensive. Another important limitation concerns targets which may be attacked. No offensive against tribesmen in villages or hamlets is allowed, so that at the hands of the R.A.F. the innocent may never suffer with the guilty. The target must be completely in the open, away from villages.

Only as a punishment after particular outrages are villages bombed; invariably two or three hours', and usually two or three days', warning is given the inhabitants.

Action against tribesmen seen firing at aircraft must be confined to open spaces. A pilot may not retaliate unless he can identify his attackers unmistakably.

Peaceful activities of the R.A.F. on the Frontier, Air Commodore Bottomley declared, include the transport of garrison troops substituting a few hours' flight for the tedium and possible danger of difficult ground journeys. Air demonstrations often sway councils of tribesmen to adopt peaceful ways:

These official statements dispose once and for all the baseless foreign talk of "inhuman" Air Force action on the Frontier. General Sir Sydney Muspratt, Military Secretary to the India Office, notes that the restrictions imposed on the R.A.F. on the Frontier are annoying, but on humanitarian moral and other grounds are well worth while.—British Aircraft Society.

CANADIAN BOOM DUE

Shrewd observers, watching Canada closely, are expressing the opinion that the Dominion is on the eve of an era of prosperity.

One prominent expert in regard to investments contends that in some measure it is in the nature of a reaction to the events in Europe. Apart from the stimulus that re-armament programs have given to certain manufactures and the demand for raw materials, he points out that, thanks to the policy of European dictators, capital is being driven from the Continent and is seeking a refuge in Canada, where more peaceful conditions prevail.

In like manner craftsmen skilled in certain trades, who have been compelled to seek homes where they may enjoy the blessings of peace, are moving to Canada, bringing with them their expert knowledge and skill. Already there has been talk of developing the pottery industry in Canada, and only the other day it was mentioned in the Quebec Legislative Council that International Foils, Ltd., a Czecho-Slovakian concern, proposed to establish its plant at Cap de la Madeleine, in the province. In this way does the sheltering arm receive its reward.—Canada's Weekly, London.

THAT BODY OF YOURS

By James W. Barton, M.D.

The Heart is a Tough Organ

As the greatest single cause of death is heart disease, it might be thought that the heart is a complicated and delicate organ. As a matter of fact, the heart is about the simplest acting organ in the body—just a pump—whereas the liver stores sugar, filters poisons from the blood, manufactures bile which breaks up fats, kills harmful organisms and is a natural purgative.

What about the strength of the heart? Is it because it is a weak or delicate organ that it is the most frequent cause of death?

Dr. Paul D. White, Harvard, in Clinical Medicine and Surgery says

"The undue stress which is now being laid on heart disease has caused many cases of heart neuroses (thinking you have a heart disease when none is present) and has made many patients miserable unnecessarily. A patient with damaged heart may live long and happily. We must learn to recognize the difference between immediate and later danger in these cases. The heart is a "tough" organ which will stand much abuse and recover even after serious damage."

"Most people think that if coronary disease (damage to little vessels carrying the blood to the heart walls or muscles) occurs, the patient will die in a short time, or be an invalid the rest of his life. The fact is that thousands of such cases die of fear, free from all heart symptoms."

A patient with coronary disease can live happily for many years if he will use common sense and follow his doctor's orders. If he will remain in bed for a few weeks at times, avoid large meals and late hours, he may not be permanently disabled, though he may be for a short while."

Dr. White says that the above statements apply also to other forms of heart disease such as acchycardia —very rapid beating of the heart —and rheumatic heart disease.

The point then is that the heart is a tough organ—muscle— and can stand a great amount of damage without death occurring. One of the greatest dangers in cases of damaged hearts is the damage done to the whole body, including the heart, by fear.

The heart may be damaged but can still carry half its former load. Heart disease is always a serious condition but you may last for many years by using common sense and following your doctor's orders".

MATRIMONIAL COURSE

Several United States colleges are devoting time seriously to the study of marriage, classes being held separately for young men and women and sometimes mixed. At Chapel Hill, North Carolina, recently a three-days conference was held by social workers, teachers, ministers, lawyers, doctors and others to consider the best way of giving young people pre-marriage and after-marriage instruction, in view of the large number of marriages that "go on the rocks."

With all our social and scientific progress, there is a definite falling back in regard to one of the oldest institutions in the world—marriage. It seems to be the most natural of states and instincts, yet it is as complex as human nature and requires a series of physical and social adjustments which, notwithstanding apparently outward affinity, may fall in one or more vital relationships after marriage.

Previous generations do not appear to have had so many difficulties. Divorce was rarer among the older and earlier people. Perhaps the more artificial life of today is largely responsible. In former times the home was where husband and wife spent most of their evenings. The living-room, with its shaded lamps, books, music and friends, provided nearly all the diversions they needed. Today, the automobile, the movies and the yen to be constantly "going places" have distracted from the attraction of home. Couples have their separate clubs and lodges and are not nearly as much together as they used to be. Marriage, in a great number of instances, levels down to a state of mutual tolerance which leaves each free to go his and her way.

Perhaps the radio, with the prospect of television to follow, may bring back the family spirit. But even then, there is a great deal which wise instruction, supplementing love and respect, can do to establish the happy married state.—Stratford Beacon Herald.

JAZZ NOT NORMAL

There has somehow been circulated the idea that jazz is the normal music of the common people. On the contrary, it is highly artificial, the result of a cultivated musical depravity. A few years ago, an explorer took a field radio on an expedition to the jungles of the Orinoco River. The white man almost invariably demanded jazz; the Indians, who had never been out of the jungles, who had never heard any white man's music, went into raptures over grand opera and symphony concerts. And when Kentucky mountaineers travel 20 to 30 miles by wagon and by muleback just to hear a program at a "listening broadcast station," they show a curious disdain for jazz. They are instantly delighted by the better music and the symphonic programs, but hold their ears when the noise of the Harlem bedlamites is turned on. Their natural taste has never been perverted.—Dr. James Francis Cook in Etude Magazine.

CHINESE CHECKERS

Remember Parcheesi? and crokinole? crosswords? animal, mineral or vegetable? the last line of a limerick? geography games?

Then there are the old standbys, general knowledge quizzes, crossword puzzles and double solitaire — not forgetting bridge and poker, or even the old shell game.

Well, now it's Chinese checkers, a fascinating sport. If you have a penchant for military strategy or Nazi-like penetration, you should enjoy it.

We don't know whether the Mikado invented it or not, but the board certainly looks like Shanghai after the bombers have gone once we get started.

We have a friend who likes to play on a mass scale. You see, from two to six people can play. The way he does it two play, but each with three sets of balls.

There are ten balls to a set, six sets all told, making 60 balls for two people to manoeuvre. Remember that in chess or good old-fashioned checkers there are just 12 pieces on each side, 24 in all!

So, by the time we get our 60 red, green, blue, brown, yellow and orange balls in action, any hard-working traffic policeman would go daft. Hampton Maze has nothing on our style of Chinese checkers.

The orthodox line of attack is a zig-zag leap-frog procedure. This can be varied to follow a belt-line route around the board or to fit in a fanshaped frontal assault.

There's really a lot of fun in two players employing six ball teams, because each crosses every other's path and then hellzapoppin.

If you're a gambler, you may move swiftly and trounce the other fellow in short order. If you're the deep thinking, chess school type, you can go on for hours.

Personally, our greatest snag is getting caught with a ball or two far in the rear, blocked by the enemy and beyond rescue until the game is lost. So many times we've had a game in the bag and then have gone down to bitter defeat all because one little brown pill got held up in traffic.

It's an amusing game, something like the course of European politics. Mr. Chamberlain and Herr Hitler, would be first-class contenders for championship honors.

But it always gets us down when our friend holds forth with the contention he can out-checker us every time. He knows darned well we're going to trim him the next time.—D.M., in Ottawa Journal.

NEW JAIL WAITS

Chapel Hill has a fine new jail — and nobody in it. Of course all well disposed citizens rejoice at its emptiness and would like to have it permanent. But everybody knows it can't last much longer, and so people who have nothing better to do are speculating on who will be the first occupant of the spick-and-span quarters behind the bars in the Town Hall basement. There is said to be some betting on this among the citizens acquainted with the most jailable part of the population.—Chapel Hill North Carolina Weekly.

EDITORIAL ENTERPRISE

Canadian weekly newspaper enterprise is well illustrated and demonstrated by the latest move of the Huntingdon Gleaner Inc., of Huntingdon, Que. Situated near the international boundary between Canada and the United States, it has stepped across the line and established a new weekly, the Graphic-News, in the Village of Malone, N.Y. It is real venture, but the standard set by the publisher should ensure its success. This is the first time such a move has been made by a weekly, either in Canada or the United States, hence the interest which the undertaking has for other publishers, especially the friends of Editor Adam Sellar of the Gleaner.—Collingwood Enterprise-Bulletin.

NEED BRIGHTER TRAINS

The people would be shocked with delight if clean-looking trains again rolled over the right of way of our splendid railroads. Why should the great bus lines gratify the craving for attractive passenger vehicles? Who knows, maybe one great reason why so many people do not patronize railroad trains is the dreary aspect of the passenger coaches.

We yearn to have our fine aesthetic taste satisfied by the sight of clean and bright Pullman cars and coaches drawn by shiny locomotives.—St. Thomas Times-Journal.

"After a century and a half of solid achievement we need not believe in the prophets of doom."—James Truslow Adams.

PARLIAMENT MAY

Last year the budget debate proper occupied only three days. This year's debate opened Friday and has brought amendments amounting to want of confidence motions from the Conservative and C.C.F. parties.

Only Three Speakers

So far as known at present, the Conservatives will have only two or three speakers in addition to J. Earl Lawson, Conservative-York South, who opened the debate Friday for the official opposition. It is not expected the Liberals will put up many speakers.

If the C.C.F. and Social Credit groups use this opportunity for further expression of their criticism and suggestions, they may decide to discontinue any prolonged opposition to other measures still before the House.

Outstanding matters before parliament of a nature tending to stir up debate, in addition to the budget, include the wheat legislation having to do with the guaranteed price. Great Pressure is being placed upon the government to increase the assured price from 60 cents a bushel to 70 or even 80 cents. Much depends upon the government's stand on this point.

Another outstanding piece of legislation, and the last in the government's sessional program, is the proposal to set up a mortgage rediscount bank.

Only Vague Details

Only vague details of this measure have been made known. It will appear formally on the order paper today but will probably not be discussed until the budget debate is over.

Once the budget debate is concluded there will be the task of dealing with its tax and tariff resolutions in committee, but this need not take long.

The remaining items of government business are not many. The bulk of estimates remain to be adopted in committee of supply. There are several measures in the wheat and agricultural marketing program, the official secrets act, youth training, and the bill authorizing Finance Minister Dunning to borrow up to a maximum of $750,000,000 for refunding and other purposes during the current fiscal year.

This latter measure is purely formal but it has been consistently opposed by the Social Credit members from the moment the preliminary resolution was moved. Further opposition was promised by that group but it may not develop.

Will Adjourn May 12

It is the definite decision of the government to adjourn parliament from May 12 to May 19 when the King will visit the Senate Chamber either to prorogue parliament or to give royal assent to such bills as are ready, thus assuring an unprecedented spectacle within the walls of parliament in either case.

In the latter contingency, after royal assent, members will return to their Chamber and adjourn until June 19, the first Monday after the departure of Their Majesties from Canada.

One thing Prime Minister Mackenzie King is determined upon, he has stated, and that is not to put any pressure upon members to conclude in time for royal prorogation. He is not expected even to initiate any move for longer daily sessions with that end in view, unless he is advised it is the general wish of the members.

Against Long Adjournment

The long adjournment will not meet the approval of certain members in all opposition groups, necessitating as it does a return to Ottawa for an indefinite period in the middle of summer. The possibility of a fall election also enters into their consideration.

But the Prime Minister has been invited in a personal letter from the King to be His Majesty's minister in attendance during the Canadian tour and will act in that capacity. Ministers of the crown will join the royal party as it passes through their respective provinces. For that reason, and to enable members to be in their constituencies when the King and Queen pass, parliament will take the long adjournment if necessary.

RUSSIAN FLIERS

Lost Course

They said through an interpreter here that they lost their course over Labrador while flying through a thick fog and went up to 27,000 feet to escape it. When they returned to their normal altitude they discovered their compass was frozen. This they said, caused them to set down late Friday on the marshes of Miscou Island, damaging their big red monoplane so badly it could not take off.

Kokkinaki said their average speed for the Moscow-to-Miscou flight was 180 ground miles an hour or 220 air miles, despite strong headwinds during much of the trip. About 70 per cent of the hop was flown by instruments.

The fliers were whisked from Floyd Bennett field to the Russian consulate for the night. Awaiting them there were congratulations from Joseph Stalin.

Fliers Congratulated

"We ardently congratulate you on the happy accomplishment of the outstanding flight from Moscow to North America," said the message.

"Your flight of 8,000 kilometers (5,000 miles) covered in 22 hours and 56 minutes proved that courageous, daring Soviet airmen can solve successfully the most difficult problems of world aviation."

It had at first been reported Kokkinaki broke one or more ribs in the crack-up but one Russian official, said the pilot suffered only bruises. The aviators, who had hoped to reach the World's Fair Friday night, could have left their damaged plane Saturday but decided to remain by their ship awaiting instructions from Soviet authorities.

Ferried to Mainland

Finally Pilot Joe Anderson ferried Gordienko to Moncton yesterday in a Canadian Airways plane and later Pilot H. S. Jones brought out Kokkinaki. The monoplane, its wings and propellors damaged, was left on the Gulf of St. Lawrence isle under Royal Canadian Mounted Police guard.

Bad weather delayed the rescue work as ice and a stiff wind made landing and taking-off at the island hazardous. As he left the rescue plane at Moncton Gordienko handed a locked metal box to Russian officials who flew to Moncton from New York. It apparently contained instruments taken from the disabled plane. The Soviet airman grinned and raised his right fist in a Russian salute in answer to cheers from the crowd.

Pilot Anderson was the first man from the mainland to reach the pair Saturday. Later he made another trip and a Canadian Royal Air Force flying boat offered to take Kokkinaki and Gordienko to Halifax. The Russians declined all offers until they were certain their plane was under guard and instruments had been removed.

DIES IN PULPIT AFTER SERMON

Rev. W. G. F. Macmorine Suffers Heart Attack in Church

Vankleek Hill, Ont., May 1—(CP)—Rev. William G. F. Macmorine, 66, Rural Dean of the united counties of Prescott and Russell, collapsed and died of a heart attack in the pulpit of St. Paul's Anglican Church at Fenaghvale, 10 miles from here yesterday, as he completed his sermon.

Son of the late Rev. John C. Macmorine of Kingston, Ont., Mr. Macmorine was appointed Dean six years ago. Surviving besides his widow, the former Edith Mary Taylor, are two sons, Rev. Linley Macmorine, Manotick, Ont., and Bleaden Macmorine of Montreal, and two daughters, Hilda of Toronto and Madeline of Kingston.

Harry Hall, Deseronto, Feted By Many Fellow Employees

Retires from Ontario Hydro After 29 Years of Service

RECIPIENT OF GIFTS

Mr. Harry Hall of Deseronto, an employee of long standing in the Belleville office of the Hydro-Electric Power Commission of Ontario and who recently retired on pension was feted by over fifty of his fellow-workers at a banquet held in the Queen's Hotel, Saturday night.

Mr. Hall, who had charge of the telephone department, was in the employ of the Commission from the time the Hydro took over the old Electric Power Co., system in 1916 and he worked for the latter concern from 1910, altogether a period of twenty-nine years of faithful and efficient service in the district. His duties took him all over the ramifications of the Central Ontario System and he was a sincere friend of all those with whom he came in contact.

With everyone in a jolly mood after tasting of Mrs. Zita Ryan's excellent cuisine and the toast to the King having been proposed by Mr. G. B. Smith, several retrospective stories were humorously told by those who knew "Harry" best, the one which evoked much laughter being the mysterious ability of Harry to accumulate tools.

Fine Program

Interspersed in the evening's fun were several humorous and dramatic recitations by Mr. George Cornish, an artist whose cleverness and versatility captivated his audience. Tommy Mason supplied piano accompaniment to the lusty singing of "He's a Jolly Good Fellow", "Hall Hall, the Gang's all Here" and other songs, during which time the loving-cup was passed around.

Brief eulogies came from all parts of the banquet room, expressing the high regard in which the guest of honor was held in the hearts of his colleagues. Mr. G. E. McKinnon and Mr. Harry Poste, of the Toronto office staff, both formerly with the Belleville office, spoke glowingly of Mr. Hall's virtues as a friend and a gentleman. Other out-of-town employees bringing felicitations from their various sections were—Mr. E. C. Gummo, Campbellford; Mr. Wm. Hawken, Trenton; Mr. Stan Prest, Ivanhoe; Mr. G. Poste, Napanee; Mr. S. C. Hughes, manager of the Deseronto Public Utilities Commission. Mr. R. L. (Bob) Brown spoke eloquently and not without some humor, of Mr. Hall's fine qualities. Mr. J. H. McNamara expressed his sentiments on behalf of the Line Maintenance Dept. and Mr. H. C. McElrath, who acted as master of ceremonies, contributed his reminiscences with customary sparkling wit.

Perhaps the most fitting tribute was paid by Mr. G. B. Smith, Eastern Ontario System Superintendent, when he said: "I have known Harry Hall for quite a long time, thirty years or thereabouts. In all that time I have respected Mr. Hall and my respect for him has increased with the years. His word has always been as good as his bond. I have never heard Mr. Hall say an unkind word about a single soul and he has always had the kindest regard for everybody."

Presentation Made

To Miss Keitha Woodley of the Belleville office staff, fell the honor of making the presentation to Mr. Hall of a handsome purse of cash as a mark of the high esteem in which he was held by his colleagues. Mrs. Earl Elliott, a former employee in the Belleville office, presented on behalf of the staff a beautiful mauve blanket for Mrs. Hall. Sentiment ran high as Mr. Hall in a brief speech, thanked his friends for their gifts and good wishes and hoped he would be spared as many pleasant minutes in the future as he had enjoyed with his co-workers in the past.

Mr. Hall is a highly respected citizen of Deseronto. This year, by popular demand, he was elected to the Board of School Trustees. The mellowing hand of time has dealt benignly with this fine gentleman in whose veins the milk of human kindness runs strongly. For upwards of twenty-five years he has given a gala party each New Year's Day for the children from the Indian Reserve. This year over two hundred children converged at Mr. Hall's home, where each received a present and goodies.

As the writer shook the firm hand and looked into the merry eyes of this fine old gentleman on Saturday night it was to realize that it could truly be said of him, with the poet:

"Kindness all his looks expressed,
Charity was every word;
Him the eye beheld and blessed,
And the ear rejoiced that heard."

MALE CHORUS IN SERVICE OF SONG

Three Groups Sang at Sacred Concert in Baptist Church

That God has bestowed no greater gift on mankind than that of utterance in song was realized again Sunday evening when the Belleville Male Chorus under the leadership of Mr. Ross Hunter, presented their second sacred concert in Victoria Avenue Baptist Church.

With Mr. Alec Gordon supplying organ accompaniment the well-balanced ensemble, with many excellent resources of vocal technique, sang three groups of familiar numbers. In the first range were included "Laudamus", "Hide Me In Thy Great Pavilion" and hymn from "Crusaders". The second group included "Where E'er You Walk", "Spacious Firmament" and the Negro spiritual "I Know the Lord." In the third group were heard "Church in the Wild Wood" with Fred Jobson singing solo parts, "Listen to the Lambs", a Negro spiritual with solo by John Deacon, "Remember Me", "Take Time to be Holy" and "Softly the Light of Heaven".

The very familiarity of the hymns that were sung enabled the large audience to fully appreciate the effectiveness and beauty of male singing. The tones were always clear and easy and rhythm most expressive.

A number that seemed particularly to hold the audience in a spell was "Take Time To Be Holy", sung very softly, which drew a strange feeling of utter restfulness over the listener's spirit. Other numbers, in which full chorus and organ were heard, were almost impressive. During the singing of the Negro spirituals one could almost visualize dusky faces and swaying forms as the choir gave their interpretation of the sacred music that is so dear to the hearts of the Southern folk.

Rev. Claude Troupe Olmstead, in a brief address, sought to answer the words of Jesus as recorded in St. Matthew's Gospel, "Who do ye say that I am." The minister stated that the answer is to be found in good books, in great pictures such as Holman Hunt's "Light of the World", Hoffman's "Christ in Gethsemane" and many others, in biographies of noble lives and in hymns.

The preacher went on to enumerate several great hymns that revealed Jesus, such as Albert Midlane's "There is a Friend for Little Children", Joseph Scriven's "What a Friend We Have in Jesus", Wesley's "Jesus Lover of My Soul" and Isaac Watts' "Joy to the World the Lord is Come."

"From these hymns and the others we hear so beautifully sung tonight," said Rev. Mr. Olmstead, "we learn that Jesus is a Friend, Comforter, Saviour, Lover, Ruler of the world and Companion of the way."

Rev. D. T. McClintock of Tabernacle United Church pronounced the benediction at the close of the service.

ARMY EXERCISES ON GRAND SCALE

Greatest Display by Great Britain in This Century Will be Put on

By PAT USSHER

Canadian Press Staff Writer

London, May 1—(CP)—Great Britain's biggest peace-time army manoeuvres of the century will be held this summer centring around Aldershot and in Yorkshire.

Two divisions of the Aldershot command will carry out manoeuvres starting in June and lasting three months. The fifth division of the northern command will perform exercises lasting two months in Yorkshire.

Climax of the war games will come in September with transport of an entire army corps at approximately war strength from the southern to the northern field of operations. The corps will clash in an eight-day battle with a northern defence force under realistic conditions.

The mechanized army corps will make the 200-mile strategic move north from Aldershot to Yorkshire by road and rail. Special trains will be run, as they would in war-time, carrying ammunition, food and other supplies. The Royal Air Force will cooperate.

The battle over Yorkshire's moors and dales will involve an "enemy" and two "allied forces, to make it more realistic. Both the enemy force and the ally will be obtained from troops of the northern command.

War games will also tage place this summer in two other regions.

The eastern command will carry out brigade and inter-brigade training in August in east Kent. A combined operation exercise with the navy and the air force will be held on the east coast late in July.

On Salisbury plain the armored division of the southern command will hold special training for a month.

Little Benny's Note Book

Tonight is going to be the night ma is suppose to act in a play, and we were eating breakfist and ma said to pop, Now Willyum I want my mind to be perfectly easy and unfluttered, so my acting will be the same. I realize I only have 2 words to speak, but that's all the more reason I should be in the proper state of mind to make them dubbly effective. So I dont want any fuss and feathers. I want everybody to act just as if this was merely an everyday day, she said.

I'll just talk about the weather, pop said.

Wich he started to, saying, Nice weather, isn't it? and ma said, It looks like rain to me.

So it does, I must of got it confused with this coffee of Nora's, she seems to of forgotten to add the coffee, pop said. Coffee without coffee seems to lose half its caracter, somehow, he said.

And he took another cup anyways, and tonight we started supper exter early on account of the play, pop saying to ma, You seem a little quiet my deer, everything's okay I hope.

Oh yes, yes, I have no complaints, ma said. If you choose not to choose to even send me a few paltry flowers on an occasion like this, I'm sure it's your own affair, I'm not the complaining kind, she said, and pop said, But yee gods I thought you didn't want to be reminded.

O' never mind what I wanted or didn't want, I act in a play once in a life-time, but never mind, maybe I'll act in another one in some other reincarnation, ma said, and pop said, I'll make a note of that in case I happen to be there in some form or other.

And he wrote something on the back of an envelope and pretended to put it in his pocket and passed it to me under the tablecloth with a private wink and I read it on the sly and it said, Duck out to the telefone and fone this telegram Mrs. Willyum Potts, A palpitating world is waiting, let the 2 words ring out, Willyum Potts.

And I quick went and telefoned it and a messenger boy delivered it about a half hour later, making ma feel perfect.

Weddings

L'HEUREUX—HICKS

The marriage was solemnized at eight o'clock Saturday morning, April 22, in St. Joseph's Church, Chatham, of Thelma Marie Hicks, only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Hicks of Chatham, and Morris Wilfred L'Heureux, son of Mr. and Mrs. W. J. L'Heureux of Chatham, formerly of Belleville.

Rev. Father Vincent Walsh officiated and the attendants were Miss Berneda Joseph and Willard L'Heureux, brother of the bridegroom.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a street length frock of sheer pale orchid with a bolero of a deeper shade of orchid. She wore corresponding accessories and a corsage of Briarcliffe roses.

Miss Mildred Wilcox played the wedding music and accompanied Gerard Caron who sang "Ave Maria" and "I Love You Truly".

About seventy-five guests attended a wedding breakfast at the home of the bride's parents following the ceremony. The bride's mother, wearing a rust frock and matching accessories, and Mrs. L'Heureux, mother of the bridegroom, wearing a black bolero dress with poudre blue top and black accessories, received with the bridal party. Both had corsages of deep pink roses.

Following a short honeymoon Mr. and Mrs. L'Heureux will reside in Chatham.

Among the out-of-town guests at the wedding were Peter L'Heureux of Port Arthur, grandfather of the bridegroom, and W. J. L'Heureux Jr., of Toronto, brother of the bridegroom.

Current Offerings at Belleville Theatres

Advance Information on Screen Offerings Supplied by Theatre Managers.

AT THE BELLE

"You Can't Cheat An Honest Man"

Hilarious comedy sequences deftly woven into a powerful story stamp Universal's "You Can't Cheat an Honest Man" as one of the year's best screen offerings.

Heading the cast of the picture, which is now on the Belle screen are W. C. Fields, Edgar Bergen and Charlie McCarthy. They are rated as Hollywood's top comedy combination—and they certainly live up to their reputation!

Highlighting the film, as you might suspect, is the bitter feud between Fields and his wooden nemisee, McCarthy. Their battle reaches new heights of potency and comedy in "You Can't Cheat an Honest Man."

McCarthy in Blackface

You'll laugh till your sides ache when Charlie pops up with a black eye, instigated by Fields, and has to do one of his acts in blackface so the discolored orb won't be noticed.

The attractive Constance Moore, playing her first major role, gives a brilliant performance. Mortimer Snerd is back again too.

A brand new face seen on the screen for the first time is that of Princess Baba. Another newcomer is Blacaman, Hindu animal hypnotist, who performs some amazing feats with lions and crocodiles.

Galaxy of Talent

Mary Forbes and Thurston Hall are perfectly cast as James Bush's parents. John Arledge gives an excellent account of himself as Fields' son. You will also see Charles Coleman is one of his never-to-be-forgotten butler roles, Edward Brophy, Arthur Hohl and Eddie Anderson are splendid as a union representative, bill collector and Fields' colored helper respectively.

Melody and fun abound in the multiple-reel musical comedy, "Music and Models" to be presented on the same program with the Belle newsreel, and a clever novelette "Society Dog Circus."

AT THE McCARTHY

"Never Say Die"

"Never say die but always say laugh" is evidently the motto of those two unbeatable comedians, Bob Hope and Martha Raye, in their new picture together, "Never Say Die" which is one of the two feature attractions now at the McCarthy Theatre.

For never in their many film adventures together have Hope and Miss Raye got into so many amazing situations and never have they got themselves out again with such a mixture of luck, resourcefulness and originality. For sheer laughs and good fun the new comedy even tops their recent "Give Me a Sailor" which is saying a good deal for it.

"Never Say Die," Hope's and Miss Raye's fourth vehicle together in little more than a year, is a merry story of a millionaire hypochondriac who thinks he has only a month to live and acts with the fatal carelessness peculiar to those who believe themselves doomed. As if his approaching death were not a big enough worry, Hope takes on an even greater one when he marries Miss Raye, a screwball American girl, in order to help her elude a Russian prince her father has chosen for her.

There follows an Alpine honeymoon shared by Hope, Miss Raye and her bus-driver sweetheart from back home, who comes along to keep an eye on his beloved. The comedy inherent in such a situation is obvious, and "Never Say Die" explores it to the fullest!

"Juvenile Court".

Punch-packed expose of youth in the slums of a teeming metropolis, "Juvenile Court" is thrillingly dramatic entertainment and is sure to please all patrons who attend its current showing now at the McCarthy Theatre. With Paul Kelly and Rita Hayworth featured, the new drama is made even more enjoyable by the work of six talented youngsters of future Hollywood fame.

Bold, tough, cocky, destructive, yet likeable and altogether real, the youths are a cross-section of boyhood everywhere, but especially of those youngsters who live and play in the slums.

"Juvenile Court" opens in such a section. The boys are playing "cops and robbers." Suddenly they hear a burst of machine gun fire. Dutch Adams, a notorious gangster, has been finally cornered by the police he despises. Only a few years before he had been like them. He had lived in the same neighborhood, fighting and stealing, with no other outlet for the energies of youth. Adams, brought to trial, draws as public defender a man who stemmed from the same environment, but who was able to triumph over it.

Kelly, in defending the gangster, meets his younger sister and brother, played by Miss Hayworth and Frankie Darro. He quickly senses that Frankie and his chums are headed for a criminal career, and "Juvenile Court" gets fully under way when Kelly launches a fight to give the boys a more decent environment.

WINS MUSIC AWARD

Winner of first prize in the annual competition conducted by the Canadian Performing Rights Society for young Canadian composers, was Lawrence Goodwill, ABOVE, 19-year-old Vancouver pianist. His prize was a Toronto Conservatory of Music scholarship, which he will avail himself of to continue his studies. There was a "marked technical advance" in all the work submitted this year over that of previous competitions, according to the judges.

Enlarged Pores Are Source of Beauty Ills

LARAINE DAY
No enlarged pores mar her smooth complexion

(By HELEN FOLLETT)

ENLARGED pores are a sore trial. They destroy the fine fabric of the skin, show up in horrid pits that no make-up will hide. No wonder that those who are afflicted stand beside beauty's wailing wall and yowl.

The cause? There are several. One, just plain neglect, especially in youth. Two, a diet that contains too much protein. Individuals who eat more than the usual amount of meat, who love rich sauces and pastries, nearly always develop a coarse skin.

To combat this condition increase the intake of vegetables, fruits, green salads, buttermilk, unsweetened lemonade. Not so much butter on the bread, please, not so much sugar in tea and coffee. Down your six glasses of water a day like a good girl. Never fail to have the daily bath, scrubbing with a brush as heavy as a doormat; that practice helps the skin all over the body to function normally.

Avoid the use of hot water on the face. Use water just warm enough to make a lather with a bland soap.

Beauty cues to the woman of the large frame who carries a surplus of adipose tissues

Never wear brocades, thick woolen fabrics or prints with large designs; they all add to the appearance of bulk. Dark colors are more slenderizing than light ones. Pastel tones are out of the picture; they are not suitable.

Garments of loose fit are less revealing than those that stick like the paper on the wall. Long lines and extended panels are flattering.

The coiffure must be neat, tresses close to the head. The heavyweight looks terrible with bouncing locks. Also she cannot get away with pint-size hats; they make her look silly.

Are there corns on your little pink toes? The only permanent cure for those torments are shoes that do not press against the flesh. When there is irritation of that sort, Mama Nature takes a hand, causes the flesh to thicken. Narrow shoes make feet miserable. And don't forget that the shoe should extend at least half an inch beyond the ends of the toes.

Don't take foot miseries for granted and fancy that you must bear them. If you can't find comfortable booties, go to a foot specialist, get a shoe prescription, have your hoof cases made to order. You'll find that your view of life will change, posture will improve, the disposition will be more engaging.

WALLBRIDGE W. I.

The annual meeting of the Women's Institute was held at the home of Mrs. Wm. Holmes on April 23rd, with eighteen in attendance. Mrs. J. Sine, president, was in charge of the meeting. Roll call was answered by "My favorite flower and its cultivation." The treasurer repored thirty members and successful receipts for the year. Miss Peggy Ketcheson and Miss Nieta Woods were chosen as delegates to Girls' Conference at Guelph in May.

Mrs. J. Chisholm was convener of the programme and ably demonstrated the topic, "Bread and Buns" by displaying homemade bread and buns which were afterward used for lunch.

Messrs. J. White, J. Chisholm and C. Ketcheson were appointed as nominating committee and Mrs. S. Nicolson as chairman of election of officers.

The officers for 1939-40 are:
President—Mrs. S. Nicolson.
1st Vice-Pres.—Mrs. F. Shorey.
2nd Vice-Pres.—Mrs. H. Ketcheson.
Secretary—Mrs. W. Woods.
Treasurer—Mrs. W. Wickson.
Pianist—Mrs. E. Lane.
Press Reporter—Mrs. L. Ketcheson.
District Director—Mrs. H. Jeffery.

Mrs. J. White was appointed delegate for the convention at Scott's Church. A vote of thanks was extended to the retiring president, Mrs. Sine and to Mrs. Holmes for her hospitality.

Concerning Engagement Rings

In quaint romantic novels, and often in the movies, a lover, when he goes a-wooing, provides himself with a diamond solitaire ring, ready to place it triumphantly on the finger of the beloved if She says 'yes', when he pops the question.

But in real life this usually isn't what happens. These days it is considered more sensible for the young man to consult his fiancee about the ring which she is to wear all her life, we hope, we hope. Girls know what kind of ring they want and very often . . . surprise! . . . their preferences are easier on the young man's budget than he had expected.

Of course the accepted suitor may, if he wishes, buy the ring without consulting his bethrothed or having consulted her about her taste in rings, may go forth to buy the ring that is nearest her heart's desire as well as nearest his financial capacity. Perhaps the jeweler will be asked to bring the rings the fiance has selected to the bride's house while she makes her choice. Or the young man may buy an unset stone, and have several sketches made for the setting, the girl to choose from them.

Today a diamond solitaire is not at all a "must" as an engagement ring. A diamond is, of course, still the usual choice, but it is not the only choice. Many girls, in jeweler's parlance, prefer a "colored" stone to parlance, prefer a "colored" stone. Some prefer a ruby, symbolizing ardor, a sapphire, for fidelity. Pearls, opals, emeralds, once considered less lucky, are now popular.

Fashion of the moment with its interest in semi-precious stones and their lovely colors, influences some girls to choose large, handsome moonstones or carnelians, topazes, aquamarines, rather than a small diamond.

There is romantic interest in having birthstones set in engagement rings. To answer many questions about the birth stones for each month, here they are—

January	Garnet
February	Amethyst
March	Bloodstone, Aquamarine
April	Diamond
May	Emerald
June	Moonstone, Pearl Agate
July	Ruby
August	Sardonyx Carnelian
September	Sapphire
October	Opal, Tourmaline
November	Topaz
December	Turquoise Lapis Lazuli

If there is a lovely heirloom ring in the fiance's family, sometimes this becomes the engagement ring "as is" or after the stone is reset, or recut.

Because of the popularity of diamond wedding rings, some girls forego an engagement ring, and concentrate the budget on a diamond wedding band.

DR. DAFOE'S COLUMN on the Quintuplets and the Care of Your Children

Dr. Dafoe Describes Beginnings of Smallpox

I have never seen any bad results from vaccination, and vaccination gives complete protection against smallpox. Of course, to give this immunity, the vaccination must be successful.

Several times in my practice I have vaccinated a person who happened to have been exposed to the disease, and I have had these people develop smallpox at same time vaccination was working. When this happens, though, the disease itself is a very mild thing.

We doctors get all sorts of requests—nearly always from women—to put the vaccination where it won't be seen. I suppose this was all right in the old days, when we used to make such large scars, and when mixed infections in the vaccination mark were more common. But the way it is done today, there shouldn't be any mark left, so no one need be afraid of being disfigured.

We vaccinated the Quintuplets, every one of them, a long time ago. We vaccinated them on the leg so they couldn't ever reproach us for marking up their arms. Now you can't see a single mark on any of them. Their vaccinations gave them no trouble at all. They could not talk at that time, but every morning they would all come over to me and show me where the vaccine was taking. They used to call them their "Bo-Bo's." I would not have my hat and coat off until they would all be over to show me their marks.

We vaccinated the Quints just as early as we could, because it is a disease common to children. Or perhaps I should say it was a disease common to children. Adults, of course, will take it if they haven't been vaccinated. Our bad epidemics in this country usually began with some member of the family, possibly one working in the lumber camps north of here, coming home sick and paying little attention to his sickness. By the time I was called to the house, the smallpox would already be spreading. The whole family might be down with it. Fresh air was one of the first treatments I would prescribe.

Smallpox usually begins with chills, headache, and pains in the back. The temperature soars to 104 or 105 degrees. Believe me, a child with smallpox is a sick child right from the first.

First a fine red rash appears. Discreet red spots usually appear first on the forehead, wrists and ankles. From there it may spread to all parts of the body. I have often seen it on the mucuous membranes of the nose and mouth as well.

These spots are quite smooth at first, but in a few hours they change in character, rising above the skin, and the tip of the spot becomes white in color and seems to contain a drop of clear fluid in it. This stage lasts for several days, with the spots and their drops of water increasing in number. Then the spots change again. The clear drops become pus and look white and creamy. These dry up in a day or two, and leave the pockmarks we so often see on persons who have recovered from the disease.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

Famous Authority on Problems of Love and Marriage.

Life Can Be Pretty Drab

Dear Miss Fairfax

Until lately, mother would never allow us to have friends or go out of the house, unless she went along. For the past four years I've been working, and my salary is pretty good. But mother will allow me only three dollars week from which I must clothe myself and pay for incidentals. So you see I can't entertain my friends on that.

Besides, as mother was so strict for such a long time, it's hard to let friends know that she doesn't mind our having company any more.

Lately I've met a young man who tries hard to please me, and to tell the truth I love him dearly. He talks about marriage, but we'd rather wait till he has a better job. Do you think it will be well to wait till he has an increase of salary, or do you think I shall take my chance on marriage? As I have no one to turn to, I'm turning to you for a little advice.

Do you know of any good club where lonely people can meet or correspond?

L. H.

I always advise my correspondents to avoid lonely-heart clubs and correspondence arranged on a cash basis. I've known of too many tragedies, not excepting murder, to come from these haphazard acquaintances. As your mother has let down the bars, as far as admitting your friends to the house, persuade her to let you keep a little more of your pay envelope and entertain your friends at home.

Job For Wives Are Out?

Dear Miss Fairfax

Why do you suggest that a couple be married and that the girl keep on with her job? From personal experience and observation, such an arrangement should be the last one considered.

It's bad enough when a woman is forced to take a position, after her husband goes broke, but to advocate marriage while financial affairs are in reverse is too great a risk. If you wish to argue the point further, I will be glad to give you definite data to prove my contention.

H. F. A.

I still disagree. If it's a case where two young people love each other devotedly and marriage is out of the question, unless the girl keeps on with her job, to my way of thinking it's decidedly better for them to marry instead of break their hearts over parting.

I've never advocated that the girl should keep on with her job indefinitely. But in these troubled times, it's well to have a little nest egg in preparation for the "blessed event". And I hope sincerely all my correspondents may have a couple at least of these blessings.

BETHANY Y. P. U.

The regular meeting of the Bethany Y.P.U. was held in the church on Wednesday evening. The meeting opened with quiet music followed by the call to worship. Hymn 444 was followed by the Lord's Prayer. The offering was taken and business discussed followed with hymn 351.

Mr. Russell Ritz then took charge. The meeting opened with quiet music. Hymn 252 was sung. A poem was given by Mr. Russell Ritz. Topic was given by Miss Hazel Walker. Other numbers were: Solo by Miss Bessie Walker; reading by Mrs. A. Millar; a piano and violin selection by Miss Bessie Walker and Mr. Harry McPherson. The meeting closed with hymn 240 and the League benediction.

CARMEL Y.P.U.

The weekly meeting of the Carmel Y.P.U. was held in the church on Wednesday evening, April 26th. The meeting opened with Miss Olive Howes, Missionary convener in charge of the Worship Service. Miss Howes gave the theme "The Voice of God is Calling". Miss Irene Haynes read The Call to Worship". The Scripture Lesson Isaiah 6 1-8 was read by Miss Marron Waddell. Hymn "We Have Heard the Joyful Sound" was sung followed with prayer by Miss O. Howes. The offering was received by Carl Haynes.

Miss Olive Howes gave a splendid topic "Beckoning Frontiers". Mr. Armstrong gave a talk on the topic.

The meeting closed with the Mizpah Benediction. Following the meeting Miss Monna Wright, recreation convener, conducted a "Quiz" contest.

MARSH HILL Y.P.U.

Marsh Hill Y.P.U. met at the home of Col. and Mrs. R. Vanderwater on April 25th with thirty-three present. In conjunction with the theme of the worship service "Faith", the hymn "My faith looks up to Thee" was sung followed by prayer and the reading of the first ten verses of Hebrews XI by Miss Hazel Detlor. Gordon Tanner and Gordon Saunders then read two poems —"A Plea" and "Faith". After the answering of the roll call by a verse of Scripture containing the word "Faith", Mrs. G. Frederick rendered "Faith of our Fathers" after which she took charge of the social program. A solo by Gordon Saunders was followed by the reading of several of Edgar A. Guest's poems by Leslie Finkle, Miss Marjorie Parks and Grant Wright. Miss Alison Vanderwater read "Charm" after which she and her sister, Margaret gave a fine piano duet. Readings by Miss Eileen Tanner and Mrs. G. Frederick preceded a fine topic "Stewardship" by Mrs. J. Frederick. A hymn and the Mizpah benediction closed the meeting after which the hostess served candy and all took part in games staged by Misses Aleita Horton and Alison Vanderwater.

DiMaggio Out of Yanks' Lineup And Team Drops Two Games; Leads American in Hitting

Outfielder Tore Muscles in Leg and Will be Out for Week

RED SOX ADVANCE

Boston Bees Win Third in Row to be Second in National

(By Judson Bailey Associated Press Sports Writer).

It's going out of the way to find trouble for anyone to predict in the first month of the baseball season that a player who now is injured and out of the lineup will win a Major League's most valuable player award come Autumn.

Yet Joe DiMaggio, cooped up in his New York hotel room today with a leg tightly taped and bandaged, ought to be the choice of baseball writers when next they ballot. The records show that as Di Mag goes, so go the Yankees.

He tore some muscles in his right leg in a fall Saturday and the world champions immediately lost two games to Washington Senators, yesterday's by a 3-2 score. In both games lefthand pitching triumphed.

Leads in Hitting

Right now Di Mag is leading the American League in hitting with a .435 average and hasn't failed to hit safely in every game in which he has played. This is a good beginning toward his biggest year and his absence shows that Yankees' pennant pranks hinge very directly on his presence, both at bat and in the field.

The defeat of the Yankees yesterday enabled Boston Red Sox to climb into a tie for first place by belting Philadelphia Athletics 3-1. Jim Bagby didn't take any chances on his seven hit hurling deciding the game and contributed a home run to his own cause.

Detroit Tigers both individually and collectively the majors' leading sluggers, turned loose a broadside against Cleveland to win 14-1 with Tommy Bridges holding the Indians to six hits and fanning eight. Charley Gehringer, who incidentally beat out DiMaggio for the most valuable player award in 1937, got his third homer of the spring with the bases filled.

Chicago White Sox squeezed past St. Louis Browns 6-5 in the other American League game.

Boston Bees Second

While Cincinnati Reds were rained out at Pittsburgh Boston Bees won their third straight to push within half a game of the top. Their 3-2 victims were New York Giants, who have lost four in a row.

Chicago Cubs displaced St. Louis in third place by beating the Cardinals 4-1 although outhit 10-6.

The Washington "jinx" cost New York Yankees their Saturday game as the Senators defeated them 3-1 on the dependable hurling of Ken Chase. Bob Feller struck out 13 and Cleveland thus defeated Detroit 7-1. In a see-saw battle, Chicago White Sox eked out a 9-8 win over St. Louis Browns, while Boston Red Sox won a close decision from Philadelphia by a 3-2 margin.

In Saturday's National League games St. Louis Cardinals defeated Chicago 2-0 and Boston Bees bunched their hits in two innings to trounce New York Giants 8-1. Whitlow Wyatt pitched Brooklyn into sixth place with a 5-0 shutout over Philadelphia. Cincinnati gave Pittsburgh its eight straight defeat by beating them 5-3.

Sports Roundup

(By Eddie Brietz)

(Associated Press Sports Writer)

New York, May 1—(AP) — Looks as though the whole country is pulling for Lou Gehrig — his fan mail right now is the heaviest ever. . . . seems to us the boys who are busy electing Luke Sewell to succeed Oscar Vitt at Cleveland are putting a couple of mighty nice guys on the spot . . . . The Washington Anvil Chorus is in full swing again, likening Clark Griffith's payroll to those in Philly and St. Louis.

Bobby Feller —The White Sox say you are a better pitcher than ever before and getting better . . up State New York editors—Get ready for a wholesale House of David invasion . . . . Washington Redskins—You may as well start looking for another end. Bob Masterson is going to stay in Florida and coach Ponce de Leon High at Coral Gables . . . Frankie Frisch —The baseball writers say they can't help missing the sight and sound of you on the Cardinal bench.

Gabby Hartnett took a few huffs and puffs in batting practice the other day and almost blew the park down . . . One of Dizzy Dean's pitches landed in almost the same spot as did the famous Hartnett Homer of last year against the Pirates . . . . Another cleared the palings . . . A third darn near tore the fence down . . . . Gabby howled toward the Cub bench—"That's just to keep Mancuso hustling for his job".

Honey Boy, a 300-lb Kentucky black bear, now working the southern wrestling circuit, is in bad with the promoters . . . . he simply refuses to lose.

HOW TO KEEP SCORE

Basic Symbols For Players and Plays

By Central Press Canadian

Scattered among thousands of fans perched in grandstands during this centennial year of baseball will be intense little groups armed with pencils, pocket-size scorebooks and expert knowledge of the game. These eagle-eyed followers of the game have learned the keen, added thrill that comes with charting baseball inning by inning, the solid satisfaction to be derived from scoring the game play-by-play.

Keeping your own scorebook can be relatively simple, or it can be fairly complex. Baseball experts of long standing can easily maintain a complex code of running play without suffering mental strain or writer's cramp. Beginners should take it easy at first, recording only the simpler details. A brief written account covering the more involved points of play can be compiled immediately after the game—from memory, and by the score board. Expertness comes with practice.

Everybody who has scored baseball for long has developed his own special stenographic symbols to cover playing developments. You will doubtless develop your own symbols in time. It is the purpose of this series to arm you with the simple fundamentals, citing examples that will provide the framework for dealing with any baseball situation.

The oldest and simplest system, still used today by many experts, such as John Kieran of the New York Times and Jack Doyle, the baseball records wizard, consists of numbering the players on the field by their positions. Thus:

1—Pitcher.
2—Catcher.
3—First baseman.
4—Second baseman.
5—Shortstop.
6—Third baseman.
8—Centre fielder.
9—Right fielder.

Shortstop often is numbered "6" and third baseman "5".

These numbers correspond to the positions throughout the game, regardless of substitutions. When substitutions are made, the changes should be noted down in the batting order at the exact moment the new players come on the field.

There are about a dozen letter symbols in general use by professional scorers to designate playing actions. They are:

K—Strikeout.
BB—Base on balls.
S—Stolen base.
LK—Out on foul strike.
WT—Wild throw.
P—Out on infield pop fly.
T—Safe bunt.
LF—Out on foul fly.
E—Error.
H—Hit batter.
WP—Wild pitch.
FC—Fielder's choice.

With experience, the amateur scorer will enlarge this group of symbols to cover additional action that would require phrases unless abbreviated.

In the next of this series, we will describe the simplest batting code in use today and symbols used to note fielding movements.

CALLING 'EM Between the Lines

Ken J. Colling

After an absence of some years at the Y.M.C.A. from the senior O.B.A. wars, the Windsor City League will return to the fold again this year, the O.B.A. Executive was informed on Saturday. With Peterboro playing intercity with Toronto and the return of Windsor to the top flight series it will mean four league winners will be declared in the senior baseball ranks, the Peterboro-Toronto setup, Niagara Peninsula, Windsor City and Inter-county. "Peck" Ward of the Niagara Peninsula area proposed a round robin series for the senior league winners. "It will give each place some new faces," explained Mr. Ward. The executive was very much in favor of the suggestion, but the final decision will rest with the individual clubs to accept or reject. Incidentally, Mr. Ward informed us Saturday they have 53 minor baseball teams operating in the City of Niagara Falls, ranging from junior school leagues, right along to senior O.B.A. The Niagara Falls ball executive is doubtless the strongest body of its kind in this province, composed of willing workers, who take a civic pride in the future of the next generation.

If the Kingston 'Locos' are not bluffing and desire to play ball, we obtained permission from the O.B.A. executive to permit the Kingston club to play ball along with the Picton, Napanee, Belleville and possibly the Air Force. "Take them (Kingston) into your organization as an intermediate club. On July 1st if we find they are so much stronger than places like Napanee and Picton, the executive will deal with the matter at that time," President Jack Scott suggested. Incidentally the Bay of Quinte moguls meet on Wednesday night and the Kingston interests, now they have been granted concessions, should lean over backwards in order to get back in the good graces of the league, we'd almost imagine. The Bowmanville Club of the Lake Shore League, asked for the right to use players from Oshawa. With the General Motors out of senior ball the 'Rubber Town' squad must have wanted a ball club handed to them on the proverbial platter. Only players residing in Oshawa, who played ball outside of Oshawa this year will be permitted the same privilege in 1939. Why hasn't Oshawa an intermediate team of their own?

Just received a letter from Tommy Pedder, North American champion weight-lifter at 123½ pounds. Tommy is also coach of the Hastings County Weight-lifting Club and informs us the club is holding a strength display at the Prince of Wales School Friday night, no admission charged. Tommy has arranged several outstanding contests including a grudge lift between Leon Shortt, Vic Mason and Bill McMurter, all of whom lift in the 126 pound class. As an added attraction Pedder will attempt to break the existing Canadian record in a class one notch higher than his championship class he now holds. Bill McQuaid and Jack Edmonds, club champions, will also attempt to better their records. Incidentally Pedder will act as judge when Jack Cooper, local heavyweight lifter, competes in the Canadian finals at Toronto on May 12th. Pedder will defend his North American championship at the United States national weight-lifting championships to be held at Chicago on July 4th next. The local weight-lifters practice religiously

The grapplers will take the spotlight at the Hume Arena on Friday night with that old favourite, Scotty McDougall meeting Gentleman Jack Washburn in the main go. To those wrestling fans who have never seen Washburn in action—the fans call him "Gentleman Jack". Why?—because he's as rough a hombre as ever crawled through the ropes in Belleville, New York or Timbucto. To insure speed, action and agility the lightheavies will provide the action for the preliminaries, headed by Joe Conkle, the Red Devil, who made a host of friends here before journeying to England, where he has wrestled for the past 18 months. He'll meet Ivan Managough, the Russian lad from Detroit in the opener, but the McDougall-Washburn affair will be the feature, both being top ranking wrestlers in any man's league. A complete card, including an outside referee, has been arranged for the return of professional wrestling to Belleville.

As has been the custom of the A. G. Spalding Company for these many years back, we are in receipt of a quota of score cards, for baseball or softball. Annually Mr. J. O. Dack, merchandise manager of the Spalding Company, kindly supplies us with some 200 of these score cards, which in turn we pass along to the various individual clubs or leagues desirous of same. Our shipment has arrived, those wishing score cards can follow the usual procedure of previous years by calling at our office or giving us the address necessary to forward same. The sporting clubs of the district are heartily thankful to the Spalding Sporting Goods Company for this annual contribution, which is so fitting each year.

The Portsmouth soccer team won the English Cup defeating Wolverhampton 4-1 to register a major sports upset on Saturday. It was the first time Pompey had ever won the covetted cup and they're victory was the result of great team play. The Wolves had won the cup on two previous occasions and were the favourites on Saturday, but it was not to be. There was much rejoicing and celebrating in the southern part of England over the week end—Hitler and his band of boogeymen being cast into the discard as the Cup finals took over the week end spotlight.

We're Telling You—Don't be late for the season's first baseball practice this evening at the Collegiate grounds.... What's the matter with the Toronto Leafs?—no hitting in the outer garden positions.... Marchildon, the Ontario rookie with the Leafs, lost a tough 1-0 decision yesterday through the lack of timely hitting.... Tommy Foley was given a transfer from Oshawa back to his native Peterborough.... The Reds are still tops in the National League, although the Yankees have to share that rung with the Red Sox in the junior loop, as the result of Krakauskas' win over the Yanks yesterday.

ROYALS APPEAR TO HAVE STUFF TO STAY AT TOP

Toronto Drops Pair to Jersey City in Sunday's Double Bill

LEAFS DOWNED

Seven Victories in 12 Starts on Foreign Soil is Record

(By The Associated Press)

Now that they've nearly completed the first wing around the southern half of the International Baseball League, Montreal Royals are beginning to look as if they really had the stuff to stick up with the leaders—currently Jersey City Giants.

There was more than a little doubt about the reorganized Royals before the campaign started, but seven victories in 12 starts on foreign fields can't be laughed off. If the Royals had been able to take Jersey City's measure, they probably would be in the lead.

So far Montreal has lost a series only to the Giants, whipping Baltimore and Syracuse and breaking even in yesterday's doubleheader with Newark Bears.

Kemp Wicker turned in another fine elbowing job in yesterday's opening duel with Marius Russo, giving only five hits and fanning six for a 1-0 victory. Russo was nicked for only three blows but when Art Parks opened the ninth with a single his control cracked. He passed two men to fill the bases, then Norman Kies lofted a sacrifice fly to the outfield to bring in the winning run. The Bears came back to take the nightcap 5-4 as Johnny Haley outpitched Marvin Duke, who "blew" his own game after prolonging it to eight innings.

Leafs Whipped Twice

Jersey City increased its lead to a game and a half by whipping Toronto Leafs twice before a remarkable crowd of 29,362. The Little Giants won the opener 6-1 when they backed up Hy Vandenberg's six-hit flinging with a 16-hit attack that included a homer by Johnny Dickshot. Rollie Stiles and Toronto's Phil Marchildon each pitched four-hit ball in the nightcap, but Marchildon had a shaky start and Jersey City won 1-0.

Two big innings gave the Buffalo Bisons two victories over Syracuse Chiefs, 4-2 and 6-3. The Rochester-Baltimore doubleheader was rained out.

In Saturday's games Toronto shut out Newark 3-0 while Montreal Royals were laced 3-0 by the three hit hurling of Roy Joiner of Jersey City. Baltimore Orioles came from behind to defeat Buffalo 9-8 by scoring eight runs in the ninth inning. Rochester Red Wings also had a big day by swamping Syracuse's Chiefs 11-1.

EDMONTON GRADS OUT IN FRONT

Win Third Game for National Title by 50 to 34

Edmonton, May 1— (CP)— Edmonton Grads, whose scoring power reached a peak in the fourth quarter here Saturday night as they defeated St. Louis Legions 50-34, can end the best-of-five challenge series for the Underwood Women's International basketball trophy in the fourth game tonight.

Grads gained a 2-1 lead in games Saturday when they outscored Legions 19-6 in the fourth quarter. Guard Mabel Munton of Edmonton led the scoring with 17 points.

SPEECHES

As the German Fuehrer met Hitler youth and workers he hammered away with sentences like this:—

"Germany is one of the most heavily-armed nations of the world today, thanks to our strength and thanks to our friends."

He said that German unity and the absence of class struggle characterized this Nazi May Day.

"The May Day of class fights, organized by parasites in our midst, is over," he declared. (In pre-Nazi times May Day was celebrated by Labor organizations and Leftist political parties.)

"A new German community has arisen over hate," he cried.

Germany's problem, Hitler said, was one of "production, not money —production must be increased in all spheres."

Live In Close Unity

With restricted living space, he said, Germany "can not afford the luxury of divided forces. There is nothing left for us but to live in close unity."

"But," he said—and the workers shouted to a man at this—"What am I without you?"

Hitler said that 9,000,000 Germans had returned from foreign lands to live in the new Germany, where "classes have been destroyed and the people placed above everything."

The real revolution, he said, had brought about "one people, one Reich, one leadership."

On the diplomatic front, Germany sent her ambassador, Hans Von Moltke, back to Warsaw to keep a close eye on the tense Polish-German situation. In diplomatic circles Germany was understood to be trying to win support of the Hungarians by offering them a further slice of Slovak territory on condition that Hungary dovetail her foreign policy completely into Germany's and that she establish a customs union with the Reich.

Such a plan would be calculated to destroy traditional Polish-Hungarian friendship which was demonstrated when Hungarian troops, marching through Carpatho-Ukraine, reached the Polish border after dismemberment of Czecho-Slovakia.

Time of Weakness Past

"If the hour should come that the world believes it can reach at Germany's freedom, then a millionfold cry will rise, so tremendous that the world will know unmistakably that the time of Germany's weakness is definitely past.

"However, man shall not destroy what the Almighty created. And this is the prayer guiding our future."

He admonished the children to lead healthy and abstemious lives and to become "hard men and upright women who know that fortune does not distribute her gifts lavishly but that everything must be fought for."

Brief addresses were made by Propaganda Minister Paul Goebbels and Youth Leader Baldur Von Schirach.

Guarantor of New Europe

Dr. Goebbels said youth was the "guarantor of the new Europe" and asked, "What can an old democracy do, facing Nazi youth?"

From as early as 4 and until 8.30 a.m., the hour of Hitler's address, columns of schoolchildren converged on Olympic Stadium, accompanied by field kitchens and brass bands.

Hitler hastened from the Stadium to the German Opera House where Goebbels presided over the Reich's Kultur Chamber in an awarding of prizes for films and books.

"At a time of international tension Germany celebrates her May Day," the Propaganda Minister said. "This tension does not in the least affect Germany, although our power and our greatness is involved. The German people are immune to all international hysteria, immune to the lying press of London, Paris and New York.

Secure In Own Might

"We rest secure and firm in our own might. We have sufficient instruments of power at our command to safeguard our existence and honor. A feeling of sovereign superiority over the democracies and their spokesmen animates us. Impotent in 1933, we are today a nation in arms.

"The old Latin saying that the muses are silent when arms speak is only conditionally correct. There is no doubt that in times when political and military life flourishes the cultural life can also flourish. Power is a pre-condition to peace. Peace in turn is what man needs to create cultural values."

Addressing the Kultur Chamber, Goebbels said Germany does not need democratic teachers of culture.

He claimed that those countries with old cultures were the first to abandon the democratic system while those who benefited liberally from the culture treasures of those nations still adhere to democracy.

"What can our critics offer in return for all we have done in the way of culture?" the Propaganda Minister asked. "While democracy babbled we produced films which command the attention of the world, we painted, composed music, built and wrote books.

Sovereign Disdain

"What will remain 100 years from now of the newspaper rantings of the Democracies? We look down upon Democracy with sovereign disdain.

"The false morals of Democracy remind us of the thick face paint intended to cover up wrinkles in faces that show the effects of riotous living."

Here the audience applauded wildly.

"What the Democracies offer has the putrid smell of disintegration. Democracy is financially rich but culturally it is sterile."

Professor Carl Froelich, a movie director, was awarded a prize of 100,000 marks ($40,000), the annual award for the best film of the year for his production of "Heimat" ("Homeland"), starring the Swedish actress, Zara Leander. He was the winner two years ago.

The annual book prize of 100,000 marks went to a Sudeten German, Bruno Brehm, for his novel, "Austrian Trilogy."

NOTICE

Air Firing Practice Bombing will take place until further notice on the TRENTON AIR FIRING AND BOMBING RANGE.

"Beginning at Robinson Point and running on a bearing of 229° 30', a distance of 4,500 feet to a red buoy, thence continuing on the said bearing a distance of 13,860 feet to a red buoy, thence on a bearing 312°, a distance of 10,560 feet to a red buoy, thence continuing on the last mentioned bearing 9,900 feet to a red buoy moored 700 feet west of Gore Shoal, thence on a bearing of 56° a distance of 11,550 feet to a red buoy and continuing on the same bearing to the Western extremity of Bald Head Island. Thence the north eastern boundary of the danger area is formed by the western coast line of the peninsula at maximum high water, with the exceptional of an additional danger area formed by that part of a 3,000 foot square, of which the main markers' shelter is the centre and two sides of which are parallel to the line of air firing targets. The two corners of the square to the north east will be indicated by flagged stakes or marking buoys. The bearings given are true." ml, 2

MILITARY PARADE

Klementi Voroshiloff, Defence Commissar, opened the celebration with a speech emphasizing Soviet preparedness for war.

The present international situation, he said, "is like a tangled web of bloody intrigue and cowardice of rulers."

He added: "The world's toilers easily realize that the Soviet Union is the only country whose government is fighting for peace throughout the world.

"Everyone knows except those who do not want to admit it that the red army is a great power which does not fear any menace from outside.

"Whoever dares to step on the thresholds of our home will be destroyed.

"A bloody spectacle is taking place in the east and west. The U.S.S.R., however, foresaw all this and created a strong army and navy.

Russia Not Afraid

"No small affairs can frighten us but if a big war comes we are ready—we not only know how to fight, we love to fight. And if it is necessary to fight against an enemy we will do it the way we did 17 years ago (against foreign armies of intervention). We will not lay down our arms until complete victory is ours."

After the military parade—which included detachments of armed workers and detachment of "old guerilla fighters of revolutionary days"—approximately 1,000,000 civilians, men, women and children, marched past the polished red tomb of Lenin.

Regiments of children added to the preparedness note by holding aloft model airplanes, tanks and battleships.

Afterwards, the crowd danced in public squares or milled about, listening to music and eating sandwiches.

One feature of the parade was the number of women participants. They were numerous among the detachments of young parachute jumpers and also in the company of old guerilla fighters.

HOW TO OVERCOME ITCHING PILES

If you are annoyed with itching piles or rectal soreness, do not neglect the same or run the risk of an operation. Any itching, soreness or painful passage of stool, is nature's warning and proper treatment should be secured at once. For this purpose get from J. S. McKeown or any druggist, a package of Hemroid and use as directed. This formula, which is used internally, quickly relieves the itching and soreness and aids in healing the sore, tender spots. Hemroid is a physician's prescription and is highly recommended. It is easy to use and it seems the height of folly for anyone to risk an operation when a simple remedy, which is so pleasant to use may be had at such a reasonable cost.

PLANS TO MAP ANTARCTIC AREAS

Speculation is Whether the U.S. May Claim Part of Continent

(By Roger Hawthorne Associated Press Staff Writer).

Washington, May 1 (AP)—President Roosevelt's plan to send a map-making expedition to South Polar Regions gave rise to speculation in some quarters today that the United States soon may make its first formal claim to part of the Antarctic continent.

Ernest Gruening, Director of Territories and island possessions, has outlined tentative plans, subject to congressional approval, for an expedition late this summer. He said its main purpose would be to map areas explored by Rear-Admiral Richard Byrd and Lincoln Ellsworth.

Seven Factors

Persons versed in Antarctic exploration suggest seven factors possibly indicating that the new interest in Antarctica stems from more than scientific curiosity. They are:

1. The fact that the United States Congress never has laid formal claim to a square foot of the ice-covered mountains and plateaux, despite many discoveries by American explorers since 1820.

2. An international revival of interest from 1926 to the present in the snowy wastes lying below 60 degrees south latitude, with a marked increase in tractor and plane-equipped expeditions.

3. Germany's claim this year to 130,000 square miles east of Crown Princess Martha Land in the Norwegian sector of the Antarctic.

4. France's claim, re-defined in 1938, to Adelie Land in the Australian quadrant.

5. Great Britain's re-affirmation of title last March 22 to the Falkland dependency, the Australian sector and Ross dependency, including the site of "Little America," Byrd's base in 1928-29 and 1934-35.

6. A notable increase in whaling operations by British, Japanese and Norwegian "floating factories" in the South Pacific.

7. Growing indications that the Antarctic some day may prove rich in mineral or oil resources.

International Briefs

Paris, May 1—(AP)—An authoritative source said today that a strengthening of the French air force was planned by Premier Edouard Daladier and Air Minister Guy La Chambre during weekend conference. Several decrees were expected to be handed down soon to speed up the French production in an effort to reduce what is regarded as Germany's superiority in the air.

Melbourne, Australia, May 1—(CP Cable)—First objective of the Australian government is to cultivate friendly relations with countries bordering on the Pacific, especially concentrating on improving relations with the United States, Prime Minister Robert Menzies said today.

The new Prime Minister said it was easy and foolish to classify nations into friends and enemies. "It is wiser to say every nation is either a friend or prospective friend," he declared.

London, May 1—(AP)—Dr. Gottfried Rosel, correspondent of the newspaper National Zeitung of the sen, has been instructed by the home office to leave England within 14 days. The National Zeitung has close connections with Field Marshal Hermann Goering. Rosel also is the head of the English-German Information Bureau which supplies news on the Nazi regime and distributes a paper printed in English and German at Essen.

Bombay, May 1—(AP)—A communique published by Gangpur State disclosed today that 31 persons were killed and 22 wounded in rioting April 25, when troops opened fire following attempts to arrest a Hindu leader. British authorities started a judicial investigation into the shooting by soldiers commanded by a British officer.

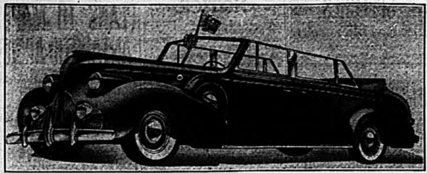
Washington, May 1 (AP)—James Kemper, Vice President of the United States Chamber of Commerce, said today that business should be allowed to carry on in the event of war "without being hamstrung by rules and regulations or excessive taxation."

Furthermore, he said, "business should not be crucified by government competition supported by taxes on the very businesses that are being ruined."

London, May 1—(AP)—Reuters News Agency reported today from Kaunas, Lithuania, that important German naval and artillery manoeuvres were scheduled to start along the Memel coast tomorrow following completion of first-line fortifications to defend the newly-annexed German territory of Memel.

Chungking, China, May 1—(AP) —A statement by Chinese military headquarters today said that 31,665 Japanese were killed and 513 taken prisoner during 504 "enemy strength testing actions" in the latter half of April.

A Car For Their Majesties



Here is the public's first glimpse of the automobiles that are being especially constructed in Canada for the use of the King and Queen during their forthcoming visit to the Dominion. Above is an artist's conception of one or two similar McLaughlin-Buicks upon which skilled craftsmen are now placing the finishing touches at the Oshawa factory of General Motors of Canada. Throughout their record twenty-foot length the McLaughlin-Buicks are replete with the unique refinements and all the safety features offered by automotive science. Rich fabrics softly gleaming paint and metalwork and beautiful appointments combine to produce a truly regal setting in which Canadians will view their Sovereign and his Consort.

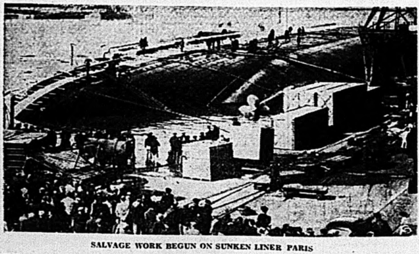
DETAILS OF ROYAL PROGRESS THROUGH ONTARIO

Readers will be interested in the route the King and Queen will take on their visit to Ontario, details of which are shown on this map. They will be within the provincial boundaries for two periods, the first from May 17 to May 22, from the time they arrive at Ottawa until they visit intermediate points and leave Toronto May 22. Again on June 5 they will arrive at Sudbury on their return trip, leaving Ontario at Niagara Falls June 7.

HUNGARIAN MINISTERS CONFER WITH PREMI ER MUSSOLINI

Count Teleki, Hungarian prime minister, and Count Csaky, Hungarian foreign minister, were greeted by Il Duce himself when they arrived in Rome for talks with the Italian premier concerning the future policies of their country. Count Ciano, Italian foreign minister, was also on hand to greet the visiting statesmen, who are being pressed to throw their lot in with the Rome-Berlin axis. LEFT to RIGHT in the group pictured at the railroad station in Rome are: Count Ciano, Count Teleki, Count Csaky and Premier Mussolini.



SALVAGE WORK BEGUN ON SUNKEN LINER PARIS

Workmen are shown swarming over the sunken luxury liner Paris, as salvage operations were started on the one-time pride of the French mercantile fleet. The Paris went down at the quayside in Le Havre harbor after an all-night fire, which authorities say was of incendiary origin.

CHILDREN CRY "HAPPY BIRTHDAY" TO DER FUEHRER

Reichsfuehrer Adolf Hitler, who recently celebrated his 50th birthday with all the pomp and circumstance that the Third Reich could muster, is shown thanking a group of children who came up to the Fuehrer in front of the Chancellory to offer him congratulations.

FORMER NOVA SCOTIAN MURDERED

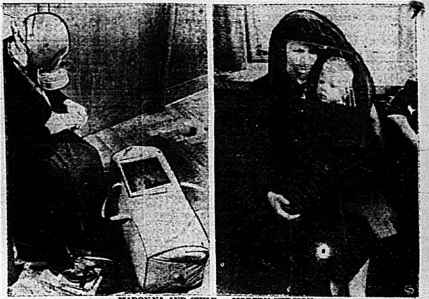
Jack Pasquale, 23, and Elizabeth Leslie, 26, a native of Sherbrooke, N.S., were pictured here shortly after their meeting during a vacation in the Catskill mountains last summer. Pasquale has now given himself up to the new York police after having killed Miss Leslie on the porch of her boarding house in New York because she would not consent to marry him.

LUNCH-HOUR ENLISTM ENT DRIVE IN LONDON

A recruiting sergeant explains the workings of the much-publicized Bren machine-gun to an interested group of clerks and brokers' men during lunch hour in London's financial district. With the introduction of conscription in England, many of the young men shown here may be among the first to be called to the colors.

SIR ROBERT BOLAM DIES

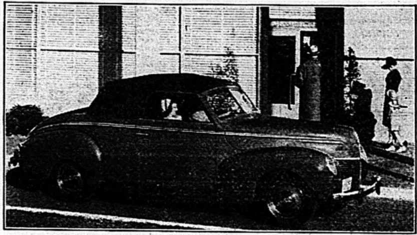
Newcastle - on - Tyne, England, April 29—(CP Cable)—Sir Robert Bolam, former president of the University of Durham College of Medicine, died today. He was knighted in 1926. Recently he had been a consulting physician in the skin department of the Royal Victoria Informary here. ... .



MADONNA AND CHILD — MODERN VERSION

A pictorial indictment of the current interpretation of civilization in Europe are these two pictures. The photo at LEFT shows a mother, gas-masked, operating the respirator cradle in which her baby will be safe (she hopes) from poison gas; at RIGHT, another young mother demonstrates the respirator cape, designed for the same purpose. The accordion-like device pumps a mixture of air and oxygen into the cape. These are German contrivances demonstrated recently in Berlin.

Royal Preference Makes Blue Fashionable



BLUE will be a fashionable color in Canada this spring, according to stylists who state that the preference shown by Queen Elizabeth for this color is largely responsible. Ford Motor Company of Canada, Limited, reports that blue rates high with automobile owners and many new car buyers specify blue finishes. A recent check reveals that 26 per cent. of Ford, Mercury and Lincoln-Zephyr cars sold in Canada are blue in color. Black is still first choice with blue a close second; greys, reds and greens following in that order. Jefferson blue, a rich, dark shade, is a standard color for all Ford and Mercury models. The latter is also obtainable in a metallic blue, a light shade and the Zephyr in a special grey-blue. Many other shades of blue are optional at extra cost. Pictured above is a popular Mercury model, the sport convertible, finished in metallic blue.

WALL ST. CLOSE

New York, May 1—(AP)— Quotations were clipped down fractionally for most stock market leaders today in one of the slowest sessions for nearly a year.

With the ticker tape napping for a minute or so at a time, transfers were about 300,000 shares. Near the final hour there was a handful of small plus signs in evidence.

TORONTO STOCKS

Toronto, May 1—Toronto exchange started the new month today with trading energy lagging. Volume remained around recent bottom levels in the early hours. Minor gains were boarded by a few groups.

Augite was the only heavy trader in the mining section. It changed hands to the extent of about 50,000 shares in the first three hours on the report that Noranda was acquiring a heavy interest in the mine. The price firmed about 3 cents to 58. Macassa and Bralorne ruled stronger.

In the base metals Nickel was lower and Noranda higher. Home Oil lost five cents and other western oils were about steady. Mild weakness was displayed by the senior oils, utilities and papers.

Who Commands Liner Transporting King and Queen?

State Officials Give Diplomatic Answer to Problem

London, May 1.—(AP)—Problem of who should command the liner Empress of Australia, the Captain or the King's equerry, during the voyage of the King and Queen to Canada this month has been settled by State officials.

The answer is a diplomatic one—to avoid creating a precedent which might cause resentment between the navy and the merchant marine.

It was decided the Equerry, Vice Admiral Sir Dudley North, Commander of the Royal Yachts, should carry the "King's Orders" to Captain A. R. Meikle, who will remain in charge of the personnel of his ship.

Maritime law is that the captain of a ship has complete control of the vessel, under the owners orders. But Sir Dudley was appointed to the command of three ships, the liner and two naval escort vessels, and the problem arose.

Their Majesties spent their last week-end before leaving for Canada where they are due May 15, at home with their two daughters.

They gave final instructions to governesses and, it was said, replied affirmatively—"if the weather is good"—to many requests by the princesses for permission to go swimming, ride ponies and have picnics during their parents' absence.

Nazi Danzigers Smear Tar on Polish Establishments

Danzig, May 1 (CP-Havas)—Great Nazi ceremonies took place today in honor of May day, the central theme being the free city's desire to return to the Reich.

The ceremonies followed a night marked by a series of demonstrations against Poland which includes Danzig in its customs administration. Stones were thrown through the windows of the Polish cathedral. Tar was smeared on the doors of various establishments. Police did not intervene.

Neither Albert Foerster, local Nazi chief, nor Arthur Griser, President of the Nazi Senate of the free city, were present. Both are in Berlin.

CIVIL AIRLINERS FOR R.A.F. TRANSPORTS

London, May 1—(CP-Havas)—The Air Ministry is placing orders for a number of civil airliners for use as transports by the Royal Air Force, Harold Balfour, Parliamentary Under-Secretary for Air, told the House of Commons today.

Churning Cream Drops in Price

Toronto, May 1—Although churning cream ranged lower, little change occurred in prices during Saturday's short session of the Toronto open produce market.

Fresh receipts are showing the seasonal increase on the butter market, but offerings generally were not heavy Saturday. There was a fair demand for small lots of the first grade Ontario product at 20¾c. Buyers, however, were not inclined to pay the 21c figure and as was the case Friday, the bulk of the business was recorded at the lower prices. Ontario creamery solids moved at 20¾c to 21c for No. 1 grades and 20c to 20¼c for 38 score. Former values were quoted in prints to the retail trade. Top grades sold at 22½c to 23c for 38 score at 21¾c to 22¾c. Buyers reduced the price on No. 1 grade churning cream to 20c (country truck price), while shipments delivered to Toronto commanded 23c.

Supplies were fairly well cleaned up for the week-end on the egg market, and prices held steady in all sections. Quiet trading was evident in Saturday's session however. Graded shipments closed out the week at 20½c for grade A-large, 19c for medium and 18c for pullet, B and C grades.

Montreal Butter off in Week

Montreal, May 1—Butter prices gave ground on open produce markets here last week, the Dominion Department of Agriculture reported. Other offerings generally were steady.

Creamery butter prints to retailers sold for 22 to 22¼c a pound and solids for 21½-¾.

Graded egg shipments in used free cases sold at 21½ to 22 cents a dozen for A-large, 20 for A-medium, 19 for A-pullets, 19 to 19½c for B-large, and 18 for C. Receipts: 18,192 cases, compared with 15,693 a year ago.

CHARGED WITH RECEIVING

Toronto, May 1 (CP)—Frank Groves, 23, was in custody today on a charge of receiving part of the loot of $1,200 stolen from the Toronto Dairies April 24, as police checked a story that he had "hi-jacked" money from the original thieves.

Inspector Charles Greenwood said Groves told him of hearing three alleged safe-breakers in jail discussing the Toronto Dairies robbery. Groves, after his release, allegedly got $50 from Teresa Murray, 17, and $125 from Mrs. W. Parker to obtain release of two of the men held in connection with the robbery.

WORLD'S FAIR OPENED

New York, May 1—(AP)— New York's $160,000,000 World's Fair, which took three years to build, is here at last.

The international exposition — two square miles of Long Island embracing 300 gleaming buildings, 50 miles of roads and 350,000 employees—opened its gates yesterday.

President Roosevelt headed a program of inaugural ceremonies, proclaiming the Fair a token of the spirit of friendship of peace of the United States toward all the world.

F. A. Bapty of Deloro Moved By Company to Ottawa

Has Taken Prominent Part in Life of Community for 30 Years

Marmora, May 1—One who has played an important part in the business and community life of Deloro for nearly thirty years and has made a host of friends throughout Hastings and Peterborough counties moved on Friday from Deloro to take up residence in Ottawa in the person of Mr. F. A. Bapty.

Early in 1910 he came to Deloro as accountant for the Deloro Mining and Reduction Company, Limited, which had started operations about three years previously. In February 1911, he was elected a Director of the company, and appointed Secretary-Treasurer which position he has held ever since. Some years ago the company changed its name to Deloro Smelting and Refining Company, Limited.

Lover of Flowers

The company adopted the policy of erecting homes for its officials and employees and in 1913 the house was erected in which Mr. and Mrs. Bapty have lived ever since. The building was on a bare plot of ground, which was transformed by Mr. Bapty into one of the beauty spots of the district. A lover of flowers he had the art of developing them to perfection and from early summer until late fall, many beautiful flowers bloomed in profusion. His gladioli were especially outstanding. He also planted a miniature forest, which has grown into a place of rare charm.

Member of Council

When Deloro was incorporated a village, with its own Reeve and council, Mr. Bapty was elected a member of the council, and has been a member ever since. He has always taken a keen interest in community affairs and the welfare of its citizens generally.

He was also interested in the formation of the Deloro Trading Company, Limited, and held the post of President and Treasurer for many years. This year he relinquished the offices, owing to his impending move. The company has carried on a successful business almost from its inception.

Fond of Children

One phase of Mr. Bapty's community activities resulted from his fondness of children. He has been in charge of the children's Christmas tree since 1910 and has assisted in nearly every event in which children took part. Because of his organizing ability, he has been appointed Chairman of several public celebrations held in Deloro village.

While not a politician in the ordinarily accepted sense of the word Mr. Bapty has played an important part in the development of the Liberal party in West Hastings and Hastings - Peterborough ridings. Coming from Western Ontario where politics were taken seriously and nearly every riding provided a chance for their party to win, he found Hastings county so overwhelmingly Conservative that Liberals lacked either enthusiasm or organization, and the idea of winning an election was considered a joke.

An Ardent Liberal

When plans for the complete organization of the Liberal party were started a few years ago, Mr. Bapty consented under pressure from quite a number of friends and party stalwarts to act as secretary for West Hastings, and later as secretary-treasurer for Hastings-Peterborough. His great organizing ability together with his tact, firmness and unfailing courtesy were largely responsible for the success which was achieved. The change which took place is evidenced by the fact that Liberals have since been elected to represent West Hastings in the Ontario legislature and Hastings-Peterborough in the Federal parliament. In politics he has always refused to countenance trickery or pettiness and has been opposed to indiscriminate party patronage. His high standard of personal honour has won the admiration and esteem of all who have come to know him.

Many Personal Friends

While loyal to Liberal principles he has never allowed politics to interfere with personal friendships and his many friends of opposite political views are ready to admit his broadmindedness, and that he has always played the game fairly and squarely.

Until recent years, when failing in health made it necessary for Mrs. Bapty to give up many of her activities, she took an active interest in everything for the betterment of the community in which she lived and was an active and generous supporter of every worthy cause.

Mr. and Mrs. Bapty will carry with them the best wishes of a host of friends for health and happiness in their new home. Fortunately, Mr. Bapty who retains his connection with the company, and will be in the Ottawa office, will visit Deloro nearly every month, when friends will have the opportunity of meeting him occasionally.

MEMBERS OF STAFFS TO VISIT SCHOOLS

Members of the staffs of Queen Victoria, King George and Queen Alexandra Public Schools journeyed to Trenton today where they inspected the new Trenton Public School building. The staffs and pupils of the local schools were given a holiday today following the annual inspection of the cadet corps.

Cadet Corps of Three City Schools Undergo Inspection

P. T. EXHIBITIONS

Campuses of public schools of the city resounded to the thread of marching feet today when cadet corps of King George, Queen Alexandra and Queen Victoria institutions underwent their annual inspections, Queen Mary School inspection will be held June 7th.

Captain P. M. Millette, General Staff Military District No. 3, Kingston, inspecting officer told the corps of the various schools in brief addresses that he was very much pleased with the general appearance, efficiency and training "Belleville Cadet Corps show at least seventy-five per cent improvement over the showing made last year," he said, in complimenting the cadets on their general training. Captain Millette paid a special compliment to the corps of Queen Victoria on their fine marching. "You show results of fine training he said, adding that the boys marched like "old soldiers".

The colors of the various corps whipped by a fairly strong breeze added a patriotic touch to the marching cadets as under a brilliant May-day sun they marched past the inspecting base. Chairman of the Board of Education Russell Wotten represented that organization and in one instance presented trophies for shooting to cadets of Queen Victoria school. In a brief address, Chairman Wotten likewise complimented the various corps on their splendid appearance.

Another feature of the inspections was the presentation of crests for efficency in shooting by President William Hurst of the Belleville Kinsmen Club. Mr. Hurst presented each crest personally to the victorious cadets adding his own congratulations to those of the club he represented.

Physical training exhibitions on the part of cadets of all three schools drew the admiration of proud parents and other speciators who braved the cool breezes to watch the inspections. The drills showed results of fine training in this particular sphere of school activities. At Queen Victoria School signal squads ran through semaphore drills with flags, while a well drilled first-aid squad gave practical demonstrations of this important work. Approximately eighty cadets were on parade at this particular school and under the watchful eye of cadet-instructor Lieut. Edgar Bateman gave an exhibition of marching that bespoke keen interest on the part of cadets and careful instruction on the part of their officers.

About fifty cadets marched to the only bugle band on parade at Queen Alexandra School. While the marching of this particular corps was not as precision-like as that of Queen Victoria, the youngsters gave a fine demonstration of foot and physical training drills.

All three schools were given a half-holiday following the conclusion of the inspections.

RUSSIA IS URGED

cussed, the Prime Minister went to the Commons where opposition leader Clement Attlee asked for an explanation of the "long delay" in the negotiations.

The Prime Minister said he realized the desirability of making a statement at the earliest date but was not prepared to do so at once. "Proposals have been received from Russia and the conversations are proceeding with all possible dispatch.

Problem Not Simple

"It is not a very simple matter and one in which other governments have to be considered beside our own."

Bills calling for military conscription of men aged 20 years for six months of training and enabling the government to call up reserve forces when it deems necessary were introduced in the House.

The texts were not published immediately but it was reported the conscription measure included Northern Ireland.

Prime Minister Eamon de Valera of Eire was understood last week to have expressed to the British government his opposition to extension of conscription to his northern neighbor.

The Prime Minister gave a definite "no" to Robert Boothby, Conservative, who asked if the government would establish a compulsory national register to replace the voluntary registry now in effective.

Mr. Chamberlain told the House that Sir Percy Loraine's credentials as Ambassador in Rome did not imply de jure recognition of the Italian conquest of Albania.

DYNAMITE FOUND ON WATER FRONT

Hamilton, Ont., May 1 (CP) — Police investigators today found 19 more percussion caps scattered along the shore of the bay at John Street as they continued investigations of the finding of five sticks of dynamite and 40 percussion caps yesterday.

Police said they were sure there is a link between the finding of the caps and the robbery of the Dundas magazine storehouse of the Canada Crushed Stone Company. A 15 year old boy is held on a delinquency charge in connection with the robbery in which 4000 caps were taken. About 175 were recovered when the boy was arrested.

The dynamite was found last night in a water-soaked burlap bag along the shore of the bay. Police found 34 tin boxes designed to hold 100 caps.

Police intensified investigations into actions of a mysterious stranger who caused a stir along Hamilton's waterfront section at the week-end.

Hamilton, Ont., May 1—(CP)—Police today intensified investigations into the actions of a mysterious stranger who caused a stir along Hamilton's water front section at the week end. Authorities also sought the source of dynamite and percussion caps found along the shore line of Hamilton Bay last night.

Claiming to be an "under-cover" man in sabotage investigations in the Province, the man was ordered from harbor commission property by night supervisor George Awrey. The incident assumed a more serious light when the explosives were found a few hundred feet west of the commission warehouse.

The stranger visited docks of Canada Steamship Lines and the Weaver Coal Company and inquired regarding arrival of certain freighters. He disappeared from the waterfront after officials refused him information he had requested.

Following recovery of the dynamite it was learned that several nights ago a quantity of fuse was taken from the water's edge, near the location of the explosives.

A 15-year-old juvenile, held in jail and who refused to divulge what he did with caps stolen in Dundas recently, will probably be questioned by police.

The mysterious stranger was seen trying a side door of the commission warehouse and when Awrey questioned him as to his business, the man claimed he was on a special mission. None of the workmen credited his story and suggested that he leave.

COLLEGE HILL DOGS CREATE A NUISANCE

Dog-owners in the vicinity of the College Hill will have to watch their pets closely in the near future if they do not want them impounded, and pay a fee to have them released, City Poundkeeper Thomas Thorne said today. "Numerous complaints have been received about the nuisance these dogs have been creating in this district," he said, "and in future if these animals are found wandering at large they will be impounded."

KINSMEN TO HOLD THEATRE NIGHT SOON

fers of their Eye-Clinic Fund, members of the Belleville Kinsmen Club will hold a theatre night in the near future, officials of the club announced today.

OBITUARY

MRS. ALMA BLANCHE ANDERSON
(Ameliasburg)

Sudden death took one of this community's oldest and most respected residents early today when Mrs. Alma Blanche Anderson, widow of the late Alexander H. Anderson, died at the home of her son Roy, in Ameliasburg Township. Although in her 74th year, Mrs. Anderson was enjoying apparent good health this spring, having assisted in light house work as late as Sunday evening. She was suddenly stricken this morning and succumbed.

The late Mrs. Anderson had been a resident of this community all of her life, being the daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Elkanah Babbit. Surviving her are one daughter Clara E. Anderson and a son Roy Anderson both residing at home and one brother, C. H. Babbit, also of Ameliasburg.

Mrs. Anderson was the first president of the Rednersville Women's Institute and also a faithful church worker, being an active member of the Rednersville United Church and of the Ladies' Aid Society of the institution.

The funeral notice is made elsewhere in today's issue.

MRS. HARRY DULMAGE

Madoc, (Special)—The citizens of Madoc will regret to learn of the passing of Mrs. Harry Dulmage at her home in London, Ont., on Saturday. The late Mrs. Dulmage was formerly Miss Lou Wellington, daughter of the late Chas. and Mrs. Wellington and was born in Madoc village.

Besides her husband she is survived by two daughters, Miss Barbara of Toronto and Dorothy at home, two sisters, Mrs. Geo. West of Madoc, Miss Margaret Wellington of New York, two brothers, Wesley of Port Arthur and Alex of New York City. Service will be held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Geo. West on Tuesday afternoon with interment in Lakeview Cemetery.

COBOURG MAY FORM TAXPAYERS' ASSOC.

An invitation to visit the Town of Cobourg this week and assist residents of that municipality in the formation of a taxpayers' association has been received by Mayor Jamieson Bone.

The Mayor will address a meeting of the Marmora Anglican Men's Club at Marmora on Wednesday evening of this week. This is his second annual address to this organization.

POLICE SHOULD HAVE SUMMER UNIFORMS STATES MAYOR BONE

Again the matter of summer uniforms for members of the city police force will be introduced at the next meeting of the Belleville Police Commission, it was assured by Mayor Bone today.

Heavy woollen uniforms worn by the local force during the hottest days of summer are distinctly out of the picture, in the opinion of the present Chief Magistrate and since assuming office the Mayor has led the fight for a revision of the present style of clothing.

"It is remarkable the number of comments I hear during the hot weather regarding these uniforms from private citizens, and the general feeling is that something should be done about it", observed the Mayor.

U. S. MINISTER TO CANADA IS DANIEL ROPER

Appointment Made so U.S. May be Represented When King Visits Canada

WELL KNOWN FIGURE

Washington, May 1—(AP) — President Roosevelt sent to the Senate today the name of Daniel Roper, former Secretary of Commerce, to be United States Minister to Canada.

Roper had been out of office since the middle of last December. His nomination to the diplomatic post brought him into a new field of service, although he has been in government work almost continuously since 1894.

When he left the Commerce Department post, later filled by Harry Hopkins, the South Carolinian, who had just turned 72, explained he had to give "needed attention" to his personal affairs.

Born in South

Born in Marlboro County, South Carolina, in 1867, Roper was graduated from Trinity College, now Duke University. He taught school before entering the legislature at 25.

He became a Senate clerk in Washington in 1894, served subsequently in the Census bureau, Post Office Department, Tarrif Commission and as Internal Revenue Collector.

Norman Armour, who was appointed Ambassador to Chile in 1938, was the last United States Minister to Canada.

President Roosevelt hastened Roper's appointment so as to get him to Canada in time for ceremonies there this month in the reception of King George and Queen Elizabeth.

In Politics in 1892

Roper started up the political ladder in 1892. He was elected to the state legislature of South Carolina in that year after working four years as a school teacher. Although he served only one term in the State House of Representatives he left his mark on the records by introducing a prohibition bill, one of the earliest in the south. Later the bill became the basis for a state-operated system of liquor dispensaries.

Roper has been a well-known figure in Washington since 1894, when he went to the United States capital as clerk of the Senate committee on interstate commerce. His first outstanding office was first assistant Postmaster General, to which he was appointed in 1913. He served as chairman of the Tariff Commission during a part of 1917.

In Revenue Dep't.

His next appointment was as Commissioner of Internal Revenue and in that post he was responsible for collection of the huge taxes during the Great War. He resigned from the government service in 1920 and through the succeeding Republican administration he practiced law in Washington.

A famous portrait painter once said that Roper's unchanging demeanor and gentility stamped him as "a true representative of the southern school of gentlemen." He is a lineal descendant of William Roper, one of the early settlers of Virginia. His father was a farmer and storekeeper.

Roper was married in 1889 to Miss Lou McKenzie of North Carolina. They have two daughters and five sons.

FIRE DAMAGES ROOF

Four grass fires in widely-divergent parts of the city gave city fire-squads a busy week end. Minor fires caused from unknown origins, burnt areas of dead grass on Burnham Street, Evans and St. Charles Street, Hillside Street and Dundas Street between Albert and Charles Streets. All blazes were reduced with no property damage.

On Friday night a fire believed to have originated from the moulding room caused slight damage to the roof of a building housing the "tumbling" room of the Belleville Sargent Hardware Co. A hole approximately two feet in diameter was burned in the roof, but the blaze was quickly extinguished by firemen.

CHAPTER I

"Haven't We Met Before?"

Wilson Hall, leaning on the steamer's rail, watched the wake, watched the smouldering fire in the sky die down into grey ashes and laughed under his breath, thinking that he had fallen into board-ship habits of idleness unusually quickly. As a rule, for a day or two after leaving New York or Southampton, he made some pretence of work.

Of course, nothing resulted but his intentions were good—at first.

"That girl again," he thought, and shifted his position slightly; leaning his elbow on the rail, his head on his hand so that he could survey her under the cover of his fingers.

Yes, the same girl undoubtedly—although, if one came to think of it, there were not many people whom one would recognize at second sight only, in silhouette. It was a clean-cut outline, though.

Hall's eye, trained to observe, even if his brain did not always abet them at the same moment, had noticed this girl when she came aboard the "Gloriana" that afternoon. He himself had arrived on the steamer nearly an hour before her sailing time to avoid any possibility of bustle and hustle; in those respects Hall did not resemble the conventional conception of an American. He hated being rushed into anything, bodily or mentally.

Leaning on the rail, as now, he had idly watched passengers, porters and ship officials, had thought what shapeless bodies and features most of them possessed. Those three round-faced children, for instance, scrambling clumsily up the gangway, followed by a woman obviously their mother, whose features were equally incoherent.

The girl who came next behind them, though—and here Hall had suddenly realized that he was interested. Here, at any rate, there was outline, definition.

Her dress increased that effect, the plain line of the long grey coat, unbroken by any fluttering scarf or bulging fur, unadorned except for a tiny bunch of dark purple violets in the buttonhole. The small black tricorne hat was pulled down over her brows, its smallness and simplicity were noticeable at a time when pre-war Society was revelling in huge befeathered "Merry Widow" headgear.

Seeing the girl's profile now against the sky that was still faintly luminous, this and other impressions returned. She was not very tall, but held herself so well that she had appeared to dwarf the more shambling figures around hr. Her mouth was clean-cut, tucked in at the corners firmly compressed, with the underlip jutting a little. Eyes, no, he had formed no impression of them; they had been shadowed by her hat brim and she had stared straight in front of her without raising them. As she was doing now—although in any case it would have been too dark to see their colour or shape.

But Hall had a sudden curious conviction that he knew what they were like, that he could visualize the upper part of her face which the hat concealed. Odd; he must have met her before without remembering where and when, seen her somewhere bareheaded. That was why he had this vague impression of familiarity, why, no doubt, he had noticed her in the first place.

Acting on an impulse very alien to his usual attitude of rather shy reserve, Hall shifted his position a little, moved a pace or two nearer to the girl and spoke deprecatingly almost before he realized that he meant to do so at all.

"I beg your pardon if I'm mistaken," he pulled off his soft felt hat. "But haven't we met before somewhere? I can't help feeling certain somehow...."

"Isn't that rather a crude method? They do it that way in Coney Island."

She did not trouble to move away from him or turn her head, and Hall felt his cheeks grow hot and crimson. He made a desperate effort to regain poise and some appearance of dignity.

"You entirely mistake my— my intentions. What I said was genuine. But I'll intrude no more since you are offended."

"I am not in the least offended. Why should I be? I am perfectly willing to talk to you if you wish. I don't feel that I run into any danger by doing so."

The Candid Companion

The girl had changed her position, turning slightly towards Hall; he could see the pallor of her face under the dark hat. He moved his feet, feeling oddly exasperated and at a loss. He found himself merely repeating feebly:

"But really I do seem to recognize your face. Haven't we met?"

"Oh—that!" She shrugged her shoulders, cool scorn in her voice again. "It's quite possible, of course. What's your name and where are you going?"

The question was put so unexpectedly and directly that Hall answered with equal brevity.

"Wilson Hall is my name. I am bound for England first and that's as far as my plans are fixed."

"Wilson Halll!" The owner of the name could reel rather than see that the strange girl was frowning over the drawn-out syllables. "Let me see! Yes, of course, you're the artist, and you have a wide knowledge of modern languages, including those of the East."

Hall felt a queer mixture of pique and satisfaction at her words.

"I'm flattered that you should know my name," he said quietly, and she answered with the same swift incision as before.

"I had no intention of flattering you; I was merely stating the facts as I saw them in some reference book. I always remember things of that sort—things which may be useful. I haven't seen any of your pictures to my knowledge, so I cannot give an opinion about them—nor about you, until I know you rather better."

The girl's confidence in her own judgment was obviously unaffected. It was a minute or two before Hall recovered himself sufficiently to make a somewhat feeble attempt to repay her in her own coin.

"May I retaliate by asking your own name and destination?" He tried to laugh casually.

"Certainly. My name's Valence—Leonie Valence. And, like you, I am going to England first. Afterwards—"

"Plans unfixed, perhaps — also like mine!" Hall suggested as she paused.

"No," she spoke very deliberately. "My plans are quite settled. I am going to the East, to India, although I don't yet know exactly when or how. That will depend on circumstances."

"I quite see."

"You don't!" Sharply she tossed back his platitude. "How can you? You know absolutely nothing about my circumstances or me."

"Why—no, of course, I don't," Hall laughed. "You are a very peremptory young lady, Miss Valence—it is 'Miss,' I presume? I see you don't wear a wedding ring." He glanced at the bare hands clasped together upon the rail.

"Not an absolutely infallible sign." The girl spread out her fingers with a little gesture which was instructive to Hall.

"She's vain about them," he thought and proceeded to make capital of the small discovery.

"I can see that you are not the woman to misunderstand me when you say that I am interested in hands, and that yours are particularly beautiful."

Small, white, beautifully formed, there was yet something unexpected about those hands; they were plumper, softer than he would have expected from her personality. Well-kept, too, with only one ring, worn upon the right-hand little finger, plain gold with a darkish stone which appeared almost black by this light.

"After all, there's no personal credit about it, so long as one looks after them; they're born with us—hands," her voice was rather carefully careless. "Mine are hereditary, and my feet too."

There was something appealingly naive in such vanity. Hall, thus invited, glanced down at her feet, noticed that they were perfectly shod in patent leather, high-instepped, clean-ankled and small.

"You've reason to be proud of them," he said. "But what a long way we've wandered from the point."

"Which?" The question was peremptory.

"Why, those plans and circumstances of yours, of which, as you say, I know nothing at alll."

"Oh!—my circumstances! At present I am a nursery governess."

"A nursery governess? But why?"

"Why not?"

"It seems somehow incongruous!"

"And my passage is paid; I am so far on my way to the East." She paid no heed to his ejaculation. "Mrs. Burpham-West imagines that I shall stay on with her in England, but I shan't. She serves my purpose, that's all."

Again that little shrug of the shoulders. It emboldened Hall to another question.

"You're not English, are you?" he asked.

"No!" Her repudiation was vehement. "Not one drop of English blood in me! My father was French, my mother American, my grandfather Corsican."

"A liberty-loving blend," Hall smiled, but again she retorted fiercely.

"No! I don't believe in Liberty, or Equality or Fraternity. Men are not born free and equal. Why perpetuate the lie of saying that they are? Well, I must go below; my charges are probably still awake, and I must earn my salary."

Girl for a Magazine Cover

She was gone without even the formula of "good-night," leaving Hall to puzzle over that likeness which still eluded him. An interesting young person, anyhow, sharp and strange to the palate, like caviare....

"But I've never liked anything which tasted as definite as that without the accompaniment of plenty of bread-and-butter," Hall thought. "A little of Miss Ryland's company will supply that now, if the young man is not monopolizing her. And even if he is, I can study her from a distance; she's too valuable to lose. I could do a whole series of magazine covers from her in different phases .... wind-swept hair for March...half-laughing, half-crying as April. Thats' rather a pretty idea!"

In the light which shone through the companion-way he paused to pull out a note-book and pencil.

"Yachting.... tennis .... golfing ....dancing .... all through the calendar," he scribbled down his thoughts. "Yes, I can see twelve months copy in Miss Chrissie Ryland. Bread-and-butter is far more suitable for magazine covers than caviare."

In the music-room Hall found, as he had expected, more opportunities for contemplation than conversation. Miss Ryland was engaged in an unromantic and hilarious game of rummy, perched on the arm of a settee, beside a brown-faced, brown-haired, brown-eyed young man. An attractive fellow, Captain Ransom Struan, to men and women alike; wide-apart eyes with wrinkles of laughter at the corners, the glimpse of beautiful teeth under the absurd clipped moustache as he smiled up at the girl beside him.

It was pleasant in itself, unless one was inhumanly cynical, to see two youngsters so unaffectedly in love; the very way the girl touched the boy's shoulder now and then, or patted down a tuft of hair at the back of his head. Hall felt already quite elder-brotherly towards the pair; he had stayed by chance at the same hotel in New York as Chrissie, her mother and young Struan, for a couple of days before the "Gloriana" sailed, and fallen into an easy friendship.

"She's a pretty thing when she looks down like that," he thought now, watching the girl. "Yes, the maternal touch, a baby's head on her shoulder—or she might be gazing at a brand-new engagement ring. My child, you'll be a goldmine to me!"

Hall pulled a little pad from his pocket and began to sketch rapidly.

"Oh!" The girl had glanced up and caught him in the act. "I do believe you're drawing one of us, Mr. Hall—how thrilling! Which is it? Ranny, I hope, but if so, you'll have to give it to me."

She had slipped down and was by Hall's side in a moment, leaning over his shoulder to say disgustedly.

"Only me! How dull!"

"Far from it, Miss Ryland," Hall laughed, pushing the pad into his pocket. "And I wasn't making your portrait, only stealing an impression to be used for my own vile purposes—if I'm not infringing copyright."

"We'll give permission if you'll do a real sketch of her." Struan had strolled over. "I say —would you? I'd love to have it and you're not one of those painting chaps who seem determined to make even the prettiest girls look hags, with blue noses and green hair."

"It wouldn't do in my line of business," Hall shook his head. "Of course I'll draw Miss Ryland for you, any time that she can spare me an hour or two."

"Big mouth —small eyes —snub nose— freckles," Chrissie checked off her disabilities on her fingers, laughing up at Struan. "And you can't deny any of them!"

"Don't want to. Only when they're put together they happen to make you—and it's quite a nice result. Don't you agree, Mr. Hall?"

"By gad! What a jolly idea! And true, too, that's just how you do look, Chris."

Struan's eyes were bent on the girl's face, and Hall felt an honest pride in his smile. For that was the effect which Chrissie gave, the effect which made her undeniable prettiness. Her wavy light brown hair, coiled over the ears, was thickly sprinkled with gleams of gold, there were definite golden lights in her grey eyes, and the freckles which powdered her nose and cheeks and round bare arms were like gold, too.

"That's enough," Chrissie gave a little wriggle. "I'm tired of myself. Look at something else, both of you, something more worth while."

It was to the credit of Struan's insight that he realized the girls' sincerity.

"All right, dear," he said. "We won't tease you any more. Let's—"

He broke off as the door opened. Miss Valence stood there, still wearing her grey coat and black hat. At Hall she scarcely glanced; it was as though she had already summed him up, but her steady, level eyes surveyed Chrissie Ryland for an appreciable time and, reaching Ranny Struan, paused there even longer. From thence her look passed swiftly over Mrs. Ryland's comely middle-aged face, and arriving at Mrs. Burpham-West, she spoke quietly.

"Derry says that he will not go to sleep until you have kissed him good-night. He says you promised him—I did not know whether you had, so I came to ask."

"My, really .... yes ....I believe I did...." Mrs. Burpham-West's speech and thoughts were as incoherent as her features. "Poor little fellow....but couldn't you have soothed him Miss Valence... coaxed him to go to sleep? Surely—"

"Perhaps I could," the girl answered. "But I thought you would rather I told you."

She was gone as silently as she had come, before Mrs. Burpham-West, muttering peevishly, could rise clumsily to her feet.

"What a good-looking girl!" Chrissie Ryland spoke enthusiastically. "She's like—like— Anyway, she came at the right moment, just when I'd told you to look at something worth while."

Once more Hall realized the sincerity of the girl's words, but this time Struan did not respond. He was still staring at the door, as though expecting the grey-coated figure to return. And Hall, glancing at him quickly, saw that the young man's eyes had a dazed, almost bewildered look.

"Who is she?" Chrissie spoke to Mrs. Burpham-West, who paused on her way to the door to answer.

"Oh, that's just Miss Valence—my nursery-governess," she said petulantly, and went out.

"Some nursery-governess, eh?" he said.

CHAPTER II

An Air Pioneer

Hall awoke next morning to see a heaving slate-grey sea which swung up and down across the circumference of his cabin porthole.

He lay back with closed eyes cursing the Providence which made him so bad a sailor. For twenty-four hours he held to the same attitude, whilst the "Gloriana" proceeded doggedly on her way.

Then the sea subsided, the sun shone and the sufferers struggled on deck, Hall amongst them. Children's voices and laughter matched the fresh, sunlit air, the clean-swept look of sea, sky and ship. A swing had been put up, and the three little Burpham-Wests were piled into it, giggling and shouting, pushed by their governess.

She still wore the grey coat, but she was hatless and the fact changed her oddly.

"Her head would be magnificent on a man," Hall thought. "On a girl it's almost too much, with hair added. She makes the least of that, though, wisely; she knows the right lines to take."

It was fine silky chestnut hair, worn very close to the head, parted at the side and drawn back, with the ends tucked under in some cunning fashion, and one lock straggling over the forehead, disarranged by her exertions.

She pushed it back, laughing and stepping away from the swing, then caught sight of Hall and came towards him.

"You've been bad," she said. "You still look ill."

"Don't rub in my inferiority, Miss Valence,' Hall laughed ruefully. "I'm feeling feeble and aged enough as it is."

"Yes, it makes you seem much older certainly." Her eyes under their level brows were surveying him with a kind of merciless simplicity. He could see their colour now, hazel, of that indeterminate shade which can appear blue, grey, green, brown or even yellow according to the light in the atmosphere or the mood of their possessor.

Along the deck Struan and Chrissie Ryland came swinging, the girl with the sun shining on her uncovered head and striped yellow and white dress. They stopped beside Hall with a friendly word or two from the young man and a little exclamation from Chrissie.

"Oh, Mr. Hall, you're looking more than ever like the Doge Loredano this morning. You know, that picture in the London National Gallery—Bellini, isn't it? I simply adore him, the Doge, I mean. Of course, you're ever so much younger...."

"Miss Ryland, if you only knew how those kind words heal the wounded vanity which Miss Valence has scarified!"

Hall glanced towards the other girl. She answered coolly without the slightest response to his smile.

"I never pay compliments. I warn you of that."

"She doesn't! Don't I know it already? Struan made an expressive grimace. "She put me through a regular General Knowledge Examination yesterday, and then gave me to understand that a 'p.s.c.' after one's name" didn't mean very much, in her opinion."

"Well, your Staff College certainly doesn't seem to teach history, or geography, or French." Miss Valence shrugged those expressive shoulders of hers. "I merely wondered what the letters did represent."

"Merely wondered!" the young man groaned. "After reducing me to utter wormhood and making me appear a congrenital idiot in the presence of my future wife! But never mind, Chrissie darling, you'll be proud of me yet as one of Great Britain's first Army flyers, even if I couldn't tell her the latitude of Aconcagua, or anything about the Treaty of Baylen."

"I didn't know that there were any Aid Regiments in the British Army!" there was an awakening of interest in Miss Valence's voice.

"What a comfort to hear her confess ignorance of anything!" Struan apostrophised a swooping gull. "There aren't—yet— But we've an aviation school at Netheravon on Salisbury Plain and quite a number from various regiments and from the Navy and Marines are learning to fly. It's the greatest game in the world—oh! I can tell you Great Britain isn't going to be behind other nations in the air. We've made a good start already."

"But America and France were first," Miss Valence said softly.

"I don't deny it. They did the sprinting at the beginning of the face, but there's such a thing as catching up before the tape is reached, and that's what we're going to do, I fancy."

"There isn't much credit in flying the machines that other people have invented!"

"I didn't mean that." Struan flushed at the scorn in the cool voice. "We're studying design also, and we've made a good deal of progress. Some of us go in for it pretty seriously, in this year of grace 1912, Miss Valence."

"Designing flying machines, do you mean?"

Muskrat Pelt Prices Range 90c to $1.25 Each

Quotations Slightly Stronger Than Last Year

Although pre-season indications pointed to more or less of a disappointing muskrat season, later developments resulted in what fur buyers of the city and district term "fair activitiy".

"The quality of the skins were average," Mr. Woodley and Sons prominent city furriers and buyers told the Ontario Intelligencer yesterday, "while the quantity available was slightly below that of last year, prices however inclined to be slightly stronger than those of a year ago with quotations ranging between ninety cents and $1.25 each pelt."

There was no dearth of muskrat skins in the Peterborough district reports from that place state. Wm. Lech and Sons, of that city paid out $3,000.00 in one day for the pelts with one Trent River trapper walking out with over $500, in his pocket. "There thousand dollars, however", a member of the firm stated, "is by no means a record. We can remember when we paid out as high as eight thousand dollars in one day for muskrat skins. That year, good quality pelts were worth as high as $5.50 each, but the price declined to $2.75 per skin toward the close of the season".

Therba—The Unruly

By CLEWLEY CLIFFORD

Therba Tash was the despair of all the traffic men in the district. They made their regular visits and gave their instruction; sent all their bulletins of the latest rules and changes and tried to impress their importance upon her; but they knew it was no use.

"Now, Mr. Bently" — Therba beamed over her glasses — "wouldn't it be downright silly for them to have to stop to look all those numbers up when I know 'em forward and back and it don't bother me a mite to tell 'em what time it is? I got the best watch ever; never gains nor loses. Had it 15 years, too."

"But, Miss Tash, it's ridiculous for a person to call for R. A. T. and get a telephone connection."

"Not if you know R. A. Trent as we do here in this town; that's just exactly what he is, a 'rat'! I s'pose it would be like a cross word puzzle for a stranger, but I know 'em all and what they want."

After he went out, Therba got to thinking about the rules and decided that they were made for operators who couldn't tell right from wrong, but that a wise operator was one who knew when to break them.

The office gave service until 12, but after 10 most nights she was able to put the night bell on and nap on the couch behind the switchboard until she could go home in the rattly old car waiting at the back door. One night, after things had quieted down and she had settled herself for a nap, the bell rang. It was a toll line calling.

"Hullo, there, what you want?" she yawned.

The operator in the next town was speaking. "Say, we're having great excitement here. Some kind of disturbance here at a political meeting. Some young boys got into a rough house."

"That so? What of it?" Therba was sleepy.

"Well, Sheriff Bean from your town was here, and he's on their trail, and says he'll make an example of them if he catches them."

A young boy came in, all out of breath.

"Get me 24-4 Barton, please, soon's you can."

Therba knew this must be one of the disturbers of the peace. She thought, "Only a boy. Didn't mean a bit of harm." She looked at the tousled head showing through the glass door of the booth.

While she was ringing, she was startled by a loud voice just outside. Sheriff Bean! There was no time for the boy to get out of the booth. "The sheriff's coming an' you don't want to see him; shut that door and get down on the floor and keep quiet," she warned the boy. It was quite evident that he didn't wish to meet the sheriff.

"Good evening, sheriff."

"Hello, Therba. Get me Ant Blake over in Dixmont. Want him to be on the lookout for some dangerous characters.

"Been raising the devil over to the meeting tonight. They're a bad lot an' I'm goin' to give 'em the limit when I get some of them." He roared as he stamped up and down the office. Therba's heart skipped a beat every time he went near the booth. "The old hyena!" she thought. She was determined now to outwit this vicious old man.

"They don't answer over there now."

"Must be there," he said impatiently, walking toward the booth again.

"Oh, come here quick!" she shouted in an excited tone. He came back and she added: "Er—er—why, I thought that last call must be one of those dangerous characters, but it wasn't, all all."

"The devil!" the man blazed as he made for the door.

Pulling the curtain down, she got the boy behind the board just in time. The sheriff returned and this time she had no difficulty in getting his connection for him.

Therba questioned the boy.

"It's this way, Miss Tash. There's a rough gang out there been cutting up, but tonight some of us boys got to fooling—honest we didn't do much, but my mother—" —the boy sobbed—"why, it'll break her heart if I'm arrested. That's why I didn't keep on with the rest. I wanted to let her know about it."

Therba made up her mind. "Now, son, you lie down here and rest, and at 12 o'clock I'll take my flivver and take you some place. Where'd you aim to go?"

He wished to go to his aunt's in Hanover.

"Righto, and I'll telephone your mother so she'll know what's up. This will soon be over. Don't you worry none." She thought, "I'll get back just about time to go to work in the morning."

"There you go, Therba, breaking more rules. You're just a natural law-breaker," she muttered.

DOG HIT BY CAR HAD TO BE KILLED

A callous hit-and-run driver sped away from the scene of an accident on Grove Street the other day leaving in his wake a fatally injured mongrel-terrier dog, owned by a family named Vestervelt living on the same street.

After striking the pup, the driver slowed down, eye-witnesses stated, and, noticing the dog attempt to arise on three legs, drove rapidly away. The terrier's right hind leg and back were broken. It was despatched by a quick shot from the revolver of City Poundkeeper Thomas Thorne, who was called to the scene of the accident.

MANY CITIES ON DAYLIGHT S. T.

Change Over Will be Made at Midnight Tonight

By the Canadian Press

Regina will be joined early Sunday morning by a group of Eastern Canada cities who will change to Daylight Saving Time already in force in the Saskatchewan capital since April 9.

The shift is scheduled in most municipalities adopting the fast time for two o'clock Sunday morning. Citizens will give up an hour at leading Quebec centres, headed by Montreal, and at Toronto, Belleville, Brockville, Guelph, Hamilton, Niagara Falls, Ottawa, St. Cartharines and Welland in Ontario.

The change over will be completed May 27 when Fredericton and Halifax fall in line a week later Saint John leads the Maritime cities to the shift. A few Ontario cities and towns will wait a while, Sudbury, Ont., until June 4.

Regina will be the last to turn the clocks back at summer's end, holding the extra daylight until Oct. 8. Most cities will return to Standard time Sept. 30 but Ontario alone has three other September dates for the change back.

Dear Jean,—

It is with feelings of regret that we have gathered here tonight to say farewell to you ere you take your departure from our midst. We cannot tell you in words just how we will miss you and we hope that you will often think of us. We know your genial personality and true sportsmanship will win you friends wherever you go, hence our loss will be another's gain. As a slight token of our esteem and love, we ask you to accept this small token, not for its intrinsic worth, but as a little memento of our many hours of friendship and pleasure.

The evening was devoted to games followed by lunch.

Rev. H. L. Morrison's motor car, which was parked in front of the parsonage, was damaged to some extent on Tuesday by a runaway team of horses, owned by Mr. J. L. Newton. The horses, frightened at the stockyards raced along Colborne Street, colliding with the car and breaking the harness. They were halted near Pipe's shingle mill.

"Let me tell you how I got my C·C·M·BICYCLE"

"LIKE every boy, I always wanted a bicycle and used to coax Mother and Dad to buy me one, but they always had excuses. Then one day I noticed a 'Bike' advertisement in our daily paper and, of course, I read it. It was a C.C.M. advertisement and from it I learned many things about a 'two-wheeler' I never knew before.

"The following Friday another C.C.M. advertisement appeared in the paper and, you may be sure, I read it, too. It convinced me that if I ever did get a bicycle it would simply have to be a C.C.M.

"Then I got the idea of showing these newspaper advertisements to my Dad—he's always reading 'his newspaper' and quoting from it. So Friday night after dinner I kept an eye on him as he read 'his paper' and when he came to the page with the C.C.M. advertisement on it I said 'Look, Dad! a bike advertisement—let's read it'. Dad read it and said 'Humph', and then I showed him the next week's advertisement and others that appeared later.

"Then one Spring day I coaxed him again for, not just any bicycle, but a new C.C.M. bicycle and to my surprise he asked me why I wanted a C.C.M. especially, so I told him all the things I had read about in the advertisements and he listened. When I finished, what do you think he said? 'Good boy, I see you've been reading the ads—well, so have I'.

"To make a long story short, I made promises to Dad about doing my homework and going to bed early, so I got my wonderful new C.C.M. bicycle and Oh Boy! how I love it, but I know I never would have got it without those C.C.M. newspaper advertisements. They 'sold' Dad and believe me he's 'tough' to 'sell'."

OFFICE OF THE GENERAL MANAGER

March 31, 1939.

Mr. James Fisher, President,
James Fisher Company, Limited,
204 Richmond Street, West,
Toronto, Ontario.

Dear Mr. Fisher:-

At this time, when we are again planning our newspaper Bicycle advertising for Spring, we pause to reflect upon our merchandising and advertising policy.

This Spring marks the twentieth year in which your Company has prepared and placed our newspaper advertising.

During that period we have seen our business grow in all its branches, Bicycles, Skates, Skating Outfits, Joycycles, Hockey Sticks, Tennis Racquets, from what, in retrospect, seems a small business to its present status of one employing 543 men and women.

Not only has our business grown in volume, with its increased dealer set-up, but we feel such a fine reputation has been established for goods bearing our trade mark, "C.C.M." that they have come to be recognized by both the trade and the public as the standard of value in their respective lines.

Of course we have always tried to put the best of quality and workmanship into our products but we also believ that our policy over the years of advertising consistently, in good times and bad, in the daily newspapers has been a helpful factor in building our business to its present siz

We anticipate this year's newspaper campaign wi be as successful as those of other years.

Yours very truly,

Vice-President and General Manager.

Deceased Woman at One Time Crowned Beauty Queen at Ball in Chatham Armouries

Chatham, Ont., May 2 (CP) — Chas. McDonald, 32-year-old husband of Mrs. Adeline McDonald, who was found shot to death last night in her Fifth Street beauty parlor, was remanded to jail when he appeared in police court today on a vagrancy charge.

Haggard and dishevelled, McDonald was not asked to plead. He was remanded eight days to Kent County jail.

Police Chief C. C. Bagnall still would not comment upon the circumstances of Mrs. McDonald's death. It was understood, however, he had communicated with the Ontario Attorney-General's department in an attempt to have Dr. E. R. Frankish, medico-legal expert of the department, conduct an autopsy.

C. I. D. Officers on Case

(At Toronto, Attorney-General Gordon Conant said Dr. Smirle Lawson, supervising coroner for Ontario, would conduct an autopsy on the Chatham woman's body because of the illness of Dr. Frankish. Officers of the Criminal Investigation Department of Provincial Police are aiding Chatham police in the investigation, Mr. Conant added.)

Gardens in May! Winter has been steadily retreating farther and farther north but there are still chances for frost or even a freeze in the northern tier of states and in Canada. Work in the home gardens may, however be thought of. In the North sow tender vegetables such as cucumbers, melons, squashes, lima beans, and tomatoes in the open. Transplant celery. About every ten days plant corn; also broccoli, Brussels sprouts, leeks, eggplant and pepper plants. Tomatoes may be safely set out at the end of the month in the extreme North and earlier farther south.

International Briefs

Shanghai, May 2 (CP-Havas)—Japanese military and naval authorities today served warning on the authorities of the International Settlement and the French Concession to heed previous representations concerning Chinese Nationalist activity in the foreign areas.

Portsmouth, England, May 2 (CP)—Vice-Admiral Sir Reginald Henderson, 58, died today at the Royal Naval Hospital. Until two months ago Sir Reginald was Third Sea Lord and Controller of the Navy. He was mentioned in dispatches for his part in the Battle of Jutland and was made Commander of the Bath for his organization of convoys for merchant ships.

Bombay, India, May 2 (AP) — A strike involving 4,000 workers in cotton mills at Cawnpore, United Provinces, threatened today to develop into a general strike throughout the city. The cotton workers, who struck because of a wage dispute, were urging workers to enrol in a voluntary corps to raise picket funds.

Jerusalem, May 2 (AP)—A band of Arab rebels which attempted to take control of Nazareth last night was driven off by British patrols today after several hours of fighting. Several Arabs were believed to have

Terror of Quake Heightened by Fire and Flood and Many Houses Destroyed

Tokyo, May 2—(AP)—The first survey of earthquake-stricken areas today showed 19 known dead, hundreds missing and injured, the 70 houses of the village of Aikawa reported swallowed by the sea, and more than 1,000 homes destroyed or damaged.

The terror of the quake, which centred about 300 miles north of Tokyo yesterday, was heightened by fire and flood. The shocks said by seismologists to have been the strongest to hit northern Japan in 25 years, broke water mains and left firemen powerless to combat flames which broke out in numerous towns and villages.

The banks of a reservoir collapsed above Funaka, port city, spilling millions of gallons of water.

More than 30 tremblors at three-minute intervals sent thousands of persons—60,000 from the city of Akita alone—into flight for the safety of open spaces. A gigantic submarine cave-in within less than a mile of Oga peninsula was believed to have caused the shocks.

Fragmentary reports said spectacular changes were wrought in the contours of the Akita prefecture coastline, particularly around the peninsula. Whole sections of hills rimming the sea were said to have disappeared into the ocean. The vxillage of Aikawa disappeared in such fashion, police of Akita prefecture reported.

King George Will be in Contact With Ministers at All Times

Gravesend, Kent, May 2—(CP)—The British post office which has charge of all mail, wire and radio communication in the United Kingdom has built a gigantic short wave receiving station on Cooling Marshes, near here, to handle traffic arising from the King's visit to Canada and the United States.

The Cooling Marshes station which has directional aerials three miles long will work with a specially constructed station in Newfoundland through which messages originating in Canada will be relayed.

When King George rushes across the Dominion in the Governor-General's train he will be able to talk with members of his cabinet in Downing Street. A room in the famous dead-end street is being soundproofed so that the cabinet may report to the King in a loud voice without fear of being overheard by eavesdroppers.

The Cooling Marshes station also will handle relays for the British Broadcasting Corporation of whatever speeches His Majesty makes in Canada as well as the eye-witness descriptions of public events which the BBC plans to carry.

Queen Elizabeth's voice will be relayed through the Newfoundland-Cooling Marshes system to Princess Elizabeth and Margaret Rose in conversations she has promised to have with them every day of the royal tour.

ALBERT COLLEGE WILL BENEFIT BY MORROW WILL

$25,000 Cash Legacy to College After Annuities Provided to Relatives

Under terms of the will of the late William George Morrow, Peterborough manufacturer and financier, and chairman of the Board of Governors of Albert College for the past four years, who died in Florida recently, Albert College of Belleville, is to receive the sum of $25,000 which has been left in trust.

Application for the probation of the will was made at Toronto this week by the National Trust Company.

News of the bequest was received by Rev. Dr. Bert Howard, Principal of Albert College, who paid tribute to the worth of the late Mr. Morrow "who had done so much for this college, and who had still greater plans for this fine institution."

"We have just received word of this," stated the Rev. Mr. Howard, whose emotion at the loss of such a friend was marked.

"He was one of the finest men we have ever had on this Board. He was a true and hard worker, and he will be deeply, very deeply missed. Mr. Morrow had great plans for Albert College, and was greatly interested in all phases of education".

DEDICATE 1813 CANNON AS A SYMBOL OF PEACE

Williamsville, N.Y., May 2 — (AP)—A grim relic of war will become a symbol of peace when a cannon of the war of 1812 is dedicated Memorial Day, May 30, in a cemetery where British and American soldiers sleep side by side. The cannon, captured by the British from American forces invading Canada in 1813, was presented to the Buffalo Historical Society by the Empire Service League, of the Canadian Legion.

MOTHER OF MURDERED GIRL ELATED AT EXECUTION OF SLAYER

Rouen, France, May 2 (AP)—Andre Vittel, 18, convicted of killing his sister-in-law and nephew, was executed by guillotine at dawn today. As Vittel's head fell into the basket the dead girl's mother, who obtained permission to witness the execution, cried, "fine—my daughter has her revenge."

By PAT USSHER

Canadian Press Staff Writer

London, May 2—(CP Cable) — Warships of the home fleet will escort the liner Empress of Australia through the English Channel as the King and Queen sail for Canada next Saturday.

The home fleet is at Portland under the command of Admiral Sir Charles Forbes. A number of units with join the liner off Spithead and escort her part of the way to Land's End when all but the cruisers Southampton and Glasgow will turn back.

The Southampton and the Glasgow originally were chosen to escort the H.M.S. Repulse before it was decided to leave the battle cruiser at home and use the Canadian Pacific liner for the royal voyage.

Canada's Share in Send-off

Canada will have a special share in the send off for Their Majesties at Waterloo station. The London Association of Canadian ex-servicemen—a recently-formed organization—will have a guard of honor of between 60 and 70 men on the platform alongside the royal train.

A send-off at the station also will be given by 60 sea cadets from the navy league establishment at Kingston, Surrey. The King has given the boys, ranging in age from 12 to 14, permission to parade to Waterloo.

Royal Quarters on Ship

Aboard the Empress of Australia, now at Southamptol, preparation of the royal quarters is proceeding rapidly. Their Majesties' private rooms are furnished almost completely in white. New carpets and other fittings are being hustled aboard.

The liner will sail as the R.M.S. Empress of Australia instead of "H.M.S." it was learned reliably. This decision, making the vessel a unit of the merchant marine rather than the royal navy, settles a delicate issue between the navy and the merchant marine over the ship's classification for the special voyage.

At Buckingham Palace the task of packing the royal baggage is almost finished. One of the busiest persons behind the scenes has been William Jerram, the King's principal valet. The King's wardrobe includes more than 50 uniforms, each packed in an air-tight trunk. Not all of them, however, will be taken on the trip.

LIBERAL BOLTS ON WHEAT PRICE SET BY GOV'T

Dr. Fleming Asserts He Will Vote Against Gov't. if Price Not Changed

LENGTHY DEBATE

Ottawa, May 2—(CP)—The government had a blunt warning before it today that if the 1939 budget was its answer to the pressing problems facing the country, there was little hope for the Liberal party in Western Canada.

The warning came from Dr. H. R. Fleming, Liberal member for the Saskatchewan riding of Humboldt, who asserted he would vote against the government and support the C.C.F. sub-amendment to the budget motion.

Dr. Fleming's outburst last night, in which he declared the budget "a deliberate betrayal of the western electorate," brought into the open a revolt among western Liberals which had been reported simmering since the government's new wheat legislation was brought into the House.

Western farmers could not exist on 60 cents a bushel for wheat, the initial price to be paid under the

HAILE SELASSIE WANTS ETHIOPIA RESTORED TO HIM

Leads Quiet Life in Georgian Mansion Near Bath, England

SOLD SILVER PLATE

Bath, England, May 2 (AP)—Former Emperor Haile Selassie prayed today that the Ethiopia he once ruled be restored to him. It was the third anniversary of his flight from Addis Ababa after the Italians had crushed his poorly-equipped army.

Haile Selassie lives in a Georgian mansion near this old Roman city in southwest England. A devout Coptic Christian, at Easter he began a 60-day fast.

Officially he ceased to be emperor in British eyes last November when Great Britain ratified the Anglo-Italian accord and the government, notified the Ethiopian Minister in London that his name had been removed from the diplomatic list.

Titles Never Renounced.

Haile Selassie never has renounced his titles, however. When he came to England, he sold his imperial silver service and bought a 14-room house at Fairfield, two miles from Bath.

MACDONALD'S PAL BOUGHT BULLETS EVIDENCE GIVEN

Two Boxes Purchased by Joseph Smith on January 3rd.

COURT'S VERSION

Justice McFarland Refuses Many Requests of the Defence

By WILLIAM H. HOGG

Canadian Press Staff Writer

Toronto, May 2—(CP)—Evidence tending to link Mickey MacDonald with the purchase of .45 calibre revolver bullets was produced by the Crown today as the MacDonald murder trial continued. Mickey and his 19-year-old brother Alex are charged with the gangland slaying of Bookmaker James Windsor.

Joseph Smith, young pal of the MacDonalds and himself now in custody, was called to tell of his purchase Jan. 3 of two boxes of cartridges at a Yonge Street sporting goods store. He said Mickey MacDonald was in a car with him he went to the store, but Mickey was so drunk he needed assistance to get in the automobile.

At the opening yesterday defence counsel charged that while police circulars sent out after the crime wave detailed descriptions of four men, witnesses at the preliminary hearing swore only three were seen by them the night of Jan. 7 when the execution squad invaded Windsor's North Toronto home.

Crown's Version Given

The Crown's version of the shooting was given by the prosecutor, Cecil Snyder who labelled it "particularly vicious and brutal." He named Mickey MacDonald, aged 31, as the trigger man, but accused 19-year-old Alex of being armed and of threatening five others in the Windsor house that night.

"One moment they were a happy group seated around a supper table, the next there was a sudden intrusion and the collapse of a bleeding man," Snyder told the jury. He was stopped at one point in his address by Mr. Justice G. F. McFarland and reshaped a statement to avoid a direct accusation against the elder MacDonald.

Defence counsel Frank Regan complained Snyder's address was "inflammatory all the way through" after Crown Counsel had started making the statement: "while Mickey MacDonald dragged Windsor—"

At this point His Lordship intervened.

Motion Refused

Snyder referred to the apparent uncertainty as to the number of Windsor's assailants declaring the MacDonalds had been assisted "by one or more persons who have not yet been caught." He said there might have been one or two others "lurking in the background."

A motion of defence counsel to allow the Assize Court jury to inspect the kitchen of Windsor's Briar Hill Avenue house was denied by the judge, but he added he might reconsider this if a visit seemed justified.

According to Snyder, five others were in the house on the night in question—Windsor's two married

Expulsion Orders Follow Probe Of Activities

Their Activjties in Nazi Organizations Are Suspect, Say British Newspapers

PROBE EXTENSIVE

London Indignant Today as Nazi Propaganda Literature is Distributed Widely

London, May 2—(AP)—London afternoon newspapers said today they had learned the home office, in conjunction with Scotland Yard, intended soon to expel "more than 50 Nazi agents" from the United Kingdom.

Some of them, said the Star (Liberal), are newspapermen, but "it is not their newspaper work but their activities in connection with Nazi organizations that is suspect."

The expulsion orders followed extensive investigation of actvities of Nazi organizations throughout the United Kingdom. The inquiries were made by Scotland Yard Detectives, officials of the home office and representatives of the war office intelligence department.

BRITAIN WILL NOT FORTIFY ISLAND

Air Ministry Acquires Island Airport for Training School

St. Anne, Alderney, May 2. — (CP Cable)—Acquisition of the St. Anne Civil Airport by the British Air Ministry, which is planning to establish an armament training School for airmen, has led to reports that Great Britain is preparing to convert this Channel Island into a second Gibraltar.

However, both the Air Ministry and the Admiralty deny that fortifications will be erected or that the islands will be used as a fortified base for operations.

"The presence of student airmen doesn't seem to indicate anything so formidable as Gibraltar," an Air Ministry spokesman declared.

Some London newspaper reported that establishment of an Island base designed to command the westerly approach to Southern England, was being carried out with approval of the Alderney State Council and that a detachment of Royal Irish Fusiliers at present is guarding the site.

Alderney is the third largest of he Channel Islands and is northeast of Guernsey. It is about twenty miles off the coast of France and about 100 miles from Portland Point on the south coast of England.

12-Mile Zone of Territorial Waters May be Established by the U. S.

Washington, May 2—(AP)—The State Department, it was learned today, is investigating the national defence value of establishing a 12-mile zone of territorial waters around the United States.

This extension of the present three-mile limit of coastal control was proposed to the Department by chairman Key Pittman (Dem-Nevada) of the Senate Foreign Relations committee. He said officials had advised him the proposition was under consideration but that it was complicated by international questions, since the Department would prefer to take the step with other nations.

"If we allow submarines and warships within three miles of our shore during a foreign war," Senator Pittman said, "some of our ships will be sunk. And we don't want war within three miles of our shores."

He said the proposal would have peacetime benefits also, since it would give the United States greater control over the Alaskan fishing banks. American interests there, he declared, are in constant conflict with those of Japanese fishermen who stretch their nets just outside the three-mile limit.

Announcing he did not contemplate offering any legislation unless the State Department requested it, Mr. Pittman said the three-mile limit might be extended either by proclamation or by treaty.

The United States set up a 12-mile zone by treaty with Breat Britain during prohibition in order to make rum-runner patrols more effective. That limit was agreed upon because 12 miles was about an hour's run from shore. The three-mile zone dates back to the time when a cannon would shoot about that distance. It long has been accepted in international law as the extent of territorial waters.

PROMISE ANSWER AFTER 9 GERMANS ORDERED EXPELLED

Hitler's Paper in Berlin Terms Treatment as "Shabby"

HITLER THANKED

Berlin, May 2—(AP)—Chancellor Hitler's newspaper Voelkischer Beobachter today promised an answer for what it termed the 'shabby' treatment of nine Germans ordered expelled from Great Britain.

(Without disclosing names or the number concerned, the British home office announced it had sent to the German Embassy a new list of Nazis not wanted in Britain, because of their 'individual activities.')

Hitler's paper said:

"Nine respectable German men and women who have pursued their occupations on British soils in a peaceful and proper manner are being chased out of the country because the British government does not dare to oppose agitators and declare openly that German organizations are not in the slightest blameworthy.

Not Unanswered

"It need not be particularly emphasized that the German motherland will not leave unanswered this shabby and for a great 'humanitarian' nation, unworthy treatment of her German nationals abroad."

Nevertheless, a government spokesman said today, the German Ambassador to London, Dr. Herbert Von Kirksen, will return 'soon' to his post, perhaps during the coming weekend although no date has been set.

(Von Dirksen was called home in mid-March, after Germany broke up Czecho-Slovakia and the British and French Envoys to Berlin were recalled "reports". The British and French Ambassadors now are back at their Berlin posts).

Just Catch Phrase

Germany, after showing her brawn in spectacular May Day celebrations, returned to the realities of the political situation with Polish-German relations again thrust to the fore by Warsaw press demands for a Polish protectorate over the Free City of Danzig to forestall German annexation.

"Such a catch phrase—'Polish protectorate over Danzig'—is grotesque in this situation said the Deutsche Allgemeine Zeitung.

Albert Foerster, leader of the Nazis in Danzig telegraphed Hitler "Danizers thank you my Fuehrer, from brimming hearts for the words you expressed to the Germans of Danzig in your last Reichstag address."

In that address last Friday Hitler said, "Danzig is a German city and wishes to belong to Germany" and again, "it should be beyond all

Grass Fire Damages Building at R.C.A.F. Base Yesterday

Trenton, Ont.—(Special) —Flames originating from an unknown source, that ignited a large area of grassy soil caused considerble damage to building on the property of the R.C.A.F. base near here yesterday.

The flames swept out of control and fanned by a strong breeze raced toward the building situated west of the hospital igniting the tar-paper covering of the outside walls. Damage was done to the structure and its contents of building materials before the fire was finally reduced by members of the base.

COTTAGE OWNERS START TO OPEN THEIR CAMPS

This week with an extra hour of daylight local residents are engaged in the first airing of their summer camps in nearby locations, and orders for paint and cleaning materials are being placed in local supply houses. Oak Lake cottages are among the first to receive attention, and according to one owner, little winter damage has been noted at the lake.

Last evening the first outboard motor purred lazily on the Bay of Quinte and several small fishing boats were also observed at anchor while occupants engaged in first season perch fishing. Other anglers lined the government dock and the Schuster piers.

HINT IN THE PROPER FLYING OF UNION JACK

First decorating of the city soon to be started in honor of the visit here of the King and Queen has prompted officers of local militia units to thumb through militia guides and manuals for the proper procedure in flying the Union Jack.

It is pointed out that on this flag the strip of white on either side of the red diagonal cross is broader on one side than the other. The flag should be flown with the broad white strip uppermost in the top corner of the flag nearest the staff.

Alert observers have during the past noted flagrant disregard of this rule.

496 SCHOOL CHILDREN GIVEN PHYSICAL EXAMINATIONS IN APRIL

Conferences were held in April by Miss E. Earshman, school nurse of the city with physicians, mental health clinics, the relief office, the Kinsmen Club, Children's Aid Society of Belleville and other civic organizations, it was disclosed in the monthly report submitted at the Board of Education last week. During the month a total of 27 school visits were recorded, and 496 children were given physical inspections; 15 vision tests were held, and two hearing tests. Nineteen special physical inspections were also given, and during the latter period, 460 rapid classroom inspections.

FARMER INTENDS TO PLOUGH AT NIGHT TO GET CAUGHT UP

It was explained by the township resident that farmers of his district are weeks behind in the spring plowing, and that considerable overtime work will be necessary to catch up. In his own case he reports intending to use his tractor as long as conditions permit, and the light, he explained, will be useful after dusk.

This week it is estimated by local agricultural offices that about 25 per cent of the farmers in the Belleville and Prince Edward areas have commenced spring plowing, though in many cases workers with teams and tractors on this spring job have been forced to cut winding furrows in short detours around patches of still wet and sticky ground. In some sections where owners are favored by higher land, much of this plowing has been completed.

As yet it is not believed that much seeding has been undertaken, according to Pat O'Keefe, local district grains and seeds inspector of the Dominion Department, although some sowing of pease has been done in some districts.

FEW BAIT SALES

Few bait sales by licensed dealers of the city since the opening of the trout season on Saturday reveals the fact that fewer fishermen of the city are trying their luck this year in the swollen streams of the county. One south-end dealer reports the sale of worms to but a half-dozen customers so far, though normally the demand for this bait is heavy at the opening of the trout season. The majority of the streams in Hastings and Northumberland are heavily flooded with conditions anything but favorable for even the most ardent angler.

HUGE TURTLE CAUGHT

Sunning itself on the stony bank of the Moira River late yesterday afternoon, a huge snapping turtle was captured by a small group of youthful residents. The turtle then roped to a heavy stick was exhibited through the downtown section by the boys. First invasion of the road along the bay bridge by the turtles seeking egg laying locations on Zwick's Island and elsewhere is observed evenings.

NETTING OF L. TROUT REPORTED HEAVIER

Lake fishing is off to a better start this year, according to local residents now engaged in the first season's netting off the south shore of Prince Edward County, and lifts of trout have been a little heavier. Fishing returns so far this spring in the Bay of Quinte have, however, been disappointingly light, as reported by local wholesalers.

ASPARAGUS SHOWS NO SIGNS SPROUTING

Lovers of asparagus will have to wait some time yet for their favorite vegetable, veteran marketers stated today. "The stuff hasn't even started to sprout yet," one said, "but in all likelihood it will come with a rush as soon as warm weather arrives.

The first asparagus of the 1938 season made its appearance on the city market on April 30th one year ago last Saturday, when pound bunches were quoted at twenty and thirty cents each.

RENTING OF CITY STEAM ROLLER BY CITIZENS FROWNED ON

Residents who may have been toying with the thought of renting the city steam roller or other city-owned equipment to assist in the spring work around their homes may have their opinion changed by the fact that during past years the matter of renting or loaning equipment of this nature has been frowned on by the department.

Only in the case where work is of a decided civic improvement, or where the work is situated easily to the location where such equipment is in use, will it be possible for any citizen to rent such heavy machinery

Annually there are numerous requests for the rent of the city road oiling equipment, which requests are always turned down, it is stated.

DEER BLOCKS ROAD

William Ralph, Peterboro, reported yesterday that a large deer bounded down a steep bank on the Madoc-Bancroft Highway on Sunday afternoon and stood in the centre of the road forcing him to almost stop his car and blow his horn before the animal moved from the right of way. The deer appeared to be hypnotized by the approach of the car, he stated.

MARSH BURNED OVER

A white haze from burning marshes floated in spring air over the north shore of Prince Edward County opposite the city early last evening, and through the dusk the glow of the fires east of Rossmore could be seen. During the afternoon, fire swept one large marsh directly opposite the government dock, and a white pall of smoke covered the area, but is believed to have burned itself out with no damage.

Motorist Fails To Negotiate Curve

Failing to negotiate a curve on highway number 14 at the southern entrance to Foxboro late last night, an automobile driven by William Elliott, 34 Bridge street east, left the highway and skidded into the east ditch, where the vehicle snapped off a pole. Elliott sustained a severe cut over the right eye necessitating the services of Dr. R. Bird to close the wound. Motorcycle Patrolman Sam Ervine investigated the accident shortly after 11 p.m. and found Elliott had apparently been proceeding southerly when the vehicle had failed to negotiate the curve and subsequently crashed into the ditch. The running board, windshield and radiator of the vehicle were all badly damaged during the impact with the pole. Charges are pending, the officer stated this morning.

Reckless Driving Charge to be Laid

[illegible] motorcycle patrolmen, who were conducting a checking period upon driver's licence ownership, a large automobile bearing Michigan licence plates sped past Motorcycle Patrolmen Ervine, Belleville, and Caldwell, Trenton, along the river road north of Trenton, known as Highway No. 33 yesterday afternoon.

Mounting their 'bikes' the constables gave chase and finally apprehended the Michigan car as it approached the village of Frankford. The driver gave his name as H. Wilson of Detroit, Mich. The driver and car were escorted back to Trenton where Wilson was arrested on a charge of reckless driving and lodged in the Trenton jail pending his appearance before Magistrate E. J. Butler, K.C., today.

"He was driving at least 65 miles per hour when we tried to signal him to stop," revealed Constable Ervine today.

Human Side of Business Most Important Today

Public Relations Council and Their Duties — Interesting Address Upon Modern Business Trends — "Telephone Technique" — Modern Salesmanship — "Know the Public" First Business Essential Today

Public Relations executives were as old as civilization, the first one of record being Jesus Christ who brought a message of peace on earth and good will to men—said Mr. Roy Kirby, Public Relations Counsel for the General Motors Corporation, in addressing Belleville Rotary Club Monday on the subject of "Responsibility of Big Business to the Public." Mr. Kirby gave a very thoughtful and instructive address full of valuable pointers for business men and showing the trend of business today as one of studying the human side of business first as the most important. Mr. Kirby sketched the various cycles of business in the development of industry during the past quarter of a century or more, which had resulted in the building of many factories and the expansion of production and transportation facilities until now with enough factories and efficient transportation facilities business had at last arrived at the point where it is found necessary to study and pay attention to the human side of business.

The Buying Public

Big and little business must study and become acquainted with the buying public, the vital factor in business today, hence the appearance on the scene of public relations counsel, the live link between business and the public.

The responsibility of Big and Little business to the public and to employees was outlined by the speaker who stressed the point that the employee was a partner in the business and a strong factor in its success or failure. Employees could not be ruthlessly laid off any more with the curt message "laid off until sent for. The employeee was entitled to more than that, and also the public which has a vital interest in employee and employment.

Know Your Neighbor

It is estimated that one quarter of a million men in the United States give thirty minutes at least each week to listen to speakers on many topics of general interest, said Mr. Kirby. He had ascertained that in Canada at least 50,000 men gave thirty minutes of their business time each week listening to speakers on vital topics of the day. That meant that men of the busy business world were intent upon discovering all they could about their fellowmen and the public generally in order to improve themselves and become better citizens.

Jimmie Roosevelt, Business Relations Counsel for Samuel Goldwyn, moving picture magnate, was but one example of the rapid increase of business relations executives as the need for better and more understanding relations with the public was felt. They are ambassadors of good will.

Some of the potent factors in the present high tension civilization were discussed by the speaker and their influence upon public relations, including the press, rapid transportation, telephone, air travel, etc.

Sold On The Store

Successful business built upon confidence, first the confidence of employees in their employers and the goods handled, the clerk must be sold on the store, a very important factor. Various points in the realm of salesmanship and the art of gaining the confidence and esteem of the public were outlined by the speaker in very interesting manner, which led him into the question of Telephone Technique. "A favorable public opinion is the greatest asset a man can have."

"Telephone Technique"

"How do you meet your public?" asked Mr. Kirby. "Are you careful as to the efficiency of your sales staff in meeting and satisfying the public? What kind of telephone technique have your salesmen? What an asset the telephone is to a business if used in the right way, and what an object of destruction if carelessly used. See to it that your telephone service is adequate and courteous."

In Toronto Mr. Kirby was informed by a telephone executive that 457 "BUSY" flashes were counted on one trunk line at one time. This meant lack of telephone equipment and possible loss of business.

"If you have an enquiry desk make sure that the girl in charge can meet the public and create a favorable impression for herself and for your business," said Mr. Kirby.

"What We Want"

The importance of knowing the public mind and creating cordial relations between business and the public is being realized more and more every day, and is marked by the efforts of business to make that contact. Recently a group of big businessmen in the United States spent $30,000 on a questionnaire with five questions as to what was most earnestly desired by the people answering. It was significant that in the majority of answers the first was HEALTH, the second HOW TO GET ALONG WITH PEOPLE.

Modern business trends as outlined by Mr. Kirby formed a fascinating topic for business men and the high lights of big business today as expressed in the creation of departments of public relations in which business seeks to look into the public mind, ascertain its needs and wishes and how best to establish confidence and cordial relations between business and the public, was well brought out, and both interesting and instructive. The address was deeply appreciated by the Rotarians present.

First Auto Agency

Mr. Kirby was introduced by a friend of long standing, Rotarian Past President Bert Boyce, who sketched briefly the business career of the speaker, since the early days of the automobile in Canada when Mr. Kirby established the first automobile agency in Northern Ontario at Sudbury, before there was a highway, between North Bay and Sudbury when it took four days to motor from Toronto to North Bay,—his entry into the General Motors organization and his rapid rise to positions of trust and responsibility culminating in his present position as General Relations Counsel.

President Mac Haig expressed the appreciation of the Rotarians present at the very fine and instructive address of Mr. Kirby.

Mr. and Mrs. E. M. Post Celebrate 25th Wedding Anniversary

MARMORA— Mr. and Mrs. Edmund M. Post of Marmora Township celebrated their silver wedding on Thursday and after about twenty four guests had partaken of an excellent dinner, a large number of residents in that section of the Township gathered at the Post home to present Mr. and Mrs. Post with suitable gifts and enjoyed dancing to music furnished by Charles Campion and the brothers, Alvin and Graham Vansickle. Mr. Post, who is a son of the late Mr. and Mrs. Hiram Post of Marmora Township, was married to Evelyn, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Vansickle of the Vansickle Settlement at the Methodist parsonage, Norwood, on April 27th., 1914, by the Rev. Mr. Copeland and have since their marriage resided at the farm situated at what is known as Post's Corners. Well known throughout the Marmora district they have received the congratulations and best wishes of a host of friends.

Miss Elizabeth Gladney of Belleville, spent the week-end with Mr. and Mrs. E. C. Prentice.

Mr. Michael Finnegan of Picton, visited his parents, Mr. and Mrs. John Finnegan over the week-end.

The muskrat season has been extended until May 5th north of No. 7 Highway, Crowe Lake, and most of the lakes and streams are still covered with ice and there is a lot of snow along the shores so that it is difficult for trappers to get around to their traps. Overseer Shannon reports plenty of snow still in North Marmora and Lake Townships. This has occasioned a very poor rate season, this Spring.

A successful euchre, bridge and dance was held in the school on Friday evening by the ladies of the Altar Society of Sacred Heart Church. Miss Edith Henry won the ladies' euchre prize, while the gentleman's prize went to Mr. Ernest Shannon. Mrs. Ralph Neal won the bridge prize. A lunch was served by the ladies in charge, after which dancing was enjoyed, the music being furnished by Charles Gampion and Harold Auger.

VALUABLE CATTLE BURNED IN FIRE

Twenty - Five Head Owned by Dr. E. M. Herrington, of Picton, Destroyed

Picton, —A serious fire on Monday afternoon about two o'clock destroyed the large frame barn on the farm of Ed. Herrington, local milk vendor. The tenant on the farm Archie VanMeer was in Picton when the fire broke out. The farm is situated just outside the town limits near Macaulay's Mountain. Twenty-five registered cows and one horse were believed burned to death. Some cows were released so that a check-up of the number burned was difficult. A small driveshed was also burned and several fields were scorched. A quantity of hay and a stack of straw were a complete loss. A thoroughbred bull and two horses were missing and also feared burned. For a time the trees on the Mountain were in danger of burning but the fire was finally partly bought under control by a bucket brigade. A watch is being kept at the property all night as a strong wind may still be a cause of further trouble.

A grass fire at the home of Mrs. Jas. Gillespie, King Street, got out of control at noon on Monday. A large pile of brush was seen burning endangering a frame barn on the property. The firemen were called and extinguished the blaze.

Mr. and Mrs. Will Goodwin of Utica, N.Y., are spending a few days with the former's mother, Mrs. William Hill, who has been seriously ill.

On Saturday evening the staff of C.D.S. honoured Miss Margaret Mulholland whose marriage to Mr. Lawrence Burford takes place this month. Mr. L. Wiseman presented Miss Mulholland with a coffee table accompanied by the best wishes of her fellow workers.

Addition to Queen Mary School Contemplated by the Board Is Opposed by Ratepayers

Recommendation of Council Referred Back for Consideration

LENGTHY SESSION

Mayor to Proclaim May 22nd as Public Holiday Instead of May 24th

Charlie McCarthy and W. C. Fields in "You Can't Cheat An Honest Man," at the Belle Theatre.

After hearing a deputation of citizens in opposition to an addition to Queen Mary School at a cost of $50,000, the City Council in regular session referred back to the committee a recommendation passed at the committee meeting on Thursday night last for further consideration. The Council was informed by Russell Wotten, Chairman of the Board of Education, that the Board was going to legally apply for the money from the City Council by by-law to erect the addition to the school and in the face of this declaration, the council saw fit to refer the recommendation back. The council cil engaged in one of the longest sessions of the year and considerable business was transacted. All members of the council were present with Alderman Allin as chairman of the council in committee.

The council unanimously passed a recommendation approved at committee meeting, that the mayor proclaim Monday, May 22nd as a public holiday instead of May 24th. The members felt that holding the holiday on this date, that more people in the city would have an opportunity to see Their Majesties either at Kingston or Toronto. No action was taken respecting the short stop of the Royal Train contemplated here and it was the general opinion, that if any wished to see Their Majesties it would be better to go to Kingston. No word has been officially received here, that the train will stop or if it does stop, that the King and Queen will make an appearance.

Mr. Argue Heard

Mr. C. E. Argue speaking in opposition to the addition produced figures to show that Belleville education costs were quite high at present and that it would be unwise to saddle the ratepayers with any more costs at the present time due to the financial condition of the city and the country at large. "Belleville" he said, "was under group "D" which included cities of 20,000 and under and the capital expenditure in 1937 was $31,737 and the current cost was 23.34 cents and the capital cost 9.62 or a total of 32.96 with a tax levy share of $1.29. The debenture debt is $415,954 which figures per classroom at $8,665. He stated there were 20 per cent less children attending school today than there were in 1934 and that it was possible the compulsory age to attend school might be changed and there would not be the necessity of so much room. Mr. Argue also stated that the average cost per pupil per day in Belleville was higher than in Toronto or Hamilton.

Alderman Allin "The compulsory age change would not materially effect the public schools as most children are out of the public schools at fourteen years of age.

Ald. Logan "would it be possible to re-zone the city and transfer some of the pupils from Queen Mary to other schools."

Mr. Argue "I think so."

Ald. Rollins "They are using the auditorium at Queen Mary School at the present time and on account of the poor lighting facilities the children are ruining their eyesight."

Asked to Visit School

Ald. Harvey, "If you went up there personally and saw the conditions under which the children are laboring, you might change your opinion on this question."

Ald. Allin, "Would you advocate sending fifty children from Queen Mary School over to King George School and have them cross the road twice in front of the heavy traffic over the upper bridge. There are enough children in that danger now and the city has done nothing to put a sidewalk down the west side of the roadway so that the children would be safer.

Mayor Bone "I think there is too much talk about children being in danger crossing streets and bridges getting to their schools. We have not had any serious accidents through this contingency."

Ald. Logan, "The catholic school children go from all parts of the city to St. Michael's Academy and there does not appear to be much danger."

Other Speakers

Raymond Zufelt, a former member of the Board of Education, stated there were 480 pupils going to the school which made 44 to 50 in a ten roomed school. "I will admit the auditorium is poorly lighted, but that can be remedied", said the speaker. "I have made a survey of the city and there are 100 houses in this cit ythat need singling yet the owners are not in a position to have this work done, yet the Board is asking the ratepayers to bear an expense of $50,000 for a new addition. I also think that the Board is asking too much to build a couple of rooms, when Trenton got a 15-roomed school for around $120,000. I am not against education but I think the time is inopportune to hoist this expense on the citizens."

Ald. Marshall "The council must remember that a debenture of $50,000 doubles itself in 20 years.

Ex-Mayor W. H. Panter "I have no figures to present, but I went through the school and it brought back many memories. Our tax rate is high at the present time and looking at it from the financial viewpoint I think the addition can wait awhile." This ended the discussion and the matter was referred back.

City to Have Audit

The council unanimously passed a recommendation to allow Robertson, Robinson, McCannell and Dick, chartered accountants of Toronto to conduct an impartial and thorough audit of the city's books for the year 1938 and the first three months of 1939. The price agreed upon was $1,200. Mr. McCannell appeared before the council and told the members to get a true and verified statement of the city's finances, it would be necessary to extend the audit to the last three months of the present year. A letter was sent to the council by this firm, which was read in committee on Thursday night and is herewith given and is self explanatory.

Mayor and Council.
City of Belleville,
Belleville, Ont.
Gentlemen:

On February 2nd this year we attended at Belleville and made a survey of the accounting system in the Municipal Offices following which we submitted a proposal for the performance of a special audit of the Municipality. We have just made inquiry and find that the Council as yet has not appointed a firm of Chartered Accountants for this work.

Owing to the lapse of almost three months from the date of our proposal it would seem necessary and advisable (in order to obtain the full benefit of the verification) to verify the outstanding taxes by direct communication as at a date subsequent to December 31, 1938. To verify the taxes as at, say, April 30, 1939, without having performed an audit of Cash Receipts from January 1, 1939, to April 30, 1939, would be of no value. Therefore, the purpose of this letter is to amend our original proposal to include, without change in the maximum fee quoted, the undertaking to verify the arrears of taxes as at April 30, 1939, and to perform in addition to the audit for 1938 an audit of Cash Receipts and Tax Rolls only from December 31, 1938, to the date as at which the taxes are verified. In view of the fact that at this time the City Hall staff is probably fully occupied in preparing current tax bills, we would undertake to have our staff do the clerical work in preparing tax verification notices for mailing. We are enclosing herewith a specimen of notice usually used by us. This form meets all the requirements of the Department of Municipal Affairs. It is our practice to enclose with each notice an addressed C.O.D. return envelope.

In order that there may be no misunderstanding, we submit hereunder our original proposals with amendments as above:

(1) To perform the audit of the Municipality of the City of Belleville and Relief Department, excluding Boards and Commissions, other than Police Commission, for the year 1938 on the following basis: One dollar and seventy-five cents per man hour plus travelling and living expenses, with a guaranteed maximum total cost to the municipality of twelve hundred dollars. The audit would include verification by direct communication of all outstanding taxes for 1938 and prior, unpaid as at April 30, 1939, including the preparation of the notices and would include the audit of cash receipts and tax rolls from January 1, 1939, to date of tax verification.

(2) To perform the audit of the municipality of the City of Belleville and relief department, excluding boards and commissions, other than Police Commission, for the years 1934, 1935, 1936, 1937, 1938 (five years) on the following basis: One dollar and seventy-five cents per man hour plus travelling and living expenses, with a guaranteed maximum total cost to the municipality of $5,000.00. The audit would include verification by direct communication of all outstanding taxes as outlined in (1) above.

(3) To perform the audit as above for any period from two years to five years, the maximum total fee would be one thousand dollars per year.

Irrespective of the period for which the audit would be performed, a full report would be submitted covering the accounting system in use and recommendations we have performed during the past few years over one hundred annual or other audits or investigations of municipal corporations in Ontario and have on numerous occasions installed, and revised municipal accounting systems.

Yours faithfully,
Robertson Robinson McCannel and Dick.

Salvation Army Appeal

Major Bourne of the Salvation Army Staff with Major Alderman, local head of the organization with members of the congregation appeared before the council for a grant to defray expenses in connection with the Hospital Rescue Homes Major Bourne told the members the Salvation Army paid out of its own funds $1,700 to care for work of a humanitarian nature the names of the recipients remaining a secret to Army officials. He also stated that Major Alderman had made 169 visits to the Police Court last year and that 500 free meals had been given transients in the last two years. The council looked with favor on the appeal and Ald. Haig referred the matter back to estimates, where it will be given every consideration.

A delegation from the Belleville Foundries interviewed the council re some adjustments in their taxes. The spokesman stated the arrangements at the time of coming to Belleville was misleading as they were supposed to receive a fixed assessment of $2,000 with taxes at about $200 per year. "The first tax bill was $257.00" said the spokesman, "the second year they were between $400 and $500 and when inquiry was made, the company was told the matter was outside the control of the council. I think someone is dodging the issue and if some adjustment is not made, it will be necessary for the company to take other action. The company has some castings, culverts and sewer pipe on hand and they would be willing to let the city have the same to apply on the tax bill. A committee of Alderman Logan and Kennedy were appointed to look into this matter and report back to the committee.

Issue Taken With Item of Expense

Alderman Harvey strenuously opposed the passing of an account of $85.00 for expenses for Mayor Bone and Ald. Haig to Ottawa—for a conference recently held in that city."I think it is time to call a halt to this expenditure" said Ald. Harvey. "And I am only supporting His Worship in his inaugural address when he stated that public monies should be carefully guarded. I think this trip was totally unnecessary and the expense account far too much for two days."

Mayor Bone "Three days is correct."

Ald. Lewis "I don't think publicly minded citizens should be degraded when they come to this council to argue some public question. I think Ald. Harvey was entirely out of place in remarks to Mr. Argue a few minutes ago and it will not be long before citizens will refrain from appearing before the council on any question."

Ald. Harvey "I only said to Mr. Argue if he went up to Queen Mary School and made a personal inspection that he might change his opinion." The chairman of the committee called the members to order and proceeded with other business.

City Contracts Awarded

Contracts for delivery of sand, gravel, cement and tile to the city for use this year given to the same contractors as last year and at the same price and under the same agreement. The Treasurer was authorized to issue a cheque to the Hospital Board for $9,000 in full for the indigent account of 1938. This sum was considerably less than the cost of indigent patients for the preceding year.

The Regional Planning and Improvement Committee and City Engineer will make a personal survey of present parking lots now being used at the rear of properties on the west side of Front Street for the purpose of making a report on the matter of parking facilities in this area. Mr. J. O. Herity if and when he becomes Rotary Governor for this district will be given leave of absence when necessary to perform the duties of that high office. Percy Allen and Miles Hall will be appointed to the Court of Revision by by-law at the next regular meeting of the council. The assessment roll will be written by Miss Eva Holly and she will be paid one month's extra pay for this work.

Agreement is Reached

Ald. Allin, who interested himself in reaching an agreement between the Corporation and the Township of Thurlow respecting the maintenance of College Street and McDonald Avenue, which are boundary roads between the City and the Township read a lengthy report from the City Engineer and also a recommendation from the council "that an agreement be signed between the Corporation and the Township of Thurlow for maintenance of these two roads as per the recommendations set out in the Engineer's letter. Aldermen Allin, Kennedy, Rollins, Thompson and the City Engineer composed the committee that investigated the whole question. The letter of the City Engineer is as follows.

His Worship Mayor Bone and Aldermen of the City Council,
Belleville, Ont.
Gentlemen:
Re: Boundary Line Roads, College Street and MacDonald Avenue

Your Special Committee, appointed by resolution dated April 17th, beg to report as follows.

On Friday, April 28th, we received a committee of five members from the Thurlow Township Council in the Mayor's Office at the City Hall for the purpose of discussing various methods of carrying out construction and maintenance work on the road allowances which form the northern and eastern boundary lines of the City of Belleville, namely, College Street from Cannifton Road to Sidney Street and MacDonald Avenue from Russell Street to the C.P.R. right-of-may south of Dundas Street. Each one is 1 1-4 miles in length, with one half the width of the road allowance in the City of Belleville and the balance in the Township of Thurlow.

Previous expenditures on these two roadways have been carried out on a 50 per cent basis, whereby each Corporation has been doing a small amount of work at different times and rendering an account for 50 per cent of the cost to the other Corporation. Under these arrangements no satisfactory objective was being reached and the officials of each Corporation were at a disadvantage in not having the authority to carry out certain work which required immediate attention in emergencies, such as flooding conditions, snow ploughing and dangerous settlements in the road bed.

We have made inspection of the roads in question and after discussing the matter thoroughly with the Committee of the Thurlow Township Council, your Committee beg to submit herewith the following recommendations for the Council's approval.

(1) That the City of Belleville assume the responsibility for all expenditures in connection with road construction, drainage and maintenance work on College Street from Cannifton Road to Sidney Street, with the exception of sidewalk construction, road oiling and construction and maintenance work in connection with the County bridge over the Moira River.

(2) That the Township of Thurlow assume the responsibility for all expenditures in connection with road construction, drainage and maintenance work on MacDonald Avenue from Russell Street to the C.P.R. right-of-way south of Dundas Street, with the exception of sidewalk construction and road oiling.

(3) That 50 per cent of the total cost of road oiling on each street be assessed against the frontage of city property abutting on the said street and that the remaining 50 per cent of the cost of street oiling be equally assumed by the City of Belleville and the Township of Thurlow.

(4) That each corporation agree to make an expenditure of at least $1,000.00 annually for a period of at least three years for the purpose of constructing and maintaining a first class macadam roadway built to the specifications prepared by the city engineer along the entire lengths of the respective road allowances.

(5) That snow ploughing, drainage and weed and brush removal be considered as and included in, maintenance road work.

(6) That road oiling be carried out under the direction and supervision of the City Engineer on each road allowance, to provide a suitable wearing surface.

(7) That the matter of liability of all claims arising from damages occasioned by accidents of any description be covered by by-law to be approved by the Department of Highways of Ontario, whereby the City of Belleville will assume the liability of all damage claims on College St. from Cannifton Road to Sidney Street (with the exception of that area occupied by the County bridge over the Moira River) and whereby the Township of Thurlow will assume the liability of all damage claims on MacDonald Avenue from Russell Street to the C.P.R. right-of-way south of Dundas St.

Mr. Bill Hurst, Kinsmen Club president, who is greatly interested in The Salvation Army Building Campaign Fund.

(8) That the City Solicitor be instructed to prepare a suitable agreement as soon as possible covering the recommendations set forth in this report, and also the necessary by-law relating to damage claims.

We wish to take this opportunity of expressing our appreciation of the co-operation which we received in the matter from the Committee of the Thurlow Township Council at the meeting held last Friday and trust that this City Council will approve of the recommendations set forth in this report, in order that some of the construction work may be started at an early date.

We would recommend that a copy of this report be mailed to the Thurlow Township Council as soon as possible.

Yours truly,
A. M. Kennedy, Harry Rollins, H. J. Allin, G. E. Thompson, Charles A. Mott.

Estimate Received

The estimates for the coming year from the Parks Board were received and on motion was sent on the Committee on Estimates. The Parks Board are estimating for an expenditure of $4,000. Mayor Bone thought a good plan would be to wipe out the buildings at the Fair Grounds and build parks and playgrounds for the children because he said "country fairs have become a thing of the past." Russell Woodley was sold a lot on Ridley Avenue at a cost of $30 providing he erects a house on the property within a year at a cost of $3,000 and pays the taxes on the lot for 1939.

Application at an early date will be made to the Ontario Municipal Board to use part of the surplus in the Sinking Fund to reduce the rate of taxation in the city. Alderman Haig introduced the following motion which was unanimously passed.

That a committee consisting of His Worship, the Mayor, Chairman of Executive, the Treasurer and the City Solicitor obtain an appointment with the Ontario Municipal Board as soon as possible and make application for permission for the Treasurer to cease levying in his estimates for 1939 and succeeding years for debentures under by-laws against which have been accumulated on the books of the Treasurer sufficient monies to redeem the full amount of debentures outstanding under said by-laws.

Clean Up Campaign Launched

From J. O. Herity, Manager of the Chamber of Commerce, a letter was received asking the Council for cooperation in directing a clean up and paint up campaign in the city. The letter was ordered filed but a copy was given to the press and is herewith given.

His Worship the Mayor and Members of the City Council,
Belleville, Ontario.
Gentlemen:

The Board of Directors, at their meeting held yesterday discussed at considerable length a Clean-Up and Paint-Up Campaign for the city.

The Board respectfully suggests that it would be of great assistance in maintaining the tidiness of the main streets of the city if receptacles were placed at convenient intervals on the side-walks as a place where paper and similar refuse might be deposited and thereby prevented from littering the pavements.

It was also respectfully suggested that the cleaning of the streets should be commenced at an earlier hour in the morning.

A further suggestion was made that the attention of some places of business where floors are swept and the sweepings are thrown out on the pavements that such a practice does not improve the appearance of our main thoroughfare and should be discontinued.

Trusting that these suggestions will have your usual thoughtful consideration. I am,

Very truly yours,
J. O. Herity, Manager

Inquiries Made

Under the head of inquiries Ald. Marshal asked why four traffic signals were going to be placed at the corner of Bridge and Front Streets, when he thought two would suffice. Ald. Rollins answered the inquiry stating that the firm placing the same, thought it would be the best procedure. Ald. Marshall also objected to the placing of a light at Victoria Avenue and Front Street claiming it would congest traffic at that point. Ald. Rollins again answered stating he was held at that intersection on Saturday night for seven minutes before he could get out onto Front Street.

Ald. Jennings wanted an itemized account of the expenditure of $30,000 for an Isolation unit at the Belleville General Hospital but the details were not forthcoming. Ald. Jennings asked for a committee to look into the gas situation in Belleville, the Alderman fearing that the Gas Plant would be closed by the Utilities Commission without the citizens having a chance to voice their disapproval. "Do you know" said Ald. Jennings "that Mr. Scott, Manager of the Utilities has said within the week that the plant would have to be closed within a year." "There is a lot of money of the city sunk in that plant and I think a full investigation should be made.

Ald. Logan "I am sure there are a large number interested in that plant and would be reluctant to have it closed."

Ald. Thompson "I think the Mayor is sufficiently informed on the whole situation and I am sure he can give us all the report that is necessary."

Ald. Marshal "This is a most important question and I am positive that some manufacturing concerns in this city would close their doors if the plant was closed. I have contacted a number of these firms and they all say they would rather use gas but have been forced to use oil instead of gas.

Ald. Jennings "I think a committee should be formed. It has been said the Mayor knows all about it. Well let him tell us what he knows and let us have a committee from this council to find out what we can." The matter was dropped and referred back to committee for further consideration.

Question of Pay Advanced

Under the heading of motion, one was introduced by Alderman Cushing and Jeffery, that Aldermen receive $5 for each regular meeting that is attended and that a by-law be prepared to this effect. The motion was carried and only after mild discussion. The whole question will be fully discussed when the by-law is brought before the council for ratification. Alderman Kennedy "I think this is a rather late date to introduce such a motion. It was turned down last year."

Ald. Jeffery "A man should receive some remuneration when he works all day and then comes down and sits in committee until after midnight like we did last Thursday night.

Ald. Rollins "Municipalities such as Stirling and Tweed pay their Aldermen for regular meetings."

Ald. Lewis "We are here to do the business of the city and why should we ask the ratepayers to decide a question that we have been elected to decide.

Ald. Butler "We all took this job gratis last year and I think we should continue till the end of the year in that way but I would be in favor of a by-law, that will go into effect next year because I am of the opinion that Aldermen should be given some remuneration for the time spent on City's business."

Financial Statement

Ald. Haig told the members they would have to hew closer to the line of economy if they wished to come out on the right side of the ledger this year. "It is true that expenditures are away up for the first three months of this year in comparison to the same period of last year in some departments but the expenditures have been beyond our control and he cited one example of snow removal. The comparative statement of the three months of this year were given by the Alderman and are as follows.

Under by-laws only one was presented dealing with the Housing Act, which allows government aid on houses built on lots not costing more than $50. The government agrees to pay the full taxes the first year, 50 per cent of the taxes the second year and 25 per cent of the taxes the third year. The by-law was passed through the various stages. There being no further business the council adjourned.

Constipated? Get rid of the cause!

Doctors know that the cause of your constipation is probably easy to find, if, like too many people, you eat—bread, meat, potatoes. Perhaps your diet does not form enough "bulk." And "bulk" does not mean quantity of food, but the kind of food that is not completely assimilated and leaves a soft "mass" in the bowels, that helps the bowel movement.

If this is your case, the solution is a crisp cereal for breakfast—Kellogg's All-Bran. All-Bran helps form the necessary "bulk" and contains Vitamin B_1, the natural intestinal tonic.

Eat All-Bran every day, drink lots of water, and see life through rose colored glasses. Made in London, Canada, by Kellogg. At all grocers.

DOCTORS CHECK KIDNEYS FIRST

Because they know that healthy Kidneys remove from the blood the waste matter—the excess acids and poisons, formed by the ever-changing human body as it decays and rebuilds itself. But if the Kidneys fail, illness surely follows. Backache, Rheumatism, Impure Blood, Lack of Energy, Too Frequent Urination, Sleeplessness, Headaches—all may result from faulty kidneys. As a health safeguard—as a wise precaution—regulate your kidneys frequently with Dodd's Kidney Pills—for over fifty years the favorite Kidney remedy—non-habit forming—safe. 105

Consolidated M.&S. Co. Reports 77,000 Tons Of Ore at Deloro

Marmora, (Special)—The annual report of the Consolidated Mining and Smelting Company of Canada, Limited, issued recently in referring to the operations of the Company at Cordova Mines, states that drilling operations there have been more encouraging of late, and that an estimated 77,000 tons of .175 ounce grade ore has been developed which would justify a 100 ton mill. Smelter's proptrty at Rich Rock known as the Addington mine has developed 215,000 tons of ore, carrying 16 ounce gold and is said to warrant a 200 to 250 ton mill. For the present the mine has been closed down entirely, but it is reported that all equipment will remain on the property in the hope that world conditions will adjust themselves so that work may be resumed and a mill erected.

At Cordova Mines a skeleton crew is employed and there is reason to believe that if the danger of another big war is removed, and business conditions become at all normal, a mill will be erected there in the near future. It is suggested that the reason for building at Cordova Mines instead of at Rich Rock is that the capital investment for a 100-ton mill will be much less than for a larger one and that the cost of operations will also be considerable lower.

ROYAL VISIT IN SPRINGTIME

Nature is preparing her loveliest decorations for the season which will be appreciated by Their Majesties when they pass across Canada in the "merrie month of May."

Nature also acts as the great inspiration to mankind. Nature of course is the greatest of artists the greatest scenic painter, the natural world in its infinite range of form and color and light, sight and sound, being man's inspiration. It is instinctive for man and woman and child to catch something of the inspiration of this time when nature is mixing her colors on her vast palette. Housecleaning is as instinctive as the subtle urge of spring through nature. Decorating, cleaning of lawns, preparation of flower beds are to be expected. Decoration of the house in which man dwells in the glorious springtime and the rest of the year is natural too.

This year there is new interest in decoration—Canadians in their joy of welcome to their King and Queen want to look their best. Why should they not for it is the greatest honor the Sovereigns can show the first of the Dominions, one of the great parts of the British Commonwealth of Nations. It is not that the royal visitors will necessarily see the decorated dwellings for instance in Belleville, it is that the inspiration came as a result of the royal visit to Canada.

POLAND IS RESOLUTE

Signs from Europe indicate that Chancellor Hitler sees that with the success so far of the anti-German bloc, the key Germany is evidently seeking to dominate the world is being held by Britain, France and Poland.

The Germany which grabbed more of Sudetenland territory last October than she was permitted to take, was probably deceived by the very fairness, anxiety and peaceful intentions of Britain and France. The Nazi government probably thought no one would dare to block the path down the Danube to the Black Sea. Did Hitler err in his Munich agreement? Will history show that it was Hitler who lost the German drive for world power when he called the conference at Munich? It was a bitter pill for Czecho-Slovakia, of course, but she was dismembered in the cause of freedom. Rapacious Germany could not keep quiet long. With this spring the Nazi drive began again and this time Germany engulfed Bohemia and Moravia and consented to the rending of Slovakia and Ruthenia, the latter falling to the Hungarians.

That second bite at Czecho-Slovakia and the oggressive attitude towards Lithuania by which Germany brought back Memel "did it."

It was there that Hitler's diplomacy appears to have erred. There the anti-aggression bloc was born. As it grows it gains power with the little nations, who love their freedom which the Nazied Germany does not know and who are only waiting for a fair chance to join the bloc with entire safety to themselves, a naturally justifiable motive in view of the terrific crushing force an armed Germany could exert against a state free but puny.

Hitler's partner in the arms adventure, Italy, did a deed which shocked the world on the most sacred day of the Christian year, Good Friday, when her ships pounded Albanian ports, and her soldiery overran King Zog's domain, forcing Queen Geraldine to flee with their babe only two days old. This event offended Christians and Mohammedans.

Il Duce's step was a desperate one taken to halt the bloc but Britain countered with pledges to Greece and offers to other Balkan states.

The Chancellor said the other day Germany is armed to protect herself at conferences so that she will get her rights or at least so that she will not be forced to sign another treaty like that of Versailles.

Since the bloc suddenly came into being, with Poland bravely facing the situation and daring to oppose Germany, Hitler has given evidence enough of his rage particularly at Britain or England as he calls her. Who does not also recall the scene at Wilhelmshaven with the bullet proof glass shield before Hitler, when there was the sudden cutting off of the broadcast? It is rumored German army and Reichswehr officers arranged the hitch in the broadcast because they did not know what an angry Hitler was likely to say. It is said an unnamed technician, guaranteed protection in advance by the officers, pulled out the plug. Yet the speech later broadcast from records showed nothing but the action of a man who had been foiled.

Germany is struggling to build up a league to ensure her plans, but the nations are wisely avoiding.

It seems apparent that Danzig and the Polish corridor are to mark the first great showdown of the dread situation which has developed in recent years. If there is any attempt at coercion and Poland resists, Hitler will have to face the possibility of war immediately, with an overweight of power against him and with his only hope in a series of sudden blows. Would he strike if he found himself blocked or would he back up? There is a body of opinion which holds that leading men, among them German officers, will not hesitate to prevent a war which they feel would destroy Germany—that they would oppose Hitler—and stay his hand.

Others fear lest he might plunge into war. Latterly however he has gone back to talking again—in which he shows his rare skill and his weaknesses. Before the absorption of the Czechs there was an ominous calm with Hitler silent.

Since late March of this year the world has taken Germany's measure and is very suspicious. So the world stiffens its back and looks to Poland, which is brave enough to face an issue which might mean her land would be devastated by war. On the other hand Poland seems very certain that she was to have been the next "peaceful" victim of the German "peaceful" aggression.

PROSPERITY SIGNS ARE VISIBLE EVERYWHERE IN CANADA, prosperity present and prospective. The farmers of the great Canadian West have been through grievous times but it looks as if the silver lining is about to gild their clouds and happy days return again. Even the various movements of protest against this and that may be taken as a sign of awakened public opinion which is always a sign of better times. One notable sign of business recovery may be seen in the response to the movement for more home building and home improvement generally. When folks begin to spend money in home improvement and building new homes it is a hopeful sign of the times--better times. Here are some figures in regard to the working of the National Housing Act which should prove interesting:

National Housing Act figures for March showing the addition of more than $1,500,000 to loan approvals were released today by Honorable Charles A Dunning, Minister of Finance. Loans approved during the month aggregated $1,541,644 in amount and provided for 446 family housing units. This compares with 249 units for a total of $763,364 in February and 328 units financed by loans of $1,189,679 in March a year ago.

The average loan for March, 1939, is shown as $3,457 per family housing unit. Over a quarter of the units were financed by loans of $2,500 or less, and 83.6 per cent of the total units were financed by loans of $4,000 or less.

A feature of the month's operations was the approval of 33 of the 90 per cent loans available on homes with lending values of $2,500 or less. This compares with 13 of these loans approved in January and 12 in February, and indicates the prospect of a considerable number of these approvals this spring as the active season for residential construction gets under way.

Four additions were made to the list of communities in which Housing Act loans had been approved. This brings to 114 the number of new communities opened up to the benefits of the loaning facilities since the inauguration of National Housing Act operations last August and increases the total number of communities in which loans have been made to 308.

After 3½ years of operation total Dominion and National Housing Act loans now stand at $30,628,894 as at March 31, 1939. Of this amount approvals during the past 12 months have accounted for $15,605,040, or more than half the aggregate.

Tomorrow will be Arbor Day.

Messrs. Fred E. Seymour and Fred W. O'Fynn of Madoc were in the city today. They are enroute for an European trip and will be absent about four months.

Where Editors Are Taxed

The Rouyn-Noranda Press has noted ironic references in the Advance to the extent to which ingenuity has gone in Timmins in devising new and odd forms of taxation — taxing coal chutes, fire escapes, signs, oiling the streets. The Rouyn-Noranda Press, however, claims that Rouyn, Quebec, holds the record for amusing taxation.

Rouyn actually has a special tax on editors. Editor Jones, of the Rouyn-Noranda Press, and Editor Morrisette, of La Frontiere, each is compelled to pay a tax of $20 per year simply for being an editor. The Press is probably right in believing that Rouyn has the distinction of being the only place on earth where a special specified tax is placed on editors. As the Press suggests, "this seems to be one for Ripley."

The Rouyn editors are not likely to receive much sympathy in their specific taxation. This is for two reasons—first, people in general need all their sympathy these days for themselves in the matter of taxation and, second there is seldom any sympathy for an editor, anyway, about anything.

Indeed, even editors elsewhere will feel that the Rouyn town fathers have scarcely gone far enough. If a tax on editors, why not one on linotype operators? Why not a couple of taxes on proofreaders.

The municipal tax on editors has been in force in Rouyn for the past four years, the Press notes. Someone may comment that it is remarkable that nothing has been heard about it before. The answer to that one is that editors do not worry so much about the many impositions made on themselves as they do about the imposts upon others. Probably, if they did they would escape some of the taxes, direct and indirect, open and hidden, personal and general, fair and unfair, that make the editor's life what it is.—Timmins Advance.

Sunday Visitors on the Farm

Our old friend, Hi Hinkledam closes the week with a pet peeve against some of his city friends. We give it to you, says "Hank" in St. Thomas Times-Journal, just as Hi sends it to us in his latest letter:

"Last fall, when me and the missus sold the pigs to pay the taxes, we kept the best one for our own use. After curing the hams and shoulders, we put them away for spring and summer use. Last Friday we figured it would be nice to have some of our own home-cured ham, along with eggs and hot-cross buns and maple syrup. We planned to make a real day of it. I was to get the chores done good and early and then for a change we'd all pile into the jaloppy and go to the city and see what arrangements we could make for meeting the King and Queen when they visit Canada.

"I was real happy while I was doing the chores, just thinking what a wonderful day was in store for me and the missus and the younger folk. We were going to have a wonderful breakfast, then away to the city. But, alas, all our plans were in vain. When I got back to the house from doing the chores, lo and behold, who should be there but two carloads of folks from the city. They had decided to come out and make us happy on the holiday and all that sort of stuff. I tell you, my chin dropped on my chest when I saw that gang there.

"And could those city folks eat. They ate up all the ham and bacon the missus had prepared, all the maple syrup and all those wonderful biscuits—and four dozen eggs in addition. Can you imagine that? Don't you folks ever enjoy a real square meal in the city?

"After breakfast they all had to head for the barn to pet the calves and colts and disturb the other livestock as much as possible. Then we went back to the house and of course the missus had the dishes all washed by that time and the rooms straightened out and was starting to get dinner.

"All during the dinner period, our visitors told us about their new cars and how much a month they would have to raise until the cars were paid for. Then they talked about their sickness. This one had the flu, another the whooping cough or measles, and another one the mumps. They even told the missus she looked terrible and needed a rest. Imagine that! Our radio didn't suit them. We should have one of the new models while their general remarks indicated that they didn't think our old car should be allowed on the roads.

"They stayed for supper. Then they packed up and started for home in their new cars—not before begging some of that "delicious bacon and eggs" for Sunday breakfast. Saturday I spent most of the day repairing the damage their kids had done around the farm. Usually on Saturday we go to the market with our eggs; but those city visitors saved us the trouble. They hadn't left any eggs.

"I have come to the conclusion that Hitler and Mussolini aren't the only people in the world who can be annoying."

THAT BODY OF YOURS

By James W. Barton, M.D.

Water May Be Preventing Loss of Weight When Reducing

When a diet expert outlines a reducing diet for an overweight patient he naturally allows the patient to drink water to some extent because water has little or no fuel value and does not put fat on the body. This allowing the patient to drink the ordinary amount of water is quite all right when the reducing diet is to be taken over a number of months; however, it is, in many cases, the cause of great disappointment.

Although fat is disappearing from the body while on the reducing diet as it is being used to supply part of the fuel or food supply, nevertheless the body seems to want to hold its weight for a while and takes an extra supply of water from the foods eaten, rather than let this water leave the body by the kidneys and skin. Thus, for two or three weeks many overweights find that they haven't lost as much as expected. In another week or ten days, however, much weight will suddenly be lost due to this excess water leaving the body.

This excess water has been stored in the fat tissue; every pound of fat can hold three and a half pounds of water. It can thus be seen that if the overweight is taking the 14 or the 18 day reducing diet, he or she may not lose much weight, whereas if on a 30 to 90 day reducing diet, the loss of weight after three or four weeks will be very satisfactory.

If, in addition to continuing to drink water, the overweight continues to take his usual amount of salt, he will be even more disappointed in results because salt holds water in the tissues to the extent of 70 times its own weight.

I am reminding overweights who wish to reduce that they must keep this matter of water balance in mind because after doing without much desired food for a week or two and finding that they have lost little or no weight, they may naturally think that their overweight is not due to eating more food than they need but to some condition of one or more of their glands. If they think that eating less food is not, therefore, going to reduce their weight, they will resume a full diet again, whereas another week or two on the reducing diet would have shown that too much food was really the cause of their overweight.

HUMAN PICTURE

Speaking with the background of a lifetime of intimate contact with "the Englishman" of all classes, in peace and in war, Earl Baldwin of Bewdley—the Prime Minister Stanley Baldwin of pre-Chamberlain days uttered this classic comment in Toronto on Thursday night: "What common stuff have I found in our people? Fundamentally a stout individualism, yet with the power of co-operation, a broad and tolerant humanity, and humor. Not wit, which is of the intellect, but humor, which is of the heart. You may pity humanity, you may hate it, but humor is a saving grace—humor can only exist with a love for your kind and even behind the laughter there are often tears."

A truly human picture by a great Englishman. — Stratford Beacon-Herald.

SNOW BELT

There is one street maintenance cost we escape in this sunny South Alberta of ours. That is high cost snow removal. The Ottawa Journal weeps bitter tears over the cost of removing snow from a few miles of streets during the Winter months.. —Lethbridge Herald.

The Farmer Can Always Eat

Self-pity is one of the most dangerous of human emotions. It is apt to sap from a human such essential attributes as self-respect, independence and confidence.

The words of Rev. William A. Young, minister of the Presbyterian Church at Hensall, are of some interest in this respect. He suggests that all this talk about country parsons being poverty stricken is the "bunk" and also asserts that farmers have no reason to feel sorry for themselves.

Clergymen serving in rural parts are not highly paid. Yet in the past they have been able to maintain themselves in respectability and have been able to educate their families, and they are still doing it. That they have been able to do so has, of course, meant some sacrifices perhaps more than they should have been called upon to make. But the point is that they have succeeded.

Mr. Young's reference to farmers is also quite timely. It is true that the majority of farmers are not making much money, that they have had to go without new cars, new machinery they should have and cannot spend much on clothing, etc. Yet the eastern farmer, in a sense, is fortunate. Even during the depth of the depression, the vast majority of them got by. They knew where their next meal was coming from, and that it would be adequate, even if they could not afford anything in the way of luxuries, or much in the way of improvements to their property and its equipment. Unemployment to them was only a word, except inasmuch as lowered purchasing power of urbanites and a falling export market reduced prices. They have not known what it is to lose their jobs, without any idea when they might get another. Nor have they, like the farmers in the drought area of the Prairies, experienced crop failure, not for one year alone but for several in succession.

By this we do not imply that the eastern farmers' lives have been happy, easy or prosperous during the past few years. We only suggest that they have some reason to be thankful and to keep themselves from getting down at the mouth too much. And most farmers, while sincerely wishing better times and prices, are aware that, however much they have suffered by low prices, they at least have kept off relief and filled their own stomachs. —Windsor Star.

Nazi Workers of the Press

The Typographical Journal, official publication of the International Typographical Union of the United States and Canada, has an article about the plight of German printers contributed, so it is said, by German printers who for excellent reasons remain anonymous.

After the Nazis destroyed the German printers' union, it is stated, the printers were compulsorily transformed into a unit of the German Labor Front, and what was once "a powerful weapon in the fight against arbitrary action by employers" became "a powerful organization for the drastic oppression of the workers." Once German printers were free men; now they are "slaves of the Works Leader," must hold their tongues or find themselves in a concentration camp. They work longer hours than in the pre-Nazis days, and their so-called "free time" is unpleasantly organized.

A week's program is given. Monday sees them called for fire brigade exercises, Tuesday is musketry drill, Wednesday is first-aid drill and gas mask tests, Friday is given up to "theoretical instruction" and Saturday has a works meeting—all these items being after working hours. Thursday has a little variety. At 4.30 a.m. the printers turn out in full military equipment for a route march—before working hours.

Those who hesitate utterly to condemn the Nazi system because "at least," as they say, "it does provide employment for everybody," should not fail to note on the other side of the picture the ruthless suppression of human liberty which alone has made possible a situation that seems at first glance to offer something worth copying.

In Germany the individual is of no consequence: the State is all-important. The individual must do what he is told or suffer painful consequences. He has no right of protest. He is one of the herd, a robot, valued only for what he can produce and for his usefulness in war. His leaders mock at democracy, glorify aggressiveness both at home and abroad.

That is Nazi policy, of which the German printers have given us a small illustration. The week's program of a typical Canadian printer would provide an interesting comparison.—Ottawa Journal.

THAT FUNNY HAT

This happened in Washington, but seems worth communicating here. A lady and her escort, dining in the Blue Room at the Shoreham Hotel, fell to talking about the strange hats worn by other women.

"I'll bet you could wear that," said the gentleman, pointing to a wicker container for dinner rolls, "and nobody would notice." "Of course," said the lady." She summoned their waiter and asked if he'd please have a roll basket sent into the ladies' room. There she removed her hat, adjusted the basket at a rakish angle, and returned quietly to her table.

Nobody paid any attention to her, although she danced several times, walked about the lobby, and stopped at the bar for a brandy on her way out. The only impression the basket made was on the dinner check: it cost her escort fifty cents.—The New Yorker.

CHAMBERLAIN'S SECRET

When the historians come to examine the events of the last six months they will be perplexed by the fact that Mr. Chamberlain, after his recent change of policy, has enhanced rather than diminished his hold upon the country. It is no exaggeration to say that if a plebiscite were held tomorrow upon his retention of the post of Prime Minister, between 60 and 65 percent. of the electorate would vote in his favor.

What, the historians will ask, is the secret of this popularity? The Prime Minister's most devoted admirers would scarcely claim that he possesses the charm of Lord Baldwin, the wisdom of Bonar Law, the magnetism of Lloyd George, the high intellectual abilities of Asquith, the suave experience of Balfour or the deep ethical appeal of Gladstone.

Mr. Chamberlain obviously derives a large proportion of his authority from the fact that he is representative of what the great middle mass of people are feeling at the time. When they were longing to escape from intolerable dangers, he rendered escape respectable by calling it "appeasement." When their pride and anger are deeply stirred, they feel that he will defend their liberties without rendering resistance provocative.

Mr. Chamberlain's reversal of policy has, in fact, coincided with, and not countered, a swing in public opinion. Yet this in itself would not be enough. The Prime Minister would not hold the position he does if he appealed merely to the instinct of self-preservation. The great virtue which he possesses is the virtue of heroic courage.—Harold Nicolson, M.P., in London Spectator.

THE SKIPPER

A Nova Scotia girl has taken her master's papers and will act as captain of a coasting vessel. That's nothing. Many a husband can testify that the woman he expected to be his first mate turned out to be the captain shortly after the start of the voyage over matrimony's uncharted seas. — London Free Press.

THE DEEPEST CLEFT

For nearly a century now it has been axiomatic that the Grand Canyon of the Colorado River is the deepest cleft on earth. That this is not true is a fact which geographers are just beginning to recognize. The Grand Canyon is not so deep as the basalt and granite gash made by the Snake River between the States of Oregon and Idaho in the Pacific northwest.

Along a mountain - serried stretch where the brawling waters of the Snake twist northward Hell's Canyon averages 5,510 feet in depth for 40 spectacular miles. Here 6,000-foot expanses are not uncommon. At one point the canyon is 7,900 feet deep; a mile and a half from rim to river. This considerably exceeds the 6,100-foot maximum depth of the Grand Canyon.

The canyon hollowed out by the Colorado River is 217 miles long; that by the Snake River, 189 miles. The Grand Canyon is 15 miles from rim to rim at its widest point; Hell's Canyon, ten miles.—Harper's Magazine.

PROUD RECORD

A fortnight ago an eastern journal remarked that Winnipeg was building up a fine record for freedom from traffic fatalities. Extension of that record, it truly said, had become a matter of civic pride with traffic authorities and individual motorists.

Well, what does it think of us now? We are well into the sixth month—160 days at time of writing—without a fatal accident on the streets.

We rather hesitate to mention it, with traffic increasing for fear of a break in the record. And a perfect record is too much to hope for.—Winnipeg Free Press.

PRIZE CAPTION

We heard our office boy giggling quietly in his corner yesterday and found that the new copy of The Japan Times Weekly, propaganda sheet, had just come in the mails, carrying a picture of Japanese soldiers being served refreshments. The caption under the picture: "A National Defence Women's Association Member Serves Tea to Wounded Veterans of the China Incident."—N. Y. Post.

PRICE FIXED

Note from Goose Gulch: Grasshoppers held a meeting here last Saturday and decided that no matter whether the price of wheat were fixed at 60 or 80 cents they would eat their fill just the same.—Regina Leader-Post.

ARMED CONQUEST

Mussolini gloats over the conquest of a nation of 1,003,124 persons taking up only 10,629 square miles of the world and guarded by an army of 812 officers and 13,305 men. What a conquest!—North Bay Nugget.

STIRLING

W. REYNOLDS WINS AMATEUR SHOW

Over 30 Contestants Take Part in W. I. Event

Stirling — Stirling theatre was well filled on Thursday evening when in competition made possible by the Stirling Branch of the Ontario Women's Institute, boys, girls men and women provided the large audience with excellent entertainment as they vied for first honors in the various classes. Mr. Clifford Hatton acted as master of ceremony and judges included Mr. Harry Moore, of the Trenton Courier, Mr. F. Jobson, leader of the Belleville Municipal Band, and Mrs. Chester Sills, District Director of the Ontario Women's Institute.

Over Thirty Entries

With the competitors divided into juvenile and senior classes under the direction of Mr. G. L. Chute, musical director of St. Paul's United Church, the competition was carried through with little delay and no confusion. The capable judging staff carried out their duties in a manner that pleased both the contestants and the audience. Miss Norma Cotton was the winner in the junior section with a dance number Highland Fling; second prize in this division went to Miss Neta Dorey for a talented display in singing and tap dancing. Joan Pedley, daughter of Dr. W. H. and Mrs. Pedley, portrayed exceptional talent as a pianist and was awarded third honors. Others to receive honorable mention in this class were Donald McGowan, trumpet soloist and Snarr sisters vocal artists.

In the adult section Wm. Reynolds, baritone soloist and pupil of Mr. G. L. Clute of Stirling, was the easy winner of first honours in an excellent rendition of the famous negro spiritual "Old Man River".

Second prize went to the Radner sisters who combined rhythm and harmony in a group of western songs that were particularly pleasing to the audience. Miss Herrington of Thomasburg, won third honours singing "Come to the Fair". Special mention was made by the chairman of the judging committee regarding the excellent performance of several other artists including Jack McCann, Marion Tulloch, Mary Tulloch and Marybelle Rodgers, Margaret Rodgers, Margaret Vanderwater and Dorothy West. Special features of the evening were two trumpet solos given by Mr. Jobson with Mr. G. L. Clute playing the accompaniment.

Program Interesting

The arrangement of the program under the direction of the program committee, and the master of ceremonies for the evening was so conducted to provide change of colour and contrast throughout the entire performance. Mrs. W. C. West, president of the Stirling Branch of the Ontario Women's Institute, presented the prizes as the contestants in the winning groups offered encore numbers.

Junior Section

Senior Section

Red Ramblers Band; Mrs. K. Thompson, soprano solo; Wm. Reynolds, baritone solo; N. Luery, harmonica solo; Miss Herrington, soprano solo; Jack McCaughan, western singer; Dorothy Tristram, elocutionist; Marybelle Rodgers and Mary Tulloch, vocal duet; Marion Tulloch piano; Murietta McKee, piano; Dorothy West, vocalist; Morley Clark and Don Francis string duet; Radner sisters, vocal duet; Mat Hedley, vocalist; M. Vanderwater, toe dancer.

Stirling Oddfellows and Rebekah Lodge Attend Church

St. John's Anglican church was filled to the doors on Sunday morning when special services were conducted for the members and officers and many visitors of the Stirling I.O.O.F. No. 239 led by Chas. Carter N.G. and J. B. Thompson, R. S. Stirling Encampmen No. 80; E. Fox C.P., J. B. Thompson R.S. and Laurel Rebekah Lodge No. 211, Retta Wilson N.G.; Evelyn Bailey R.S. attended. The formation of the long procession of the three organizations took place at the lodge hall on Front street and proceeded to the church. The service included the singing of inspiring hymns led by St. John's choir with Miss L. Faires presiding at the organ a special vocal quartette and an interesting message delivered by the Rector Rev. A. S. McConnell. Scripture lessons taken from 1 Sam. 20 1-17 and St. Luke 10 25-42 were read by Mr. Fred Houchin.

Speaking on a text from the 43rd Chapter of Genesis verse eleven "And carry down the man a present, a little balm and a little honey, spices and myrrh." Rev. McConnell pointed command of the father Israel to his sons as still possessing the key to human happiness. A gift a free will offering to our fellowman of that which we have to give, will provide joy and happiness. The gift of the good Samaritan was sufficient to glorify him in the eyes of his Lord. We, today, can give not necessarily in a material sense. We, can freely express gratitude unto those who serve us. We can give appreciation of feeble efforts rather than criticize inactivity. We can give more time and thought to our home life and reestablish a healthy and happy relationship between Mother and daughter, father and son.

When we are hurt by another we can offer forgiveness rather than nurse a grudge that develops the distasteful side of our nature. We can give in effort toward tht life of the church, express appreciation for kindnesses rendered by our minister and so develop the spirit of generosity that life in work, home and church and fraternity will become bright and cheerful and unconsciously we shall cast off a ray of happiness that will reach out touching the lives of those about us. Joy, amusement and happiness shall come to us if we take on the cloak of service for the betterment of our fellow-beings.

Two recent fire alarms were answered by the Stirling Fire Department under direction of Fire Chief R. H. Williams. On Friday afternoon a grass fire got slightly beyond control and threatened the home of Wm. Tulloch on the Marmora road for a short time. The fire bell rang and the brigade assembled at the fire hall when word was received that the fire was out. This report was false according to the occupant of the house, Mr. Tulloch, who claims he fought the fire unassisted for two hours after the alarm was turned in. A few broken windows was the extent of the damage. Late Saturday afternoon the brigade answered a call to the Station Street residence of Mr. Phillips where extinguishers were used to put out a small chimney fire.

Miss Betty Hatton of Toronto, spent the week-end visiting her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Clifford Hatton.

Mr. and Mrs. Cecil Walt and Billie spent the week-end visiting at the home of the former's parents, Dr. and Mrs. C. F. Walt.

doubt that Danzig will never become Polish."

(The Free City, detached from Germany by the treaty of Versailles, technically is under the authority of the League of Nations while remaining in the Polish customs administration. It is one of Poland's two ports. The other is Gdynia.)

Question Asked

"Has Poland lost all reason that in this situation she dreams of 1919?" Deutsche Allgemeine Zeitung asked.

Boersen Zeitung, commenting on a British press proposal that Poland with Great Britain and France behind her could afford to negotiate over Danzig, said "Englanders here."

Referring to the British pledge of military aid to Poland in case of a threat to her independence, the newspaper continued:

"The Polish appetite since she holds the English blank cheque seems to be increasing. Already Gazetta Polska (Polish official gazette) and others are talking about the Baltic as Polish living space in which they also seem to count the Baltic states.

"And if the spirit moves the Polish Nationalists so that they begin to speak with their tongues they even declare East Prussia a Polish province. ......this blind insolence is the first fruit of the English pact of assistance."

Rawdon

Rawdon—On Wednesday afternoon about twenty girl friends of Miss Nellie Morrison gathered at the home of her parents Mr. and Mrs. John Morrison and tendered her a surprise party.

During the afternoon Miss Irene Tucker led in a round of community singing. Mrs. Bill Heath contributed a piano solo and Mrs. Don Heath rendered a vocal number. Miss Alice Lake staged a couple of interesting games. Miss Dorothy Utman gave an appropriate reading and Miss Edith Hagerman read the following address —

Dear Nellie:—

We, your girl friends have gathered here this afternoon to rejoice with you on this happy occasion of your coming marriage. We have known you for many years and have grown to love you. We are all well acquainted with your ability and will miss you very much, but we hope we will still see you occasionally as you visit your old home. There is no friend like an old friend, who has shared our morning days, no greeting like her welcome no homage like her praise Fame is the scentless sunflower with gaudy crown of gold but friendship is the breathing rose with sweets in every fold But still we will cherish our friendship with you in your girlhood days and this afternoon your friends have all gathered here to wish you good cheer, as the words of this poem portray.

Signed on behalf of your friends. Edith Hagerman and Alice Lake.

The bride-to-be opened the various parcels which revealed a lovely assortment of kitchen articles in cream and red.

Nellie graciously replied thanking her friends for their kindness to her and inviting one and all to to visit her when she is settled in her home at Mount Pleasant.

At the close an appetizing lunch of sandwiches, cake, pickles, and candy was served.

Massassaga

Massassaga—Mrs. George Flower called on Mrs. Roy Dulmage on Wednesday afternoon.

Mrs. Howard Huff of Simcoe was the supper guest of Mr. and Mrs. I. Niyhtingale on Sunday night.

Congratulations to Mr. Allan Baxter who was so successful in his exams at Kemptville Agricultural College.

Plainfield

Plainfield—Several Plainfield families were represented at the funeral in Belleville on Saturday of the late Mrs. Samuel Sinfield.

Mr. and Mrs. Gordon Morgan and family, who for some time have occupied the house in the village owned by Mrs. Bailey of Belleville, have moved to the home owned by Mrs. John Shaw who is at present with her daughter, Mrs. Mae of Corbyville.

Miss Mary Goodfellow returned to Belleville on Monday after spending a few days with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Goodfellow.

The deepest sympathy of her many friends in this community is extended to Mrs. Stanley Hassard in the loss by death of her mother, Mrs. Samuel Sinfield, who passed away at her home on West Moira Street, in Belleville on Thursday after a lengthy illness.

Mr. T. Thair of Collingwood, and Miss Maude Hubble of Toronto, spent the week-end with her mother, Mrs. Peter Hubble.

Mrs. Oral Forth of Detroit, Mich., spent Friday afternoon with her uncle, Mr. Robert A. Hall and Saturday with Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Gow.

Mr. Norman Latta, of Dartford, called on friends here on Saturday.

Mrs. James Gilbert, Latta, who has spent the Winter with her niece, Mrs. Stanley Brooks, of Toronto, returned to her home here on Sunday.

Sunday was observed as Children's Day on Plainfield pastoral charge. At each of the appointments the choirs were composed of children who contributed special selections. The attendance was good at all points. Much credit for the success is due the organists, Miss Mae Stevenson at Bethel; Mrs. Cecil Ketcheson at Zion Hill and Mrs. Arthur Hall at Plainfield. At the evening service the choir which sang "With Our Colors Waving Bright" and "Love that Passeth Knowledge" was composed of Misses Beryl Platt, Margery Creeper, Margery Outwater, Mary Emmerson, Irene Hall, Evelyn Outwater, Carrie Goodfellow, Marie Hall, Marion Prindle and Oscar Moore, Vernon Emmerson and W. Prindle.

Mr. Cyril Latta, a grandson, motored Mrs. James Gilbert, Latta, from Toronto to Plainfield on Sunday and remained until Monday.

The many friends of Mr. Earls Outwater, who suffered a severe injury while hauling hay last July, were pleased that he was again able to attend divine service on Sunday evening. Mr. Outwater had not been in attendance since Sunday, July 17th., 1938.

ENGAGEMENT ANNOUNCEMENT

Mr. and Mrs. Joseph B. Lake of Powassan, Ontario, announce the engagement of their daughter, Mary Victoria, to Alan Brown Sprague, son of Mr. and Mrs. Frederick W. Sprague, Belleville. The wedding will take place May 24th.

Mr. and Mrs. Elwood Huyck arrived yesterday to take up their residence in this city. Mr. Huyck has joined the staff of the Thomas G. Thompson Funeral Service and will reside at the Funeral Home, 38 Everett Street. Mr. Huyck is an experienced, licensed Embalmer and Funeral Director.

Judge and Mrs. G. E. Deroche have returned to the city after spending the winter months in Lakeland, Florida.

Mr. and Mrs. F. A. Bapty formerly of Deloro, Ontario, are taking up residence in the Mayfair Apartments, Ottawa.

Mrs. G. E. MacMillan, Buffalo, N.Y., was called to the city on Sunday owing to the serious illness of her sister, Mrs. Geo. T. Woodley.

Mr. Angus Robertson, Montreal, was the over-night guest of his sister, Mrs. A. B. Collins, during a brief visit to the city.

Mr. Arnott Jackson arrived from Bermuda, yesterday to pursue courses at Ontario Business College.

Miss Mary McCormick, who underwent an operation for appendicitis in Belleville General Hospital on Saturday is progressing favourably.

A marriage of interest in this district took place in London, England, on April 21, 1939, when E. M. Pennell of Bradford, York, and London, became the bride of E. A. Pearce of Picton, Ontario.

Mr. Sidney Howell, who underwent an operation for appendicitis at Belleville General Hospital on Monday is progressing favourably.

Weddings

FRASER—McELWAIN

A quiet wedding was solemnized at the home of Rev. Major Keough, Saturday, April 29, at 7.30 p.m., when Margaret Jean McElwain, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. C. E. McElwain of Trenton, became the bride of Clark Wallace Fraser, son of Mr. and Mrs. Edward Fraser, Point Anne.

The bride wore a blue sheer dress with Suez coat and hat, blue accessories and corsage of Sweetheart roses. Her bridesmaid, Miss Marion Martin was dressed in a powder blue sheer dress with hat to match and corsage of roses. Mr. Geo. E. McElwain, brother of the bride, was best man. Following a dinner at the Rose Marie tea room the couple left on a motor trip to Toronto, Hamilton and points east.

SMITH—MORRISON

Rawdon, (Special) — The home of Mr. and Mrs. John Morrison, fourth concession, Rawdon, was the scene of a pretty wedding ceremony on Saturday afternoon, April 29th at 3.30 p.m. when their daughter, Nellie Lillian, was united in marriage to Herbert Wilford Smith, son of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Smith, Mount Pleasant, with Rev. J. E. Beckel officiating.

The ceremony took place beneath an arch of evergreen and potted plants, interspersed with pink and white crepe roses, in the presence of fifty-five relatives and friends.

The bride entered the living room on the arm of her father and looked charming in a floor length gown of white chiffon fashioned on Empire lines with a shoulder length veil of silk embroidered tulle caught with a tiara of orange blossoms. She carried a nosegay of roses and sweet-peas and wore white accessories.

Miss Alice Morrison, sister of the bride, was bridesmaid, gowned in an ankle length frock of Queen's blue chiffon cut on Empire lines and she carried a spray of sweet-peas and fern with white accessories.

Mr. Ernest Carr of River Valley, attended the groom. Miss Mildred Morrison, sister of the bride, played Lohengrin's Bridal Chorus and during the signing of the register, Miss Lorraine Scott rendered appropriate Bridal music.

A dainty buffet lunch was served by Misses Marjorie Richardson, Ella Sutherland, Verna Sutherland, Edith Hagerman, Lorraine Scott, Vera Ketcheson, Muriel Welbourne and Alice Lake.

The happy couple left by motor to visit the bride's sister, Mrs. Bert Wright and Mr. Wright of Sudbury. The bride travelled in a navy ensemble trimmed with white and navy accessories. On their return they will reside on the groom's farm at Mount Pleasant.

The groom's gift to the bride was a cabinet of silver, to the bridesmaid, a gold bracelet, to the groomsman, a gold tie pin and to the pianists, gold lockets.

WISE—NIXON

The home of Mr. and Mrs. Hilton W. Nixon, Rumsey Road, Leaside, was the setting for a pretty ceremony on Saturday, when their daughter, Miss Helen Nixon, was married to Mr. Douglas R. Wise of Belleville, son of Mrs. Wise and the late James Wise of St. Thomas. Rev. Dr. J. W. McIntosh officiated and the wedding music was played by the bride's sister, Mrs. J. Harold Willson of Ridgetown.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, was attended by her sister, Miss Margaret Nixon, and wore an afternoon frock of Queen's blue, with hat and accessories of navy, and corsage of gardenias. Her sister's costume was cyclamen shade, and her corsage American Beauty roses and calla lilies. Mr. J. Harold Willson was groomsman.

A reception was held afterward. Mrs. Nixon was gowned in fuchsia sheer, with corsage of Talisman roses; and the mother of the bridegroom wore Suez sheer and lace, with corsage of lily-of-the-valley and forget-me-nots. The bride cut the wedding cake with the same knife that her husband's mother used at her own wedding. Before leaving for her wedding trip to the Adirondacks, she sent her flowers to her grandmother, Mrs. Dixon of Parry Sound, who was unable to be present at the wedding. Mr. and Mrs. Wise will live in Belleville on their return. Both attended the University of Western Ontario, and the bride attended Alma College in St. Thomas.

The Stars Say

For Wednesday, May 3

By GENEVIEVE KEMBLE

A RATHER indifferent day, in which the exercise of finesse or compromise may be advisable, is the augury based on the lunar transits. Support of recognition of employers, superiors or those in authority may be lacking, but the situation is not hopeless if right approach and meritorious suggestions are employed. Finance, prestige, and popularity are involved. It would be well to postpone important changes.

Those whose birthday it is may find themselves confronted by a year in which prestige, popularity and progress depend upon their own capacity for placating opposition and securing co-operation of superiors or those in power. Proper approach and clever tactics may dispose of adverse attitudes. Careful consideration of change is advised.

A child born on this day may rebel against authority and thereby cause similar reaction from those in power unless given tactful training.

Seek Grace In Lines, Curves

JOAN CRAWFORD

Her trim figure answers style requirements

By HELEN FOLLETT

MADAME FASHION, the greatest dictator of them all, lays down the figure laws—small waist, firm. high breasts, normal hips, slender legs. Those reedy darlings who cast a shadow of broom-stick proportions are no longer envied, though superfluous fat isn't any prettier than it ever was. The skinnies are lapping up their milk and cream like nice little kittens, the plumpies are doing their exercises with patience and fortitude. The objective: A feminine anatomy that is a combination of graceful lines and engaging curves.

Bending exercises and torso twisting are good for all of us. They strengthen the muscles of the abdomen and that's where figure defects first appear. Many of the slender lassies have ploppy tummies that deprive them of style. They look terrible in pleated skirts that go swishy and whirly. Poor posture does that, also the habit of letting the weight rest on one foot.

Take the kinks out of your backbone, stand tall. Close your hands, send them out on a straight line from your shoulders, pivot at the waist-line. Place your hands straight out in front, lift them high throw back the upper portion of your body. As you lift your hands come up on your toes. Keep stretched the full time. Stretching does wonders toward making fibres strong and resilient. Five minutes night and morning and you'll be sitting and standing pretty.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

Famous Authority on Problems of Love and Marriage.

Does "Mother Know Best"?

Do they indulge them too tenderly, spare them too much worry, and altogether give them too good a time?

For that's what foreign visitors mean, isn't it? When they insist so often that American women are "spoiled".

Once again the familiar charge has been brought against us, this time by Madame Odette Keun, a lively-minded Frenchwoman who, after recently spending a year in our country, has, of course, written a book about us. She too, thinks we are "spoiled".

Since it's men who are the spoilers, this accusation is perhaps for husbands to meet, rather than for wives. But it will serve to remind American women that spoiled or not we are the envied ones of all the earth. That the wives of all other countries openly try their amazement that we have so much freedom. That our husbands are as faithful, as adoring, as generous, as unselfish as everybody has always known American husbands to be . . . dividing up their earnings or handing over their pay-envelopes intact, blindly trusting that the contents will be wisely spent. Letting their wives' decisions stand in all family matters.

Most of us don't doubt that American husbands are the kindest in the world, but we might stop and consider for a moment whether we really deserve these paragons we marry. What is the real truth about us—not to be passed on to European journalists, but to be kept to ourselves? Does it rankle the least little bit that we're again the objects of criticism?

It will have to be confessed, I suspect, that there is a small minority of American women who are lazy and self-indulgent, who lie in bed in the morning and consider their own pleasure first and last. Who don't worry about their husbands' happiness or comfort, and who take care not to have any babies. You know the sort I mean. I suppose it's fair to say they are spoiled. But aren't there a few selfish women in every country?

As for American women in the mass, I think they can stand inspection without qualms.

Think of the multitudes of farmers' wives, all over this big country. You know the grim, work-filled lives they lead. Would you describe them as "spoiled?" Do they fall down on their jobs?

How about women who work in mills, factories and stores, and who, when night comes, exchange their hard day-time tasks for the none too light labor of taking care of their homes and children? Are they "spoiled", too?

But there are also great numbers of women who are less hard-pressed, who are free to choose between work and leisure. What choice do they make? When they work, do they look for safe, easy jobs? We know that they don't.

We've seen a girl like Anne Lindbergh ignore danger and hardship in aviation and radio-operating, at the same time making notes for important books that were later to become best-sellers. We will never forget the heroic sky-journeys of Amelia Earhart. Mrs. Martin Johnson is far from being the only American woman who has done explorer's work in jungles.

Make out your own list of American heroines. You'll find it stimulating. It will help you to see that we have a good deal of backbone, after all. As for love, American women, like all other women in the world, need love and plenty of it. Far from making them soft, it's helped them to grow and blossom. American women really need not blush for themselves.

Etiquette Findings in "Pygmalion"

Of course I was interested . . . . weren't you? . . . . when we were shown the close-up of Eliza Doolittle in the motion picture "Pygmalion", absorbed in reading a book marked "Etiquette"

In this picture there is food for etiquette thought. For unending discussions on etiquette too, as we can hear from the fierce pros and cons that rend the air concerning it. If Mr. George Bernard Shaw had told us more about what happens to Eliza Doolittle after The Great Change, some of our "wonderings" might be answered. But, whether from indifference or cleverness, he leaves his ending up in the air . . . and that's where we are too!

(In the story of "Pygmalion", Professor Higgins wagers with a friend that he can take Eliza Doolittle, a girl of lowly background and by assiduous training make her the social peer of a lady of quality.)

And so on and on our questions grow. Does Mr. Shaw intend that we accept this as another version of the Cinderella story or as real life? In the short space of six months can a young girl achieve, through persistent training and unwavering cooperation, the social grace that made the high-born guests at a brilliant party accept her as they would one of their own "class?"

Is "breed" more important than "pasture" (as George Eliot puts it)? In other words, is being well-bred more important than being well-trained? To what extent does being born "with a silver spoon in our mouth" act as fundamental advantages? In a word, can we acquire social "accustomedness" if we have a fine native intelligence, by the wish-to-do, by an "infinite capacity for taking pains", by persistent work, and a clear-eyed vision of our goal?

Bless our human hearts, we all become such enthusiastic rooters for the success of Eliza Doolittle that we are eager to admit that that engaging little flower girl can and will accomplish wonders . . . with the help of Professor Higgins. Perhaps we might take Professor Higgins as the symbol of our individual guiding star, and obey that fine old admonition "Hitch your wagon to a star."

And I am such an enthusiastic rooter for what people can accomplish for themselves, if they are intelligent and adaptable if they have a sure sensitiveness to other people's feelings and points of view, if they have the stamina to work for their own development, that I came away from "Pygmalion" with high hearted inspiration. In my work in etiquette, in the everyday problems of social adjustment, I have seen many miracles wrought by people who have determined to change themselves from ugly social ducklings to graceful swans. And the change isn't superficial . . . . it works its way through the veins and arteries until it increasingly becomes part of the person and personality. In your life too, I know that there are some shining examples of this inspiring metamorphosis. And think of the examples in the history of our nation!

My credo is that there are no margins to this kind of human development except the margins which we, in our lack of vision, make for ourselves. The Bible gives us the perfect formula for accomplishing this personal progress: "the seeing eye, the hearing ear, and the understanding heart."

Vaccination is so simple I can't imagine anyone being frightened of it. And I don't think they would be, if they knew just what it was.

First the skin is prepared by washing with soap and water, followed by alcohol. Usually the spot chosen is on the outer surface of the upper arm, but in the case of girls, parents often insist that it be done on the upper part of the leg so as not to leave a scar on the arm. I don't like vaccinating on the leg, for I don't think it is as satisfactory as the arm. However, if it is carefully watched so that it won't become infected, I suppose it is all right.

On the skin, when it is prepared, two small scratches are made with a sterile needle. These scratches are about an eighth of an inch long, and are an inch separated from each other. The scratch should just be through the outer skin so that no blood is drawn. The vaccine is then squeezed out of its tube and rubbed on the scratches with the needle. The fluid should be allowed to dry and the area should be covered with gauze or with a loose sleeve.

After the vaccination, the mother should be warned to keep the wound very clean lest it become infected with other bacteria. Of course, the scratch shouldn't be washed too soon or the vaccine will be washed off before it gets a chance to take effect.

For the first three to five days, there is seldom any reaction. Then red spots appear around the scratches. These spots change in character, and in a day or two each seems to contain a drop of clear fluid. In about three days there is another change; the drops of fluid become creamy—this is pus. After four or five days more, the spots dry up, scabs form, dry up and drop off, leaving a red scar. The red finally fades out of the scar, leaving the familiar vaccination mark. Years ago this scar used to remain for life, but the way we do it today even this scar disappears almost completely in a month or so.

During the height of the lesion—fourth to twelfth day—there may be a slight fever, loss of appetite and pain in the limbs. These symptoms are frequently seen in the case of adults, seldom with children. The vaccination brings immunity to smallpox about the ninth day after vaccination.

The length of time of immunity varies with individuals, so the only way to be positive that your children are safe is to vaccinate them again after seven years. Sometimes one operation lasts a life time, but we can't be sure. Vaccination is such a slight operation, it doesn't pay to take any chances.

Vaccination plays some funny tricks at times. I recall one woman I vaccinated who touched her vaccination mark with her finger. Then she scratched her nose. Well, the vaccination took on her nose, and not on her arm. And you should have seen the nose she had. But only a minute scar was left.

We had a similar example with the Quintuplets. Of course they were all interested in what was going on, and Emilie had to run her fingers over her vaccination. Then she scratched her wrist, or else there was a little scratch there to begin with. Anyway, her vaccination took on her wrist. In fact it took in both places, so she was well and truly vaccinated.

MISS NAPOLEON

By Violet M. Methley

"Yes. That's why I've been to America, as a matter of fact. But I'm not going to bore you with a lot of technical stuff, that's the worst of starting on one's own pidgin. I suppose, with the usual vanity of mankind, I'm merely trying to prove to you, Miss Valence, that I'm not the hopeless simpleton you imagine."

"I thought nothing of the kind—and I'm afraid I've been acting the school-marm. Forgive me, you?"

"He Was My Grandfather"

Suddenly the austere lines of the girl's face broke into a smile and Hall caught his breath in amazement at the transformation.

Upon Ranny Struan, for whom the smile was directly intended, the effect was even more marked. He coloured, stammered protested that there was nothing to forgive—that she'd every right.... and wouldn't she and Chrissie like an ice....the steward chap was over there....

In another moment he was gone in quest of the steward and his tray, whilst an outburst of quarreling among the Burpham-West children drew their governess hurriedly back to her duties.

"So you've made friends whilst I was prostrate?" Hall smiled at Chrissie Ryland.

"With Miss Valence? Yes — at least—well, I don't think one makes friends with her easily," Chrissie frowned. "She's somehow—different."

"Yes, I feel that way myself," Hall answered. "I fancy it's because she seems so extraordinary sure of herself. And most of us aren't."

"M'm," Chrissie nodded. "She'd never give herself away, but the here and there—big bits if we like people. I'm talking nonsense; I'm no earthly good at explaining myself or other people. And there's Rannie waiting to play tennis."

Hall, left alone, established himself in a deck chair and idly watched the panorama of liner life passing and repassing before him.

There was Leonie Valence sitting with the children, telling them a story it seemed. Her profile was clear cut against a Wedgewood-blue sky and something in the cameo-like coloring gave Hall the cue he had searched for sub-consciously. He waited eagerly for the chance to speak to her, which came that evening when they met on deck after dinner.

The sea had fallen to a flat calm the sky was cloudless except for a band of mist along the horizon. But there was a decided chill in the night air and Miss Valence had turned up her coat collar and thrust her hands deep into its pockets.

"But I like the cold better than stuffiness," she said "And up here you can't hear that little evil wind. Didn't you notice it? It was whining outside my porthole like . . . like a ghost beast, a cruel sneaking beast."

"What a vivid imagination you have!" Hall laughed.

"The wind was real, not imaginary; it sounded as if it came from some lonely place at the back of the world . . ." She drew in her shoulders with a shiver, her face raised. And the sight of the clearly outlined features brought back Hall's discovery to his memory.

"I saw something this afternoon" he said. "All of a sudden I realized why I made such a fool of myself that first evening. It was just a sub-conscious memory, and it came back in a flash."

"A memory of what?"

"Why, of portraits, busts, medals, gems, cameos, coins! Surely someone must have told you before that you are amazingly like the young Napoleon, the Napoleon of the early days?"

For a moment Miss Valence did not answer. but her firmly pressed lips relaxed into a curious little smile.

"You're not offended, are you?" Hall asked.

"Scarcely. But there is nothing very remarkable about it,' she said.

"How do you mean?' Hall frowned perplexedly.

"Because . . . he was my grandfather," Leonie Valence answered quietly.

CHAPTER III.

"Besides . . . I Like You"

Hall stared. He found himself stammering feebly.

"Your grandfather? Do you really mean it?"

"Yes. You don't believe me? I can see that. Well, I can't help it and I really don't much care whether you do or not. It doesn't alter the fact that the Emperor was my grandfather."

Hall was recovering now from the first shock of surprise and protested eagerly.

"You misunderstand me, Miss Valènce. I don't doubt your word for a moment—only you must allow that it was a rather breathtaking announcement. But your likeness to him is so extraordinary that it speaks for itself."

"I suppose so." She spoke carelessly, then with a change of tone and a kind of suppressed vehemence. "I've inherited more than mere physical likeness. I'm like him inside as well."

"I can believe that." Hall said gravely. "Even from the little I've seen of you."

"Don't think I'm just boasting!" She turned on him almost angrily. "It means more to me than that—means just everything!"

"You are ambitious perhaps like him?" Hall spoke questioningly.

"Oh, that—yes! Who isn't? But what I've chiefly inherited from him—my grandfathere—is love and hatred; love of France, hatred of England!"

The last word came with fierce violence. She swung round, head lowered.

"You think that's melodrama? It isn't! That's what I live for — revenge on the country that defeated and killed him. It is the purpose behind everything I do."

"Behind telling me this story, for instance?" Hall asked.

"Probably. Otherwise you would not have heard it."

"My word, I wouldn't like you for an enemy, Miss Valence," Hall ejaculated. and suddenly the altogether charming smile softened her lips.

"You won't! Don't be afraid!" she said. "You're not English and besides . . . I like you."

"Then I hope we shan't lose sight of each other when the voyage is over." Hall's formality hid a real desire.

"I don't think we shall." She looked at him gravely. "I'm sure we were meant to meet . . . But I must go down to the children now. Good-night." She had gone, almost before Hall had time to answer, but he did not move from his position for some time.

"Star-gazing like that at your age — my good fellow, you're a fool!" he told himself grimly "And you'll get a most unromantic cold in the head. Better see about a hot whisky . . ."

Down in his pink and cream stateroom, Hall sat on the edge of the lacquered brass bedstead, forgetful of his practical resolutions of a few moments before.

It was not very warm even down here, and he heard that little sighing wind of which Leonie Valence had spoken running cold fingers across the glass of his square porthole. It was an eerie sound and it brought back the girl's voice and face very vividly.

A strange creature and a strange story. He began to wonder whether he believed it now that he was not under the pressure of her personality.

And yet . . .

"Hang it all, man!" Hall apostrophised himself, "you know perfectly well that you don't believe she's lying! She was just herself, to be accepted as that and no more. Rather the Napoleonic attitude if one comes to think of it . . . What's that?"

Breaking through his thoughts came something which brought Hall to his feet. Something from outside . . . a shock—a blow. It came again, and this time it was unmistakably through the whole fabric of the great ship that the tremor ran, a kind of shudder, like a muted earthquake shock.

Standing by the porthole, Hall dragged aside the rose-colored curtains to look out. and started back with a smothered cry.

ATLANTIC NIGHT

Before Hall had time to think there came a quick footfall along the corridor outside his cabin, and the steward swung open his door and spoke breathlessly:

"Cap'n's orders that everyone goes on deck, sir—wiv' lifebelts on," he said. "An' quick."

"What's happened, steward?" Hall asked.

"We grazed an iceberg, sir, but I don't suppose as much 'arm 'as been done." the shrill Cockney voice reassured him.

Hall, pulling on a light overcoat, glanced round for the lifebelt. Oh, yes, there it was—but how on earth did one wear the wretched thing? Adjusting it awkwardly, Hall felt absurdly self-conscious as he caught a view of himself in the mirror.

He grinned back at the reflection, then glanced round the cabin, from the open doorway. Somehow. it gave him reassurance, that warmly-light, rose hued interior, so homely and cosy looking.

As he hurried along the alleyway Hall heard voices, the thud of feet, shufflings, scufflings. He made for the nearest companion-way. and there for the first time encountered other passengers, some fully dressed, others in night-gear, some wearing, others merely carrying their lifebelts.

"What is it—boat drill?" a red-faced man asked. "Awkward time to have it. I'd a good mind not to come up at all."

"I believe we've grazed an iceberg," Hall repeated the steward's words.

"H'm? Well, it can't have been much of a collision; there wasn't anything of a shock, was there? I never felt it. Couldn't have scratched the side of a boat this size."

"It was very slight. but you may notice they've stopped the engines," said Hall, with pride in his powers of observation.

"Eh? What's that mean, I wonder?' The red-faced man stared round rather uneasily. "Anything or nothing, I s'pose. Well, let's get on deck."

It was only when he gained the top of the stairs. slightly behind the rest, that Hall felt his first twinge of real uneasiness. The deck was not quite level; it had a marked list to port.

Once through the companion-doorway on to the promenade deck he found confirmation of his uneasiness. Things were going forward in a kind of ordered confusion on deck, but the movement was mainly round the ship's boats, from some of which the canvas covers had already been removed as they lay alongside the rail, whilst one was already being slung upwards and outwards on the davits.

The third officer, standing by the nearest boat and giving curt, unhurried orders, sounded normal and unperturbed. And yet . . . . perplexed. hesitating. Hall looked round and found Leonie Valènce standing close beside him.

"Hullo, Miss Valence!" He found himself talking with rather forced cheerfulness. "Have you discovered what all this means?"

"Yes," she answered. "The ship is going down."

CHAPTER IV.

Disaster at Sea

"What?" Startled, Hall stared at the girl as they stood a little apart from the crowds on the deck.

Her tone was as casual as her attitude, standing there, hands thrust into the pockets of her grey coat. But glancing down Hall saw bare, slippered feet, the edge of a nightgown; at least, she had not been quite so unhurried as she seemed now.

"Do you mean that?" he asked her incredulously. "Have you been told anything?"

"Yes," she met his eyes steadily. "I overheard something the Captain said to the Chief Officer; he didn't know I was there. That iceberg ripped along the side from the bow to the engine room thru' several water-tight compartments; there's not a chance of saving the ship. Better not let it go any further; there might be a panic if we said anything."

"You are cool," Hall exclaimed.

"It's no use to be otherwise, besides—I dont' feel any need for fear personally."

"What about those kids of yours?" Hall asked.

Boston Bees Leading League As Strong Western Teams Of National Loop Head East

PIRATES WIN

Pittsburgh Club Snaps Eight - Game Losing Streak

(By Bill Boni Associated Press Sports Writer).

As the National Baseball League's western teams come east and the American's eastern clubs go west for the first time today, the Boston Bees are leading the National loop, a full game up on the Reds and a game and a half in front of the Cubs.

From four right-handers, three of them 32 years old and the other 29, Casey Stengel has coaxed the loop's best pitching.

Just how long the old wheelhorses—Lou Fette, league's top pitcher with three wins and no losses, milkman Jim Turner, Danny MacFayden, Simmons and Cooney—will continue to deliver won't be known until those doubleheaders start rolling up on hot July and August afternoons. Manager Casey Stengel is content that they're delivering now.

They did it again yesterday, with Bill Posedel making his first start a winning one and Tony Cuccinello coming up with a three-run homer that clinched the 7-2 defeat of New York Giants.

Posedel, who had an earned run mark of 5.66 with Brooklyn last year, retired 18 men in order, had a no-hitter until two were out in the seventh, and wasn't scored on until the ninth, when the Terrymen broke through with three singles surrounding a Boston error.

In the other two league games the Pirates snapped their eight-game losing streak with a 2-1 triumph over the Reds, and the Dodgers tied for fourth place by edging out the Phillies 13-12 in a typical Ebbets field scramble.

Rain washed out the Indians-Tigers duel, only one scheduled for the American League. The junior circuit claimed an extra-curricular triumph, though, as the White Sox blasted Dizzy Dean's "nothing ball" for seven hits and all their runs in four innings to beat the Cubs 4-1 in a benefit game that raised close to $30,000 for Monty Stratton.

GRADS RETAIN TROPHY

Edmonton, May 2 (CP)—Edmonton Grads' 16-year record as international women's basketball champions remained intact today with St. Louis Legions their latest victims.

Grads last night beat Legions 37-26 for their third win in four games and retained the Underwood Challenge Trophy they have held since it was donated in 1923. Another challenge series will open here May 13 against Cleveland Fisher Foods and later this spring Grads will meet Chicago All-Stars

Famed Right Arm Of Dizzy Dean Shows Little Change

Chicago, May 2 (AP)—The famed $185,000 right arm of Jerome "Dizzy" Dean is apparently no better than it was when he "throwed himself out" against New York Yankees in the World Series last October.

That was the impression prevailing today after Dean's first pitching assignment of the year with Chicago Cubs. He faced Chicago White Sox yesterday in a benefit game that netted between $25,000 and $30,000 for Monty Stratton, one-time Sox pitching ace.

Until yesterday Dean had pitched only two innings since the Yankees crushed him and his performance was anything but impressive. The Sox whacked him for seven hits in four innings to win 4-1.

Dean may be lost to the Cubs until at least mid-summer. The colorful pitcher, after working four innings admitted his arm was sore; that it was weak and tired.

"There's no use kidding myself," Dean moaned, "it really hurts. It's sore as the deuce up here," pointing to a muscle over his shoulder. But he hastened to add, "It isn't sore where it was last year, under the shoulder blade. I'll just have to take things easy I guess, I think it is just weakness. It looks like I'll have to strengthen my arm, that's all."

Yesterday's Stars

(By the Associated Press)

Rip Sewell and Johnny Rizzo, Pirates: Sewell pitched six-hit ball and Rizzo's pair of doubles were good for run apiece as Pittsburgh ended eight-game losing streak with 2-1 defeat of Reds.

Bill Posedel, Bees: Turned back Giants 7-2 with four-hitter to give Boston league lead.

Cookie Lavagetto, Dodgers: His ninth-inning single drove in runs that edged out Phillies 13-12.

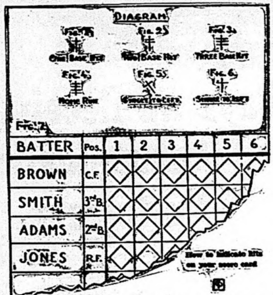
HOW TO KEEP SCORE

Listing the Players and Symbols Used for Hits.



By Central Press Canadian

In the first article of this series we described how most baseball experts identify the playing positions by numbering the players from 1 to 9, usually designating the pitcher as 1, the catcher as 2, and so on around the infield from first base 3, the outfielders numbering from left to right field, 7, 8 and 9.

The simplest batting sign code in general use today is incorporated in the system used by many well-known sports writers.

These experts indicate a one-base hit with a single cross (Fig. 1). Kieran indicates the direction of the hit by slanting the cross in that direction—a single to left is marked by slanting the cross to the left (Fig. 5). A two-base hit is a double cross (Fig. 2) and a triple cross, of course represents a triple (Fig. 3). A bar with four cross-marks is a home run (Fig. 4). Some experts use dots instead of slanting the lines to designate the direction of the hits (Fig. 6).

The baseball fan who takes his scoring seriously usually provides himself with a pocket-size score-book, or he may use program score-cards provided in the ball parks.

A satisfactory score-book or card has a businesslike layout with sections especially provided for all the details in maintaining a clean-cut play-by-play record of the game (Fig. 7).

List the players on each team in their batting order as illustrated in the diagramed segment of the score-sheet. Mark down the lettered abbreviations of their playing positions as indicated under the column headed Pos.

In the next article of this series we will describe the initial steps in actual scoring, using examples.

Cleaning up after one of the floods that creep up on the home grounds of Cincinnati Reds. Fun at the ball park!

THREE BOUTS ON WRESTLING CARD

"Gentleman Jack" Washburn Makes Initial Appearance

Professional wrestling will return to Belleville with three sterling bouts headed by a main attraction, that brings together two of the best known wrestlers on the North American continent when "Gentleman Jack" Washburn, Tennessee badman, meets the former Canadian heavyweight titlist, Scotty McDougall of Goderich, Ont., in the main bout of a three bout card scheduled for the Hume arena on Friday night.

Although McDougall has plied his ring wares in Belleville on previous occasions, always with prolific results, Washburn, on the other hand, is making his initial appearance in a Belleville ring, although recognized as one of the top ten grapplers of the continent. A versatile gentleman, Washburn possesses no scruples when it comes to ring tactics, however.

Local wrestling fans will remember Joe Conkle, the former Red Devil, who meets Ed Kimiski, the Buffalo lightheavy in the semi-final while Jack Cox, Toronto, meets Mile Mimveroni, of Detroit in the preliminary.

NEWARK BEARS SHOWING SIGNS OF IMPROVEMENT

Real Pill Pounding as Team Defeats Royals by 13 - 8

TORONTO WINS

Jersey Giants Gave up Two Runs in the Seventh

(By The Associated Press)

It may be a good idea to get some of those bear stories about what's happened to Newark Bears out of the way before the Bears start bearing down.

When the club that won the 1938 pennant race in a canter, took the International Baseball League playoffs and was barely edged out in the Little World Series, lost four of its first five games this season, the fans just couldn't believe it. That was as incredible as Jersey City leading the league.

But since the figures were there, they began looking for reasons. Since 1938, Newark lost about the best half of its team—Charley Keller, Buddy Rosar, Merrill May, Jimmy Gleeson, Joe Beggs, Atley Donald and a flock of others. Their places were filled mostly by rookies from the lower ranks of the New York Yankees' chain.

The Bears' pitching difficulties have been most obvious so far with only Marius Russo of their starting team able to go the route so far. But they have Johnny Haley back from the Yanks now and may get more help and they're showing signs of improved hitting. So any day now you may find the Bears in their usual place at the top of the standing.

Such a prediction is based upon Newark's showing of the past two days which has brought their record up to five victories and six defeats. Although they only broke even on Sunday's doubleheader with Montreal, the Bears got some excellent hurling from Russo and Haley. Yesterday they did some real pill-pounding to whip the Royals 13-8.

The defeat dropped the Royals from second place to fifth in the percentages, but they remained virtually tied with Rochester, Baltimore and Buffalo a game and a half behind the also-beaten Jersey Giants. The league leaders went down before Toronto Leafs 4-3 as Johnny Meketi gave up the deciding pair of runs in the seventh on four walks and Ted Petoskey's infield hit.

Rain and cold forced the postponement of the Rochester-Baltimore and Buffalo-Syracuse games.

JOHNSTOWN STRENGTHENS POSITION AS KENTUCKY DERBY FAVORITE

Having in previous races moved ahead of winter book favorite El Chico as choice of the majority to win this year's Kentucky Derby, William Woodward's Johnstown became an overwhelming choice by capturing the Wood Memorial Handicap at Jamaica. Again, as in two earlier victories Johnstown defeated horses he will meet in the Derby, among them El Chico, Impound and T. M. Dorsett. The horses are seen here rounding the final turn, the winner in front on the rail, Volitant second and Impound third, the order in which they finished. Johnstown finished eased up, to do the mile and 70 yards in 1.42 and enrich his owner by $17,675.

Exactly ten years ago this fall the Windsor "Chicks" won the senior O.B.A. title, after having been defeated by the Belleville Nationals the year previous and by Galt in 1927. Baseball was given a terrible black eye in the Windsor area during the reign of the "Chicks," sponsored by Tom Chick and who it is said spent more money on trying to win an O.B.A. pennant than is spent on some minor league clubs in the U.S.A. However, after the Chicks won the title they were disbanded and baseball went into the doldrums for six or seven years. In the meantime the Essex County League was functioning successfully due to the fact they were playing independent ball outside of Windsor and on Sunday. Three years ago the O.B.A. voted to permit Sunday baseball in leagues where the municipalities would permit such proceedings. Now the Windsor City League is back on its feet and is again classed as a senior O.B.A. league. The more recent success of the Windsor City League is the introduction of Sunday baseball in the Border towns.

"Of course we cannot charge an admission for our Sunday baseball games, but can pass the hat, which has proved successful and a boom to amateur baseball in Windsor," Mr. A. E. Southerst, of Windsor informed us on Saturday. After listening to the glowing accounts of the revival of baseball in Windsor, based on the introduction of Sunday ball, we were wondering if the same picture could not be reenacted right here in Belleville. Our civic baseball park is situated outside the city limits of Belleville which therefore would not conflict with any city bylaws. As we pointed out before the O.B.A. passed legislation permitting Sunday baseball wherever it is accepted as legal by the municipality. Our baseball diamond is in Sidney Township, but whether or not Sunday baseball would be permitted by the Sidney Township council is another question, but we thought it might be well to bring before those interested the facts surrounding the picture as provided by other centres.

During the hubbub of organizing district baseball and softball leagues, attending meetings, etc., we have not got around to acquainting the diamond fans and players with the many changes of playing rules and scoring rules, that have been adopted in the major leagues this year. There are changes in the scoring rules, of which we will have much to write about in the near future, as well as changes in the playing rules. Some of these changes will affect softball as well as baseball, all of which we will publish and comment upon in the near future. In the meantime baseball will get its initial taste of seasoning on Monday evening when the Belleville intermediates hold their initial practice at the Collegiate grounds and all are invited to attend.

Do you remember when Kingfish Levinsky of Chicago bounced Mickey Walker on the canvas in the first round of a 10-round split decision fight at Chicago seven years ago last night. Walker jumped to his feet without a count and stayed the 10 rounds.

A goodly number of baseball enthusiasts answered the urge to limber up the old arm and get the feel of the spheriod into their bones last evening at the Collegiate grounds. Bud Wilkins gave the boys a little physical training exercises and then permitted them to toss the pellet around for a while. Practices will be held every night at the Collegiate. What impressed us was the number of youthful aspirants to answer the call, two coming in from several miles out in the country. Three hurlers lined up in the bull pen and tossed them down with exceptional dexterity for the first night's practice, "Lefty" Weeks, Joe Kelleher and Joe Doherty all lining up with Wilkins on the firing line. Taking into consideration that both Napanee and Picton are bringing up several former juniors into this year's intermediate lineup, the Belleville squad will be right in keeping with the league practice of "youth must be served." Insofar as the Air Force is concerned, however, they are of an unknown quality as yet, but all in all keen competition can be assured. The locals are in need of at least one hard hitting outfielder and an infielder, so it is hoped a few more new faces will be seen at future baseball practices.

To further substantiate our contentions that the American league plays stronger ball than the National—we cite the 4-1 defeat of the Cubs by the White Sox yesterday in Chicago, Monty Stratton won upward to $25,000, Dizzy Dean was chalked up with a loss and nearly 26,000 fans showed their appreciation to Stratton in an exhibition game. Every person paid to enter the park including the news reporters, umpires and officials, while the staff and park was donated gratis to the cause. Who says there is no sentiment in sport?

We're Telling You—The Bees beat the Giants to take over the lead in the National League.... Goody Rosen got two safeties yesterday as the Daffiness Boys beat the Phillies....What Ho—some people never know when they're down, at least Jimmy Braddock seems to be inclined that way....Braddock will leave for England in three weeks and there engage in a number of bouts....Toronto Leafs open at home on Thursday and may use an Ontario boy, Phil Marchildon, former Penetang right hander, as their starting pitcher. Phil looked mighty good in his first International League start..We haven't seen hide nor hair of Earl Cook in a Red uniform this season.

NOTICE

Air Firing Practice Bombing will take place until further notice on the TRENTON AIR FIRING AND BOMBING RANGE.

" Beginning at Robinson Point and running on a bearing of 229° 30', a distance of 4,500 feet to a red buoy, thence continuing on the said bearing a distance of 13,860 feet to a red buoy, thence on a bearing 312°, a distance of 10,560 feet to a red buoy, thence continuing on the last mentioned bearing 9,900 feet to a red buoy moored 700 feet west of Gore Shoal, thence on a bearing of 56° a distance of 11,550 feet to a red buoy and continuing on the same bearing to the western extremity of Bald Head Island. Thence the north eastern boundary of the danger area is formed by the western coast line of the peninsula at maximum high water, with the exceptional of an additional danger area formed by that part of a 3,000 foot square, of which the main markers' shelter is the centre and two sides of which are parallel to the line of air firing targets. The two corners of the square to the north east will be indicated by flagged stakes or marking buoys. The bearings given are true. " m1, 2

PETERBOROUGH ADOPTS DAYLIGHT SAVING MAY 7

Peterborough, Ont., May 2 (CP)—If city council had acted on Alderman G. N. Gordon's rapid-fire suggestion last night, Peterborough workers would have been an hour late today.

Daylight Saving was to have started here May 21, but council decided suddenly last night that this was too late. Alderman Bradburn suggested May 14 and Gordon suggested the by-law be passed immediately and "fast time" go into effect immediately. Alderman McIntyre agreed before he and council realized there was no way of telling the citizens about it.

Council finally decided on May 7.

IN MEMORIAM

RUTTER — In loving memory of our dear mother, Helen A. Rutter, who passed away May 2nd, 1938.

LIBERAL BOLTS

new legislation, nor on any price less than 80 cents. The west was suffering from emergency conditions which demanded emergency remedies.

Will Continue Fight

"I will continue to fight for an 80-cent wheat price and an acreage bonus as well," said Dr. Fleming.

Pouring scorn on a speech made last week by Fred Johnston (Lib. Lake Centre) who said the price should be more than 60 cents but need not be 80 cents, Dr. Fleming accused his fellow Saskatchewan Liberal of taking a defeatist attitude, of talking boldly in the constituencies but mildly in the House.

The agrarian west would not much longer live in economic slavery, Dr. Fleming said, as he urged the government to take cognizance of the case presented for an 80-cent minimum by the western markets conference organized by Premier John Bracken of Manitoba.

"The whole economy that has been built up is threatened with extinction by this 60-cent price," he said. "The farmer cannot live on 60-cent wheat. All the figures having to do with the industry prove that is below the cost of production. The west has been aroused by what they regard as a betrayal of their interests.

"We western members might just as well bluntly tell the government right now what we think of it. I protested that the farmers of the west cannot be satisfied with anything less than 80 cents."

Dr. Fleming regretted that the budget was not more robust.

Not Poor Man's Budget

It was a far cry from Finance Minister Dunning's May Day budget "when he believed in Liberal principles, before he became enamored of the doctrine of the inevitability of gradualness." The budget was "certainly not a poor man's budget."

The west was not demanding bonuses but simply asking for a compensating adjustment for the added burden imposed by the tariff. Tariffs protected the margin of profit; wheat assistance lowered the margin of loss.

"To guarantee a price that is below subsistence level is not assistance," he said.

Agriculture Minister Gardiner objected to references to a "60 cent price" when it was only an "advance" but Dr. Fleming termed this "hair splitting."

Ever since the western provinces were created they have been paying tribute to the east through tariff protection, he said. They were now entitled to the compensating adjustments often spoken of by members of the cabinet. If an 80-cent price was justified last year and Finance Minister Dunning had argued it was, a 60-cent price could not be justified this year.

Against High Fees

Whole families in Western Canada were living on $8 a month while the government paid lawyers at the rate of $200 a day and Supreme Court judges with salaries of $9,000 a year were given travelling allowances and living expenses, when they served on royal commissions.

While Dr. Fleming was ready to vote with the C.C.F. on their budget amendment which deplored the government's failure to remove the sales tax while giving industrial concerns who embarked on plant extension exemption from income tax, he could not accept the socialistic policy of the C.C.F.

Neither would he support the Conservative amendment to the budget which he said was worse than the budget itself.

"Not only do I see little hope for the west in this budget, I fail to find any minor, let alone any major attempt to tackle the great economic problems of the day." Dr. Fleming continued. "Many persons believed that the invidious parade of poverty amidst plenty is because of that and our economic failure is due entirely to our outworn monetary system....

No Help For Producer

"This budget in no way provides help for our suffering population. There is no help for the primary producer. Nothing has been done with respect to farm implements. Nothing has been done to smash the combines we heard so much of a year ago. The sales tax has not been abolished. The sugar tax is still maintained."

Dr. Fleming lauded Prime Minister Mackenzie King for his attitude during recent crises in Europe. "I often wonder if the Canadian people fully realize how fortunate they are in having as Prime Minister the Rt. Hon. leader of the Liberal party," he said.

He protested attacks on German and Ukrainian citizens of Canada, even by the leader of the C.C.F., J. S. Woodsworth. He said he had never noticed Mr. Woodsworth raising any question about communist propaganda and he had loudly condemned the Quebec padlock law.

Question Not Answered

"Are you in favor of it?" asked Agnes Macphail (U.F.O.-Labor Grey Bruce), but there was on reply.

Two opposition speakers, T. C. Douglas (C.C.F. Weyburn) and Robert Fair (S.C. Battle River), preceded the 'bolt' of the Saskatchewan Liberal with charges that the present administration was abandoning Western Canada—especially in slashing its support of the wheat industry—for the sake of prospective votes in the east.

Mr. Douglas, checked up on points of order because he discussed wheat legislation pending, hotly berated the government for not having given western members an opportunity up to now to air their views on the government's announced wheat policy.

He charged Agriculture Minister Gardiner with sabotaging the operations of Canadian wheat board.

Mr. Douglas claimed the government had nullified the whole intent of the Wheat Board Act. By order in council it had "usurped" the whole purpose of the legislation in 1936-37 by declaring the farmers could not deliver wheat to the Board as long as the price remained above 90 cents a bushel. Wheat had subsequently gone as high as $1.43, from which the farmer would have benefited to a greater extent if the Board had accepted and given the farmers participation certificates.

The government's tactics regarding wheat legislation this session had been "most unfair."

Statement Challenged

Mr. Douglas challenged a statement he attributed to Mr. Gardiner to the effect that with a yield of 20 bushels to the acre wheat could be grown from 30 to 40 cents a bushel. He said Mr. Gardiner could not grow wheat for less than 40 cents a bushel on his own farm.

More than 160,800 names of western farmers had been attached to a petition asking continuance of the 80-cent fixed price. In the face of this he wanted to know who was asking for a 60-cent price. "Certainly not the Liberal party," he remarked.

Any proposed bonus for wheat was mere bagatelle in contrast to the burden that fiscal policy imposed on the west, which Labor Minister Rogers estimated at $56,000,000 a year, Mr. Douglas said.

If the tariff increased costs of food to the west, it also increased it to the east, Trade Minister Euler interjected. Mr. Douglas suggested Mr. Euler and Mr. Rogers should consult on that matter.

From a government member came the observation that he was "tired of this kind of argument.

"We get a little tired of being sold down the river on the excuse we are going to save a few million dollars for the treasury of Canada," retorted Mr. Douglas.

Betraying People is Claim

"If the Liberal party is going to desert the farmers of western Canada in order to save a few million dollars, by virtue of which they hope to gain support in eastern Canada, I want to say to them that they are betraying the people who have long and patiently borne a burden under the present tariff system which is out of all proportion to any small return they may have received."

"It is said the Liberals are about to abandon the west, that they don't expect to elect any more members there," said Mr. Fair. "The votes of Eastern Canada may seem important but if you put the west out of business you put the east out too."

H. W. Winkler, (Lib.-Lisgar) said that the quality of western wheat was a factor often lost sight of in discussion. The high glutin content made it valuable for mixing with wheats from warmer climates. As Europe increased production of weak wheats, high quality wheat was increasingly necessary there for mixing.

AT THE BELLE

"THE MIKADO"

Everything has changed since the horse and buggy age, except Gilbert and Sullivan.

The past 50 years have witnessed more changes than any similar period in world history. Transportation has gone from covered wagons to streamlined planes. Radio has replaced the parlor organ. Art, medicine, politics and economics have been revolutionized. The map of the world has refused to stay put for more than a few weeks at a time. But the ritual of producing Gilbert and Sullivan's musical shows has remained as changeless....and as charming.... as the painted court etiquette on an old Chinese porcelain.

Their biggest hit, "The Mikado", next at the Belle Theatre is the most popular show of any kind ever written. It has played in all countries, save one, and has been presented through every entertainment medium. It now makes its screen debut in a Technicolor production which Universal is releasing with Kenny Baker, Jean Colin, Martyn Green, John Barclay and Constance Willis in the principal roles. Yet in making this film in ultra-modern medium, director Victor Schertzinger followed exactly the instructions laid down by W. S. Gilbert for the first show, performed in London on March 14th, 1885. Perhaps that accounts for the fact that critics have compared it to the fantastic "Snow White."

For instance, on that opening night fifty-four years ago, comedian Grossmith, playing Ko-Ko, accidentally fell flat on his back at the end of his song, "The Flowers that Bloom In The Spring." Everybody laughed immoderately, including the audience. Gilbert, canniest of showmen, therefore ordained that the fall should be part of Ko-Ko's role forever and ever. So for the next five and a half decades, all subsequent Ko-Kos have been executing this pratfall. Martyn Green, star Ko-Ko of the D'Oyly Carte Opera Company, most orthodox of Gilbertian troupes, does it on the screen for the first time in his initial film role. Likewise Gilbert thought that the Oriental sock, which permits the big toe to be waggled separately, was very funny. So he wrote some waggling into Ko-Ko's acting "business", which Green also brings to the screen.

So strict are the millions of Gilbertians and Sullivanites throughout the world, that even the possibility of a bit of action or a bar of music being changed, sends them into frenzies of protest. When it became known that "The Mikado" was to be filmed, Schertzinger was deluged with letters, threatening him with every sort of vengeance, human and divine, if he expunged a coma or cut a grace note. A reverent Savoyard himself, the director wrote a letter to his correspondents, promising that no liberties would be taken with the script. Over 15,000 copies of this letter were mailed to all parts of the globe. The promise made in it was kept. "The Mikado" in its cinema presentation remains as changeless as the Pyramids.

"THE YOUNG IN HEART"

Janet Gaynor, Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., and Paulette Goddard make their debut as an exciting new screen trio in David O. Selznick's comedy romance, "The Young In Heart" which will be given its premiere showing in this city next at the McCarthy Theatre. Roland (Topper) Young, Billie Burke, Henry Stephenson, Richard Carlson, romantic newcomer from the New York stage, and Minnie Dupree head the important supporting cast of this screen version of I. A. R. Wylie Saturday Evening Post serial "The Gay Banditti."

"The Young In Heart", is the delightful story of the Carletons, a family of fascinating phonies, who live both by their charm and on anyone's money, and have been kicked out of only the best places, from the Riviera to London. They're out to "take" the world, but their hearts get in the way and they get the surprise of their easy-going lives.

"The Young In Heart" is the most fascinating, most enjoyable and has the finest cast of stars ever to be assembled into a motion picture. Truly a grand film. See it you must. An excellent array of short subjects precede the above, and will be presented in advance of each showing, daily.

"Never Say Die" "Juvenile Court"

Martha Raye and Bob Hope, with Andy Devine and Alan Mowbray, are now playing at the McCarthy Theatre in the hilarious fun-hit "Never Say Die." Also playing as a companion feature, is the outstanding dramatic production "Juvenile Court" with Paul Kelly, Rita Hayworth and Frankie Darro and his gang heading an impressive and excellent cast. These two features are both ideal entertainment hits and for an evening of satisfying enjoyment, you will be well advised to see this show. In addition an interesting sport subject entitled "Play Ball" is also presented.

All Wet

By TERESA PARKER

If I'd cooked the bacon in the first place everything would have been all right. I went away down to Market street to get the special kind of imported bacon that Eddie likes. Sort of a surprise for his late supper. He likes it with lamb kidneys.

But when I got home Alice called up, and it seems there's something on her mind and only a "reading" can straighten it out. And Annie, too; she tells me there's something she wants to know, and won't I go to the medium's with them? I don't believe in that stuff myself, but I like Annie, and Alice and, if it will help her peace of mind, well, I figure I can go to the medium's and get back home before Eddie (this being his night at the lodge) and do everybody a favor.

But Annie had to put all her kids to bed—six of 'em. And Annie's husband didn't like the idea of her going to a medium.

I guess he knew what it was she wanted to know.

When we got there we had to stand on the stairs until somebody came out and made room for us to go in. And I didn't enjoy that very much, as I was wearing my new satin slippers, the ones with the spiked heels. I don't like spiked heels, anyway, and I would never have bought them if I'd known how long I was going to have to stand on those stairs.

It wasn't raining when we started for the medium's, just sort of drizzling, and I thought it would clear off, so I wore my new spring coat. Annie and Alice hadn't seen it before.

Before the medium was ready to read us, Alice was looking at the clock, and Annie was telling one of the attendants that she had left her six children to come, but the attendant didn't seem to mind, and there was nothing to do but wait.

And then our turn came, and we were the last three.

Annie first and then me and then Alice. We would have saved a little time if she'd put me last, because I wouldn't have waited. I don't believe in that stuff, although she told me the truth.

She said everybody thought Annie was a millionaire, and that pleased Annie, 'cause she had her diamond engagement ring up where it would show. She said I should have been a lawyer and that I was going to New York. She told Alice that no one could ever take the place of someone who had gone, and Alice cried and got her money's worth.

Then we got out and it was raining terrible. Annie wanted to take a taxi. I guess she felt like a millionaire after what the medium said. Alice didn't want a taxi, and I had to smooth matters over by saying there was a street car coming. We took it, and when we got to the end of the line, Alice had to take another car, and Annie and I had a long walk in the rain.

Annie said her husband might not let her in, so I had better go to her house and explain about standing on the stairs so long.

I felt sorry for Annie having such a cross husband and for Alice who had lost her husband. I was glad I had such a good husband who understood me.

So I went to Annie's to see that everything was all right there and then I started home alone. I just realized it was awful late, after midnight. I wasn't afraid. That is not afraid of anything in front of me, but I kept looking behind. You couldn't hear a step, it was raining so hard. And how the wind blew! I didn't mind. I knew I would find my Eddie when I got home and I wanted to be sympathized with. I was cold and wet.

When I got there I rang the bell. And Eddie opened the door. "Oh, darling," I said, "I'm ruined," showing him my rain-soaked slippers and listening for sympathy.

"Serves you right," he said, "running around a night like this."

"But, Eddie, dear," I said, trying to explain.

"I don't care where you've been," he yelled, "and I don't even want to know. But this partying out is a game I can play, too."

I couldn't say anything; I was so cold and wet and tired. I walked into the kitchen and I smelled the imported bacon. I knew Eddie had cooked his own supper and I just sat down in a chair and cried.

I had tried to please Alice by going to the medium's, and to please Annie by going to her house, and to please Eddie by going to Market street for the imported bacon, and everything was gone wrong.

I don't know how long I was crying when I decided I better take off the wet clothes. Then I felt the spiked heel slippers being slipped off my feet; first the right and then the left. Then Eddie took off my rainsoaked hat and put his arms around me.

"My poor little half-drowned kitten," he said, "and, gee, wasn't I glad I went to the medium's."

Little Benny's Note Book

Last night ma acted in a play to celebrate the anniversity of the Dawters of Cleopattera, and this morning we were eating breakfist and ma said to pop, Well Willyum, how was I? I mean I want your calm detached opinion just as though you were a professional critic and we didn't know each other personly from Adam and Eve, how was I, Willyum? she said.

You were marvellous, pop said, and ma said, Now Willyum I dont want you to exaggerate I realize I only had 2 words to speak and nobody can leep into undying fame with 2 words, so I just want you to be candid and give me your frank unalloyed reaction.

In that case I'll let you have it straight from the shoulder, you were superb, pop said, and ma said, I'm not vane and silly enough to imagine that I can make immortal history in my first and proberly my last performance, so if there's the slightest criticism I'm sure I can take it in a constructive spirit, so really and truly, Willyum, how was I?

As long as you put it that way I dont see how I can hold anything back, pop said, and ma said, That's precisely what I want, I'm not asking for any rediculous tissue of fullsome flattery, I want your unadorned opinion just as it formed itself in your own mind while the iron was hot, so really, Willyum, I mean really, how was I?

You were a combination of a knockout and a wow, pop said. You were terrific in the best sense of the word. Next to you the rest of the cast only existed in their own little overheated imaginations. That's about all I can say without inventing something just to make you feel good, and I know you dont want me to do that, he said, and ma said, Certainy not for land sakes, if that's your honest opinion, Willyum, it's good enough for me and I'm delighted to hear it.

I'm delighted to hold it, pop said, and he left for his office and ma called up all the other ladies in the play and they congradulated each other.

HEAVY SNOWFALL COVERS N. SCOTIA

7 Inches Deep at Halifax While Highway Traffic is Disrupted

Halifax, May 1 (CP)—A belated snowfall measuring from two inches up that covered parts of the Maritimes was melting today under a warm sun. It was one of the latest heavy falls on record in recent years.

At Truro, in the central part of Nova Scotia, 10 inches had fallen by midnight. New Glasgow, further east, reported seven inches and Halifax had the same.

The wet, heavy snow disrupted traffic on Nova Scotia highways and scores abandoned their automobiles.

One man drowned at Shelldrake Lake, a few miles from Halifax. Harold Clarke, 29, Halifax, and two others were fishing from a dory at Sheldrake Lake during the storm. The dory overturned and Clarke, a poor swimmer, drowned.

FLYING BOAT WRECKED, ONE OF CREW KILLED

London, May 1 (AP)—One crew member was killed and a wireless officer was reported missing today when the Imperial Airways flying boat Challenger was wrecked approaching Mozambique anchorage, the air company was informed by cablegram.

Three passengers and four other crew members were injured as the plane was wrecked in four feet of water at Mozambique, Southeast Africa. The Challenger was proceeding on a trip from Dar-es-Salaam to Durban, South Africa, at the time of the accident.

The Challenger inaugurated direct passenger and mail service between England and Australia in July 1938. The ship could carry 17 passengers and two tons of mail.

Madoc

Madoc—On Sunday morning Madoc Lodge I.O.O.F. and the Oakdale Rebekah Lodge attended Divine service in Trinity United Church, Madoc. The pastor Rev. I. E. Kennedy delivered a very inspiring address on "The Supremacy of Love" taking his text from the 13th chapter of 1st Corinthians. During the service the choir rendered an anthem "The First Psalm" by Lorenz. Visiting brethren were present from Havelock and Belleville.

Mr. and Mrs. Roy Taylor and Miss Elaine Taylor spent the week end with relatives in London, Ontario.

Mr. and Mrs. Walter Whytock visited friends in Campbellford on Sunday.

Mr. W. H. Brooks of Belleville visited at the home of his daughter Mrs. A. Smith on Sunday.

TORONTO STOCKS CLOSE

Toronto, May 2 (CP)—Prices bulged for moderate gains on increased trading volume today on the Toronto stock market and the close was generally firm. All indices were up, the mining and industrial groups gaining 1-2 to a full point in the index while the western oils were content with a smaller advance. Volume picked up to about 400,000 shares.

A few of the big golds changed hands in considerable volume. Hollinger and Wright - Hargreaves were active and a bit lower while Lake Shore and Dome firmed slightly. Augite traded close to 100,000 shares and touched 61 before dropping all but a cent or two of the gain under profit-taking. God's Lake also was active and higher. Base metals held about steady.

Gains of 5 to 8 cents were boarded by Home Oil and Calgary-Edmonton.

WALL STREET CLOSE

New York, May 2—(AP)—Stocks rallied 1 to 3 points in today's market, but light profit-taking chipped down top prices in late dealings. Volume was well above yesterday's session, second slowest in nearly five years, but real activity was lacking throughout. Near the final hour the ticker tape frequently was at a standstill. Transfers were about 500,000 shares.

Toronto Produce Prices Steady

Toronto, May 2—Generally steady prices ruled on the Toronto open produce market yesterday, according to the Dominion Department of Agriculture.

Offerings were in fair demand on the butter market, the trading was sufficient to keep fresh receipts, which were not arriving in heavy volume, clearing steadily. The market for Ontario creamery solids closed at 20¾c for No. 1 grades and 20c for 38 score. Some points were still endeavouring to obtain ½c above these levels with little success. Although sales were recorded at 21c. these were chiefly for high scoring butter.

Prints traded at the unchanged rates of 22½c to 23c for top grades.

Receipts were ample to cover requirements on the egg market. Activity in breaking operations at the present time appears to be absorbing any excess supplies. Prices in all sections remained at previous levels, but the market closed with an easier tendency. Graded shipments were quoted at 20½c for grade A-large, 19c for medium, 18c for B's and 17c for C grades.

Ontario Cheese 10¾c

Montreal, May 2—Butter and egg prices retreated narrowly on open markets here yesterday, the Dominion Department of Agriculture reported.

Creamery butter prints to retailers sold for 21½c to 22¼c a pound and solids for 21c to 21¾c.

Graded egg shipments in used free cases sold at 21½c a dozen for A-large; 20c for A-medium; 18½c to 19c for A-pullets; 19c to 19½c for B-large and 18c to 18½c for C. Receipts, 1585 cases.

Y's Men, Peterboro Entertained by The Local Club

Exchanging fraternal greetings across the festive board Y's Men from Peterborough and Belleville gathered at the Y.M.C.A. last evening in a joint meeting of Y'smendom for the purpose of discussion of mutual affairs and club projects.

A lengthy program was provided by the Belleville Club, as hosts while following the business meeting a social evening was held in the "Y" gymnasium, where dancing was held to the enchanting strains of an orchestra for the purpose of entertaining the visiting Peterboro' Y's Men. A bevy of Belleville's beautiful young ladies assisted in the entertainment, that was concluded with a buffet luncheon.

During the club meeting, however, Rev. J. W. Walker, of St. Andrew's Church, was the guest speaker of the evening and delivered an interesting discourse on the subject of "The Phenomena of Psychical Research" pertaining to the unaccountable reaction of the subconscious brain. The speaker was introduced by Y'sman Lorne McDougall.

Included on the splendid program were two readings by Miss Joan Maraskas; tap dancing by Miss Mary Forster's class, as introduced by Miss Tony Forster. The qurtette gof petite dancin lassies included Ruth Hagerman, Inez Forster, Mary Lou Pigden and Joyce Fraser. A clarinet quartette, consisting of Messrs. Ted Hinchey, R. Clapp, J. Cathcart and J. Mitchell, all members of the Belleville Municipal Band rendered three numbers, while the St. Andrew's quartette, consisting of Carne Bray, Les Wynne, Kenneth Sagar and Ernest Whittle sang two numbers of southern airs, while a violin solo by Y'sman Sid Bates rounded out the complete program. Mrs. Grace Leeman and Y'sman Alec Gordon acted as accompanists during the evening.

President Harold Vaughan occupied the chair while President James Goldie, of the Peterboro Y's Men's Club moved the vote of thanks to the speaker of the evening.

Mr. Justice McFarland today denied several defence motions for crown records. Mr. Justice McFarland ruled the defence was not entitled to the complete statements given police by John R. Shea and Joseph Smith, two of the crown witnesses. These, he said, were "utterly irrelevant" and of "no possible assistance to the defence."

Pictures Refused

The same ruling was made regarding the requested production of records of the five "lineups" of prisoners for identification purposes. Nor would the judge allow the production of police records on which a police circular was issued immediately after the crime.

His Lordship also left it with the jury to decide whether they wished later to visit the scene of the murder. He withheld decision regarding police statements obtained from eye-witnesses.

Joseph Smith, slight, dark-eyed friend of the MacDonalds, as first crown witness, told of meeting Mickey MacDonald, January 3 at 7.00 a.m. in a car driven by Bill Myronuk which later picked up Lew Gauthier, Marg Constable and Mickey's wife.

Got Ammunition.

Smith said Gauthier gave him $5 and asked him to get some ammunition.

At a Yonge street store he said he bought a box of .38 and a box of .45 bullets as well as some targets. He paid $4 for them and signed "Joseph Morton".

He gave the parcel of bullets to Gauthier and later that day, he, Mickey MacDonald and Gauthier went to the apartment of Jack Shea. Gauthier took the bullets with him.

Smith told of seeing a "small revolver with a brown handle" which was placed with the ammunition in a club bag. The crown produced a pistol and witness said it was somewhat similar to the one he saw Jan. 3.

HAILE SELASSIE

At first this staid old watering place did not take kindly to the residence of the Emperor and his staff, but now it has accepted the Negus and reports that he lacks money arouse indignant demands that the Foreign Office should do something about it.

The Emperor scarcely attracts attention when, clad in his long black cape and black hat, he goes for a stroll through the country lanes, or comes into Bath carrying a plain black umbrella. Among his treasures at the mansion is the gold and red ceremonial umbrella under which he sat in splendor in Addis Ababa.

Townsmen take note of his thrift. He usually rides a bus, leaving his car in the garage. He has an English chef, gardener and chauffeur, but the domestics are Ethiopians.

EXPULSION ORDERS

counties, responsible for the disclosure, maintain that the circulars, bearing imprint of a German consulate, constitute "undesirable pressure" on German nationals.

Prompt Action Taken

Four circulars fell recently into the hands of the authorities. One is an invitation to join the German labor front, with an attached slip asking for reasons if declined. Another gives advice to Germans as to how they should behave while in Britain. The third is a notice meetings in Manchester and Liverpool and finally an advertisement of a new Nazi publication in London.

Discovery of the circulars led to prompt action in the city's directly affected. Protests were published in the press and permission to hold the meeting cancelled.

"It looks like the end of 12 years work endeavoring to foster friendly Anglo-German relations," said E. Lahrmann, Lancashire leader of the the German National Socialist party. "Publicity has killed us," he added. "I'm sure German papers would not have treated a British organization in Germany in such a manner. The meetings were purely friendly, social gatherings and the police have been invited to attend."

Consul-General's View

Walter Reinhardt, German Consul-General at Liverpool , also thought the incident had been exaggerated out of all proportion to its importance.

Particular objection was taken to the appeal in behalf of the labor front which read in part:

"We look today full of pride at our fatherland and joyfully declare our faith in this new Reich and its Fuehrer. But it is only by the union of all of us that the great aims which Adolf Hitler has placed before himself and the nation can be carried out. We need each individual for this building up, including you, dear German abroad, you who are kept away from the community".

"EASY MONEY POLICY"

Ottawa, May 2 (CP) — Governor Graham Towers today defined the Bank of Canada's policy as "an easy money policy with seeds of inflation in it". Because of this policy taxes in recent years have been less than they otherwise would have been, Mr. Towers said to the House of Commons Banking Committee.

Meeting Will Consider Plan Of Transporting Scholars to See King, Queen at Kingston

Organization Meeting to Take Place at Y.M.C.A. Tuesday Evening — Citizens Are Urged to Attend

A meeting of all persons in Belleville, interested in a plan to transport the school children of Belleville to Kingston on Sunday, May 21st., when Their Majesties, King George Sixth and Queen Elizabeth will visit that city, has been called by Mr. Reg. Moncrieff for tomorrow, Tuesday, May 3rd., at 8.00 p.m. at the Y.M.C.A. Owing to the short time which remains between now and the visit, it is urgent that the meeting be a large and representative one and that organization be proceeded with at once.

Quick action will be necessary to make arrangements for accomodation, it is pointed out.

One of the most important matters to be taken up is the question of ample protection for the children so that the parents will have assurance that they will be safe in the large crowds which will be in Kingston on that day. This work will be made less onerous by the fact that the thoroughness of military and civil arrangements at Kingston will eliminate any possibility of confusion.

Mr. Moncrieff said today, "I have already reserved accomodation for 1,00 children of the public and separate schools of Belleville after talks with the Mayor of Kingston and the chairman of the children's committee. We can secure more space if we require it, I am assured. This stadium will hold about 20,000 children of the separate and public schools of Kingston and other cities and towns and will have an ideal view of the royal cortege as it passes. Collegiate students and adults from Belleville will be taken care of in fitting places along the route, for there are a number of open spaces of property along the route covered by the royal cortege.

Mr. Moncrieff noted that Picton, Napanee and Smith's Falls have already reserved space for scholars and that other towns are making arrangements.

The question of train accomodation is to be taken up at the meeting on Tuesday night. "If we can get enough persons to go, we can have a special train and it is possible that it may be placed on Pinnacle Street for the accomodation of the passengers. In a special train owing to the need of organization the scholars will be kept together in an organized group. Parents and others may also travel on the same train."

Other towns are taking advantage of the occasion and the facilities offered by Kingston for the people and particularly the young school children to see and pay homage to their King and Queen, and the scheme looks like a very worthy plan and deserving of the favorable consideration of the citizens of Belleville. The occasion will be historic for it is the first time in history on which a reigning King and Queen will visit Canada. Young people and school children especially will receive lasting impressions of this occasion. The arrangements at Kingston as indicated would show that from the standpoint of observation safety and comfort the provision made for the young school children are the best and are admirable in every detail.

In a day when the Royal family is a bulwark of security, tradition and freedom, it is essential that on this memorable occasion the children first of all should be provided with every comfort and facility so that they may see and pay their heart's tribute to Their Sovereigns.

REV. H. B. NEAL CHOSEN MINISTER FOR RENFREW PULPIT

Rev. H. B. Neal, pastor of St. John's United church, Campbellford, has been chosen on the first ballot as the new pastor of Trinity-St. Andrew's United Church, Renfrew, succeeding Rev. Dr. Arthur E. Runnells, formerly of Brockville who will leave that charge at the close of the conference year. Mr. Neal served overseas for three years during the Great War. He was formerly minister of Holloway Street United Church, Belleville.

WILL COMPETE FOR TROPHIES

The McLaughlin Trophy emblematic of the championship of club teams aggregating the highest point score during the season, and the Walker Hardware Trophy to be awarded to the rider giving the best seasonal individual performance will be competed for this year for the first time in seven seasons, officials of the Quinte Motorcycle Club announced today.

The first rally of the club will be held during the first week in May, in which will be featured a cross-country run that will culminate at Holloway.

Work on the new cinder track on the grounds formerly owned by the University of Toronto near the Cannifton Road will be started this week officials stated.

Berlin, May 2 (AP)—Nazi officials said today that Slovakia was discussed, among other matters, during a three-day state visit of two Hungarian officials, Premier Count Teleki and Foreign Minister Count Csaky. The Hungarians left Berlin today. Government authorities refused to commit themselves beyond the statement that "Naturally Slovakia was talked about, too." What agreements, if any, were made to bring nominally independent Slovakia more closely into line with Hungary probably will remain secret for some time.

Istanbul, Turkey, May 2 (AP)—A special train carrying exiled King Zog of Albania, Queen Geraldine, the baby Prince Skander and the king's sisters was expected to arrive here tonight. Queen Geraldine was reported from Athens to have recovered fully from fever induced by her flight from Albania April 7, ahead of invading Italian forces, two days after the birth of Prince Skander.

ALBERT COLLEGE

had never missed a Board meeting in the four years he had acted in that capacity, it was told. Of his interest in the College and his worth to further the interest of this school, the Rev. Mr. Howard spoke feelingly.

"It was a great shock to hear of his death and every member of the faculty, every student, is going to miss him greatly."

The bequest left by the late Mr. Morrow will not be made immediately available, but will depend upon the present beneficiaries of the estate, it was pointed out.

The estate left by the late financier and friend of the College amounts to $1,062,693.75, includes: cash $33,656.76; bonds $23,344.52; stocks $894,332; life insurance, $79,430.71; real estate $16,352; and other assets $15,577.76.

Details of Will

Immediate cash bequests of a substantial amount are made to relatives and friends, and the following for charities: Peterborough Protestant Home $1,000; Peterborough Young Women's Christian Association $1,000; Peterborough Young Men's Christian Association $500; Roman Catholic House of Providence, East City, Peterborough $500; The Red Cross Society of Canada $5,000. The executors are authorized to make a substantial contribution to Trinity Church Peterborough towards the cost of a new Sunday School building, subject to certain conditions.

The remainder of the estate is to be held in trust to provide for annuities to relatives and, thereafter, cash legacies are to be paid to Victoria University, Toronto, $50,-00; Albert College, Belleville $25,000 and to the Peterborough Public Library Board $5,000.

Missionary Fund

The trustees are then to set up a fund of $25,000, the net income from which is to be paid to the Missionary and Maintenance Fund of the United Church of Canada for 25 years, after which the capital is to be paid to the United Church as an endowment for missionary and maintenance work; a fund of $100,000, the net income from which is to be paid the Trinity United Church, Peterborough; and a scholarship fund of $25,000 for the benefit of students of the collegiate institute and public schools in Peterborough to be administered by the trustees with the help of an advisory committee consisting of the Chairman of the Peterborough Board of Education and the Principal of the Peterborough Collegiate Institute for the time being.

The whole remainder of the estate is to be held in trust for charitable and educational purposes beneficial to the city of Peterborough and in this connection the trustees are to associate with themselves an advisory committee of the Mayor of Peterborough, the Senior Judge of the County Court of the County of Peterborough and the Chairman of the Peterborough Board of Education.

The testator suggests that part of the money might be used to help towards the cost of erecting a city hall or proper municipal buildings for the city of Peterborough, provided that such expenditure would be deemed one for a legal charitable purpose.

REV. HAROLD REID INDUCTED INTO OSHAWA CHURCH

Former Belleville Boy Takes Over Duties of Knox Presbyterian Church

Moderator of the Toronto Presbytery, Rev. Dr. R. G. Stewart of Toronto, inducted the Rev. W. H. Reid, formerly of this city, into the pastoral duties of Knox Presbyterian Church at Oshawa. Among the large crowd present to witness the induction ceremonies were many from Belleville and district points.

Rev. Neil Miller of Brampton, delivered a brief sermon prior to the induction and pointed out there was no other profession but the ministry which gave many any better opportunity of helping his fellows.

Rev. J. B. Skene, Presbytery clerk, told the congregation that the announcement of Rev. H. Reid's induction had been duly received by the Presbytery, and according to the laws of the church, everything was in order for the induction.

Rev. Dr. Stewart then carried out the impressive ceremony assisted by members of the Presbytery.

King's Efficiency Medal Awarded to Chaplain

Major, the Rev. W. T. Keough, Rewarded for Twenty Years Efficient Service

Major the Rev. W. T. Keough, M.A. has lately been the recipient from the Department of Militia conveyed through Lt.-Col. G. D. Gillie M.C., O.C. of the S.D. & G. Highlanders the King's Efficiency Medal granted for twenty years or over of efficient service.

Major Keough first served in the militia during two years of his course in Toronto University as a private in the old University or better known as K. Co. of the Queen's Own Rifles of Toronto. But his real service began in 1915 when he was placed on the staff of officers of the 154th O-S battalion Highlanders then being raised in the counties of Stormont, Dundas and Glengary. Qualifying at the Provisional school of Infantry at Kingston he recruited the 6th platoon at Winchester, Ont., and as their officer went overseas with the battalion in 1916.

When it became evident that on account of his age he would not be sent to France as a combatant he transferred to the Chaplain service and after a year as Chaplain of the Sixth Reserve Battalion he was sent to France in 1917 where he served in several positions on the lines of communication finally being appointed as Chaplain of the Fort Gary Horse in the Canadian Cavalry Brigade with which unit he was in the Mons area when the Armistice came.

Returning to Canada he was finally discharged in August 1919 and when the 154th became the S.D. & G. Highlanders in the militia reorganization he was appointed Chaplain with the rank of Major. This position he held until November 1937 when he was placed on the retired list with twenty-seven years of service.

During the years he was Chaplain of the S.D. & G's, Major Keough was a familiar figure at the annual camps at Barriefield where in addition to the duties in his own unit he had charge of the camp recreation hut. Coming up each year with the advanced party of his battalion he had the hut opened the first night the battalions arrived in camp, equipped with piano, radio, travelling library, stationery, pens ink, etc. and stacks of the best magazines. During the evenings of the camp he also procured the machine and films for two hours of moving pictures each evening.

Major Keough was forced some years ago to retire from the active ministry on account of disabilities incurred in war service and has been for the past ten years in charge of the United Church of Point Anne Circuit.

Police Blotter

Receiving information that four coloured people were seen proceeding westerly along Highway No. 2 west of Belleville, Provincial and City police today hastened to check up on the information. Later a dilapidated coupe was accosted, in which were riding two coloured men and two residents of Peterborough The latter two had given the colored men a lift from Trenton.

District police are still seeking the whereabouts of four colored persons, two of them women, wanted in New Jersey for robbery. Constable Ellis and Provincial Constables Stark and Carruthers took the four persons apprehended today, in for questioning. Later the men established their identity, all being Canadians. They were permitted their liberty. The driver of the vehicle immediately dismissed the two colored men from his company. I don't want to be stopped by police in every town along the line, where police might be seeking these American negroes" lamented the Peterborough motorist.

John Bunnett, 164 Charles Street reported running over and killing a Boston bull pup yesterday. The canine ran beneath the wheels of Mr. Bunnett's car on John Street. The city scavenger was instructed to remove the carcass.

MRS. A. MCDONALD

ings, employees of Mrs McDonald in the "Adeline Beauty Shop" and Mrs. Lily Mains, a friend, have given statements to police. Miss Bowen and Mrs. Mains had planned to attend a moving picture with Mrs. McDonald last night and were on the way to the beauty parlor to meet her when they encountered McDonald on the street. With him they went to the shop and found the body.

An inquest was to be opened late today.

Mystery Surrounds Death

Almost complete mystery surrounded the death of Mrs. McDonald, 29-year-old brunette who in 1930 was crowned "Miss Chatham" in a beauty contest. Chief Bagnall clamped a tight censorship on anything having to do with the shooting.

A curious crowd stood outside the beauty shop where girl employees found Mrs. McDonald's body late last night. Mrs. McDonald, whose shop was well patronized, was among Chatham's most popular young women.

A .22 calibre rifle was found beside the body and it was believed only one shot had been fired, entering the body close to the heart. Chief Bagnall would not say whether he believed the case was one of suicide or of murder.

McDonald, swarthy and handsome, is a shipping-room employee of a Chatham firm. For several years he was employed as chauffeur by Mrs. L. L. Lewis, widow of a prominent Chatham lawyer.

Once Beauty Queen

Mrs McDonald was Adeline Lane when she was declared Chatham's beauty queen nine years ago at a ball in the Armouries. Since then she had made a name as a business woman. She and her husband were to be seen frequently where Chatham's younger set gathered, always driving in a bright-colored roadster.

Chief Bagnall said a pathological examination would have to be made before a decision could be reached regarding the possibility of an inquest. Meanwhile the body was taken to a funeral establishment. The body, found in the drying room of the shop, was not disarrayed and there was no sign of disorder in the room.

Mrs. McDonald, it was learned, had planned to attend a moving picture with employees of the shop last night. The place was in darkness when they arrived to meet her. Turning on a light, they ran screaming from the shop on discovery of the body.

Crookston Man Convicted of Theft of House

Madoc, May 2—(Special)—Charles Blair, Crookston, was convicted of the theft of a house, when he appeared in County Police Court held here before Magistrate J. L. Lloyd yesterday. Blair was given a year's suspended sentence and ordered to pay the costs of the court proceedings, besides making restitution to the amount of $50.00. The house in question was said to have been the property of Oscar Storring, a neighbor of Blair's.

Blair claimed he had paid part of the purchase price of the house in May of 1936, but this was discounted by Storring. "You certainly tried a high-handed piece of business by taking the house, even if certain deals had been made between you and Mr. Storring", commented Crown Attorney B. C. Donnan K.C., in addressing the accused. Considerable conflicting evidence was adduced regarding the exchange of certain goods and chattels between the parties concerned.

Magistrate Lloyd agreed with Mr. Donnan that Blair actually stole the house. "If Storring owned $49.75 worth of the $50 house, you certainly had no right to take it, without making a settlement with him. As you have made restitution and as you have a large family I place you on suspended sentence for one year."

GAME INSPECTOR RESUMES DUTIES

Game and Fisheries Inspector Herbert McCabe resumed his duties in this district today according to an official announcement received from the department.

Interviewed this morning Inspector McCabe told the Ontario Intelligencer in confirming the announcement, that he was completely exonerated from all so called charges that were brought against him.

DON CLARKE HONORED BY MEN'S BIBLE CLASS

Parting tribute to a valued member of their organization was paid last night in Dickens Restaurant by members of Bridge Street United Church Young Men's Bible Class, when they gathered to extend good wishes to Don Clark, son of Mr. and Mrs. Ted Clark, Bridge Street east, and a member of the R.C.A.F. who has been transferred from the Trenton base to Camp Borden.

Songs and speeches enlivened the proceedings after twenty-five members sat down to dinner. The function was presided over by the class President Perry Everett. Brief addresses were made by Mr. P. S. Deacon, class teacher, Mr. Everett and others. Guests included Messrs. Ralph Morden and Kenneth Munnings.

"Too Close to Keep Quiet" Says Witness Shea at Trial

Decides to 'Tell All' Connected With Windsor Slaying

Self - Admitted Criminal Undergoes Grilling Cross-Examination by Frank Regan, Defence Counsel

"LOOKED EXCITED"

Words Used by Witness in Describing Condition of MacDonald Brothers on Return to His Flat

By WILLIAM H. HOGG
Canadian Press Staf fWriter

Toronto, May 3—(CP)— Under grilling cross-examination, John R. Shea told an assize court jury today why he had decided to "tell all" in connection with the slaying of bookmaker James Windsor. She is a star crown witness at the trial of Mickey and Alex MacDonald, Toronto brothers who are alleged to have slain Windsor in his North Toronto home the night of Jan. 7.

Shea, a former Montrealer and self-admitted criminal, said it was "worry over this murder" that prompted his voluntary statements to the police after he was picked up Jan. 21 for bank robbery.

"I figured I would be charged with the Windsor slaying if I didn't talk while I had the opportunity." He added that, despite his innocence of the murder, he was "too close to keep quiet."

Yesterday, John R. Shea, a former Montreal with a police record and now held for banditry, quoted Mickey MacDonald as saying he had "just killed a man" about an hour after bookmaker Jimmy Wind-

THE WEATHER

Toronto, May 3—(CP)—The weather has been for the most part fair in all provinces; rather cool in Eastern Canada with above normal temperature in the west, though it is somewhat cooler this morning in Manitoba and East Saskatchewan. Pressure is high over the Great Lakes and southeast states with a disturbance developing off the middle Atlantic coast and a shallow low is moving eastward from the Rainy River district.

Lake Superior—Moderate to fresh southeast to southwest winds; fair and a little warmer. Thursday — Fresh shifting winds; partly cloudy with moderate temperature and light scattered showers.

Manitoba—Fair and somewhat cooler today and Thursday.

Saskatchewan—Fair today. Thursday—Fair and moderately warm.

Alberta—Fair and warm today and Thursday.

Why the Weather!

Science Service Meteorologist

Fishing weather! What weather pleases a trout well enough to to make him rise—to make him reckless? There are so many weather factors to consider that it is only an acute fisherman-observer whose opinion is worthwhile. Many fishermen state that fishing is good when the wind is in the right direction, but the righ wind seems to be different at different times and places. It appears that the opinion of most value states that trout rise best just after a storm has passed and the barometer is rising. Before a storm all nature is sluggish; a storm revives everything, churns the water, and the trout feel this awakening and recklessly rise to your flies.

KEROSENE CAN EXPLODES HOME OWNER WILL RECOVER

Summerside, P.E.I., May 3 (CP) —Gus Richard started out to light the kitchen stove at his home in Fifteen Point with the help of a can of kerosene. Hospital authorities here said he would recover from severe burns.

LONDON-PARIS AIR PASSENGERS JUST GET SNACKS NOW

London, May 3 (CP)—Those who fly and eat between London and Paris don't get the meals they once did—there isn't time. In the old days of slower schedules passengers sat in the great Heracles type planes and ate five-course lunches. Now a schedule reduced to 70 minutes has cut the meals to snacks.

FORGETTING TO WEAR HEAVY BOOTS SAVED MAN'S LIFE

Windsor, N.S., May 3 (CP) — Edward Clarke left his boots home, and that's what saved his life. He swam to shore when he fell off his fishing boat in the Aven River, but he said later that if he hadn't forgetten his heavy sea boots, they would have carried him to the bottom.

CASH AND CARRY CLAUSE URGED

Roosevelt Likely to Use This Means of Answering Hitler

Washington, May 3 (AP)—Recommendations for a new "cash and carry" neutrality law will constitute President Roosevelt's only reply to Chancellor Hitler's Reichstag speech, authoritative quarters said today.

After some discussion among federal officials, it was learned, the President gave up the idea of making a "fireside chat" or issuing a statement in rebuttal.

However, Cordell Hull, Secretary of State, is preparing an outline of administration views on neutrality to be made before the Senate Foreign Relations Committee next Monday or Tuesday.

It is the result of a long meeting between Mr. Hull and his principal advisers at the State Department Monday evening.

Reliable sources said the Secretary of State would support the Pittman Neutrality Bill, which would extend the "cash and carry" principal so as to cover sale of arms and munitions to warring nations.

This would be in the nature of a reply to Hitler, officials explained, because it would make United States arms available to Great Britain and France, who presumably would control the seas in a European war and who would have the necessary cash to pay for supplies. At present arms shipments are automatically forbidden the moment the president invokes the neutrality law.

PREDICTED BECK WILL ANSWER 'NO' TO ALL DEMANDS

148TH ANNIVERSARY

Poland's First Constitution Was Drawn 148 Years Ago

Warsaw, May 3—(AP)— Cries of "down with Hitler" mingled with cheers for Polish troops parading through Warsaw today in the capital's celebration of the 148th anniversary of Poland's first constitution.

There were other shouts of "hurrah for Polish Danzig!" and "East Prussia must be Polish!"

(East Prussia is a part of Germany separated from the Reich proper by the Polish Corridor. Both Germany and Poland have claims concerning the Free City of Danzig, at the head of the Corridor.)

Crowds jammed sidewalks along the eight-mile route of the parade and threw flowers at the cavalry units and groups of mechanized weapons.

On Small Scale

The traditional army parades of the occasion were on a smaller scale than usual because so many soldiers were on duty at frontier posts.

Instead of holding the usual reception at the presidential palace, President Ignace Moscicki was busy issuing a decree permitting extension of manoeuvres for reserve officers from four to 10 weeks and attending like duties.

Foreign Minister Joseph Beck completed the draft of the speech in which he will reply before parliament to Chancellor Hitler's renunciation of the Polish non-aggression treaty, and deal with German demands for Danzig and a 15-mile-wide German road across the Polish Corridor.

The reply will be delivered at noon (7 a.m., EDT) Friday and will be a 30-minute address. Arrangements were made to broadcast it in several languages, including English with a special transmission to North America.

The press predicted Beck would answer Hitler's demands with a clear "no" but there was no indication he would join the opposition press in demanding a protectorate over the Free City of Danzig.

VETERANS ASSIGNED TO GUARD DUTY

Under the supervision of the Ontario Provincial Police twenty-eight Great War veterans have been assigned to guard duty during the period when their Majesties' royal train passes through Hastings County. The war veterans under the supervision of the Provincial Police will guard railway crossings and sections of track in the county only, the matter of city guard duty being left solely in the hands of the local Veterans' Associations. The Provincial Police obtained the names of the 28 ex-service men through the local Veterans' Clubs.

Constable Canning of Scotland Yard Feared by Spies and Law Breakers

Ottawa, May 3—(CP)— Feared by spies, terrorists and law breakers in general, Chief Constable Albert Canning of Scotland Yard is in Ottawa today co-operating with the Royal Canadian Mounted Police in plans for guarding the King and Queen during their tour of Canada.

The assignment is almost routine to the Yard's youngest chief. Ever since he joined the force in 1909 at the age of 20 he has been connected with the special branch whose principal function is to "guard the security of the state."

While the responsibility of protecting the royal couple in Canada is primarily that of the R.C.M.P. The co-operation of Inspector Canning was received gratefully.

Three weeks before Their Majesties were due to sail for Canada, Canning left London for New York where he went into a "huddle" with the authorities in charge of the royal program in the United States. With New York and Washington Police Chiefs he went over every foot of the routes to be traversed by Their Majesties and checked over arrangements made for keeping the crowds under control. A longer conference is being held in Ottawa to review protective plans for the coast-to-coast Canadian journey.

Only once in his long career has anything happened even remotely to approach an "incident". That was back in July, 1936, when an onlooker tossed a loaded revolver near King Edward VIII.

Canning is noted for his phenomenal memory, especially for faces. A number of international crooks have discovered that to their sorrow. They have been picked up on the streets of London often through Canning's ability of recognizing them from photos he viewed years ago.

Immediate Family of King To Accompany Royal Couple On Train to Portsmouth

London, May 3—(CP)—All members of their immediate family in England will accompany the King and Queen when they leave London Saturday to begin their precedent-creating journey to Canada.

Official details of the departure issued from Buckingham Palace showed that Queen Mary, the Duke and Duchess of Gloucester, the Duke and Duchess of Kent and the Princesses, Elizabeth and Margaret Rose, will accompany Their Majesties on their royal train.

As the train pulls out of Waterloo Station at 12:45 p.m. for Portsmouth, 72 Canadian ex-servicemen wearing civilian dress with medals, black berets with a green maple leaf and badges of their war-time units, will cheer Their Majesties.

A captain's escort of life guards will escort the King and Queen to the station where Prime Minister Chamberlain, Foreign Secretary Viscount Halifax; Joseph Kennedy, the United States Ambassador, and other distinguished figures will say farewell. Hon. Vincent Massey, Canadian High Commissioner in London, will travel aboard the royal train to Portsmouth where the King and Queen will be received by Lord Mottistone, Lord Lieutenant of Hampshire, and Portsmouth town authorities.

After inspecting a guard of honor of the King's Own Scottish Borderers and receiving the keys to the fortress of Portsmouth, the King and Queen will drive by automobile to the south railway jetty, where they will be welcomed by Admiral of the Fleet the Earl of Cork and Orrey; Rear-Admiral Robert R. Turner, Superintendent of Portsmouth dockyard; Lieut.-General Archibald P. Wavell, southern commander; and Air Marshal Sir F. Boemhill, air officer in charge of the coastal command.

Admiral Sir Reginald Plunkett-Ernle-Erle-Drax, first and principal naval aide-de-camp to the King, will be in attendance.

The Empress of Australia will sail for Canada at 3 p.m.

NON-AGGRESSION PACTS OFFERED TO 4 COUNTRIES

Denmark, Sweden, Norway and Finland Given Overtures by Germany

IDENTICAL PACTS

By LOUIS LOCHNER

Berlin, May 3—(AP)—Chancellor Hitler today sought to form a neutral bloc of at least six nations extending across northern Europe.

The German leader offered identical non-aggression pacts to Denmark, Norway, Sweden and Finland, made similar approaches to Latvia and Estonia and there were strong reasons to believe that pro-

EASTERN MAN IS MODERATOR

Rev. C. E. Kidd, of Gananoque, Heads Synod of Presbyterian Church

Toronto, May 3 (CP)—Rev. C. E. Kidd of St. Andrew's Church, Gananoque, last night was elected Moderator of the Synod of Toronto and Kingston of the Presbyterian Church in Canada. He succeeds Rev. R. G. Stewart, Pastor of St. John's Presbyterian Church, Broadview Avenue, where the three-day session is being held.

Mr. Kidd has served in the Kingston Presbytery for 23 years. He was born at Carleton Place and ordained in Vancouver. For many years he was engaged in home mission work on the Pacific coast and in the Yukon.

"Having chosen one from the last places in the Synod, you have honored my little congregation, my little town, and the Presbytery," he laughed.

High Commissioner Gives Private Dinner For King and Queen

London, May 3 (CP)—The King and Queen were guests last night at a private dinner given by Hon. Vincent Massey, Canadian High Commissioner, and Mrs. Massey, at their home.

A trooper of the Royal Canadian Mounted Police, clad in a scarlet uniform, stood guard at the doorway as Mr. and Mrs. Massey greeted their guests. The King was in evening clothes while the Queen wore a white crinoline gown embroidered with paillettes, and a diamond tiara.

Sightseers gathered in driving rain about the home to see the King and Queen.

It was the first time their Majesties had been the dinner guests of any Dominion High Commissioner.

MEMBER URGES MINIMUM WHEAT PRICE OF 87 1-2C

E. E. Perley Advocates it Would Stabilize the Industry

NIGHT SITTING

Ottawa, May 3—(CP)—Stability and security in Canada's western agricultural industry would be attained by setting a minimum wheat price of 87 1-2 cents a bushel for several years, in the view of E. E. Perley, lone Conservative member of the House of Commons from the prairies.

Such a price—or a price determined by a comprehensive sub-committee of the Bracken western markets conference—would not only stabilize the industry but would result in the employment of 200,000 additional men on western farms, in the opinion of the Qu'Appelle member.

His plan was laid before the House of Commons last night as a constructive suggestion during the continuation of the budget debate, during which wheat persisted as the centre of attention.

Employ More Men

"Unemployment would disappear if the government set the price of wheat at a reasonable level, say 87 cents or higher," he said. "You would employ hundreds of thousands more men."

REICH APPROVES ISLANDS' DEFENCE

Sweden and Finland Allowed to Guard Narrow Entrance

Stockholm, May 3 (CP)—The German government yesterday approved plans for Sweden and Finland to defend the Aaland Islands which guard the narrow entrance to the Gulf of Bothnia, northern extension of the Baltic Sea.

Great Britain gave similar approval Feb. 15 after reports Soviet Russia had objected to the defence plans on the ground neither Finland nor Sweden were strong enough to hold the islands against aggression.

Seizure of the Aalands, midway between Sweden and Finland, by a major power might be a menace to Leningrad, Russia's western port.

The islands, which lie in the Baltic between Sweden and Finland, are under the latter's sovereignty. An agreement between the two powers at Stockhalm Jan. 8 modified a 1921 international convention, which decreed the territorial would be perpetually unfortified.

The plan gives Finland the right to take certain military measures, including conscription. The accord is subject to approval by the signatories of the 1921 convention, which included Great Britain, France, Italy and all the Baltic States except Soviet Russia. Germany was not a signatory.

POLICE PIERCING FACTS TOGETHER OF WOMAN'S DEATH

Mrs. Adeline McDonald is Alleged to Have Met Husband at Bus Terminal

MYSTERY UNSOLVED

Organs of the Woman's Body Taken to Toronto for Analysis by Dr. Erb

Chatham, Ont., May 3—(CP) — Crown Attorney A. Douglas Bell said today that police authorities have not solved the mystery of the death of Mrs. Adeline McDonald, 29-year-old beauty-parlor operator found shot to death in her shop Monday.

"It is now a case of piecing together certain facts to reconstruct the picture of the tragedy," the Crown Attorney said.

The woman's 32-year-old husband, Charles McDonald, remained in jail on a vagrancy charge. Dr. W. Smirle Lawson, Chief Consulting Coroner for Ontario, Dr. I. H. Erb of the Ontario Attorney-General's Department and Inspector Charles E. Burnett of Provincial Police returned to Toronto early today after aiding in the probe.

With him Dr. Erb took certain organs from the woman's body. Results of his autopsy will be disclosed at the inquest, to be resumed at the call of the Crown Attorney.

In Windsor Sunday

Acquaintances said Mrs. McDonald returned to Chatham by bus Sunday night after a Windsor visit and her husband met her at the terminal. There they talked at length, it was said.

Mrs. McDonald, who was crowned Chatham's beauty queen in 1929, planned to go to a moving picture Monday night with a friend, Mrs. Lily Mains, and two girls employed in the beauty shop, Pearl Hastings and Frances Bowen. They were to have met at the shop and Miss Bowen was the first of the three to arrive, meeting McDonald coming from the darkened shop.

"Don't go in there," McDonald was reported to have said. "Adeline is crying."

Miss Bowen met Miss Hastings and Mrs. Mains along the street, when they returned to the shop, McDonald was approaching with some bottled soft drinks, it was said.

He had no key to the automatic lock and asked Miss Bowen to open the door, acquaintances reported. When they went in McDonald turned on a light and found the body of his wife on the floor, a rifle beside it.

MAY 22nd WILL LIKELY BE GENERAL HOLIDAY

Other cities of the Province have followed the lead of Belleville city council in the naming of May 22nd, as a public holiday for the observance of the time honored date of May 24th, Victoria Day. Retail merchants of Toronto and the manufacturing industries of that city will it is expected, observe Monday, May 22nd, instead of May 24th, and Mayor Day has proclaimed the earlier date as a public holiday in Toronto.

Port Hope will observe May 22nd. as a full holiday, and merchants of Oshawa have asked that city council to so proclaim the earlier date as a public holiday.

Non-Stop Commercial Air Service Between Cities May Soon Function

New York, May 3—(CP)— Brig.-General Vladimir Kokkinaki, whose attempted flight from Moscow to New York failed by 650 miles, believes a non-stop commercial air service between the two cities may be functioning "in a comparatively brief time."

In the first detailed account of the flight which ended at Miscou Island, New Brunswick, last Friday, the aviator last night told the press his trip was undertaken in an effort to explore the Moscow to New York route for the possible establishment of regular commercial air travel. He felt his experience demonstrated the plan was entirely feasible with the elimination of a few obstacles.

General Kokkinaki said his speeds for the approximately 4,000 miles he flew before coming down in Canada averaged from 165 to 225 miles an hour, and that his altitude ranged from 17,000 feet to more than 29,000 feet. It was the first high-altitude crossing of the Atlantic Ocean, he pointed out, and proved conclusively, in his opinion, that the future of long-distance flying is in high altitudes.

The flight also showed, he said, that weather services know little of winds and velocities in the higher atmospheres and that scientists would have to give attention to food values in these unusual altitudes because of their exaggerated effect upon the senses and taste.

Premier Denies Britain Aims At Encirclement

Italy and Germany if Willing to Participate in Anti-Aggression Front May Do So by Concurring

British Cabinet Reported to Have Rejected Russian Proposal for Joint Guarantee on Two Seas

By J. F. SANDERSON
Canadian Press Staff Writer

London, May 3—(CP Cable)—Germany and Italy would not be excluded from Europe's anti-aggression front if they showed willingness to participate in the general objective of the scheme, Prime Minister Chamberlain indicated in the House of Commons today.

The Prime Minister was asked by Arthur Henderson, Labor, "whether in view of the fact that Herr Hitler has recently charged His Majesty's government with having adopted a policy of encircling Germany and that guarantees on a reciprocal basis were proposed by President Roosevelt in his recent peace appeal, His Majesty's government would be willing to give a guarantee to Germany similar to that given Poland on a reciprocal basis."

No Encirclement

"In recent statements I have made it clear there is no foundation whatsoever for the charge that the British government have adopted a policy of encircling Germany," the Prime Minister replied. "What President Roosevelt proposed and what I understand Herr Hitler to offer is an exchange of assurances of non-aggression rather than a guarantee on a reciprocal basis such as recently was given Poland.

"The British government are certainly ready to consider proposals for an exchange of reciprocal assurances with the German government."

Mr. Chamberlain smiled and gave an inaudible reply when Mr. Henderson asked if the government

BASIL SHIPMAN, ESCOTT, KILLED

Riding on Rear of Truck and Struck on Head by Trees

Brockville, Ont., May 3 (CP) — Basil Shipman, about 32, of Escott, was killed today when a truck upon the rear of which he was riding entered a shallow ravine alongside a road leading to Butternut Bay, seven miles west of here, and struck some trees. Shipman was crushed about the head.

Shipman was riding on the rear of a truck driven by Kenneth Allan, also of Escott. With him were Fred Guild, Murray Reid and John Campbell. The party was on their way to work on the new dual highway under construction alongside the St. Lawrence west of here. Guild suffered bruises of the arm and Reid received an injured shoulder. The other men escaped injury.

The accident was attributed to the front wheels of the truck locking as it was ascending a steep grade on the sideroad. Shipman was married and leaves one child.

International Briefs

Rome, May 3 (AP)—Italy and Albania entered into a close customs union under a treaty published today. The pact, negotiated April 20 after Italian occupation of Albania, provides for the elimination of customs duties between Italy and Albania, application of Italian tariff schedules to commerce between Albania and foreign countries, administration of Albania customs by the Italian officials and extension to Albania of Italian laws controlling currency and foreign exchange.

Moscow, May 3 (AP)—The Russian Black Sea fleet today completed spring manoeuvres which Commander-in-Chief P S. Ochiabrsky said "proved unquestionably the high military preparedness" of the fleet.

"In the very complicated situation in which our country finds itself, amidst the aggressive action of a number of capitalist countries, the Black Sea fleet always is ready to fulfil up to the end any order of the great Stalin," said the commander-in-chief.

Moscow, May 3 (AP)—Soviet Russia's new Italian-built 2,895-ton destroyer Tashkend, was delivered formally at Odessa today. Guido Relli, Attache of the Italian Embassy in Moscow, represented Premier Mussolini's government in the transfer from Italian to Soviet hands.

Berlin, May 3 (AP)—Posters a yard high warning against espionage appeared on Berlin's subway station walls today. Titled, "Defence Againsa Espoinage", the posters explained what foreign spies sought, and warned that any attempt at espionage, even if unsuccessful, was punishable by death.

Ottawa, May 3 (CP)—Value of arms, ammunition, implements or munitions of war exported from Canada under 25 permits issued by the Department of National Revenue totalled $184,369 in April, the department reported today.

Principal shipments consisted of propellant powders totalling $94,272, exported to the Newfoundland, and high explosives valued at $45,120 to the United Kingdom. Aircraft parts totalled $43,420 of which $40,450 went to the United Kingdom and $2,880 to the United States.

Budapest, May 3 (AP)—Legislation limiting participation by Jews in business and professions was adopted in final form today by the Hungarian parliament.

Broadly speaking, the participation of Jews in business and professions was limited to six to twelve per cent of the total number of persons engaged in the various callings.

Some occupations were closed entirely to Jews. They are not to be allowed in public or government service, or to hold leading positions in journalism, the theatre or movies.

HIGHWAYS EMPLOYEES ONLY ARE WORKING ON ROAD EAST OF CITY

Men working at repairing No. 2 Highway in the vicinity of Marysville and between that point and the city limits have not been placed through the medium of the local Employment Office, Superintendent William Ross stated today.

For the past few days his office has been deluged with calls and applications for work on this project, he added.

As far as can be ascertained, men working on that part of the highway are Department of Highways employees and in no way connected with relief or employmnet rolls of the city, Mr. Ross declared.

MAY DAY MOVING WAS NOT SO BUSY AS IN OTHER YEARS

May 1st, proverbial moving day for residents of Belleville as well as other cities of the country, saw local movers busy, "but not as busy as we have been in other years," it was reported by one firm.

Of late years more attention has been paid to better packing and planning by the families intending to change locations, and the job is carried out much more efficiently and speedily, it was pointed out. In these present days of family owned cars, much of the moving is done by the private automobile, and only the larger and heavier pieces remain for the truckers.

This year considerable moving has been undertaken of effects of families from outside points to Belleville, and local real estate firms report considerable activity in sales and rentals.

DOG IS FOUND IN CHICKEN COOP

Found in a chicken coop on Bleecker Ave., a black spaniel dog, of the short hair variety, was captured and given into the custody of Thos. Thorne, city dog pound custodian, yesterday. The canine was attempting to destroy chickens in the coop when discovered. There was no dog licence attached the animal, which will subsequently be destroyed if not claimed within the conventional custody period of 48 hours, Mr. Thorne announced today.

ANGLERS TO COMPETE IN CASTING TOURNEY

Culminating a season of fly and plug casting activities in the Armouries, members of the Belleville Anglers' Association will compete in a casting tournament at the Armouries this evening, President J. E. Shortt announced today. The general public is invited to be present and witness the exhibitions of casting. Both plug and fly casting will be included in the tournament, Chairman Fred Croft added.

VETERAN CELEBRATES HIS 85th BIRTHDAY

Said to be one of the oldest veterans in this vicinity, ex-Sergeant-Major William Aris, Pinnacle street resident today celebrates the eighty-fifth anniversary of his birth.

Mr. Aris is an honorary member of the Army and Navy Veterans in Canada, Belleville Branch No. 201 and was for a large number of years connected with the Argyll Light Infantry before that unit was transformed into a tank battalion.

Mr. Aris saw service in the North-West Rebellion over fifty-three years ago, and since that time has always had some direct or indirect connection with things military. His many ex-service and soldier friends today extend their congratulations on his attainment of a grand old age.

BISHOP MARSHALL RESIGNS PULPIT AFTER 20 YEARS

Rector of Emmanuel Church to be Succeeded in August by Rev. S. R. Foreman, Ottawa,—Bishop Marshall Remains as Bishop

Rt. Rev. Bishop George Marshall, rector of Emmanuel Reformed Episcopal Church, Belleville, for the past twenty years, tendered his resignation as rector at a special parish meeting held last evening at the church. The reason for his decision to retire from the charge is growing deafness and a recent serious illness.

A call to the Rev. S. R. Foreman, of St. David's Church, Ottawa, was tendered by the parish of Emmanuel Church to become rector to succeed Bishop Marshall.

RETIRING AS RECTOR

BISHOP MARSHALL

Bishop Marshall will remain bishop of the Reformed Church of England in Canada. He became bishop some years ago, being inducted into the office in England.

The bishop presided over the parish meeting at which his resignation was accepted with regret. Complimentary references to his work and that of Mrs. Marshall in the parish were paid by many who attended the meeting.

Ends Pastorate in August

Bishop Marshall will close his pastorate at Emmanuel Church probably in August. It is expected that Rev. Mr. Foreman, who has preached in the local church on several occasions will accept the call. He is a native of England and was ordained in Toronto. He is married and has three children.

"It is not yet decided by Bishop Marshall and Mrs. Marshall where they will make their home on the bishop's retirement. Mrs. Marshall, who has been president of the Ladies' Aid of the church for seventeen or eighteen years, retired at the last meeting of the society.

The retiring rector of Emmanuel has been in the ministry for twenty-five years. He succeeded the Rev. A. M. Hubly here. Mr. Hubly later became bishop of the western portion of the diocese. Bishop Marshall before coming to Belleville was assistant minister at Emmanuel Church, Ottawa.

Son to Pay Visit in June

The bishp and Mrs. Marshall early next month will welcome to Belleville their son Weller Gordon Marshall and his wife, who recently left Sydney, Australia, on a holiday and are now in London, after visiting at Bombay and Paris among other places on the ten thousand mile journey from Australia to Canada. Mr. and Mrs. W. G. Marshall will spend a month with the former's parenst before they start back to Australia.

Today Bishop Marshall recalled how in 1912 he was on a tour around the world with his son and visited Australia, when the son was speaking of Australia, he told his father that he liked Australia so well that he would live there if it were possible. In time he went to that country and took up residence in Sydney. He is in commercial life. Bishop and Mrs. Marshall have been in constant communication with their son and his wife as nearly every mail brings a letter from Australia.

In all the twenty years' of his work as rector, Bishop Marshall has been absent from his pulpit only two or three Sundays except when away on his duties as bishop.

FROST LAST NIGHT DID NO DAMAGE

White frost last night that sparkled and scintillated on the fresh greenness of new grass, and the drab coloring of dead leaves alike, heralded the last efforts, it is hoped of a lingering winter. Farmers of the district, however, refused to be alarmed. One stated that three such frosts are generally known as forerunners of a warm Spring rain, "and that won't do any damage" he said.

The frost rapidly disappeared when the warm rays of the sun were shed over the city and district.

Meeting Tonight

To Discuss Trip to Kingston For Royal Visit

The meeting of citizens called by Mr. Reginald Moncrieff to discuss and take action on the question of making arrangements for the transportation of the school children of Belleville to Kingston on Sunday, May 21st, the day when Their Majesties King George Sixth and Queen Elizabeth will visit that city, will be held tonight, Wednesday, May 3rd., at 8 o'clock at the Y.M.C.A. Last evening's issue by an oversight stated that the meeting was to be held on "Tuesday May 3rd.". It should have read "Wednesday May 3rd."

Through a typographical error, it was stated that Mr. Moncrieff had already secured accommodation for "1,00 children" of the Belleville schools. This should of course have read "1,000 children."

Tonight's meeting has attracted a great deal of attention, Mr. Moncrieff stated that a number of citizens have already expressed their interest in the undertaking to make it possible for the public and separate school children as many as wish to go, to go to Kingston and occupy seats in the stadium along the route of the Royal procession. The fact that the children will be kept together and have seats and are therefore assured of safety and accommodation was mentioned by Mr. Moncrieff as important factors in the project.

Indications are that tonight's meeting said Mr. Moncrieff will attract a large number of interested citizens who will attend in a private and a public capacity and that the plan will get off to a good start.

Pastoral Changes Announced By Belleville Presbytery

Annual Meeting of Presbytery Held at Deseronto

TWO RETIRE

Stirling, May 3 (Special)— The annual meeting of the Belleville Presbytery of the United Church of Canada was held in Deseronto United Church on Tuesday, May 2nd., with well over one hundred representative laymen and ministers in attendance. Rev. J. T. E. Blanchard, chairman of the Presbytery, presided over the sessions, which were crowded with important matters. Rev. J. W. Platt of Bayside and Rev. W. S. Smart of Yarker each officially accepting their superannuation from active service were congratulated by the Presbytery for their excellent services during the time of the ministry and each suitably responded, thanking those present for the friendly co-operation given them during the work in the Presbytery. Congratulations were tendered Rev. E. M. Cook of Foxboro who has recently received the degree of Bachelor of Theology.

Officers Elected

Rev. H. B. Herrington of Thomasburg was elected to succeed Rev. Mr. Blanchard as chairman of the Presbytery. Rev. James E. Beckel and H. C. Martin of Stirling were re-elected to the office of Secretary and Treasurer respectively. Ecutive committee — Rev. W. J. Scott, Stirling, Rev. H. Morrison, Tweed and Mr. Percy Holland acting with the officers already named and the past chairman.

Pastoral Changes Completed

Following are pastoral changes that reached their completion:— Rev. Alfred Poulter, formerly of Wooler will move to Madoc Charge; Rev. W. T. R. Delve of Ivanhoe moved to Wooler; Rev. S. A. R. Delve of Morvin moved to Ivanhoe Rev. C. W. Hollingsworth of Marmora moves to Odessa and Rev. W. P. Fletcher of Odessa, moves to Marmora. Among the ministers requesting a change in pastorial relationship were Rev. W. R. Tristram, West Huntingdon; Rev. John T. Everson, Plainfield; Rev. H. B. Johnston, Sidney; Rev. I. P. Kennedy, Madoc; Rev. C. G. Crabbe, Maynooth; Rev. James Wood, St. Ola; Rev. J. T. McKenzie, Bath.

Mr. P. Russell Wotten, chairman of the Board of Education, who gives his support and approval to The Salvation Army Building Campaign Fund.

A resolution was brought in by the committee on evangelism and social service commended the recent action of the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation in curtailing the advertisement of Alcoholic beverages on their net work and urged that the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation be asked to confine commercial advertising to week day programs.

Prominent Speakers

During the day addresses were delivered by Rev. R. T. Richard B.A., B.D., D.D., speaking on the subject "An Adequate Support for the Minister." Mrs. W. H. Hooper of Napanee, President of the Belleville Presbyterial, W.M.S., speaking on the activities of that organization. Rev. A. J. Wilson new editor of the United Church Observer, who revealed the startling fact, that this new church organ had in less than two months doubled its number of subscribers. Rev. M. O. Price of Actinolite requested and was granted a supernumerary relationship because of ill health rendering him unable to conduct the services in a pastoral charge.

Mr. Grant Meiklepohn of Rylestone will continue as a candidate for the United Church ministry and will attend Queen's Theological College, Kingston in further study. Sixty-six laymen were appointed to represent Belleville presbytery at the Bay of Quinte Conference to be held in Sydenham Street United Church, Kingston beginning May 30th. Rev. James Semple was nominated as chairman on the Conference Settlement Committee. Officers of the Belleville Presbytery Laymen's Association for the coming year are President—Mr. Percy Holland, Madoc. Secretary-Treasurer,— Mr. J. B. Thompson, Stirling.

Presbytery gave its approval officially to the disbanding of the congregation of St. Andrew's United Church, Napanee and a committee was appointed to go into the disposition of the property.

Dinner Served by Local Women

At the noon hour the visiting ministers and laymen were entertained by the ladies of the Women's Association in the church parlours were a sumptuous dinner was served.

Alberta Resident Declares 60c Wheat Ruinous to Farmers

Declaration that fixture of wheat prices at sixty cents at Fort William means ruin to the farmers of the west, was received in a communication from relatives in Owendale, Alberta, by a Church Street resident yesterday.

The letter states in part: "Cost of freight is twenty cents per bushel; threshing costs us ten cents per bushel while harvesting and other incidentals necessary to the production of a grain crop will eat up the balance. I don't see how we can live if this arrangement by the government is completed. Prices for machinery are away out of sight. Binders, sell at high prices so how can we expect to make a living if wheat is to be priced at a fixed rate by governments, who know little or nothing about what they are doing."

OBITUARY

LATE GEORGE PERRY

Tuesday afternoon the funeral of George Perry took place from his late residence, 138 West Bridge St., to Bethel Hall where service was conducted by Mr. R. McConkey of Bancroft, assisted by Mr. William Belch of Stirling.

Interment was made in Belleville Cemetery. The bearers were Messrs A. Currie, C. Davis, J. Alexander, G. Sutherland, S. Wannamaker and W. W. Noise.

ELWELL BURTON BELL

Friends and relatives of Elwell Burton Bell, highly respected retired railroad employee and resident of 271 William Street were shocked today to hear of his sudden passing during the night. While the late Mr. Bell had been in failing health for some time his demise was unexpected. His body was discovered in his room this morning by his daughter, Mrs. A. Evans with whom he had resided for some time.

Born near Enterprise a little over seventy-three years ago the late Mr. Bell resided work and retired from the Canadian National Railway Bridge and Building in 1930. He was a devoted member of Tabernacle United Church and belonged to Napanee Lodge No. 86, I.O.O.F., also of the Encampment at Napanee. He also belonged to the Brotherhood of Maintenance of Way, C.N.R. and was secretary of the Veterans' Club of the Canadian National Railway.

Left to mourn his passing besides his widow are 3 daughters, Mrs. Ellis Yard, Kingston, Mrs. James Roushorne, Queensboro, and Mrs. A. Evans, Belleville; three sons, Kenneth J., Napanee; Percy, Belleville, and Aubrey, Utica, N.Y.; two sisters, Mrs. E. J. May, Toronto, Mrs. B. Campsell, Young, Sask., and two brothers, the Rev. E. Fraser Bell, Toulon, Illinois, ahd the Rev. A. B. Bell, Blue Island, Illinois.

The funeral notice appears elsewhere in this edition.

SCARCITY OF SKILLED LABOR IN ENGLAND ACCORDING TO LETTER

Business in the British Isles is booming at the present time, and all who can work have jobs, it is reported in a letter received from a relative at Birmingham, England by Charles Wilson, Cannifton Road resident, this week.

Factories are extremely busy, and many of them are working overtime in this industrial city and for the first time in many years "Help Wanted" signs are being hung up at factory office doors. The present conscription plan in the British Isles ar expected to result in a dearth of younger workers, and many older men will be called to fill these jobs

"If you are not working steadily in Canada, it would be a good idea to come over here," Mr. Wilson has been invited, an invitation he believes he will accept unless conditions here immediately improve, he reports.

$75 LICENCE FEE FOR COUNTY PEDLARS DISCOURAGES THE SALE

Seventy-five dollars apparently is too much money for pedlars to pay the county for licences, County-Treasurer James Haggerty said today in commenting on the fact that only one licence has been sold this year so far.

Offsetting the sale of the county licences, Mr. Haggerty added, is the fact that municipal licences can be procured from villages and towns of the county at a much reduced rate.

Years ago, a large number of these licences were sold but of late years this amount has dwindled until last year only three of the pieces of paper were disposed of to pedlars. "They have changed the nature of their products so that they can sell them without the formality of procuring licences," he said.

FLYING TRAINING SCHOOL STATIONED NOW AT CAMP BORDEN

Eighteen planes and sixty officers and men comprising the remainder of the equipment and personnel of the Flying Training School of the Trenton Base, of the Royal Canadian Air Force, left yesterday for Camp Borden where they will be stationed until further orders, according to information received from the base today.

Eighteen planes of the thirty-six ships that comprise the entire school left last week for the Georgian Bay base. The other half of the school left in flight formation yesterday under the command of Squadron-Leader Dave Harding.

QUITE BENEFIC planetary operations predict exciting, progressive and productive affairs for this day. However, the unexpected and sudden nature of some events may make them appear to have elements of calamity or adversity. While drastic movement and decisive judgment may be resorted to in meeting perilous or speculative conditions, in the long run things should move toward happy and fruitful denouements.

Those whose birthday it is are on the brink of a year of great opportunity for attaining high objectives. While there are productive and very expansive undercurrents, drastic moves and keen decisions determine success. Speculation and big chances may flourish.

A child born on this day may have an exceedingly ambitious and expansive character, using aggressive and fearless tactics in attaining its high goals. While ardent and ruthless in gaining its ends, it should have gentle, kindly and generous impulses when the occasion arises.

Lansing, Mich., May 3 (CP)— It's going to be an awful blow to junior but there's no such thing as an underworld. Lieut. Harold Mulbar of Michigan State police told a service club here that incidence of crime is not overwhelmingly centred in one class of people. "The underworld exists largely in the popular mind but not in reality," he said.

MEMBER URGES

"How would you sell the wheat?" asked Trade Minister Euler.

"Well you had a surplus before and you sold it at a profit and you could do it again if you had a little patience and a little courage," said Mr. Perley.

From 1930 to 1938 the government had contributed less than $22,000,000 to the wheat producers while other importing and exporting countries had spent $4,000,000,000 for the same purpose.

Mr. Perley said there had been rumors of certain "hole in corner" caucuses of Liberal members regarding "certain" legislation. The wheat question had become a political football.

Mr. Perley blamed the government's own wheat selling policy for responsibility for the greater part of $48,000,000 estimated loss on the 1938-39 crop, mainly because it had thrown large quantities on the market. It had also handed $5,000,000 in storage charges to the elevator companies.

Another Liberal Bolts

The debate saw a second Liberal supporter, Harry Leader of Portage La Prairie, declare his intention to vote against the government on the budget. A third Liberal, J. A. MacMillan of Mackenzie riding, Saskatchewan, declared himself in favor of 80-cent wheat.

"I feel like using a slogan, '80 cents or fight'," he told the House but he drew the line at announcing any intention of voting against the government.

"Whatever scheme is adopted by the government through the Minister of Trade and Commerce (Mr. Euler) and the Minister of Agriculture (Mr. Gardiner), it is going to meet with the approval of the people of Western Canada," Mr. MacMillan said.

In an effort to wind up the budget debate which has now run three full days, the House extended its adjournment two hours last night, not rising until one a.m. at that time, two members were on their feet prepared to continue the argument.

Prices Go Up

The government's failure to reduce the price of farm implements placed only second to its guaranteed minimum wheat price as a source of complaint from both Mr. Leader and Mr. MacMillan.

The tariff had been reduced from 25 to 7 1-2 per cent on implements but prices had gone up, Mr. Leader said as he referred to investigations of an implement combine by the United States government, a special committee of the House of Commons and by the Saskatchewan legislature.

He said the government had "not taken adequate action" and appraised the personnel of the Massey-Harris Company as one of big business, not farmers.

Not Sectional

"My duty is to vote against the budget," he said. "It makes not much difference which side I sit on. I can be just as good and faithful a representative as any of the hidebound party men in this House."

He emphasized the fact he did not want to appear sectional. While the west might seem to overstress its difficulties compared to those of other parts of Canada, it was because the west was in "circumstances of extreme difficulty."

He voiced his gratitude and praise of the government, which had enacted "some very beneficial legislation." The 1935 and 1938 trade treaties with the United States were outstanding, and concessions to the Canada cattle raisers were notable in the last agreement. At the same time 300,000 western farmers were "almost at their wits end," because of the extreme circumstances with which they were faced.

Urged Limitation

Mr. Leader urged limitation of the tariff on farm implements, noting that many neighbors were being forced to pool their implements, borrowing from each other.

He had informed his constituency organization of his intention regarding the budget. He had received its unanimous endorsation."

He explained he was "raised a Conservative" and decided on maturity that was not his party. Then he became a progressive member of parliament. That party, abandoned by its leaders and sabotaged from within, was today only a name. In 1932, Manitoba Progressives decided to amalgamate with the Liberals for federal purposes.

"That is why I am a supporter of the Liberal party, as a Liberal Progressive from Portage La Prairie," he said.

In voting against the budget, his views were his own but he recognized his responsibility to his constituents and they would attend to him. He had cooperated with the government but there was a limit beyond which he could not go. If he were re-elected, it would be on exactly the same basis as four years ago.

"Needless to say I am not all satisfied with the progress of the present government," said Mr. MacMillan. He doubted, however if either the Conservative, C.C.F. or Social Credit parties would have done as well.

After consideration he was satisfied the Liberal party was the most alert, and progressive party in Canada. From Conservative leader Manion's speeches in Western Canada it was impossible to tell where he stood on the tariff or any other question. It was a good thing the Conservative party was not in office.

The C.C.F. party came into existence with "a flourish of trumpets" and mapped out a good platform. They met with reverses however and eventually had a conference in Winnipeg. It was decided the one plank in the platform which distinguished the party from other parties, socialization of all natural resources including land, had to be changed.

M. J. Caldwell, (C.C.F.-Rosetown Biggar), said there was no such plank and Mr. MacMillan retorted it was a matter of record. From then on, the disintegration of the C.C.F. party progressed.

"It took Rome 300 years to die but it took the C.C.F. only three years to die once they changed their principles," said Mr. MacMillan.

Prices Discontent is Claim

The C.C.F. was responsible for most of the discontent in the Prairie Provinces because the members went about preaching discontent.

Mr. MacMillan likened the Social Credit members to the Bourbons who "could never learn anything and never forgot what they knew."

He endorsed what Mr. Leader had said regarding tariff on implements.

"Personally," he added, "I favor an 80-cent wheat price." He was almost prepared to adopt as a slogan "80 cents or fight."

At the same time he felt it apparent that government had worked in the interests of Western Canada when in 1938 wheat fell and the government set a price which was satisfactory to the people. He hoped when the wheat legislation was passed, it would involve a price satisfactory to the people.

He was disappointed in the announced price but did not believe in fighting party battles in the House. A married man who had a fight with his wife did not go out to settle it in the street.

He was sure, he said, that the Agriculture Minister would agree he had given him more trouble over the wheat legislation in the last two months than any other member.

"I believe a death-bed repentence is valid and binding but I don't like it and the sooner we act, the better for the people—I was going to say, for the party."

Neutrality Urged

Luguori Lacombe (Lib. Laval-Two Mountains), said that Canada should not participate in external wars. Neutrality of the Dominion should be proclaimed and this would be more in keeping with the statute of Westminster. The Militia Act also should be amended, he said.

Hugh A. McKenzie (Lib.-Lambton-Kent) said that the Wheat Board Act should be amended to apply to all Canada or should be abolished entirely. He said farm opinion in Western Ontario was aroused against freight rates which compared unfairly with those applying to the West.

Coming from an area where, he said, radio listeners tuned in almost exclusively to American programs, Mr. McKenzie stated listeners there resented the $2.50 annual radio licence fee. He advocated a $1 licence, with the government paying tht rest.

A lowering of the corporation income tax by one or two per cent was one of the suggestions advanced by Hon. H. H. Stevens, Conservative Kootenay-East, the former leader of the Reconstruction party, during the afternoon session. He thought this would be preferable to the government's proposal of granting credit on income tax payments to persons and corporations undertaking new construction and txpansion this year.

The government proposal, contained in the budget, was a move in the right direction although it was "hasty amateurish and ill-considered". A lowering of the corporation income tax would lend encouragement to business activity over a much wider field.

Assumption by the Dominion government of responsibility of unemployment, but no indigency, would also encourage business activity as it would permit a lowering of municipal taxes on real estate. Unemployment was not due to local or municipal but to national and international causes. Neither Canada nor the United States had yet come to grips with the modern problem of unemployment.

"We are faced with the fact that much loss of employment is due to definite causes that are here and here to stay and we are not even looking these causes in the eye and seeking to remove them," he said.

A protest against the high cost of government financing and the pyramiding of interest charges in the public debt was registered by Joseph Needham, (S.C.-The Battlefords).

The budget again was assailed by opposition speakers as a "do nothing budget" or a "rich man's budget". Hon. H. H. Stevens (Con. Kootenay East) particularly criticized its revenue aspects, while commending the intent of the income tax exemption for industries expanding their capital investment. He urged the necessity of a complete reorganization of the tax structure on a more scientific basis.

From the C.C.F. corner, Angus MacInnis (Vancouver East) argued that the need was not that of more capital goods but a more effective way of distributing the consumer goods produced by the machinery already available for use.

The bill of Wilfrid Lacroix (Lib. Quebec-Montmorency) requiring the public utilities operating in Quebec to employ persons speaking the French language was "talked out" in private members' hour.

State Secretary Rinfret and Transport Minister Howe opposed it, the former declaring that the bill would do more harm to French-Canadian interests than it would do good.

RUSSIAN FLIERS' EXPERIENCE

Two Russian fliers from far Moscow were forced down in Miscou Island, New Brunswick, but the fact that they landed and escaped without mishap except for loss of a pair of boots might entitle the landing to the description "happy landing," because all the circumstances which might have spelled disaster seemed to be at work when their ship came down. Bad weather frozen compass, exhausted oxygen supply, are not desired factors on an air voyage but as their gasoline held out they succeeded in landing

Admirers of aviators are happy that the fliers who risked their lives are now safe on the North American continent

Russian fliers have a fine opportunity to demonstrate the bigness of Russia as well as their own courage Other voyages have been by way of Asia on the west-to-east route, this latter being an east-to-west voyage

IN A CANADIAN LINER

The fact that Their Majesties the King and Queen will travel to Canada not by warship has provided the British Government with an opportunity to use a Canadian vessel, the C. P. R. liner Empress of Australia, to bring them to Canada. The change relieves the feeling that many had, that the Repulse should remain in European waters at this stage for the Repulse, the vessel chosen originally as the royal ship, is the battle cruiser which can overtake and mop up pocket battleships.

The fact that the royal visit is proceeding as planned, except for the means of transporting Their Majesties is a gratifying indication that peace which seems to have been threatened so long is still unbroken and likely to be unbroken for some time if not for a long period of years.

The C. P. R. ship, while built in Germany as the Tirpitz has been in the British service as the Empress of Australia, and was a part of the reparations Germany had to pay at the close of the World War.

His Majesty is a sailor, he served in the Royal Navy, and he took part in the great battle of Jutland. So he has known actual battle at sea and has much of his father's liking for the navy. A royal voyage across the Atlantic, which once hid America from the eyes of civilization until Columbus lifted the veil, will delight the King. That he is coming in a Canadian ship will be of especial interest to him.

HITLER'S TECHNIQUE

The Hitler technique of address and method is now so well known that foreign nations no longer become panicky at what he might say. He has said so much, that to say much new he would have to have a gift not usual among men, the ability to change his style and method. Even Hitler cannot do that. His "surprises" do not surprise the world, for it has grown accustomed to the checkerboard map on which he bases his speeches, to the powerful army and air fleet he exalts, and to his constant iterations on National Socialist principles. The world measures his philosophy of government by what he has said and done hitherto and his boasted love of peace and humanitarianism by recalling the persecutions the Jewish people were compelled to endure, so that thousands have been forced to flee for refuge to foreign lands.

It is not the words he now speaks but the actions he has sponsored and the things he has achieved that the world thinks of.

In Germany the words may still count. Outside Germany they frighten less than they did before.

So his last speech made momentous by the fact that in it he was compelled to reply to President Roosevelt, would have attracted less attention than earlier ones if it had not been for this reason.

HITLER AND GERMAN YOUTH

German children who in another age might have been playing in old-time frolics marking May-Day as children in most of the European countries used to do, had something stern to listen to on Monday — a Nazi speech by Naziim's founder, Adolf Hitler, who stressed some of the virtues but in the background was the thought of the future of Naziism itself. He could not forego a reference to the possibility that these youngest Germans might have to fight for what they had.

Hitler knows that the permanence of anything rests with the young. Therefore he stresses the ideals of the National Socialist state, a form of political disease, from which Germany is suffering today. Young Germany, he feels, must be trained to know nothing but Naziism and be ready to maintain the state which he has created. Older Germans no doubt have recollections and some feeling for older German institutions, even if they dare not reveil it, but the young, dragooned from childhood cannot know what their parents knew.

Will Naziism endure until the new generation is ready to step into its obligations? If it weakens, German National Socialism will pass for it will be a disillusioned youth that arrives at the age of citizenship. Just now it is a question with Hitler what the course of Germany must be. He said on May-Day he was a man of peace and required ten or twenty years of peace to work out projects he has in mind. Whether the world takes him at his word, some will as result of past actions of the Fuehrer wonder if he still would risk a venture if he finds the enemies of aggression closing in on him and the possibility of Naziism weakening before it. Would he suddenly strike to gain a hoped for quick victory, as many feel would be his only hope, while on the other side, nations which would possibly be ranged against him, would be more secure in depending upon a longer struggle for the ultimate defeat of German aggression and at possibly less cost? Will Hitler come to the end of the tether with the strange Teutonic worship of everything that speaks of gigantic power collapsing because it is so odd, desire for power appearing as love of things German to the exclusion and sacrifice of all other and as socialism? It is no wonder he talks to German youth and advises them to stay by the principles he has inculcated. Without them his Nazi ideals are done for.

THE FIRST ROBIN

Oh irresponsible bird,
You carol Spring's in bud
While frost and snow and rain and flood,
Grey skies, north winds lone shores and mud
Make you absurd.
The willow flaunts her warm, grey kittens,
But I can't go without my mittens.
How can you sing a song o' Spring
When Winter hasn't lost his sting?

Oh irrepressible bird,
One zephyr's no excuse
For letting nuptial dreams seduce
In rendezvous with this old spruce.
Upon my word
The wily worm has no great urge
To listen to its funeral dirge,—
If you must let passions tyrannize
Then bird and worm should synchronize.

WITH THE SPECTRE OF TAXATION LAID LOW more people will be inclined to build their own homes than before. There has been such an agitation to the effect that present day municipal taxation amounts to confiscation that some folks have been alarmed and if they ever had any intention of building their own homes they hesitated or abandoned the idea altogether. Any impairment of the building industry is serious, affecting so many people, artizans in employment, the lumbering industry, the lumber mills, hardware stores, building supply factories and others. It seems to us that the test of the confiscation argument is the comparison with rent paid and the payments necessary to become a home owner under the National Housing Act. If a family can own their own home for the same payments or even a bit more it seems that the confiscation argument must fall. However, the Belleville City Council has passed the necessary bylaw permitting prospective home builders to take advantage of the Government offer to pay 100 per cent of the taxes the first year, fifty per cent the second year and twenty-five per cent the third year on homes constructed under the National Housing Act on lots purchased from the municipality at $50.00, houses to cost not less than $2500, not more than $4,000. A number of municipalities in Ontario have passed similar by-laws and favorable reports are received of the results. Belleville again joins the progressive procession.

A HOLIDAY ON MONDAY, MAY TWENTY-SECOND, is being urged in a number of communities to replace the statutory holiday on May 24, Wednesday, the Queen's Birthday. Others it is reported suggest that Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday be observed as holidays a large order, but the fishing season being open sporty business men say that with the way business is this is the proper time to take holidays. When business picks up holidays could be omitted. Belleville City Council has decided that Monday, May 22 is the proper time for a holiday and the same will be duly proclaimed by Mayor Bone, presumably omitting as a holiday, Wednesday, Empire Day, Victoria Day, or what have you, the same week. Some time ago the Belleville Retail Merchants Association passed a resolution asking the Dominion Government to have all public holidays, except religious ones, proclaimed on Mondays, and according to that the Monday holiday when the King and Queen will be in Toronto seems the sensible idea and in accordance with the resolution passed. As the King and Queen will be in Kingston Sunday and pass through Belleville Sunday evening folks will have a double chance of seeing Their Majesties by reason of the Monday holiday.

The G.T.R. Basketball team pulled a great surprise last night at the Y.M.C.A. in a game with the St. Michael's team for the championship of group 2 in the City Basketball League. The score at the end of the first period was 11 to 6 in favor of the G.T.R. team. In the beginning of the second period St. Michael's men did some very good work and tied the score. Holland shooting for the G.T.R. was exceptionally good and the G.T.R. soon had the lead again and held it until the end of the game. Mr. Harvey of the G.T.R. is to be congratulated upon the work of his team. Hurley was not at his best last night owing to a crippled leg. This was unfortunate for St. Michael's as he is the best man they have. The following composed the teams: St. Michael's—Meagher, O'Nell, H. Hurley, Wims, Young. Barlow and Frawley, subs. G.T.R.—Kimber, Holland, Joss, Miles, Scherider. Miles and Folwell, subs.

At the Y.M.C.A. the St. Andrew's basket ball team defeated the Y.M.C.A. team, the score being 42 to 19. The following composed the teams: St. Andrew's—Armstrong, Cooper, Fieldhouse and Weir. Y.M.C.A.—Hitchon, Barlow, Marshall and Woodley.

About three o'clock this morning three small frame boat houses situated on South Front Street were destroyed by fire together with their contents. The blaze originated in the centre building and spread to the adjoining buildings. In the buildings were stored skiffs, sails, and fishing outfits, which were destroyed. John Rathbun lost a valuable dinghey, sails and camping outfit. S. Bongard lost a valuable steel skiff, sails and considerable fishing tackle. William Zufelt lost two skiffs and camping outfit. E. F. Milburn lost sails, fishing tackle and camping outfit. John Caton lost a skiff and three tents. F. C. Sharpe lost some sails and camping outfit. There was no insurance on the buildings nor the contents. Loss is estimated at about $2,000.00 Cause of the fire is not known.

The members of the Quinte Musical Club entertained a large number of guests in their handsome club rooms in the Lewis Block, Front Street. The hospitality of the club was characterized by a finished elegance and refined taste. Everything that could contribute to enjoyment, social, gastronomical, literary and musical was there and the consensus of opinion among outsiders was that to be a member of the Quinte Musical Club is a privilege which any young man might be proud to possess. The early part of the evening was given over to card games and it was after eleven o'clock when the President of the Club, ex-Ald. Silas Lennox, took the chair and announced the program. Of each number much might be said, for it was a musical triumph, a festival of the sweetest melody. There were vocal solos by Mr. Frank. P. Brintnell, Mr. Frank Y. Brenton, Mr. W. Squires, Mr. Paul Lalonde and Mr. John Brasier; piano solos by Mr. C. Bull and Mr. Frank A. Mitchell; recitation by Mr. Charles C. Dickens; saxaphone solo by Mr. Oscar Brickman; short speeches by Judge Fraleck, Mr. J. J. B. Flint, Lt. Col. Ponton, Mr. George Denmark, Mr. W B. Northrup, Mr. W. A. G. Hardy and Mr. M. Wright. Mr. C. C. Dickens gave a number of selections on the graphophone. Mr. Mitchell played the march composed by him and dedicated to the 15th. Regiment. It is a most creditable production. Among those present were the following: Ald. J. H. Starling, Dr. Boyce, Frank A. Mitchell, Norwich, Conn.; J. P. Baird, J. McGuire, T. P. Brown, Col. Ponton, A. E. Snyder, W. S. CAT CONSCRIPTION

The news that General Franco has conscripted battalions of cats and sent them to Madrid to kill the armies of rats and mice bred during the siege is but another incident in their military and economic history.

During the war many thousands of British cats were conscripted into army and navy, where they served gallantly and well. In the trenches of Flanders they did excellent work in "liquidating" the legions of tormenting rats and, by reason of their keen scent and general sensitivity, often acted as first-rate gas alarms. Their record in the navy, both ashore and afloat, was no less happy, and was especially distinguished in submarines and naval stores.

Many military and naval cats are thus employed today, and are maintained by the taxpayer. In the next war, we are informed, they will be conscripted in even greater numbers.—Manchester Guardian.

OUTBURST AWAITED

What people are afraid of is the steady increase of debt and taxation every year. When the taxpayers of the country become sufficiently aroused to attack this harmful condition from which the country has suffered so greatly there may be some hope of relief.

For too long Canada has been governed by politically minded men who have failed to manage the affairs of the country in as economical a manner as business men do their own concerns. If taxation is ever to be lowered in Canada it will be because of an outburst of indignation on the part of the people who feel that they are needlessly oppressed for extravagant political considerations.—Brantford Expositor.

THAT BODY OF YOURS

By James W. Barton, M.D.

Value of the Back and Abdominal Brace

A preparatory school reports that while the parents of the present pupils were a little taller than their parents (the grandparents of the present pupils), the present pupils are so much taller than their grandparents that longer beds have become necessary. And physicians having to do with the examination and care of previous and present generations of preparatory and university students report that the average height of the present students is between one and two inches more than the previous generation.

If this increase in height were accompanied by an increase in width and strength, it would be a great boon but unfortunately this increase in height is often accompanied by thinness of body, and the lack of fat to hold up the abdominal organs allows the stomach, intestines and kidneys to drop more or less, thus interfering with digestion and the getting rid of waste from the bowel. There is often also, pains in various parts of the abdomen—front and either side, high and low—that cause the physician to suspect appendicitis, gall stones, kidney stones, bending or turning of the uterus, and other conditions.

In describing a case before the International Assembly of Physicians in Philadelphia, Prof. Peter T. Bohan, University of Kansas School of Medicine, said:

"A woman came to me complaining of pain in the right lower side of abdomen; diarrhoea; mucus in stools, and chronic fatigue. The pain had been present for months, with no acute attack over a period of weeks. At the time I saw her it had been almost constant for the biggest part of the day for over seven years and was worse when she was overtired. She also had had a backache for twenty years. She consulted me over a year ago and the first thing I did was to take her history (listen to her story and have her answer my questions) which required three hours. I gave her some advice and a back brace. She has had no pain and her bowels and general health are better."

You can readily see how a back or abdominal brace, by keeping organs up and the body erect, will help these cases of chronic pain and tiredness where there is no disease such as appendicitis, gall stones, cysts or others present.

WESTERN ALIENS

There are 9,000 fewer people of British origin in Manitoba than there were ten years ago and there are 27,000 more non-British, according to a report presented by Rev. Dr. J. A. Cormie, superintendent of missions for the United Church, to the Manitoba Conference.

Statistics included in this report show that there are 95,000 Ukrainians in Manitoba, 13 per cent of the population. In five years this group increased at the rate of more than 2,000 a year.

As an illustration of how foreigners predominate in some localities in Manitoba, it is pointed out that in the town of Mirris, while there is one United Church and one Roman Catholic Church, there are four others where only the German language is used.

It seems to be the case that in times of depression in Canada British population dwindles and that of European aliens increases. Evidently the latter are willing to endure greater privations than the British stock, which moves away in search of better conditions.

This situation is one that has an appearance of graver possibilities under existing conditions than if the mental state of our citizens was less disturbed. It is an unfortunate circumstance that there has been a substantial loss of British citizens while the foreign element has increased. That seems to be something that ought to be given thorough consideration by the government, for it is generally agreed that there ought to be more effort put forth to obtain immigration from the Anglo-Saxon sources. At the present time, if the somewhat stringent immigration laws were laxed, we could obtain plenty of people from Central Europe, who are thoroughly dissatisfied with the outlook there. In the British Isles, however, there are not many who are inclined to leave the home land and take a chance in the uncertainties of Canadian pioneering. There is a possibility that if we campaigned more aggressively for Anglo-Saxons we would not have this complaint as to the increase of foreigners in our western provinces.—Woodstock Sentinel Review.

Looking For the World's Biggest

Henry F. Schmull who is on a trip round the world to photograph superlatives in animal mineral and vegetable, described his hobby in an interview here. "By superlatives I mean the biggest and best of everything", said Mr. Schmull. "From boyhood I've gone after the things that weren't common. I started photographing centenarians. I suppose I have the biggest collection of photos of people over a hundred years in the world.

"The idea came to me as I stood beside the oldest oil well in the world at Titusville, Pennsylvania. 'Why not go after the widest, largest, deepest, and longest of everything', I said to myself. So I set out travelling America. After two years my collection was over 4,200 pictures. Now I have everything that exists in America in the superlative degree; the largest piece of sculpture — the head of Washington at Atlanta, Georgia; the largest painting in the world —that is four hundred feet long and fifty feet wide. In New Orleans I found the largest clock—its face is the size of a seven-storey building."

Asked by the interviewer whether he had found anything worth while collecting over here, Mr. Schmull replied: "In Scotland I took that great ship Queen Elizabeth — I think the fountain in front of Buckingham Palace is the largest of its kind in the world. I hear, too, that you have the biggest ox. I hope to snap him before I leave. I've visited thirty-two countries this trip. In Tunis I found a race of human beings with tails. You know that the Walter Scott statue in Prince's street, Edinburgh, is the largest of an author. The poet Burns, incidentally, has more statues to his memory than any other poet. His statue at Barrie, Vermont, is another superlative — the finest example of granite sculpture in the world."

"You have photographed Prince's street, Edinburgh, I hope", said the interviewer. "Sure", replied Mr. Schmull, "But as streets go, it's a long way behind the main street in New Orleans, which is 170 feet from curb to curb, with four rows of tramlines in the middle." Asked what was the superlative of superlatives he had struck, Mr. Schmull replied: "You will be surprised! The thing that impressed me most in my life is that little room in the Baltimore and Ohio railway station at Baltimore, where the first public telegraph message — 'What Hath God Wrought' — was sent along the wires in 1844. How that message has changed our lives!"—London Listener.

Problem of Twelve Small Boys

It was a day of almost incredible temptation for those twelve boys from the East Side. They started from home early in the day with a few pennies in their pockets. They hoped some honorable way would open for them to get into the circus by matinee time. It seems there is such a thing as Free Day, but this didn't happen to be the day.

It did happen, however, that there was as real a Devil around Madison Square Garden as was ever found in Holy Writ or John Bunyan. He presented temptation very deftly in the form of a letter—meant for somebody else, of course — which these boys found on the floor. It said: "Please give bearer our allotment of 900 tickets."

An Irishman who never lived on the East Side, because his name was Oscar Fingall O'Flahertie Wilde, once wrote that "the only way to get rid of a temptation is to yield to it." The twelve yielded; they collected the tickets from the office indicated in the letter, and sure enough they were circus tickets.

This presented a problem having to do with the conscience. Danny ORourke, 14, and his eleven young companions went up into the rocky hills of Central Park to wrestle with this problem. They licked it in spite of dreams of opulence that might have come by selling the tickets for a total of a thousand dollars more or less.

One idea that helped them lick it was that they knew these tickets were meant for orphans. It's pretty low, of course, to take things that are meant for orphans. The sporting thing to do was to take the tickets back so the real owners could enjoy them. This is exactly what they did. It makes an extremely refreshing story in these times of ours that are generally regarded as rather gloomy.—New York Times.

MURDER CHARGE AFTER MAN SLAIN

James Zeron, Morrisburg, Held for Murder of His Attendant

Morrisburg, Ont., May 3—(CP)—Edward Wilson, attendant to James Zeron, aged resident of this town, was slain in his bed yesterday. A nickle-plated stove top was used in battering his skull.

Police immediately arrested Zeron and charged him with murder. He was remanded to jail for a week. Relatives said he had been ill for eight weeks and that arrangements were being made to place him in the Ontario Mental Hospital at Brockville.

Wilson, a native of Washago, and father of four children, lived only half an hour after Mrs. Zeron found him lying unconscious in the bedroom, where he slept with Zeron.

She told police she awakened Wilson earlier yesterday morning to tell him that Zeron had wandered down the street. He at once went after Zeron and brought him home, retiring again while Zeron went into the kitchen with his wife.

Mrs. Zeron told officers that when Zeron finished his breakfast he returned to the bedroom where Wilson was sleeping. A minute later Mrs. Zeron heard an unusual noise and when Zeron returned to the kitchen she went into the bedroom.

Dr. Charles A. Louden, Coroner, said death was due to a blow which struck Wilson behind the right ear.

Wilson had lived in Morrisburg for 12 years most of which he spent as a sailor on Great Lakes vessels. He took the job as attendant to Zeron three weeks ago.

Will Stop Sale Of Merchant Ships To Foreign Nations

By J. F. SANDERSON

Canadian Press Staff Writer

London, May 2 (C.P. Cable) — The British government shortly will introduce legislation designed to stop the sale of merchant ships to foreign countries, particularly Germany, Oliver Stanley, president of the Board of Trade, announced in the House of Commons today.

The proposed legislation will require owners to offer their saleable vessels first to the government to be added to the reserve merchant marine fleet.

Mr. Stanley gave a broad hint that subsidies for shipbuilding would be refused to companies who sell to Germany at this time when Great Britain is attempting to build up her merchant fleet.

Many questions were fired at the Board of Trade president concerning the recent sales of British ships to Germany and purchases by British companies of foreign-built ships.

During one question D. G. Logan, Labor, declared a member of the government sitting in the House of Lords was connected with a company which bought foreign-built ships. He did not name him although he offered to do so.

And while the government proceeded with its measure for military conscription of 20-year-old men, War Secretary Leslie Hore-Belisha reported to the House that there had been a sharp increase in voluntary enlistment.

The War Secretary announced that from January 1, 1938, to Mar. 31, 1939, 49,415 regular recruits and 104,890 Territorials enlisted compared with 36,598 and 66,295 respectively for the corresponding period of 1937-38.

MELROSE W. I. INSTITUTE

The annual meeting of Melrose Women's Institute was held on Thursday, April 27th., at the home of Mrs. Orval Stratton. The number in attendance was the largest for the year and the program was educational as well as interesting.

Following the usual opening exercises with the president in charge Mrs. Leslie continued her demonstrations in meat cookery, preparing a pot roast and Swiss steak for cooking. Mrs. Bruce Sherman prepared a crown roast of sausages for the oven. These three dishes were cooked while the program continued.

A number of letters of appreciation were read by the secretary as well as some business correspondence. The invitation extended to the Institute from the Canadian National Exhibition to take part in the quilting contest and linen chest exhibit was read as was also the announcement of the district annual meeting under the auspices of Phillipston - Zion branch.

Mrs. Ed. Lazier and Miss Bernice Robinson were appointed delegates to the District Annual.

Plans were made to have one of the members prepare a meat dish for the Summary Day in "Meat Cookery."

Three reports were given: The secretary-treasurer's, the auditors', and the cemetery report. The financial statement showed a cash balance of $93.70. By a motion, one-half of the proceeds of the Musical Festival is to be given to the teacher, Miss Bernice Robinson, to be used for musical records for the schools.

The election of officers was hurriedly taken when a motion carried by which all of the officers of the previous year were re-elected. Mrs. John Blatherwick was appointed assistant on the lunch committee for Mrs. Gilroy.

Mrs. Young, with her girls of the sewing club, put on the remainder of the program. In the form of a "skit" they contrasted the old time styles with the modern ones and showed a part of what they had learned in their series of lessons. They regretted that the articles they had made together with their record books were in Stirling awaiting Summary Day in "Girls' Home-Making Clubs," so the ladies could not see just what they had accomplished. Eight girls completed the course. Much credit is due Mrs. Young for the interest she has taken in conducting this sewing project.

A small gift was presented Mrs. Young by the Senior Institute to show their appreciation. The Institute also presented Mrs. Stratton with a rayon table cover in appreciation for her work as "local leader" last year.

Collection amounting to $3.59 was received. Thirteen paid their membership fees.

The meeting was closed with the singing of the National Anthem after which lunch was served by the hostess and a number of assistants. The meat dishes prepared and cooked during the afternoon were served as a part of the lunch. These were very delectable and no doubt many of the members will make an attempt to use the knowledge they have gained from the two demonstrations when preparing and cooking the meat cuts like the ones used for the lessons at the two meetings of the Institute.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

Famous Authority on Problems of Love and Marriage.

What Husbands Like

Are you going to be a bride before long?

Are you making plans for the exciting new life you're going to lead?

Or is love itself so bewildering, and are problems of satin, chiffon and tulle so distracting, that you really haven't thought much beyond the wedding day?

In any case, it may interest you to look forward to your married life for a moment. And if, as you now think, it will be your chief wish to please that devoted young lover of yours and keep him happy you may be glad to know what his preferences are going to be.

How should I, an outsider, expect to be able to tell you this?

Let me explain. We'll have to assume, to begin with, that your husband-to-be is an average young man. If he's very individual and eccentric, with unexpected opinions about everything, we'll have to let you discover what he likes unaided. But if his feeling about home life is the same as that of the great majority of young men, we can reveal it to you.

The country has just been canvassed to find out this very thing, and the results, announced in a woman's magazine, will be useful to women to learn more about men. They've got the charts and figures to prove just what I'm going to tell you.

First of all, your husband, like hundreds of thousands of other husbands is going to think of home as a place with a wife in it. It won't make a hit with him to have you regard it as a spot you'll flit in and out of.

Don't be alarmed. He won't want you to be forever dishwashing or floor-scrubbing. He'll take it for granted that you'll have friends and amusements. It's just that he will love to know you'll be at home for him to come back to.

Some years ago, when Mr. Coolidge was President, he didn't hesitate when six o'clock came to telephone to a house where a tea-party might be in progress, demanding that his wife hurry right back to the White House, and make it 'home' to him. There's a little of that yearning in most men.

You may have thought that since your bridegroom's salary isn't very large, and since you yourself may be giving up a good job to marry him, it might be a good scheme to get your job back again some day. Increase the family income and so on.

Be careful about making any such move. A man has a good deal of pride in supporting his own wife. If his income is really sufficient to maintain you both, with care and economy, be sure that your husband isn't opposed before you start out on a job of your own.

This is partly a matter of sentiment with him, of course. But there's also a good deal of common sense in his view. It is yet to be proved whether a girl can do two jobs well. And if she can't, it will be the home—and the husband—that will suffer.

On the other hand, don't think he isn't proud of your money-earning capacity. He is. Statistics prove it. The same husbands who insist on supporting their wives believe it's a good thing for a girl to have had a job before marriage. That experience in the commercial world actually makes her a more capable and sensible wife and mother. And they're right. Don't you think so?

One more thing. Because your bridegroom may have convictions that you haven't known of, don't suspect the poor dear of planning to be a domestic dictator. He really isn't. Not only he, but most other husbands, believe that husband and wife should rule equally in the home, that neither one should be supreme boss. That's reassuring, isn't it?

Finally however fond you may be about bridge or movies or shopping, bear in mind the old-fashioned fact that your husband is domestic-minded and that he'll think of you as a home-maker. Humor him if you can.

GOOD MANNERS

MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

Yesterday's Guest

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

1—After one has dined at a certain home for the first time, how should the hostess be thanked? Does the "first-time" dinner engagement require a different form of thanks? Is it necessary to make a formal call within two weeks after the dinner? Or would just a cordial note of thanks be sufficient?

2—Although my husband's name is Frederick, he is known only as Fred. When I sign my formal name which name should I use . . . . Mrs. Frederick Smith, or Mrs. Fred Smith?

3—Also, when I sign my informal name (as in the signature to a letter) should I use only my first and last names, or should I also use my maiden surname . . . Mary Robinson Smith?

Mary

1—In the days of more leisurely etiquette, it was the proper thing to make a formal call after a dinner within ten days or two weeks. Many people still abide by this custom. But in the lives of most of us, formality has given way to informality because leisureliness has given way to extremely busy days.

However, many people, even if they cannot pay their respects in formal fashion, make a gesture toward a hostess by telephoning her a day or two after the party and thanking her for hospitality. Or they wrote a little thank-you note perhaps enclosed in a box of flowers the day following the party. It's a grand habit to cultivate, this habit of making a quick gesture of appreciation. . . . . makes any hostess happy.

2—Even if your husband is known only as Fred, your formal name is Mrs. Frederick Smith, and this is the name you should sign even under your informal name, when you sign a business letter, or on any other type of letter written to someone who does not know your formal name.

3—A married woman has several choices for the form she uses for her informal name. The form most often chosen is the combination of her first name, her maiden surname, and her married surname.

The other forms are not so often preferred, since they are not so informative, not considered so dignified. She may, for instance, drop her maiden surname, and use Mary Robinson. She may not object to the use of initials (I do!) and use Mary A. Robinson.

Sympathy Always Grateful

Dear Mrs. Beeckman

1—Should a letter of condolence be sent when one is only slightly known to the bereaved, but a very good friend of the person who has died? In this case I am referring to a letter to the parents of a friend.

2—If you tell me that this letter should be written, when should it be sent?

J.

1—Under these circumstances, you should write a letter of sympathy. Parents need all the comfort their children's friends can send them. Don't write a long letter, but a sincere note.

2—Write this note of sympathy as soon as possible. During the first dark days after a bereavement, words of comfort and understanding are most important.

That Married Title Again

Dear Mrs. Beeckman

During a recent bereavement I was called upon to send a sympathy card. My mother and I disagreed as to how I should address the envelope. My mother said that I should address it as follows: —Mrs. Mary Smith. I disagreed with her and thought I should address it to Mrs. John Smith. I think that I am right.

Mother would like to see this in writing to really believe that I am right, so will you please give us your opinion?

B.

You are right about this form you used. An envelope should never be addressed to Mrs. Mary Smith. A letter, whether social, professional, or business, should be addressed to Mrs. John Smith. If Mrs. Smith is a widow, her formal name is still Mrs. John Smith, and any letter to her should be addressed to Mrs. John Smith. And properly not even a divorced woman should use the name Mrs. Mary Smith . . . if she wishes to be correct, she substitutes her maiden surname for the 'John' and uses the name Mrs. Robinson (her maiden surname) Smith.

DOES BOTTLE BOTHER BABY?

IF SO Mrs Robert E. Brandon, of Markham, Ontario, has this message for you: "As so often happens to bottle-fed babies, stomach trouble and constipation were so troublesome we despaired of ever raising our first baby. A neighbour recommended Baby's Own Tablets and they proved so satisfactory we have never been without them for over thirteen years, with the result we have five extra sturdy children. So far they have missed all the so-called children's diseases and four of the five were bottle fed."

And Mrs. M. Butchart, of Toronto, says this: "Baby's Own Tablets are excellent for bottle-fed babies as they assist in digesting foods which cause indigestion."

Baby's Own Tablets are equally effective in diarrhoea, simple croup, colic, colds, simple fever and teething troubles. Sweet-tasting, easy to take, safe. Analyst's certificate in every box.

Never be without Baby's Own Tablets—sickness so often strikes in the night. 25 cents. Your money back if you are not satisfied.

Weddings

HUBBS—ROSS

Picton, May 3.— A wedding of much interest was solemnized at the home of Mr. and Mrs. J. Luther Ross on the Bloomfield-Wellington road, on Thursday afternoon, April 27, when their younger daughter, Claire Margaret, was united in marriage to Donald E. Hubbs, son of Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Hubbs of Picton.

Rev. J. G. McKee performed the ceremony which took place in a bay window which was artistically decorated with ferns, pink snapdragons and potted plants.

The bride was given in marriage by her father, and was wearing a lovely long gown of white taffeta, with basque bodice, long tight fitted sleeves. Her tulle veil, with short train, was caught at the back with lily-of-the-valley. She carried a shower bouquet of white sweet peas tied with long white streamers knotted with lilies-of-the-valley.

Mrs. Kenneth Woodsworth, sister of the bride, was matron of honor, wearing a hyacinth blue taffeta gown, with fitted bodice, bouffant skirt, and a heart-shaped hat to match. She carried a bouquet of pink sweet peas and white heather. Mr. Gordon Davis, Picton, was best man.

Miss Velma Vandewater played the wedding music, the bride entering the parlor to Lohengrin's Wedding March. During the signing of the register, "O Promise Me", "Because" and "I Love You Truly", were played.

A reception followed the ceremony, Mrs. Ross, mother of the bride, receiving in a gown of rosewood lace with corsage of cream Premier roses, and Mrs. Hubbs, mother of the groom, in navy sheer, with corsage of Premier roses. Five o'clock tea was served in the dining room, which was brightened with pink carnations. The lace-covered table was centred with the three-tiered wedding cake and white tapers. Mrs. W. Stanley, in black velvet, and Mrs. J. G. McKee, in navy crepe, poured tea and cut the ices. The guests were received by Mrs. Garnet Tayler, in green crepe, and Mrs. J. S. Striker, in black and white sheer. The assistants were Misses Elizabeth Wren, Hilda Raynor, Marjorie MacDonald, Mary Greer, Jeanne Tayler and Marie Hubbs and Mr. Kenneth Woodsworth and Ronald Ross. Miss Marie Hubbs, sister of the groom, caught the bride's bouquet.

The groom's gift to the pianist was a gold compact; to the best man, a gold belt buckle and tie pin, to the matron of honour, a travelling case. Out-of-town guests included Miss Eleanor Purdy of Trenton, Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth Woodsworth of Toronto, Mr. and Mrs. Tom Whattam of Bethel.

Later, Mr. and Mrs. Hubbs left by motor for a trip to the east crossing the International bridge at Ivy Lea. For travelling, the bride donned a brown tailored suit, small brown hat topped with flowers, red fox fur and brown accessories.

Mr. and Mrs. Hubbs will reside on West Main Street, Picton, where the groom is operating a grocery store.

GALLAGHER—JOHNSTON

A wedding of wide-spread interest to a host of friends of the contracting parties was solemnized in Harrowsmith on Tuesday afternoon May the second when Margaret J. only daughter of Rev. H. B. and Mrs. Johnston of Belleville, became the bride of Donald M., eldest son of Mr. and Mrs. H. L. Gallagher of Harrowsmith. Spring flowers including tulips, carnations and daffodils decorated the living room. The bride attired in periwinkle blue dress, with small, flower hat and veil to match carrying a sheaf of pink roses, entered the room to the strains of Lohengrin's Bridal Chorus played by Miss Ileen Patterson of Harrowsmith. Miss Marjorie Grant of Toronto, gowned in a pretty dress of gum-drop shade and carrying Johanna Hill roses, made a charming bridesmaid. Mr. Gordon Gallagher, brother of the groom acted as best man. The bride was given away by her brother, Holden S. Johnston, who also sang "O Promise Me", during the signing of the register.

Following the ceremony which was performed by the bride's father, Rev. H. B. Johnston of Belleville, a reception was held at which Mrs. Gordon E. Miller of Pittsburg, Pa., aunt of the bride, poured tea.

Guests were present from Toronto, Kingston, Brewer's Mills, Pittsburg, Pa., and Wilton, one of the most interested of whom was the groom's grandmother, Mrs. Mills who is ninety years of age.

The bride's going away costume was a beige colored coat, with Russian Wolf collar worn over a dusty pink dress with hat and accessories to match. Amid showers of confetti, the happy couple left on a motor trip to Montreal and points east. On their return they will reside in Kirkland Lake.

MEN LOVE GIRLS WITH PEP

If you are peppy and full of fun, men will invite you to dances and parties.

BUT if you are cross, listless and tired, men won't be interested. Men don't like "quiet" girls. When they go to parties they want girls along who are full of pep.

So in case you need a good general system tonic, remember for 3 generations one woman has told another how to go "smiling thru" with Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. It helps build up more physical resistance and thus aids in giving you more pep and lessens distress from female functional disorders.

You'll find Pinkham's Compound WELL WORTH TRYING!

Interesting Meeting Of Women of Moose

The Women of the Moose Belleville Chapter 435, assembled for their semi-monthly meeting last evening, Senior Regent M. A. York presiding. Junior Regent Chapman read her Alumni report, the same being received by the Senior Regent.

Following the meeting a social time was enjoyed by the members under the chairmanship of Home-Making Chairman Ashmore.

Euchre and Rummy were the games enjoyed and dainty refreshments were served. The winners for euchre were first Mrs. E. Saylor, second Mrs. Mossman and Rummy honours went to Mrs. Kitch.

Co-Worker Kitch won the Sunshine prize donated by Senior Regent York.

ST. JOHN'S MISSION

Several members of the Ladies' Guild met at the Mission Hall on Tuesday for a quilting bee. Several from Cannifton were there also. Mrs. G. Ellis kindly prepared and served dinner. At the usual hour in the afternoon the business meeting opened by singing the hymn "Holy Holy, Holy, Holy, Lord God Almighty" and the Collect and Gospel for the week. Two quilts were finished and the meeting closed with singing "Abide with Me" and The Lord's Prayer. A vote of thanks was given Mrs. Ellis for the dinner the members enjoyed.

Some coats look like dresses. A smooth navy woollen has rolling revers "meeting" the front fullness of the skirt, and forming a graceful line which narrows at the waist marked by a one-button closing.

Give thanks that there are more sane hats than mad ones, and more flattering hats than unbecoming. Pretty and dainty is a sailor of white moire, narrower from side to side, the crown draped in black Chantilly lace posed high in front over a red grosgrain ribbon crown band.

Follow the gypsy trail and you'll find that it leads home. Some of the gayest housecoats are gypsy coloring. A charming model is of taffeta, the wide skirt in Romany print with a tiny frill at the wide hemline. The pastel taffeta shirtwaist top with tiny collar of the striped taffeta buttons down the front.

You can't hide your slip under a sheer blouse —wear a pretty one with pride. A blue and white wide horizontally-striped taffeta petticoat is zipped onto a white point d'esprit top, the net combined with Val lace ruchings.

Into the night go spirited gypsy dance frocks. The wide skirt of one model is white silk printed in enormous bright red poppies, and finished with a wide hem flounce. The top is of plain white chiffon and the cummerbund, red velvet.

MISS NAPOLEON

By Violet M. Methley

"I brought them up on deck. They're over there with their mother, who is very much annoyed at the inconsiderateness of the whole affair! Listen!" She smiled

Mrs. Burpham-West's complaining voice was heard, peevishly addressing all those around here.

"Absurd, dragging us up on deck like this in the middle of the night! Why, it's as calm as a mill-pond; how can there be any danger of shipwreck when there isn't any storm? No fog either, so it wasn't a collision or anything of that kind."

"We've just grazed an iceberg, Madam." It was the third officer now who was using the innocent-sounding phrase. "So as a precautionary measure the Captain has ordered the boats to be launched at once."

"Then I should much prefer to stay on the ship until you know what's wrong. I'm sure it's safer than those tiny boats." Mrs. Burpham-West said, her loose mouth pouting obstinately.

She stood with the three children pressed close around her, her bulging contours uncorsetted under a pinkish woollen dressing-gown.

"You can't stay here, Ma'am; got to obey orders when the boat's launched," the young officer said, and there was a hint of urgency in his voice which convinced Hall that what Leonie Valence had overheard was true. The girl herself moved forward and spoke to her employer.

"Better get into the boat when it's ready hadn't you?" she suggested casually. "Before there's any rush."

"Rush—why should there be a rush?" Mrs. Burpham-West demanded pettishly. "And anyhow, I insist that you come too, Miss Valence."

Leonie did not answer; she said nothing at all until the boat was swung out from the side and her employer and the three children installed in it, with screams and complaints from the lady.

"I decline to go without my governess, it is her duty to be with the children."

"Fraid there's not room, Ma'am," the officer said, leaning over the rail as the boat began to descend.

"Then room must be made — I insist . . ."

But her voice was drowned by the creak and rattle of the falls; her complaints came up from overside like a seabird's cries.

"Thank heavens! I've escaped her company anyway," was Leonie's comment.

As though to relieve the tension, the ship's band, grouped on the deck began to play. As a waltz rhythm swung out over the dark, secret sea, Hall spoke under his breath to Leonie.

"Do you know I can't believe it is as bad as you thought."

"Look at the deck," the girl answered curtly.

"You mean . . . Yes, the list is greater than it was."

"She's getting down by the head. And something ought to be done to hurry these people into the boats — as many of them as there is room for."

"Why, surely you don't think . . " Hall broke off then went on helplessly: "I mean isn't it compulsory for shipping companies to provide sufficient accommodation in the life boats for all the passengers and crew in case of accident?"

She laughed softly.

"Ah, but you see they won't allow that there can be accidents. These latest boats are guaranteed unsinkable. —Ah—ah!"

She started and clutched at Hall's arm, as the wail as of a lost soul broke out and echoed away towards the horizon. It was the "Gloriana's" siren, the ship's voice harshly screaming for assistance.

"He—elp! He—ee—elp!" it seemed to shriek despairingly.

"Idiotic of me to be startled," Leonie released her grip with an angry frown. "I'm sorry for being such a fool."

"It wasn't to be wondered at," Hall assured her. "I never heard a more infernal row. But oughtn't we to make the others realize the needs for haste?"

"They'll realize it soon enough," she answered sombrely. "And to say anything might mean a panic. Some of them are getting uneasy."

It was evident that a sense of disquiet was spreading amongst those on the crowded deck; a mere hint at first, it soon became something concrete, a realization that there was real danger. With that realization came the first symptoms of panic.

Tragedy to Music

A woman's voice rose shrill, hysterical, above the strains of musical comedy from the band.

"Something's going to happen. Oh, where's my husband? Charlie —Charlie, can't we get into one of the boats quickly." "It's all right, my dear, there's no hurry," a deeper voice reassured, whilst almost at the same moment the cry sounded along the deck as though in answer:

"This way. Women and children first. All women and children down to B deck."

There followed a kind of surge towards the companion-way which led to B deck next below; others moved to the suspended boats; over the babble of voice rose a man's peremptory tones: "My wife, I want a place for my wife! She's lame; I can't get her down the stairs again."

The speaker, heavy-jowled, black-moustached, elbowed a way forward, a small woman clung heavily to his arm, her eyes blinking with terror.

"Of course you do, Mr. Rosenbach —and for everybody else's wives and husbands' too. All right —lift her in now." The Chief Officer himself had appeared. "Be ready to lower No. 8 away, you fellows, level with B deck; then as soon as she's full lower again and pull away from the ship. That's right, Mrs. Rosenbach—all comfortable, are you Any other lady left on this deck had better get in."

"Mother!" it was Chrissie Ryland, her fair hair in disorder, glittering above the white-furred collar of a black velvet evening coat. "Yes, yes, you go, Mother!"

"Wouldn't somebody else.... Oh, Chrissie dear, must I go alone? I'd much rather wait and be with you," she said uncertainly.

"Darling, we can't be sure of being together always, you know." The girl pushed the older woman forward laughingly. Just help her, will you? There . . ! Of course, I shall be absolutely safe with Ranny, darling . . . See you later, Mummy."

The boat rattled down, half filled already, until it hung level with the deck below, where it was soon crowded with more than its complement. Chrissie leant over the rail, with Struan close beside her. Hall moved forward, too, to look down beyond the swinging boat, ninety feet or the strange scene revealed within the range of "Glorianna's" lights, the ink-black sea dotted with those patches of unnatural whiteness which were ice-cakes, and by the water-insect shapes of half a dozen boats, phosphorescence dripping from their oars, as they pulled away from the ship.

"Come on, Chrissie," Struan's voice was harsh and strained. "You must find a place now—at once; you must go down to B deck."

"It's no good unless you can come too," the girl said. "No, Ranny. I'm not going without you; I . . I just won't leave you."

"Dear, you must . . . for a little while."

"I needn't if I wait until all the other women and kiddies are gone. Then the men will be able to come too," Chrissie argued. "No, Ranny, don't try to make me. I can't; I won't—I shall stay with you whatever happens."

"All the boats from this side of the deck have gone," Leonie Valence said quietly. "We'd better go over to port and see what is happening there."

"Yes, that's the idea! Come on, Chrissie; I expect we'll find there's room for us all without argufying." Struan cried with rather overdone cheerfulness, and the scattered groups went sliding and staggering across, for the list was now so acute that no one could disregard it.

"If we aren't quick—" the thought flashed through Hall's mind. "It won't be possible to launch the boats that are left."

Many of the davits on this side were already empty, but the nearest boat was filled and just about to be lowered. In the surge toward the side, Hall found rimself close to the rail. Looking over, he could see women close-pressed against the rail of the deck below, waiting for the boat to reach their level, saw upturned faces on the lowest deck. With a cold feeling of dread he realized how many people still remained, how few boats were left.

That which he watched was now swinging alongside B deck and the women were being handed into it across the intervening three-foot space. It was full and over-full before the officer in charge gave orders to lower away again, but as it slowly dropped a clamour broke out from below, hands were stretched out to drag it in. With all pretence gone, the steerage passengers down there were fighting for life.

For a moment it looked as if the boat would be overturned in the struggle; the few men in it were using their fists and the butts of oars to beat off the clutching hands.

THE GIRL WITH A GUN

With a sickening shudder through the ship's whole fabric, her bows dipped, the list became more pronounced. There was a movement, following this, towards, the other side of the deck, but Hall and Struan remained to help the one or two sailors who were still struggling to free the last boat, while Chrissie and Leonie Valence watched in silence.

"I wish it would stop—that band." Chrissie said under her breath, "It seems somehow indecent—horrible."

"There would a panic if it stopped, though," the other girl said "As long as it goes on playing most people conclude that everything is all right."

"I suppose so. Oh, they've got the boat clear!" Chrissie cried, while at the same instant Struan turned towards her.

"Get in, dear—and you, too, Miss Valence. Everyone else seems to have celared out."

"We'll load up down at B Deck, I expect sir," one of the sailors said. "But you two gentlemen had best get in to help at the oars. We're about the last boat off—it's madness to wait any longer."

"I suppose so. Come along Hall. We can clear out again if there are many women left below. Are we ready to lower away?"

They were in the boat; the fall ropes creaked in the sheaves, then for a sickening moment ceased to run at one end, so that the boat hung in mid-air, stern raised high. Then she was righted, descended steadily to B deck level.

A bare half-dozen women remained here to be taken off, but the deck below had still a surging crowd, and they arrested the boat again.

"Stand by to stop a rush—women and children first!" Struan, with the habit of command, had taken control. "Keep off, you fellows! — confound you—get back! Hand over those babies. Is that the last of the women and children?" Yes!"

"Devils!" one of sailors ejaculated. "Like a dog-fight, and they'll jump in and swamp us if we don't clear. Be careful, gu-nor!"

All along the rail, three and four deep faces, gleaming eyeballs, yelling, cursing mouths, close-packed bodies, pushing, heaving, striking.

"Room for three more!" Struan cried. "Three—dash it! —not thirty! Stand back, you others—you'll drown the lot!"

The boat heaved and swayed with the impact of the scrambling, thrusting bodies, listed inwards, so that she almost touched the ship's side.

"Lower away, men!" Struan shouted. "We'll be capsized if we don't get clear . . . Keep back!"

For another ugly rush had followed, men scrambling up to jump from the rail, dragged back, trampled down by others who fought to take their places. First one, then two, locked together, leaped for the boat missed, fell into the water between her and the ship.

All those who could help were lowering a way frantically, but at the last moment a huge negro snatched at the fall-ropes, leapt on to the bow, stood there swaying.

He grabbed at Struan's shoulder, trying to push him aside by sheer weight and force his way into the boat, snarling and spitting like an animal. But the Englishman opposed his purpose with all his well-knit strength.

Gasps and frightened cries came from the women in the boat; from Chrissie's lips broke a low moan. "Ranny . . . Ranny!" Then from the sailor amidships burst a yell of warning:

"Look out, sir! Look out! He's got a knife . . . Oh, he'll have him . . ."

Momentarily the negro had wrenched himself from Struan's grasps, there was a flash of a blade, and simultaneously a sharp report slashing across the turmoil.

The negro's upraised arm dropped, he spun around, his hand at his throat, plunged backwards into the blackness overside.

There was a heavy, thudding splash as his body met the water; in the instant of tense silence which followed, Wilson Hall found himself staring at the figure of Leonie Valence, half-risen from the thwart in front of him, braced against the gunwale, her right hand still raised holding the small revolver from which a film of smoke floated away into the night darkness.

CHAPTER V.

Still the Band Played

Those nearest the ropes began to lower away once more in feverish haste but there was no further attempt at a rush.

The boat touched the water, sank almost gunwales under, with the "Gloriana's" side reared cliff-like and listing outwards high above her.

"Give way, all!" Hall found himself responding mechanically to the roarse order of the sailor amidships and pulling heavily at an oar. There were four men rowing dragging the boat out slowly from under that sinister shadow, but Struan was not one of them.

He still stood in the bows, turned stiffly to stare across the heads between at Leonie Valence. His eyes had a dazed look, his lips had parted without speaking, until an abrupt movement from the girl herself seemed to break a spell.

She dropped the revolver into the pocket of her coat, sat down upon the thwart and spoke brusquely:

"I can row—give me an oar."

Her words were flung over her shoulder; Hall found himself meekly accepting them as an order. He passed his own oar over to her and noticed that the hands with which she gripped it showed not the faintest termor. By changing places with his neighbors and shifting along the thwart, he himself took an oar upon the further side of the boat and began to pull feverishly.

The urgent need for haste seemed to spread electrically one to another. Struan used one of the boat's bottom boards as a paddle. He workid it strenuously, although his eyes still looked dazed.

But during the moments that followed all personal matters lost weight. As they pulled away, the imminence of the end became plainer. The "Gloriana" was visibly settling by the head, now that her whole fabric could be seen.

And still the band played . . .

"All boats pull away from the ship!" the voice cried, and the thud of oars in rowlocks told that the order was being obeyed.

The overladen boat lumbered heavily along, Hall straining at his oar through water which seemed to offer a dull resistance, as though he was trying to row through liquid mud. It was a nightmarish sensation, like one who runs with clogged feet, while something behind gains inexorably upon him.

Vaguely Hall tried to picture what would happen when the ship sank; he visualized a vast whirlpool, an area of swirling suction dragging down the small boats.

Could anyone hope to escape? He glanced at the ship and, as he did so, ceased rowing.

"Look! Oh—look!" He heard himself speak without knowing that any word had escaped him, but in response all those at the oars pulled around.

An deven as they looked the great vessel was sinking, slowly—slowly, with a movement at first only perceptible by its relation to the star-studded sky behind.

All the portholes still blazed with light; the band's music still floated out across the sea. Everything about the huge liner seemed normal, except that gradually increasing downward lits of the bows.

Then with the same slow and terrible dignity of doom, the stern of the "Gloriana" began to rise, the rudder, the motionless screws were clear of the water, gradually blotting out star after star.

She had listed to an angle of forty five when suddenly and without warning every light on the ship went out.

A sound followed the clatter and clang, the gigantic crash and rattle of metal.

"It's the engines falling down through the ship—Heaven help her!" the sailor near Hall muttered, and a woman cried out sharply, shrilly.

"Oh! all those poor souls—those poor souls!"

The "Gloriana" was erect in the water, her stern pointing upwards to the skies like a dark tower rising from the sea. She remained thus for what seemed like centuries.

Dear Sirs:

A few minutes ago I completed a conversation with a customer in Quebec City. The service was so wonderful, I cannot help writing a word in praise.

It happened like this (and almost as quick as the writing of it):—Called Central here.

She called Barrie Long Distance and gave the number.

The Barrie Operator called Montreal.

And Montreal got Quebec.

All this while I held the line, I was speaking to the party in about fifteen seconds; much quicker than some local calls. After using many other means of communication once or twice daily for some little time now, I have never before appreciated the convenience of this service at such a little cost, viz., $1.30. Often before I have paid more than this with three or four hours waiting for replies, whereas this call did the whole works at the one jump.

Hope this doesn't make you mad.

Yours truly,

Mel Ott Plays Third Base As Giants Defeat the Reds To Snap Long Losing Streak

Yankees Overpower Tigers With Base Hits to Win 22 to 2

YANKS NOW FIRST

Bees and Dodgers Both Stopped After Winning Four in Row

(By Bill Boni Associated Press Sports Writer).

Mel Ott is a bit on the stumpy side to play first base. It might take him a little time to master the technique of catching, and he's never tried his hand at pitching. But as the cure-all for New York Giant slumps, there's no one in the same class with master Mel.

Boss Bill Terry, up to yesterday afternoon, had tried everything but firecrackers to jog the Giants out of their lethargy. Then he brought the little guy with the fearsome, foot-waving batting stance in to third base, and shoved Frank Demaree out into right field. It worked like a charm. Joe Moore and Harry Danning, whose bats had been so much deadwood, went five for three apiece, Danning including a homer in his collection. Combined, the Giant attack was good for 13 hits.

Fielded Well

And Melvin fielded his position perfectly, came up with a timely single during a three-run rally in the sixth and finally clouted a home run in the last of the ninth with the Giants two runs behind, two out and two on base. Thereby the Reds were beaten 8-7 and the Giants' losing streak ended at five games.

While Terry was discovering that one man can make his ball club, at the other end of the scale the Yanks' Joe McCarthy was finding out—as if he didn't know—that it doesn't even take two men to make his world champions click. For despite the fact Lou Gehrig was benched at his own request after 2,130 consecutive games, and Joe DiMaggio was left behind in a New York hospital, the Yanks opened their first western invasion with a 22-2 rout of the Tigers.

Back in First Place

That gave exclusive possession of first place back to the Yanks while the White Sox moved past the idle Red Sox into second place by taking advantage of Ted Lyons' stout pitching and five enemy errors to top the Athletics 4-1. The Senators won their fourth straight, taking a wild-eyed 9-7 decision from the Browns.

The first place Bees and the Dodgers were stopped after winning four in a row. Boston's Danny MacFayden lost 2-1 to the Cardinals despite five-hit pitching, and Brooklyn tripped 3-2 over a three-hitter turned in by Bob Klinger of the Pirates. The Phils came out of a four-game losing streak as 38-year-old Syl Johnson pitched four-hit ball to beat the Cubs 6-1.

Field of Fifteen To Start Saturday In Kentucky Derby

Louisville, Ky., May 3 (AP) — Whittled down from an original list of 115, a field of 15 of the best three-year-old colts in the racing world prepared today for Saturday's 65th running of the Kentucky Derby—and four of those 15 were still listed as doubtful starters.

That was the consensus on the street corners and over back fences all over Louisville today as the blue grass trotted out its best bib and tucker to welcome the arriving multitudes.

With Johnstown still the even-money favorite and getting his first work on the track at the Downs this morning, it became apparent that the betting fraternity wasn't going to be caught napping by the current No. 1 dark-horse candidate, Valdina Farm's big brown Viscounty.

Just another horse "named Joe" barely 24 hours ago, this game son of the Porter not only got his chance to go to the post by taking yesterday's Derby trial, but his odds to win the necklace of roses Saturday were knocked flat from 100-1 to something like 15 for your dollar in the latest quotations.

His was the only apparent change in odds from yesterday's one-mile prep, leaving Herbert Woolf's Technician still second choice to Johnstown at 3-1, despite the setback Viscounty handed him by the width of his bit in the trial.

W. L. Branns Challedon, William Ziegler's El Chico, J. H. Whitney's Heather Broom, Mrs. B. Franzheim's mud-running Xalapa Clown, W. E. Boeing's Porter's Mite, Joe W. Brown's T. M. Dorsett, Mrs. Ethel Mars' No Competition and J. W. Bell's sturdy Steel Heels were the others rated more-or-less certainties to step to the barrier in the $50,000 gallop.

Ont.-Intell. and Sargents Meet In the Finals

The Ontario Intelligencer "maple pounders" won the right to play Belleville Sargents for the title to the second half of the Major B league last night at the Recreation Alleys, when they defeated the Bankers in a playoff tussle by a margin of 263 pins, the total scores being Ont. Intell. 3162 and Bankers 2899. The Printers scored wins over Corbys and the Bankers on their way to the finals and right now are at their peak. The Belleville Sargent team is strong all down the line and it should be an interesting tussle on Friday night. Should the Printers win, they will again play Sargents for the championship of the Major B loop as the Hardware men won the first half of the schedule quite handily.

Cecil Ling with a brilliant 372 in his final game led the winners to the wire. In this game Cecil made a mark in every frame and wound it all up by doubling in the tenth. Bob Coleman rolling for the Bankers was high for his team with a neat 643 and made him second high for the night. The Bankers did not hit the "maples" as well last night as they did against Houstons but the Printers were hot in every game. Teddy Russell kicked in with the second high single of the night with 271 and Bob Coleman also had a 264. A large gallery watched the play and with many of the Major League bowlers on hand, it was wondered if they were getting a few lessons from the Major cubs. The score of the game follows:

Bank of Montreal.

BABE MARCHILDON TO PITCH OPENER AGAINST CHIEFS

Penetang Hurler Making Good in Big Way in Pro. Company

EARNS ASSIGNMENT

Big Leaguers Predict Righthander Has a Brilliant Future

(By Jack Calder Canadian Press Staff Writer).

Toronto, May 3 CP)—When Toronto Maple Leafs arrived today for their first home stand of the International League season, the most excited member of the baseball troupe was Philip Joseph (Babe) Marchildon, a 21-year-old pitcher from Penetanguishene, Ont.

Philip Joseph has been nominated by Manager Jack Burns to hurl tomorrow's opener against Syracuse Chiefs and the near-impossible has been accomplished. An Ontario boy, who learned his trade around home, has been called on to pitch an important assignment in the best brand of ball in the country.

They'll be pouring from Penetanguishene and from all around the North Simcoe League to watch "our Babe"—in his first year as a professional—try to mow down the Chiefs.

Has Earned Right

And it's not as if the Leafs were just trying to capitalize on the Ontario angle. Marchildon has earned the job by being the most effective moundsman in the Toronto corps to date.

(Burns sent him against the league leading Giants before a remarkable crowd of 29,632 at Jersey City Sunday. After a shaky start, Marchildon settled down and limited the Giants to four hits. They beat him 1-0 for obvious reasons.

For the youngster, this will be the culmination of long years of trying to get to the moneyed ranks. Soon, they say, he will follow Brantford's Joe Krakauskas of Washington Senators into the big leagues.

What makes observers sure Marchildon will go far is his peculiar style of delivery. He made Rudy York of Detroit Tigers look funny in an exhibition game this spring and York told all and sundry to watch Marchildon's progress.

Trouble With Motion

"He's like a left-handed pitcher throwing right-handed," York exclaimed. "He keeps the ball in close to the shoulder and when he bends over to let go his body shadows the ball. Then all of a sudden it's popping right past you for a strike."

His pitching motion, though, has been his greatest trouble. The Leaf management found he had a tendency toward balking and had to teach him to get the ball up before drawing back to throw.

Born at Penetanguishene, he started pitching for the home town's intermediate team at 16. In 1934 he was Penetanguishene's only pitcher but he carried the team to Ontario Intermediate "B" finals, losing to Chatham because he pitched two days in a row in cold weather.

In 1937 and 1938, Marchildon pitched for Creighton Mine and did his daily eight hours in the mine. Creighton won its league title both seasons and Phil struck out 275 batters in 25 games last summer.

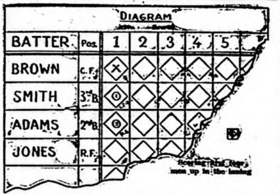
Minneapolis: Ali Baba, 205, Turkey, and Ernie Dusek, 223, Omaha, drew.

Lou Gehrig, New York Yankee first baseman, who had played 2,130 consecutive games until Tuesday. Gehrig announced that he was voluntarily benching himself and bringing the streak to an end. The Yanks, without his help, went out to defeat the Detroit Tigers 22-2, with "Babe" Dahlgren, his understudy at first, getting a double and homer. "Iron Man Lou" started his long run in June 1925.

HOW TO KEEP SCORE

Marking Play by Play in a Sample Inning



By Central Press Canadian

Imagine yourself in the grandstand watching a ball game.

On your knee is your pocket-size score-book or scorecard, similar to the selection illustrated (see diagram). Like thousands of baseball fans this year, you have determined to increase your understanding and enjoyment of the game by scoring it, play by play.

For the sake of illustration, suppose that Brown, the lead-off man hits a double to left field. The scorer then marks the symbol for a two-base hit, a bar with two cross-marks in the first column after Brown's name on the score-sheet, below and to the right of the diamond-shaped figure. Since Brown's double went to left field, the two-base hit symbol is slanted to the left.

Smith is the next man to bat. Smith hits a long drive which the left fielder catches just outside the left field foul line. Smith is out. Brown remains on second. On the score-sheet in the diamond in Smith's space the scorer would mark as follows. LF-7. This indicates clearly that Smith was out on a foul fly (LF) to the left fielder (7). These symbols are pencilled in the first column opposite Smith's name, as illustrated (see diagram). In the centre of that space a "1" in a circle indicates Smith was the first out.

Adams follows Smith to the bat. Adams pops out to the third baseman. Circle a "2" in Adams' diamond, indicating his was the second. On the score-sheet the scorer marks P-6, indicating that Adams' pop fly was taken by the third racker. The symbols P-6 are placed in the column opposite Adams' name, as illustrated.

Jones bats in clean-up position and is next to bat. Jones smashes a powerful three-base hit against the fence in deep right field, scoring Brown. The scorer puts an X in the diamond opposite Brown's name, indicating that he scored. The symbol for a three-base hit is marked in the first column opposite Jones' name. The figure is slanted to the right, showing the direction of the hit. (See diagram.)

At this point the scorer is fairly under way in his own record of the game

In the next article of this series we will illustrate further playing action emphasizing the fielding movements and their place in the scorebook.

'BOILING BOILY' PUT OUT OF GAME

Toronto Leafs Defeated in Eleven Innings by League Leaders

(By The Associated Press)

Silas Johnson, who did some of his best pitching for Cincinnati Reds when all they knew about the first division was what they saw in the papers, is busy proving that it's hard to keep a good man down.

He objected when St. Louis Cardinals sent him down to Rochester last spring. But he couldn't make his objections stick so he got to work and compiled a 3.03 earned run average for 37 games. He was second only to Ken Raffensberger on the Red Wings' roster.

This spring Johnson, now 30, has started like the most energetic rookie. He has made three starts and won two of them by shutouts. He may find himself back in St. Louis again.

He turned in a three-hit whitewashing yesterday against Baltimore Orioles while Rochester gained a 7-0 victory. That enabled the Red Wings to hold second place by a few percentage points over Montreal's Royals, who conquered Newark 6-3.

Montreal's manager proved he's still "Boiling Boily" Grimes when he got himself tossed off the field at Newark in the first inning for protesting a decision.

Toronto Maple Leafs won a "moral" victory—the kind that doesn't count for the pennant — when they carried the league-leading Jersey Giants to 11 innings before going down 7-6.

The seventh place Syracuse Chiefs made four hits good for a 4-2 victory over Buffalo Bisons.

PAINFUL ORDEAL FOR McCARTHY TO BENCH GEHRIG

Old 'Iron Horse' Played 2,130 Consecutive Games

MUSCLES STIFFEN

Winter of Idleness Not Helpful in Regaining Form

(By Gayle Talbot Associated Press Sports Writer).

New York, May 3 (AP)— Lou Gehrig, the pressure off at last, sits on the Yankee bench for the first time in nearly 14 years and watches another, younger man play first base for the three-time world baseball champions.

It must have been a cruelly hard decision for the old "iron horse" to make, when he told Manager Joe McCarthy Sunday night that he was ready to call it a career after 2,130 consecutive games. There was another wrench for both of them in Detroit yesterday when McCarthy wrote "Dahlgren, 1b" on a slip of paper and pinned it to the dugout.

There had been a painful ordeal for both men, fading player and sentimental, grateful manager from the day the Yankees started training at St. Petersburg. Gehrig, one of the greatest stars the game has known, wanted to keep his record intact for one more season.

He tried with a fearful intensity to get the bounce back in his 35-year-old legs and to regain the batting eye that for 13 years drove in more than 100 runs each season and five times led the American League in that department.

Shot Both Barrels

But even in Florida sun it was all too evident Lou finally had shot both barrels. A winter of complete idleness, spent mostly in his fishing boat off Long Island, had stiffened up his muscles to where they couldn't respond again.

He gloomed about the dugout, and his teammates didn't know what to say to him. They were pulling for him, but ball players never try to offer sympathy to a mate who is in a slump.

"I should have started getting in shape about two months before camp opened," he said the other day.

Though Babe Dahlgren made a brilliant start as Gehrig's successor yesterday, it is possible the "iron horse" will be back in there off and on as the season stretches out and the weather warms up.

"I'll let him take a rest and then when he is feeling better I'll put him back in to see how he goes," McCarthy said. "Meantime I will give Dahlgren every opportunity to win a regular job."

CALLING 'EM Between the Lines

Ken J. Colling

About a month ago we published an April fool prank regarding a mythical civic sports stadium, all equipped with floodlights, modern grandstand and all the trimmings. At that time it was just a joke and perhaps not too well taken at the time, but since that time we have been approached by several local business men who feel there is an urgent need for a sports stadium in Belleville; one that will accommodate football, baseball, softball, lacrosse and such other out-of-doors sports as may loom upon the local sports horizon. If the project of a new sports stadium ever materializes the softball interests should be prepared to take care of their interests in such a project, so there are those who feel the softball heads should look towards the future and not spend too much on the present site, that already is acknowledged to be inadequate, insofar as the playing field is concerned. However, the major problem facing the erection of a civic sports stadium in Belleville today is the matter of a central location.

An impromptu meeting of the local softball moguls was held on the site of their summer's activities last evening at which time President Clem Bowler discussed the advisability of making further improvements to the playing field. The diamond certainly needs a certain amount of grooming before the softballers swing into action for their long season's grind. However, there are those who feel to spend any great amount of money on the present softball site is pure folly—just like sending good money after bad. To date the softball sponsors have spent considerable on their present diamond at the upper end of Coleman Flats and what have they to show for the cash sunk into the diamond today? True enough there is better accommodation for the fans, but as far as the actual playing goes it can never be suitable, simply because of the lack of adequate top soil above the flat bed rock beneath Coleman Flats at that point, so why expend good money on a losing proposition. It is only a matter of time before a complete sports stadium will have to be built in Belleville to accommodate all outdoor sports.

In several communities in Western Ontario, with a population much smaller than Belleville, flood lights have already been installed and at a remarkably low figure — much less than has been quoted in Belleville or recent years. In the small towns of Simcoe floodlights were installed and the promoters paid off $1,100.00 of theinitial cost the first year of operation and they have no lacrosse or rugby football from which to draw revenue. Although we are not at liberty to reveal his name there is a certain business man in Belleville who has been working on the subject of floodlights for a sports stadium for some time. Of course it is a hobby with this man, but he has some really startling figures pertaining to the initial cost of such a layout for floodlights. We feel this man is sufficiently civic minded to perhaps look after the installation of the floodlights, providing other business men enter the field and assist in the matter of a centrally located park. Nothing of extravagance in the matter of stands and accommodation would be needed the first year, these accommodations could be added year by year. At least it's worth a thought and some serious consideration on the part of all summer sportsmen.

"Gentleman Jack" Washburn, the Tennessee badman of the grappling world, who meets Scotty McDougall in the main bout of Friday night's professional wrestling show at the Hume arena once fought Jack Dempsey, but much to his sorrow. Washburn had just returned from the Great War and was in fine fettle, he thought until he entered the ring with the Manassa Mauler. "Whata job Dempsey did on me was just nobody's business, and therein ended my boxing career," Washburn is reported to have stated after being knocked out by Dempsey, who was in his prime at that time, just a year after he had beaten Jess Willard for the heavyweight crown. A complete three-bout card is being presented and includes several outstanding lightheavies in the preliminaries.

Billy Taylor, sensational young centre ice star of Oshawa's Dominion junior champions, signed a two-year contract with the Toronto Maple Leafs of the National Hockey League yesterday. The 19-year-old Taylor who was once a mascot for the Leafs, is expected to step immediately into the big league tanks when the 1939-40 season rolls around. The acquisition of Taylor gives the Leafs four former amateurs signed within the past months.

At his own request "Columbia Lou" Gehrig was benched from the Yankees yesterday, as the Rupertmen went on to win 22 to 2 over Detroit and resume the leadership of the American League. It marked the first time since May 30th, 1925 that the Yankees took to the field minus Gehrig. Without regret Lou asked Manager McCarthy to bench him "because of the way he was playing he thought it might help the club." Statements like that only come from big men, but when a man has completed 2,130 consecutive American League games, aside from world series and exhibition tilts, he's deserved a rest. When he went hitless on Sunday after four fruitless attempts at bat, Gehrig made his decision and yesterday voluntarily asked McCarthy to bench him. Thus passes from baseball one of its greatest modern figures leaving a record that may never be surpassed—2,130 consecutive games.

We're Telling You—"Twinkletoes" Selkirk, although slated for the sidelines with the Yanks earlier in the season, got two for three yesterday....Rosen went hitless for the first time this season as Pittsburgh beat the Dodgers 3-2....It is pleasing to see the Ontario Juvenile Hockey Association is seeking a tie-up with the C.A.H.A., because it is a great organization with a splendid future....Lou Gehrig played 59 games with Hartford in the Eastern League in 1923, the only games he ever played in organized baseball after joining the Yankees that year. He took over the first basing for the Rupertmen on June 1st 1925....A goodly crowd of Penetang baseball fans will sojourn to Toronto for the International League opener tomorrow, their No. 1 son, "Babe" Marchildon is slated to hurl for the Leafs.

Sports Roundup

(By Eddie Brietz, Associated Press Sports Writer).

New York, May 3 (AP)— The Giants look terrible....Turf experts say a fortune will be riding on Johnstown's nose Saturday....Just the same, some insiders are afraid the Woodward colt, already on edge, may go stale between now and Kentucky Derby post time ..... Coast writers are telling their customers if they want to see Tony Galento they'd better do it now, for he's on his "farewell tour."

The Dodgers caught the world's fair spirit and gave their customers a sure enough glimpse into the world of tomorrow when Leo Durocher substituted a pinch runner for a pinch runner....The novelty almost exploded in Leo's face when pinch runner No 2 narrowly escaped being caught off base

Watch for one of the best-liked mudders to be declared out of the Derby because of a bum knee..... Terry's infield is so shaky he is schooling Alex Kampuris at third base.

You thought Fordham was tough, eh?....Here are some of the mouthfuls the Long Island University football team will throw at you next season: Rovinsky, Zdanevich, Simonivich, Sekerah, Dushko and Perugino....Lou Gehrig must have looked like an alien sitting there on the Yankee bench yesterday.

Texas Christian students voted football the best sport to watch and tennis the best to participate.

Shannonville

Shannonville —A fairly large number patronized the progressive euchre and bingo games held in the Trinity Church Rectory on Thursday evening. During the early part of the evening progressive euchre formed the chief mode of entertainment after which bingo was played. At the social hour lunch was served by the ladies of the guild.

Prize-winners in the euchre were, ladies, first—Mrs. Fred Lewis, second—Mrs. Floyd Hill, third— Mrs. A. Sager. Gentlemen, first— Mr. Alvan McKenzie, second—Gerald Stratton. Consolation—Mr. Charles Earl. The table centre was won by Mrs. K. R. Vivian. The evening proved to be very entertaining to the guests and a success to the sponsors.

Business Improving

Local garage proprietors report a brisk upswing in their business and particularly in the repair line which was in the "Doldrums" during the lengthy winter months. Local gasoline vendors report a very brisk sale of late also.

Few Men Unemployed

Due to the lack of coal the Point Anne cement plant has ceased operations and it was learned from a reliable source that the shut-down was caused by lack of coal due to the strike in the United States which has forced many other plants to cease operation. Local men employed at the plant are rather worried over the shut-down although it is optimistically predicted that the plant will re-open by the fifteenth.

Earliest Planting

Mr. Mike Brant, local resident and gardener, has been the first one to plant his potato crop this year, at least he has been the first one noted in this district. One farmer on the reserve was also noted working on his land on Saturday, but it appeared rather wet.

Mr. Clare Rashotte of Tweed spent the week end in the community renewing old acquaintances.

A number from this district attended the dance in the Point Anne Parish Hall on Thursday night. During the evening the large crowd tripped the light fantastic to music furnished by Dan Fairman and his "Tophatters."

Mrs. Maude Perry of Napanee and Mr. Pike of Marysville were recent guests of Mr. and Mrs. William Doxtator.

Mr. and Mrs. Leo Roluf of Point Anne were Sunday afternoon and evening guests of Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Stewart.

A number from this community attended the banquet in the Tabernacle United Church at Belleville on Wednesday night at which a large crowd was in attendance.

Mr. and Mrs. Edward Kent, Daisy Ellen and Dennis left for Fort Erie on Saturday where they will be the guests of relatives. Mr. Kent and Daisy Ellen will return on Monday while Mrs. Kent and Dennis will remain for a longer period.

Mr. and Mrs. Ross Lewis and Dora of Belleville were Sunday guests of Mr. and Mrs. Charley Howard.

Miss June Stewart spent the week end in Point Anne the guest of Mr. and Mrs. Leo Roluf.

The Mountain and Melrose cheese factories began operations on Monday and received a fairly large amount of milk that is for opening day. The Shannonville Cheese factory which is undergoing extensive alterations will open in the near future.

Mrs. Arthur Balcanquel and Dale of Gilead were recent guests of Mr. and Mrs. Stanley MacDonald.

Mr. and Mrs. Leo Roluf and Carl of Point Anne were Sunday evening callers at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Ted Breadman.

Mr. Herbert Kellar of Crookston was a week end guest of his friend Mr. Jack Pringle.

Mr. and Mrs. Bert Liddle were Sunday guests of Mr. and Mrs. Douglas Thompson of Foxboro.

Mrs. Fred Carscallen and daughter, Marie, and Miss Alice Peets of Belleville were tea hour guests on Wednesday of Mr. and Mrs. Stanley MacDonald.

Mr. and Mrs. Ross Lewis and daughter, Dora, of Belleville were Sunday guests of Mr. and Mrs. Charley Howard.

Miss Vera Gray of Belleville was a Thursday evening guest of Miss Jean Kent.

Miss Kathleen Mills and family visited with relatives in Stirling on Sunday.

Mrs. Jack Kent and family were Saturday evening guests of Mr. and Mrs. Saul MacFarlane.

Mr. and Mrs. James MacFarlane of Marysville were Saturday evening callers at the home of Mrs. Margaret Smith.

Miss Marion Topping of Belleville was a week end guest of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. James Topping, of Marysville.

Mr. and Mrs. Fred Wilson of Lime Lake were Sunday callers at the home of Mr. and Mrs. J. S. Kerr.

Mr. Ross Fuller of Oshawa spent the week end at his home in the village.

Mr. and Mrs. Reginald Mills and family of Barrie were Sunday guests of the former's parents, Mr. and Mrs. L. E. Mills.

Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Woodend and Leburn of Belleville were Sunday evening guests of Mr. and Mrs. Albert Reid.

Mr. Herman Hill of Trenton spent the week end at his home in the village.

A few farmers in this district have turned their cows out to pasture although it seems that grass is none to plentiful as yet.

Mr. and Mrs. Robert Little and Mr. and Mrs. John Blatherwick attended the Ladies 'night banquet held in the Masonic Hall at Deseronto on Thursday evening and held under the auspices of the Masonic Order. During the evening the guests played progressive euchre and at the social hour lunch was served.

Local residents have been noted during the last few days raking and cleaning their lawns and a general clean-up of the premises seems to be the main object of property owners at the present time.

Harry O'Neill local cattle buyer shipped one of the largest consignments of calves via C.N.R. and truck on Monday than he has in a very lengthy period. The reason attributed to such a large shipment was the fact that farmers were preparing to send to the cheese factories and therefore calves are of no value.

Polish Newspapers Charge Germany With Intrigue

Warsaw, May 2. (AP)—Polish newspapers accused Germany today of a long-standing intrigue aimed at cutting Poland from the sea.

Newspaper comment also indicated Foreign Minister Joseph Beck, in a speech Friday before parliament, might categorically reject Germany's demands for return of Danzig to the Reich and for an extra territorial railway and road across the Polish corridor. These proposal already had been countered by Polish suggestions which Chancellor Hitler in his Reichstag address construed as a rejection.

NON-AGGRESSION

posals of like nature had been submitted to a number of other European countries.

Lithuania was not included in the Chancellor's projected northern combination because her relations to Germany are regulated by a separate treaty which contains non-aggression pledges.

No Objections Raised

It was understood Germany advised Finland and Sweden the Reich has no objections to a joint fortification of the Aaland Islands which dominate the entrance to the Gulf of Bothnia, northern extension of the Baltic.

(A Berlin dispatch to Helsingfors said Germany had proposed that Finland commit herself to strict neutrality in the event of war in the Baltic in exchange for German approval of the island fortifications.)

Scandinavian diplomatic quarters in Berlin took it for granted that the Foreign Ministers of Denmark, Finland, Norway and Sweden would meet soon to formulate a joint reply to the proposal of non-aggression pacts.

In this connection it was recalled that the Scandinavian countries, even as far back as the Great War, have acted in unison on all matters affecting them jointly. Generally speaking, as one experienced diplomat said, any small nation is glad to have her inviolability guaranteed by a formidable neighbor.

Meanwhile the German propaganda machine emphasized to Warsaw that suggestions in the opposition press there of a "Polish protectorate" over Danzig were regarded in Berlin as "insane."

Laden With Editorials

Newspapers were laden with editorials on "phantasies about Danzig". They called the idea of a Polish protectorate over the one-time German port, now a free city for Poland's trade, "European well poisoning" and "catastrophic ignorance." The provincial press contributed to the campaign, and long dispatches from Warsaw described what the Boersenzeitung called a "program of megalomania."

The general effect was an attempt to show that Poland intended to seek something she had no right to and that London and Paris were backing her. Hitler's Voelkischer Beobachter cited alleged Polish dispatches which it said demanded not only a protectorate over Danzig, but also cession of Silesia and East Prussia as "pure Polish territories in which the German element is maintained artificially," and said:

"We would not wonder at all if tomorrow another Polish newspaper would demand the 'return to Poland' of all Germany east of the rivers Elbe and Saale. What is written in Warsaw and Krakow today and is permitted by the responsible Polish government is European well poisoning of the worst kind.

"The new protectors of Poland, Chamberlain and Daladier, are not seeking with a single word to check this inflammable mischief. On the contrary the English and French press daily are pouring oil on the fire."

Malone

Malone—Mr. and Mrs. H. Weese have returned home after spending the past few weeks the guests of relatives east of Corbyville.

Mr. and Mrs. Carl Deline and little daughter Dorothy spent Friday evening with Mr. and Mrs. C. Weese.

Mr. and Mrs. George Fox and Gerald spent Sunday in Point Anne.

Miss Annie Cousins spent the week end with her sister Mrs. Thomas McCann.

A number of relatives from Ivanhoe spent Sunday with Mr. and Mrs. Walter Gawley.

Miss Gertie Franklin spent the week end in Marmora.

Mr. and Mrs. W. D. Nickle are spending some time in Madoc the guest of their daughter Mrs. T. Burnside.

A number from here attended the anniversary dance held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Ed. Post on Thursday evening last. All report a good time.

Mr. and Mrs. Carl Deline and daughter, Dorothy, spent the week end in Marmora.

DREW PROPOSES NATIONAL CONFERENCE ON TAXATION

Toronto, May 3 (CP)—A national conference to discuss taxation was proposed to the Toronto Home Builders' Association last night by Col. George Drew, Ontario Conservative leader.

"There must be a re-adjustment of taxation," Col. Drew said "Canada today has the most unscientific, the most unprincipled form of taxation in the world. The burden carried by real estate is eminently unfair."

HARD OF HEARING CANADIAN PRAISES AURINE EAR BALSAM

A simple home treatment which is bringing new hope and happiness to sufferers everywhere. H. E. Blakslee of New Brunswick writes: "Have used one bottle of 'AURINE EAR BALSAM' and it has been a wonderful help to me, for some months I have not been able to hear plainly, family talk at the table was a jumble to me, and had to have repeats so often that I feared I would never hear plainly again, have not heard the clock strike for months, the radio was a thing of the past. Now after using one bottle of AURINE EAR BALSAM I can converse with the family as in the good old days, hear the clocks striking and listen in on the programmes presented over the air and beginning to enjoy life as in the past. Would highly recommend AURINE EAR BALSAM to anyone who is hard of hearing for I know it will do them good". Before you invest in expensive hearing devices try one bottle of AURINE EAR BALSAM. See if it doesn't help you too. If you are hard of hearing, have ringing and buzzing in the ear — Get AURINE EAR BALSAM today. Relief is quick. Costs only a few cents a day. Money back if it does not help you. For sale by Doyle's Drug Store. a21, 27, m3, 11

IN MEMORIAM

McGOWAN — In loving memory of our dear daughter and sister, Bessie Reid McGowan, who passed away May 2, 1933.

Her faint last wish we should like to have heard
And breathed in her ear one last parting word
Only those who have lost are able to tell
The pain in the heart in not saying farewell.

—Lovingly remembered by Husband, Mother, Father, Sisters and Brothers. m3-1t

WICKENS — In loving memory of a dear husband and father, Thomas William Wickens, who passed away May 4th, 1937; also a dear daughter and sister, Audrey Jean Wickens, who lost her life by falling in a well Oct. 29th, 1935.

We are sad within our memory
Lonely are our hearts today
For the ones we loved so dearly
Have forever been called away
We think of them in silence
No eye may see us weep
But many silent tears are shed
When others are asleep.

—Ever remembered by wife and family also Mummy, sisters and brothers. m3-1t

"MY NEW FORDSON COSTS LESS FOR THE WORK IT DOES"

Choice of four models gives you power for every farm job

● A Fordson will save you money on first cost — fuel — repairs. It will save by doing jobs faster and better. It makes money for a farm. New features contribute greatly to performance and economy: the track-type steering gives easier handling, greater mobility; the oil-bath air-cleaner reduces engine wear; the radiator shutter on four-wheel agricultural Fordsons warms engine up more quickly. The four models are the agricultural tractor with offset spade lugs or pneumatic tires; the high-clearance, adjustable rear tread row-crop tractor with lugs or tires.

To further ensure that you get the right Fordson equipment for your farm, there is a choice of three economical fuel systems — for gasoline, kerosene or fuel oil. Make an "on-the-farm" test with a Fordson.

AT THE BELLE

"THE MIKADO"

Furthermore, they are going to get it as they could never hope to see it on the stage unless they live in London or New York. The world's most popular musical play has been filmed with all the rainbow brilliance of its beautiful Oriental costumes captured in technicolor. The complete cast and chorus of the D'Oyly Carte Opera Company, most famous of all Gilbert and Sullivan troupes, whose musical forebears first produced "The Mikado" on March 14th, 1885, to start runs of 672 London and 250 New York performances, are featured. Kenny Baker, eminent radio tenor, sings the leading role to the accompaniment of the London Symphony Orchestra. Victor Schertzinger who brought to the screen Grace Moore's success, "One Night Of Love," directed the film which Universal is releasing.

No other musical comedy can boast an audience as large as that of "The Mikado." By October, 1885, there were 117 companies playing it in every corner of the United States. Those first audiences and their descendants are still among its ardent devotees. By 1896 it had passed its 1000th American performance. In 1918 it became the only musical show to be adopted by the Chatauqua circuits. It has played for 550 weeks on Broadway alone. It is estimated that not one of the fifty-three years of the play's life has passed without some company singing it somewhere in this country. Educational authorities calculate that virtually everyone who has gone to high school or college, has either taken part in or witnessed a showing of "The Mikado" and is familiar with its tunes. Because the play is actor and singer proof it has always been a favorite with amateur and school dramatic societies.

In filming "The Mikado" now on the Belle screen care was taken to give this immense audience the best in Gilbert and Sullivan tradition. All of Sullivan's songs and score are presented intact. All the comedy "business" introduced into the action by Gilbert, wittiest man of his day, and handed down from year to year by the D'Oyly Cartes, are in the film. For instance on opening night, 1885, George Grossmith in the comic role of Ko-Ko accidentally fell at the conclusion of "The Flowers That Bloom In The Spring" song. The audience howled. Gilbert ordered a tumble to be kept in the part. It has since figured in every "Mikado" performance. Martyn Green, the funniest living Ko-Ko, does it in the present motion picture. The costumes were designed by Marcel Vertes, world - famous painter. Geoffrey Toye, authority on Gilbert and Sullivan technique and long associated with the Covent Garden Opera Company, produced the picture and directed the music. Natalie Kalmus of the Technicolor Motion Picture Corporation was in charge of color photography.

AT THE McCARTHY

"THE YOUNG IN HEART"

The most fascinating family that ever menaced a heart—or a bankroll is now on the screen in the feature production now playing at the McCarthy Theatre.

They're the Charming (with a capital C) Carletons in David O. Selznick's comedy romance "The Young In Heart," starring Janet Gaynor, Douglas Fairbanks, Jr. and Paulette Goddard, who makes her talking debut following her discovery in Charlie Chaplin's "Modern Times."

Prominently featured in the supporting cast of this film based on the I. A. R. Wylie Saturday Evening Post serial, "The Gay Banditti," are Roland "Topper" Young, Billie "Mrs. Topper" Burke, Henry Stephenson, popular character actor, Richard Carlson, romantic newcomer from the New York stage, and Minnie Dupree, for more than four decades a popular Broadway actress.

Janet Gaynor has a new type of role in "The Young In Heart" as the daughter who helps her adventurous family chisel their way from the fun-loving Riviera to London, and whose loyalty to them almost costs her the love of her highly-principled young millionaire fiance (Richard Carlson).

Her brother (Fairbank, Jr.) also assists in the game of charming fakery until he meets a beautiful secretary, in the person of Paulette Goddard, and completely forgets his frantic search for an heiress.

Father "Sahib" Carleton (Roland Young) does his part by carrying a spare ace up his sleeve while "Marmy" (Billie Burke) twitters along in her charming fashion helping wherever she can.

The Carletons get kicked out of only the best places. They can turn on their Charm like you'd turn on a faucet. They're guests of the world, these engaging phonies, until at last they match their wits against a lonely old lady's heart. Then things begin to happen that surprise even these blithe and blase spirits.

"Screen Snapshots"

Preceding the feature, "The Young In Heart" the programme includes an exceptionally interesting "Screen Snapshots" featurette, of intimate closeup "shots" of famous Hollywood movie stars, at work and play. Also an amusing and clever technicolor Merrie Melody cartoon entitled "A Day At The Zoo."

WALL STREET CLOSE

New York, May 3 (AP)—Traders increased their activity in the stock market today, sending prices up fractions to full points or more and bettering the previous volumes of the week.

With better prices prevailing all over the quotation boards near the final hour, buying increased on a moderate scale. Transfers approach-600,000 shares.

TORONTO STOCKS CLOSE

Toronto, May 3 (CP)—Sustained recovery marked price movements on the Toronto Exchange today, helped by a lull in the war threats in Europe. Volume picked up on the rise and volume bettered the 400,000 share mark. Trading was heaviest in the secondary gold issues while the base metals moved in better volume and a few industrials, including Brazilian, Dominion Steel and some of the senior oils changed hands in quantity.

Gold gains were mainly in the secondary and junior issues. Wright-Hargreaves traded in volume with the price holding unchanged and Hollinger and Dome improved slightly. Noranda, up a full point to 78, was the strongest of the base metal issues.

Steel, bank, liquor and senior oil issues posted more gains than losses and the foods were mainly steady. Home Oil, Okalta and Davies were stronger issues in the western oil group.

Toronto Butter Prices Improve

Toronto, May 3. — Butter prices pushed upward on the Toronto open produce market yesterday, while little change occurred in eggs, according to the Dominion Department of Agriculture.

Steady demand readily absorbed arrivals of fresh receipts on the butter market. Offerings were generally light, with the west not pressing supplies on this market. Some sales were recorded in Ontario solids at 20¾c in the morning session, but prices closed out the day at 21c for No. 1 grade Ontario creamery solids and 20½c for 38 score. Prints held unchanged at 22½c to 23c for top grades and 21¾c to 22¼c for 38 score.

Afternoon trading was slow on the egg market, but prices remained at about previous levels. Receipts were in normal volume. The tendency was to widen the spread to 2c between grades A-large and A-medium. Graded shipments closed at 20½c for grade A-large, 19c for medium, 18c to 18½c for B's and 17c to 18c for C grades.

Produce Weakens in Montreal.

Montreal, May 3.—Creamery butter and cheese prices weakened slightly in quiet trading on open produce markets here yesterday, the Dominion Department of Agriculture reported.

Creamery butter prints to retailers sold for 21¾-22 cents a pound and solids for 21¼-22½ cents.

TERM REDUCED BY MAGISTRATE

Joseph Parks, Trenton, Gets Month Lopped Off His Sentence

"He must be a better lawyer than I am," exclaimed Jacob Goodman, local barrister as he stood and listened to his client appeal to the court at Trenton yesterday and subsequently have his term of imprisonment reduced from two months to a single month term, after Joseph Parks, Trenton, had been convicted on a charge of false pretences, arising out of the alleged issuing of worthless cheques.

Parks was convicted as charged and after hearing the circumstances His Worship Magistrate E. J. Butler K.C., sentenced the accused Parks to two months at hard labor. Both Crown Attorney B. O. Donnan K.C., for the prosecution, and Mr. Goodman for the defendant, had addressed the court, when Parks suddenly spoke on his own behalf.

"Your Worship, I have a large family and they will all become a charge on the community. Also my wife is an expectant mother and I appeal to you to reduce my sentence, especially under these circumstances," Parks pleaded in tears.

His Worship accepted the accused man's story and reduced the jail term to one month, instead of the originally imposed 60 days. It was at this point, that Mr. Goodman made his statement commending the accused upon his pleading oratory on his own behalf.

3 BEARS SEEN NEAR MALONE

Bruins Appeared to Have Wintered Well and Not Least Bit Scared

Marmora, May 3.— (Special)—Motoring along the highway between Deloro and Malone shortly before dusk on Monday evening, Mr. and Mrs. Alexander Nickle and Miss Jeana Nickle had what Mrs. Nickle describes as an 'enjoyable thrill' when near to John Terrion's residence they notice ahead what at first they supposed to be upheaved road surface, coming closer they noticed that it was a mother bear and two half grown cubs sniffing around. A sniff of the gas from the approaching car caused them a little disgust so they ambled off to the side of the road and passing through a gap in the fence, made off towards a marsh.

The bears looked as though they had known no depression and their fur was noticed to be quite glossy. Near where the bears were seen is an old deer runway.

Planting of 16,000 Small Trees Starts Today at Zwick's Island

Under Supervision of R. S. Carman, from Ontario Forestry Department

Under the careful supervision of R. S. Carman, expert of the Ontario Forestry Department branch, Toronto) work was commenced at Zwick's Island on the planting of the first shipment of 16,000 small trees received by the City of Belleville from the Forestry Department yesterday.

Today signalled the commencement of an ambitious reforestation project of the city's vacant lands and parks this summer which will include the planting of an expected 20,000 trees which are being supplied free of charge by the Ontario government.

Carefully packed and protected the small trees on their arrival in Belleville yesterday were taken at once to Zwick's Island where special trenches have been dug to receive them. They will be fed and fertilised in these trenches, and given their first start in the ground. They will be taken from these trenches as needed for planting by the relief men now engaged in this work.

Long rows have been cut in the top soil of the island, spaced six feet apart, and the various trees which include Scotch pine, hard maple, red cedar, Norway pine, blue spruce and other types will be planted. It is estimated that five or six thousand will be used for reforesting the island, and when this location is completed, other vacant areas within the city will be treated.

PREMIER DENIES

would take the "proper steps" to have the Prime Minister's statement drawn to the attention of the German government.

There was no answer when Lieut. Commander Reginald Fletcher, Labor, asked if reciprocal assurances exchanged at Munich had not since been found worthless.

Against Aggression

Philip Noel Baker, Labor, asked the government to make plain that guarantees "may be participated in by any government prepared in good faith to renounce aggression."

The Prime Minister replied that the guarantees given to Poland, Rumania and Greece by Great Britain were "against aggression and solely aggression." He said he had noted that the government would be glad to consider and proposals for their extension.

Richard Butler, Under-Secretary for Foreign Affairs, said in answer to questions that Britain did not plan to make her guarantees of the independence of Rumania and Greece reciprocal.

Thus although Britain has pledged her aid to these countries if their independence is threatened, she does not expect a similar pledge from them.

In response to an assertion that Earl Baldwin had pledged the present national government against conscription in 1935 when he was Prime Minister, Mr. Chamberlain replied in defence of the government's decision to introduce conscription:

Change in Situation

"At that time (in 1935) there was no intention to increase armaments. Since then the march of events has made necessary the most costly rearmament program ever undertaken by this country when not at war and the same consideration compelled us to adopt the limited measure of compulsory training."

The cabinet was reported reliably to have rejected Russia's proposal for a joint guarantee by Great Britain, France and the Soviet to all Baltic and Black Sea States.

It was reported, however, that the cabinet decided to urge the Soviet government to "reinsure" Anglo-French commitments to Poland and Rumania.

Recommendation By Halifax.

The cabinet was said to have taken this decision after Poland told Great Britain she preferred to make a separate agreement with Russia.

After reviewing separate contacts with Poland, Rumania, Finland, Estonia, Latvia and Lithuania, Foreign Secretary Viscount Halifax was said by reliable sources to have recommended to the cabinet that Britain will tell Russia:

1. That Britain can not enter into a triple entente guaranteeing these states when Poland and Rumania do not want a flat guarantee by Russia without provision for them to specify when it will operate;
2. That Britain is eager to continue discussions with Russia with a view to eventual formation of a British-French-Russian alliance of mutual military aid.

Lord Halifax was said to have recommended that Britain urge Russia to declare she is prepared to support the British-French guarantees to Poland and Rumania "if, as and when" her support is desired.

May Not Scrap Ships.

Mr. Chamberlain for the third successive day said he could make no public announcement concerning negotiations for inclusion in the anti-aggression bloc.

The government, Mr. Chamberlain said, was considering what reply should be made to Germany over the Reich's renunciation of the Anglo-German naval treaty.

Later J. J. Llewellin, Civil Lord of the Admiralty, said the admiralty was reconsidering a decision to scrap in 1942 two battleships of the Royal Sovereign class.

These vessels, which were to have been scrapped under terms of the Anglo-German treaty, are considered important for use as convoy leaders in time of war.

Bonus For Tillage.

Sir Reginald Dorman-Smith, Minister of Agriculture, announced a bonus scheme to bring 250,000 acres of pasture land into production. A bonus of £2 (about $9.35) an acre will be paid for grass land ploughed up in 1939.

The idea behind the bonus scheme is to increase the arable land of the country so that in wartime it could be used to grow essential foods. Elaborate plans have been drafted on wartime agricultural production, Sir Reginald said, but they could not be put into operation in advance of war. Meanwhile the bonus scheme would increase arable land as an essential first step.

Sir Reginald said steps have been taken "to enroll persons willing to work on the land in the event of war, and intensive training courses are being planned."

"Reserves of fertilizers have been secured an dplans made to reorganize the distribution of fertilizers, feeding stuffs, tractors and other machinery, fuel, implements, seeds and other requisites for war time."

Rev. J. B. Creeggan Inducted Rector Picton Anglican Church

Lord Bishop of Ontario and Other Dignitaries Present

SERMON DELIVERED

Picton, May 3.—The Lord Bishop of Ontario, Archdeacon Dumbrille, rector of Napanee; Canon Swayne of Bonarlaw, Rev. E. N. Grant of Wellington; Rural Dean A. Beauchamp Payne of Belleville; Rev. Arthur Smith of Trenton; Rev. J. Anderson of Marysburg; Rev. A. S. McConnell of Stirling; Rev. H. R. Pettem of Prescott; Rev. Mr. Strother of Carrying Place; Rev. C. C. Winter of Cataraqui and Rev. Mr. Brazill of Adolphustown, assisted at the Induction of Rev. J. B. Creeggan as rector of the Church of St. Mary Magdalene, Picton, which was held in the church on Monday evening, May 1st.

Large Congregation

A large gathering filled the church for the impressive service. Visitors from Wellington and outside points were present. Beautiful rose and white carnations adorned the altar. A full surpliced choir with Miss E. Holmes at the organ rendered the special anthem "I Will Lift Up My Eyes unto the Hills" with the solo taken by Mr. Michael Patterson and the duet taken by Mrs. R. Sayers and Mrs. F. Webster, Prof. Wheatley of Belleville, assisted the choir most ably.

Accompanied by his chaplain, the Bishop, the rector and clergy present, proceeded to the various stations for the admonitions, the font, the place where the prayers are said, the lectern and pulpit and to the altar for the final admonitions.

Splendid Address

Rev. H. R. Pettem L. Th., rector of Prescott, delivered a very fine address on the relations that should exist between the rector and his parishioners. He stressed the point that a minister is selected above all else "as a Man of God"—a calling to serve not material things, but spiritual things. A minister feels it a joy and a privilege to be busy in God's service, but time must be given him to be alone with God and with his books. In the church the rector must be definite in his opinions, and small differences of opinion that might breed hatred and discord must be forgotten. Mr. Pettem explained that parish calls should be used by the parishioner for his own particular good, when prayer may be offered and advice and opinions on spiritual matters obtained. The rector needs the full co-operation of every member of the parish. Each parishioner should offer his services so the rector may know who he can depend on in any emergency. It is the duty of the parishioner to assist the rector in seeking out lost sheep and those who have not been baptised and confirmed. The speaker stressed the necessity for giving to the support of the church and said if the average family gave as much to God as they spent in amusements and luxuries, a special committee would need to be appointed to handle the money. But better a church filled to the doors with a humble congregation, than an empty church with full coffers. There is no greater enemy of Christ than indifference, deadness in so-called Christians. We should talk together about the wonders of that love, that was shown at Calvary. The product of the church is souls for the Kingdom of God. Let us realize the blessings that through our church can be brought to us. "Ye are all one in Christ Jesus".

Social Hour

At the close of the service a social hour was enjoyed in the Parish Hall. The guests were welcomed by Mrs. Geo. Haddon, president of the Guild, who with her committee served refreshments. At a beautifully appointed buffet table, coffee was poured by Mrs. Colden, Mrs. Tully, Mrs. Conway and Miss V. McLean.

Replenishing the tea table were, Mrs. Ryckman, Mrs. Cooper, Mrs. Williams, Mrs. Le Heup and Mrs. Mallett.

Assisting in serving were Mrs. J. K. Patterson, Miss Una Patterson, Mrs. Monte Shannon, Mrs. C. H. Leavens, Mrs. F. Webster, Mrs. J. H. Walmsley, Mrs. J. Inrig, Mrs. Bronskill, Mrs. Chas. Patterson and Mrs. E. H. McLean. Here the Bishop spoke very feelingly as to the members of his former parish where he served for three years.

Rev. Mr. Creeggan spoke also of his appreciation to all who had contributed to this memorable evening.

3 HOME AND GARDEN PLANNING CLUBS ORGANIZED IN COUNTY

Three Home and Garden planning clubs have been organized within Hastings County during the past week. Miss Greta Pollard, Bowmanville, in charge of girls' junior work in Central Ontario under the auspices of the Women's Institutes of Ontario, has been successful in forming clubs in Eldorado, Cooper and Chatterton.

Mrs. John Gawley has been chosen leader of the Eldorado group, with Miss M. Tennyson as president, and Mrs. Douglas Bailey as secretary. Mrs. M. Reynolds is leader of the Cooper group, with Mrs. Dennis Chapman, president, Mrs. Ross Greenley, vice-president, and Miss Edna Phillips secretary.

JOHN D. MORIN
(Ottawa)

John D. Morin, well-known commercial traveller and father of Linus A. Morin, of Hull Volants, died of a heart attack at his home, 141 Hamilton avenue, Ottawa, on Monday shortly before midnight. He was 55.

Mr. Morin was taken ill while preparing to drive to his office in the morning. He was confined to his bed during the day after being given medical attention. In the evening he rallied, and appeared to on the way to recovery, but he suffered another attack.

Born in Maniwaki, Que, he was a son of the late Mr. and Mrs. Antoine Morin. As a young man in Maniwaki he was employed as a clerk in the Logue general store, and about 27 years ago he became a commercial traveller and moved to Ottawa. For the past 18 years he was Eastern Ontario representative for the Ottawa Paint Works, Limited.

Through his work, Mr. Morin was acquainted with many leading merchants in Ottawa and district, among whom he enjoyed wide popularity and respect. He was a leading member of the United Commercial Travellers of America.

Mr. Morin was a parishioner of St. Mary's Church. Surviving are his wife, the former Annie Behan; one daughter, Mrs. M. Kelly, of Ottawa; four sons, William Francis Morin, Linus Anthony, John T. (Ted) Morin and Robert W. Morin, all of Ottawa; one sister, Mrs. E. Joanis, and two brothers, Arthur and Patrick Morin, all of Maniwaki, and one grandson, Robert Kelly.

Mrs. R. J. Moher, Victoria Avenue, is a brother-in-law of the late Mr. Morin.

LATE CLARE C. CASEMENT

The funeral of Clare Cecil Casement took place from the Martin Funeral Home, Church street, Tuesday afternoon, May 2nd. The service in the chapel and at the graveside in Wooler Cemetery was conducted by Ven. Archdeacon Dumbrille, Rector of the Anglican Church in Napanee.

The bearers were Messrs. William Strachan, Ralph Allison, Wilbur Sherry, Norman Garbutt, John McLaughlin and Ray Smith.

CHARLES A. CALLERY

Charles A. Callery, a former resident of Cannifton and clerk of Thurlow Township for many years, passed away suddenly early Tuesday evening, May 2nd, at his residence 255 Westlake Avenue, Toronto.

The late Charles Anson Callery was born 81 years ago in the 3rd concession of Thurlow Township, his parents being the late Mr. and Mrs. James Callery. Practically all his life was passed in the township where he was born and his home was at Cannifton until three years ago, when he went to reside in Toronto. For twenty-one years he filled most efficiently the office of clerk of Thurlow Township and he was held in high regard in the community. Many old friends and acquaintances will regret to learn of his death.

In religion Mr. Callery was a member of the Methodist Church, later the United Church, and fraternally he was a member of the Masonic Order at Centreville Ont. In politics he was a Liberal.

Surviving him are his wife, who prior to her marriage was Miss Kathrine Edgar of Croydon, Ont.; two daughters, Mrs. N. C. Pearce, Port Credit, Ont., and Mrs. W. H. Bell, Newmarket, Ont.; one son, Mr. Robert E. Callery, Cannifton; three sisters, Miss Mary Callery, Cannifton; Mrs. G. W. Hammond, Campbellford, and Miss Hattie Callery, Belleville; one brother, Dr. A. L. Callery, Port Huron, Mich.

The funeral will take place at Cannifton; the announcement is made elsewhere in this paper.

MRS. FANNY LANGLEY WOODS
(Wallbridge)

After an illness of over two months' duration, Mrs. Fanny L. Woods, wife of William Woods, Wallbridge, passed away in the Belleville General Hospital today in her 52nd year.

Mrs. Woods was the daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Francis E. Harris of Huntingdon Township and had resided in the Wallbridge community for the past 23 years. Five sons, John, George, Edward, Francis and Ralph, all of Stirling; survive, besides one brother, W. G. Harris of Madoc and her husband.

The late Mrs. Woods was an active church worker being the Past President of the Women's Missionary Society of the Presbyterian Church at Foxboro and also was the secretary of the Women's Institute at Wallbridge.

The funeral announcement will appear on Thursday.

DECIDES

sor was slain the night of Jan. 7.

Shea declared that Mickey and his 19-year-old brother Alex obtained two revolvers from Shea's apartment earlier that night and went out "on a job". The brothers are charged jointly with Windsor's murder.

"Looked Excited"

Highlight of Shea's testimony was his description of how Mickey "looked excited" on his return to the apartment and admitted he killed a man who "got tough and showed fight." Although Alex protested the shot was not fatal, Shea quoted Mickey further as saying:

"I shot him here' (Pointing to his stomach) I know when a man's dead. I saw his eyes roll. I saw the white of his eyes. It's all right, he was a bookie. He was a no-good—anyway."

The crown is attempting to prove the MacDonalds and one or two others invaded Windsor's North Toronto home threatened him with demands "to open the box" and that Mickey shot Windsor in the abdomen with a .45 revolver and later robbed him of jewelry.

Witness quoted Alex as asking "about the jewelry," and Mickey as replying "the watch was thrown out the window of the car and Louis Gallow has the tie pin and the ring." He said he later learned from Alex the .45 revolver was broken up.

Stiff Examination

Shea underwent a grilling from defence counsel Frank Regan when recalled to the witness stand today.

Shea answered in the negative when Regan asked if he were 'the kind of a man who would lie to suit your own purposes."

"But you gave a false name to rent an apartment," Regan said. "Wasn't that a lie?"

"Yes," Shea answered.

"Wasn't that a lie to suit your own purposes?"

"No, the circumstances were different. I was wanted by the police for a bank robbery. It was the natural thing to do."

Shea admitted having been identified by two witnesses as the holdup man in a Toronto shoestore robbery, but no charge had been laid against him in that connection.

"And you haven't been brought to trial on the Port Credit bank robbery in which an innocent teller was shot?"—"No."

Shea said a case involving theft of a radio from his former employer was not pressed against him. He claimed his employer offered him his job back "after the thing was settled." Regan asked Shea his reason for giving evidence against the MacDonalds.

"Well, I'll tell you. It was the worry over this murder. Ten or 12 years in the pen on the bank robbery charge would be cosy. I knew that if Mickey MacDonald was picked up—the way he talks —I would be brought back from the pen in six or seven months and implicated in this affair.

"I figured I would be charged with the Windsor slaying if I didn't talk while I had the opportunity."

In answer to another question, Shea said he was "too close to keep quiet," despite his innocence.

Mr. Justice G. F. MacFarlane asked: "Did you expect to be charged?"

"No," returned Shea. "I just wanted to remove the danger of being charged."

Shea said he made up his mind to "tell all" before he was arrested. This was on Jan. 21 and the murder was committed Jan. 7.

Shea said he was picked up for the bank robbery and police interviewed him twice. He told them immediately of what he knew of the Windsor case and they checked his story, the witness declared. Later he was taken to Lambton jail, where he signed a statement.

Gordon Asselstine, Belleville, Guilty Of 3 Theft Charges

St. Catharines, Ont., May 3 (CP)—Gordon Asselstine, 29, of Belleville, pleaded guilty today to three charges of theft and breaking and entering, and was remanded in custody until next Friday by Magistrate J. H. Campbell in County Court. John Franklin is counsel for Asselstine.

Crown Attorney E. H. Lancaster, K.C., in asking for the remand said the case is connected "to some extent" to the case of Gerald Tye, 37, of Napanee, on remand in the Lincoln County jail to appear next Friday on a breaking and entering charge.

Asselstine admitted stealing two bags of timothy seed from Hugh Hunter, North Grimsby, on April 7; the theft of bags of clover, Lucerne, and timothy seed from Walter Seldrake, South Grimsby, and breaking and entering the granary of Rother Masley, of South Grimsby, both on April 9.

BROTHERHOOD IS WORLD'S NEED

Rev. Claude Troupe Olmstead is Special Speaker at Kiwanis Club

"Our great world need is a grand united brotherhood", said Rev. Claude Troupe Olmstead in speaking to the Kiwanis Club at their regular luncheon on Tuesday at the Queen's Hotel. Although Mr. Olmstead is a newcomer to Canada, he was born in this Dominion, he has made many friends since taking up residence in Belleville. He has been in charge of a large congregation in Ohio for a number of years and is now pastor of Victoria Avenue Baptist Church.

In his address to the members after having been fittingly introduced by P. C. MacLaurin stated that service clubs and other organizations could form one great brotherhood with one will and one common understanding and the ills and troubles of the world would soon be solved. He praised the work of the Red Cross in this respect and asked the members to support the movement on every possible occasion. He stated that this world owed a great deal to the past for "those days were great days".

He spoke of a conversation with Clarence Darrow at one time, when he was asked "What do you attribute your great success as a criminal lawyer?" and the noted jurist instantly flashed back I try to present the case in such a manner, that the man sitting in the jury box can place himself in the same position as the accused man."

"That is the great principle of life", said the speaker. "Place yourself in the other fellow's place and appreciate his point of view". We should teach the youth that it is infinitely easier to preserve peace than to wage war. Mr. Olmstead told several witty stories which fitted into the theme of his address and Ross Stiver thanked the speaker on behalf of the club for the fine address. Supervisors were appointed to handle the Ki-Y Softball loop and everything is in readiness for the opening games. Jack McIntosh led the singing with Ted Hughes as Sergeant at arms and 'Dick' Flynn presided.

ANNOUNCE $25 PRIZE

At a meeting of the Frontenac Ploughmen's Association held in Kingston yesterday it was announced that a special prize of $25 is being donated by the Kingston and District Agricultural Society to the highest scoring ploughmen in intercounty competition in horse ploughs open to boys in the counties of Hastings, Prince Edward, Lennox-Addington, Frontenac and Leeds this year.

S.S. CALGARIAN DOCKS AT PICTON; CAPTAIN GETS THE CIGARS

Picton navigation season was officially opened on Saturday last when the S. S. Calgarian, an eastbound package-freighter, docked at the wharf to load shipments of canned goods.

Captain A. Allen, master of the vessel received the customary box of cigars, a tradition which the Prince Edward County town has carried out for a number of years, in honoring the first vessel of the season.

MUDCATS BITING WELL

A string of nearly forty good-sized mudcats was exhibited at the government dock early last evening by one local fisherman as a proof that this delectable fish has arrived in the bay in good numbers and is now providing plenty of sport for after dusk fishermen of the city and district. Several boats were also observed at anchor in the harbor last evening, and fishing by occupants was also reported good.

DISCARDED CHRISTMAS TREE DAMAGES THE PROPELLER OF BOAT

Discarded Christmas trees which cluttered up the winter landscape of the lower section of the city during the cold months and now floating aimlessly on the slow currents of the bay almost submerged in the water have become one of the latest hazard to power boat owners out with their craft. Last evening one fisherman reported a badly bent propeller shaft as the result of striking one of the unseen trees, the limbs of which badly tangled in the propeller.

LIGHT NO BONFIRES ON STREET PAVEMENTS

Bonfires are again glowing in the dusk on city streets after dusk evenings as residents commence the first spring cleanup and raking of their yards, and again notice is given by the city works department that a bylaw prohibits the igniting of fires on roadways which are permanently surfaced, or of oiled or macadamized nature. Considerable street damage has been done in the past by carelessly placed fires it is pointed out.

FORMER TRENTON RESIDENT DIES

Windsor, Ont., May 3.— (CP)—Mrs. Levi Carter, 60, who died here today after a brief illness will be buried Saturday at Clandeboye, Ont. Mrs. Carter, a native of Trenton, moved here from Clandeboye, 22 years ago. Beside her husband, and a sister, she is survived by two brothers, Harry J. Kuhn of Crediton and Samuel Kuhn of Exeter.

PICTON

FIRE DESTROYS PAIR OF BARNS

Bernard Reid, Tenant, Releases Eleven Cattle and Carries Out Five Calves

Picton, May 2—Fire destroyed two barns owned by Bernard Shannon, near Picton yesterday. These are located on a cross-road, midway between Picton and Bloomfield. Breaking out in one barn, the flames quickly spread to the other and soon both were a mass of flames. Bernard Reid, a tenant, entered the blazing structure and released eleven head of cattle and was forced to carry five calves to safety. The wind was not in the direction of other buildings and it was not a difficult task to keep sparks from igniting them.

In the barn was a large quantity of hay and several hundred bushels of grain.

Origin of the fire is unknown. Mr. Reid was in the fields at the time and Mrs. Reid was in the village. Only the children were at home. The loss is partly covered by insurance.

Dedicates Organ

Picton, May 2—Right Rev. John Lyons, Lord Bishop of the Diocese of Ontario, on Sunday dedicated the organ which T. W. Kinney, of Picton, gave to St. John's Anglican Church at Waupoos, in memory of his parents, the late Mr. and Mrs. William Kinney, who for many years were members of the church.

Bishop Lyons delivered an impressive sermon on fear. The message of the first Easter, "Fear Not," is especially timely today, said the Bishop. "Today we have class conditions, petty isms of community life, international complications—all due to fear. Men are suspicious today. Where suspicion is rampant, it breeds fear. Fear divides individuals, community life and the nations of the world. If it were not for fear, the nations of the world would not be arming themselves today. If fear was banished and love, truth and peace possessed, life would take on a different color."

The Bishop declared that the church had not failed. It may have fallen short in some things, but it had accomplished much good. "If the church is going to flourish we cannot maintain it by slipshod methods. We must add some of the sacrifice and service which characterized the pioneers of our land. If we don't appear in God's house on Sunday, how are we going to get the masses going to church?

"The church is the greatest possession in life and humanity fails if the church loses out," declared Bishop Lyons. "Let us work and give freely as those who have received generously and freely from the Giver of all things."

Rev. A. J. Anderson, priest-in-charge of St. John's, expressed gratitude to Mr. Kinney for his very much appreciated gift.

Confirmation Service

Sunday evening, Bishop Lyons delivered the sermon at the Church of St. Mary Magdalene, Picton, when the rector, Rev. J. B. Creeggan presented a class of twenty for confirmation. His Lordship spoke on "The Power of Faith." Rev. A. J. Anderson of Marysburg Parish, assisted in the service.

U. S. Coal Shortage Ties up Shipping

Buffalo, N.Y., May 2—(AP)—A shortage of bituminous coal because of the current mine strike threatened today to curtail Lake Erie shipping.

The Boland and Cornelius Steamship Company reported two of its vessels had been ordered to tie-up at Toledo after being commissioned several weeks ago.

Adam E. Cornelius, Sr., of the company said the coal supplies at Lake Erie ports were diminishing rapidly and unless new supplies were forthcoming more ships would be laid up.

Shipments from Canada Stopped

Port Colborne, May 2—(CP)—The shipping of coal from Canada to United States ports has been discontinued, according to local coal company and shipping officials, largely because of the fear of a coal shortage in Canada should the mine strike in the United States continue.

About 1,000 tons had been shipped by car and truck to Niagara Falls, N.Y., from Port Colborne, prior to discontinuing the shipments.

Coal carriers have had a slow season. The Coalhaven cleared Port Colborne yesterday for Oswego, N.Y. for a cargo of coal after having been tied up in Port Colborne since the latter part of last week.

Build Tiny Cars To Keep Tax Down

London, May 2—(AP) — British tobacco and automobile manufacturers are planning "budget packages" of cigarettes and even smaller cars to cope with increased taxes for rearmament.

At first it appeared the new cigarette tax would throw thousands of vending machines out of commission. Manufacturers decided to charge the same price for a package of two less cigarettes.

The 25-shilling ($5.85) per horsepower tax on automobiles brought plans from at least five manufacturers for tiny cars. Some are said to develop about six horsepower with a top speed of 50 miles an hour to get around 55 miles to the gallon.

International At a Glance

Oslo, Norway, May 2 (AP)—Halvdan Koht, Norwegian Foreign Minister, declared today that "small states have been forced to return to their old policy of neutrality" and that Norway should arm herself sufficiently to ensure neutrality. He said "we cannot bring any effective help to other states but we will have a defence which enables us to protect our neutrality. We hope thus to keep out of war."

New York, May 2 (AP)—Inquiries for more than 4,000,000 pounds of copper to be used presumably for armament purposes were received by the metal trades today. Of the total, 1,500,000 pounds is being sought direct from producers, it was said in copper circles, by Great Britain.

London, May 2 (AP) — Alfred Byrne, Lord Mayor of Dublin, telegraphed Prime Minister Chamberlain today urging exclusion of the six counties of Northern Ireland from conscription. "Efforts to enforce conscription (in Northern Ireland) would meet with resistance and disaster and have appalling consequences," the Lord Mayor said.

Gibraltar, May 2 (AP)—Barricades that recently were erected across the main road from Gibraltar into Spain were removed today by a detachment of British Engineers, indicating a lessening of tension. Units of the German fleet on a Mediterranean cruise now at Ceuta, Algeciras, Malaga and Tangier were expected to depart later today for an undisclosed destination.

London, May 2 (CP)—A sharp increase in recruiting for Britain's regular and territorial armies was reported to the House of Commons by War Secretary Leslie Hore-Belisha. He said that from January 1, 1938, to March 31, 1939, 49,415 regular army recruits and 104,890 territorials enlisted as compared to 36,598 and 66,295 respectively for the corresponding period of 1937-38.

LINER TO CARRY ROYAL STANDARD

Empress of Australia Will be Ready for King and Queen Friday

Southampton, England, May 2 (CP)—Despite bad weather, 150 men working on the Empress of Australia expected today to have the liner fully ready by Friday to receive the King and Queen who embark for Canada on Saturday.

Furniture of the Royal yacht Victoria and Albert has been placed aboard the Canadian Pacific liner. A long dining table and chairs from the yacht were installed in the first-class smoking room, now converted into a dining room for use of the King and Queen.

As their Majesties go aboard at Portsmouth, a white ensign will be broken at the ship's stern. The liner also is to fly the Royal Standard and the Union Jack when the King is aboard.

About 20 naval ratings will supplement the ship's regular crew on the transatlantic voyage for signalling and sentry duties.

Many Injured In Underground Rail Collision

London, May 2 (C.P.-Havas) — More than a score of persons were injured when a light steam engine and a crowded underground train collided at Farringdon Street station here early today.

The train crashed into a shunting engine, which was crossing the lines to reach another platform.

The first compartment of the train was wrecked and thrown across a neighboring line, jamming the automatic doors. The crash of the collision brought porters and first aid men rushing to the scene of the accident. They immediately smashed open the windows and doors to extricate the injured.

The platform rapidly was transformed into a first aid station and within a few minutes every injured person was under the care of ambulance doctors. Seven were taken to hospitals.

Chamberlain Asked To Heal Family Breach

London, May 2 (CP)—Before the King and Queen sail for Canada Saturday, Prime Minister Chamberlain "should invite the Duke and Duchess of Windsor home to see them off and to wish them well on their journey." The Daily Express (Independent) suggested yesterday.

"The Duke has been away for a long time," the newspaper said. "For far too long have the animosities which led him to leave these shores been kept alive. During all this time the Duke and Duchess have carried themselves with dignity and with restraint. The moment has arrived to end an exile which divides mother from son, brother from brother.

"Mr. Chamberlain made a wise decision in keeping the Repulse at home. Now is his chance to make his wisdom twice blessed. For he can heal a family breach, he can help further to make the visit of the King and Queen to America an outstanding success."

Will Accompany King and Queen to Canada

Here are six of the retinue of 30 persons who will accompany the King and Queen to Canada. Officials of Scotland Yard, press representatives and other minor dignitaries have already reached Canada and the United States to arrange the thousand-and-one details in connection with the royal visit. TOP, LEFT to RIGHT: Lady Nunburnholme, who will serve as lady-in-waiting to the Queen; the Earl of Airlie, who will act as Lord Chamberlain; Lady Katherine Seymour, who will also be a lady-in-waiting to her Majesty. BOTTOM, LEFT to RIGHT: Lord Eldon, who will serve as lord-in-waiting to the King; the Hon. Piers Legh, equerry to the King and George F. Steward, press officer at No. 10 Downing St.

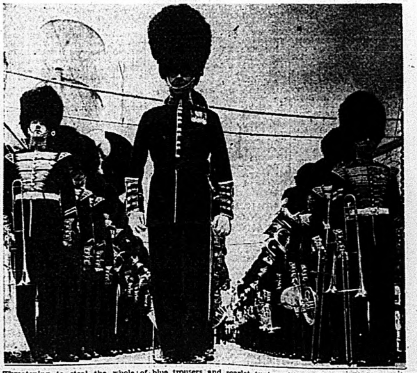
President Roosevelt, Mayor LaGuardia and Mrs. Roosevelt were in high humor as the photographer snapped this picture of the presidential party entering the World's Fair grounds to officially open the gigantic fair. President Roosevelt delivered the opening address.

His Majesty's Band Attends World's Fair Opening



Threatening to steal the whole show, the band of his Majesty's Coldstream Guards assisted in the opening of New York World's Fair. Their colorful uniforms, consisting of blue trousers and scarlet tunics and topped with bearskin busbies, fairly "wowed" blase New Yorkers. Members of the band are shown here as they arrived for their first visit to the United States, aboard the S.S. Aquitania. The band is under the leadership of Captain J. C. Windram, FRONT.

May Day

When May Day demonstrators gathered in Trinity Park, one of several key points from which the annual May Day parade in Toronto converged on Queen's Park, a group of Czecho-Slovakians in native costume joined the west-end contingent. Source of one of the largest groups of marchers in years. Scarboro township was represented in the Toronto demonstration due to the relief strike in the township.

As Princess Royal Inspected Her 'Troops'

The Princess Royal, sister of King George, is shown as she inspected new recruits of the Women's Territorial Service at the Duke of York's headquarters, Chelsea. During the visit of the King to Canada and the United States the Princess Royal will be a member of the council of state appointed to take over the duties of his majesty.

COULD NOT DENY BAIL

Kitchener, Ont., May 2 (CP)—Claiming that the accused had failed to co-operate with police in their investigation of the case, Crown Attorney W. P. Clement argued against the renewal of bail for Mrs. Beatrice Burgess, Kitchener, when the woman appeared in court today on a charge of perjury. Magistrate John R. Blake, however, ruled she could not be denied bail and that police could not compel her to accompany them to Peterborough where the officers sought information, relative to her case.

"Jade"

By HELEN E. BARTON

The professor looked very sad — in fact his expression bordered on the mournful and the cause of it all, though obviously ignoring the effect, was none other than the charming Mrs. Marie Goodell.

Mrs. Goodell ran the select boarding house wherein the professor spent his leisure hours, and made a decently good living from her 12 other boarders.

Mrs. Goodell was a widow and her means were sufficient to allow her to dress modishly and her youth was such that she inspired her one literary boarder to write startling unintelligible odes and poems to her tawny hair, her snapping hazel eyes and her svelte figure. The professor wearied of the long lines of attending males and longed to throw each and every one of them into the chill bracing air of Wilson boulevard.

Not that the professor was interested in Mrs. Goodell as'a man is cessor loved nobody but himself and his passion for that self would not permit the transference of even a minor portion of affection upon anyone else.

For many years he had been the professor of chemistry at a great school in the Middle West, and so influential had been his teachings that the school was honorably proud of a long list of noted scientists upon its alumni roll. And now the professor was retired. He held stock shares in several little thriving drug stores and made a neat living out of his earnings. Naturally conservative, he did not spend much, as most men did, but reserved his spare dollars for his only passion (excepting himself) that of collecting rare old bits of antique jade.

And in Mrs. Goodell he had found a sympathetic listener. He would talk on for hours in his soft, intellectual "classroom" murmur, explaining the history of each little trinklet. Occasionally she would hold up a bit of especially colorful jade to her ears, and smile at the reflection of the tawny hair fringing the amazing green of the ornament.

And occasionally Mrs. Goodell would laugh comfortably over the whims of an old man, for the professor was fifty-one and she but twenty-six. Or she would disturb him with a flashing, eloquent glance from her merry hazel eyes.

At such times the professor would stamp to his room.

Today, the professor har struggled all the morning attempting to achieve a "darky saturnine" smile. He hoped to annihilate his jibers with that look. He had read of it in a current magazine of worth, and he hoped to get procticed up on it so that he might squelch that frivolous Miss Bascomb, who taught French to the junior high students.

And the result had been ridicule.

It was too much. It was more than mortal man could stand. He would leave. He would return to the hills of his native New Hampshire and spend the rest of his days in peace and quiet away from this horde of gibbering females.

The effrontery of it! Miss Bascombhad said: "Pain in your old tum-tum, prof?" when he'd tried to smother the exuberance of the lively Miss Jennison with "a darkly saturnine" smile.

Mrs. Goodell smiled a knowing little smile, suggesting: "The professor is returning to his native heath, the better to be a real lion in a little jungle—instead of vice versa!"

"Oh, now, professor! That's too bad. What will you do with all those lovely little pieces of green glass—with nobody to show 'em to?" continued the iddepressible Miss Jennison.

"I fancy my jade will be appreciated as well—elsewhere!" remarked the professor stiffly.

"Well, you know—each to his own kind!" laughed Miss Bascomb, and not until he was on the train did he comprehend the significance of her remark and then it brought a deep red flush to his soft, heavy pink cheeks. "Jade—to—jade!" he muttered, and stared out over the flat prairie with a new bitterness in his heart.

Back on Wilson boulevard, Mrs. Goodell and her merry family made merrier than ever, their jolly wits flashing with kneened edges at one another. Only Mrs. Goodell remarked slowly, as she moved the professor's chair back to the wall and moved the other places nearer: "Poor dear. So deluded!"

And unknown to Mrs. Goodell, Professor Rand was ruthlessly destroying the tiny green shoot of what might have bloomed into love, had not he fled so hastily, for he knew at last, now that he'd burned his bridges, that he might have learned to like little Mrs. Marie Goodell a great deal more than he liked his jade—and himself.

4 ADDITIONAL HOLIDAYS FOR RURAL COURIERS

Ottawa, May 2 (CP) — Canada's rural mail delivery couriers have been granted four more holidays this year, Postmaster General McLarty announced today. Heretofore the couriers have received only Christmas and New Year's Day as official holidays. Now they will receive Dominion Day, Labor Day, Thanksgiving Day and Good Friday as well.

Representations recently were made by the Rural Mail Carriers' Association for the extra holidays.

DUCE TRIES TO AVERT BREAK OVER DANZIG

Change in Russian Foreign Affairs Proves Sensation

Change of Policy At Crucial Time Say Observers

Wyacheslaff Molotoff Right Hand Man of Stalin, Succeeds Veteran Maxim Litvinoff at Foreign Office

BERLIN HAILS MOVE

Observers Believe A Vital Turn in Russian Foreign Policy Has Come in Latest Move

By WADE WERNER
Associated Press Foreign Staff

Litvinoff, father of the Soviet policy of collective security and the man against whom some of the heaviest artillery of Nazi propaganda has thundered for years—partly because he is Jewish—was 'released' from his duties as Commissar of Foreign Affairs last night.

The announcement said the 62-year-old diplomat had been released from his duties at his own request"—the same words used last September in announcing the departure of Mikolai Yezhoff from his post of Commissar of Internal Affairs. Yezhoff was retained as Commissar of Water Transport.

Elimination a Sensation

To foreign observers the elimination of Litvinoff was more of a sensation than the removal of Yezhoff. Many believed a vital turn in Russian foreign policy had come. But what effect it would have was not clear and there were many conjectures.

THE WEATHER

Toronto, May 4—(CP)—Synopsis—A moderate disturbance, centred off Nantucket and moving slowly northeastward, has caused rain in the southwest portion of the Maritimes. Showers have also occurred in Northern Ontario though in other districts of Eastern Canada the weather has been fair. Except for light showers in a few sections, it has been fair in the west, and warm in Saskatchewan and Alberta. Pressure is high from the Lower Lakes southward to Florida and over Hudson Bay with a shallow low moving eastward across Northern Quebec and another covers Northern Saskatchewan.

Why the Weather!

By Major A. H. Thiessen

Winter killing! In the spring are occasionally found trees or shrubs that did not survive the winter. They were winter-killed. This happens not always from low temperatures, but from cold drying winds. It is rarely too cold in winter for plants in their proper habitat if the cold does not hold on too long. Whether a plant can survive a certain temperature depends upon the time of year and condition of the plant, and a most important factor is moisture. Therefore, if you plant some trees or shrubs this spring and fear their surviving the cold of next winter, provide them some protection from the winter's winds until they become more sturdy, and you may then eventually save them.

Beck's Speech May Decide Danzig Issue

Berlin, May 4—A diplomat with intimate knowledge of the German situation expressed the conviction Polish Foreign Minister Beck's speech would decide whether war fears again would be lifted from Europe or whether Chancellor Hitler would take almost immediate action against Danzig and the Polish Corridor.

If Beck is moderate and leaves the door open for negotiations between Germany and Poland, this source predicted, the spectre of war once more will have been banished.

British and Italian diplomacy, is was believed in reliable quarters, were urging the Polish statesman to make every concession compatible with national dignity.

The diplomat, however, gave his opinion that if Beck should disregard these warnings and deliver an uncompromising speech, then German troops may be expected to March against Danzig and the Corridor almost immediately.

He said he had authoritative information that German armies in East Prussia, separated from Germany proper by the Polish Corridor, were ready for action at any moment.

In the discussion of German troop preparedness for action, it was said there was no question of "mobilization" in the accepted sense because that was not necessary.

Heavily Garrisoned

East Prussia, by the frank admission of German government officials, is, more heavily garrisoned and more adequately supplied with instruments of war, especially military planes, than any other section of Germany.

All that is necessary is for the command to be given and German divisions will swarm into Danzig and the Corridor—from East Prussia into the Free City and from Germany proper into the Corridor.

It was contended that nobody realized this more than Sir Nevile Henderson, British Ambassador to Berlin. He was reported reliably to be doing everything possible to convince his government it must urge the Polish Foreign Minister to be moderate in his speech.

May Be Moderate

In Danzig indications that Beck would be moderate in his speech tomorrow were seen in an address delivered by Vice Marshal Surzynski of the Polish parliament to the Polish minority in the Free City yesterday.

Referring to the issues between Poland and Germany, he said "a compromise is not excluded."

It was believed here that Premier Mussolini was pressing the Poles to be "reasonable." But at the same time there were signs that he was using his influence equally in the direction of urging Hitler not to do anything that might lead to a world conflict.

SCHEME IS OUTLINED

Toronto, May 4 (CP) — Fraser Armstrong, superintendent of the Kingston General Hospital, outlined to the Ontario Hospital Association today, Kingston's hospital treatment plan and said it was working satisfactorily on a $2.50 fee and a large-group basis. He urged that every hospital in Ontario co-operate in a province-wide scheme.

Scandinavian Nations to Say 'No' To Hitler Proposals of Pledges

Copenhagen, May 4—(AP)— The Foreign Ministers of Sweden, Finland, Norway and Denmark prepared today to consult at Stockholm May 9 on a common answer to the proposals of Chancellor Hitler that they accept German non-aggression pledges.

From several sources there were indications the Scandinavian nations would decline the offer for fear acceptance of any pact would be a departure from thtir traditional neutrality.

Reports from Sweden said the general impression there was the offer would be rejected. Similar reports were received from Norway.

Riga, Latvia, May 4—(AP)— Latvia was reported in usually reliable quarters today to have replied favorably to Germany's proposal for a non-aggression treaty between the two countries.

(Latvia, along with another Baltic country, Estonia, and four Scandinavian countries, received the proffers of non-aggression pacts.

(Latvia is just north of Poland and Lithuania. Her acceptance of a non-aggression pact would mean Poland was surrounded on three sides by Germany and her sympathizers or by countries neutralized by German non-aggression pacts in event of trouble over Danzig or any other Polish-German question.

(Lithuania, wedged between Poland and Latvia, already has a treaty with Germany binding her not to help a third power in a war with Germany.)

Bittterly Attacks Record of Party During Term and Predicts Its Downfall

BUDGET APPROVED

Two Western Liberals Line Up Against the Government on the Budget Vote

Ottawa, May 4—(CP)—The government was a major step ahead in the business of this parliamentary session today with Finance Minister Dunning's budget approved and moved into committee stage by a 144-54 vote.

The vote, taken late last night, saw Conservatives, C.C.F., Social Credit members and two western Liberals unite to support a C.C.F. sub-amendment and the Conservative amendment to the budget resolution but even then the government rolled up a majority of 90. Dr. H. R. P. Leming of Humboldt and Harry Leader of Portage La Prairie, dissenting Liberals, lined up against the budget.

Four days of intense debate were climaxed by a rapid-fire barrage against government policy by Conservative Leader Manion.

ELAINE BARRIE SECLUDES SELF

Refuses to Comment on Barrymore's Suit Against Her

New York, May 4—(AP)—Elaine Barrie, 24-year-old wife of 57-year-old actor John Barrymore, secluded herself in her apartment today and refused to discuss her husband's suits for a separation and an accounting of $300,000.

Her only comment on his charge that she had conspired to "defraud and deceive" him was the declaration: "There is no hope for reconciliation this time."

The "great profile" she married four years ago after a cross-country romance was more vocal. At Sioux City, Iowa, Barrymore said last night:

"Well, there is $300,000 scattered around somewhere and it is best to know where it is."

The veteran actor denied the separation suit was a prelude to a fifth marriage.

GERMAN GENERAL DIES

Potsdam, Germany, May 4 (AP)—General Wilhelm Groener, 71, the last Quartermaster General of the Imperial German Army and for four years Minister of Defence under the post-war republic, died today.

Groener was regarded as one of the best strategists in the German army. Several of his books on military tactics are rated as classics. He retired after Adolf Hitler came to power in 1933 and built a small home outside Potsdam.

Civilization to Collapse Unless Nations Accept Authority of Order—Eden

London, May 4—(CP—Havas)—A warning that nations will destroy each other unless they accept the authority of some international order is made by Anthony Eden, former Foreign Secretary, in the preface to a volume of his speeches published today under the title "Foreign Affairs."

"There is no middle course," Mr. Eden writes. "We live in a period of recurrent crisis. The British people are not ashamed to proclaim that they regard enduring peace as the greatest benefit that can be conferred on mankind.

"Search as we may, we have as yet been unable to devise a halfway house between international anarchy and international order in the modern world.

"Slowly and painfully the task of rebuilding order must be undertaken. It must be the prayer of each one of us that the nations will yet turn their hands to the task before universal conflict has laid our civilization in ruins.

"The omens are not auspicious. At best the world now enjoys no more than uneasy respites between successive acts of violence. International standards are despised, international good faith derided."

BOMBS INJURE 3 IN LONDON IN SERIES OF BLASTS

Letter Box Explosion Injures Girl in Newstand

SHOP IS WRECKED

London, May 4—(CP)—Three persons were injured today when bombs exploded in widely separated sections of London.

The bombings, attributed to members of the outlawed Irish republican army, followed a series of blasts in Coventry, Birmingham and Liverpool and came shortly after two youths received prison sentences for setting a bomb which damaged the Hammersmith bridge March 29.

Numerous windows were smashed when a bomb exploded in High Holborn. A few hours later another exploded in the letter box of an automobile firm in Euston, slightly injuring a young girl working in a nearby newspaper stand.

WITNESS DENIES ALLEGATIONS OF DEFENCE COUNSEL

Clancy Says He Did Not Tell Sisters Unnamed Woman 'Treated Badly' by Windsor

WINDSOR'S FRIEND

Toronto, May 4—(CP)—Evidence that a woman who lived with James Windsor died a year and a half before Windsor was slain last Jan. 7 was introduced today at the trial of Alex and Mickey MacDonald on charges of murdering the Toronto bookmaker.

The unnamed woman was mentioned first by defence counsel Isadore Levinter in his questioning of Cecil (Doc) Clancy, friend of Windsor. Clancy denied that he ever had told the MacDonald brothers' sister that the unnamed woman died because Windsor "treated her so badly."

"Did you tell her you knew the woman Windsor lived with and that she died because he treated her so badly?" Levinter demanded.

"No," Clancy replied. "I certainly did not."

Clancy said he knew the woman in question. She died about 1 1-2 years ago and he had stayed at the Windsor home all night "the night of the wake." He had believed she was Windsor's wife.

King George on Eve of Voyage Replies to Commons Address

Impressive Scene as Vice-Chamberlain of Royal Household Presents Reply to Commons

By PAT USSHER

London, May 4 (CP)—The King's reply to the "humble address" of loyalty from the House of Commons was delivered in the House today with elaborate ceremony.

The reply was borne by R. V. Grimston, member of the House of Commons and Vice-Chamberlain of the Royal household. He wore the resplendent uniform of his office and carried a long white wand.

When the Commons met the Vice-Chamberlain was at the Bar of the House. He advanced to the clerk's table, bowing three times enroute, and read his Majesty's message. After handing the document to the Clerk of the House, the Vice-Chamberlain walked backwards to the Bar again bowing thrice.

The message from the King was:

"I thank you sincerely for your address on the occasion of the visit of the Queen and myself to our Dominion of Canada and the United States. I have received with great pleasure your loyal and affectionate message which the Queen and I will bear constantly in mind during our absence."

Messages of loyalty to the King were moved yesterday in the Upper and Lower Houses of Parliament by Earl Stanhope and Prime Minister Chamberlain respectively.

A reply from his Majesty also was read in the Upper House by the Earl of Clarendon, Lord Chamberlain.

The Lord Chamberlain, wearing a uniform and carrying a wand, read the message from the government dispatch box. But he was spared the ordeal of walking backwards from the House afterwards.

Seven Services Each Day in Dining Car of King, Queen

Montreal, May 4 (CP)—Seven services a day will be made on the dining car of the Royal train when the King and Queen tour Canada this month, it was announced here yesterday.

W. W. Swinden, general superintendent of sleeping and dining car services of the Canadian National Railways, who will be in charge of catering arrangements during the trip, said the services would consist of tea before arising, breakfast, morning tea, luncheon, afternoon tea, dinner and a night collation.

The china used on the cars to be occupied by their Majesties will be the general service used on the Governor General's cars—Limoges china with a gold band, each piece bearing a crown in gold.

King's Birthday in Gt. Britain.

Although the King will be absent from Great Britain June 8, the day his birthday is observed officially in the United Kingdom, the birthday list of honors will be issued as usual.

No Canadians will be included in the list unless some are appointed Privy Councillors, according to reliable sources.

Compilation of the names of those selected for honors will be advanced so that the King can study and approve the list while in Canada. Time will be allowed for any special, last-minute recommendations. Investitures will be held after the King returns to the United Kingdom.

Their Majesties will be in the United States, nearing the end of the Royal tour, on the day the honors list is published.

NORTH IRELAND IS NOT INCLUDED IN CONSCRIPTION

Announcement is Made by Prime Minister Chamberlain

MINORITY QUESTION

800,000 Men in 3 Years to be Trained Under Conscription in Britain

By J. F. SANDERSON
Canadian Press Staff Writer

London, May 4—(CP Cable) — Prime Minister Chamberlain announced in the House of Commons today that Great Britain's projected conscription law would not be extended to Northern Ireland, so that no rupture in relations with Eire would result.

The Prime Minister, moving second reading of the military training bill in the House, estimated it would give the government over a three-year period "something in the neighborhood of 800,000 men altogether."

Situation Delicate

Mr. Chamberlain's announcement that the bill would not be enforced in Northern Ireland solved a delicate situation which arose when Prime Minister De Valera informed the British government that he could not look with favor on such a step. Mr. De Valera took the stand that a minority of Irish Republicans in Northern Ireland would be forced to comply with the law against their will.

Opposition members indulged in laughter when Mr. Chamberlain stated that conscripts would receive a shilling (about 23 cents) a day, during their six months of training with the regular army.

GENERAL STRIKE IS POSSIBILITY

Workmen of Goderich Rubber Company Asking Higher Wages

Kitchener, Ont., May 4 (CP)—Reports that a general strike of 700 employees of the B. G. Goodrich Rubber Company would be called unless the company came to terms with striking workers in the footwear division could not be confirmed today.

Ed Robbins, president of Local 73 of the United Rubber Workers of America, was reported to have said last night that the entire staff would walk out today if the dispute was not settled.

Joseph Mackenzie, Canadian organizer of the Rubber Union, said he knew nothing of such plans. Company spokesman spoke similarly.

Strikers and company executives planned to meet again later today in an effort to settle the 10-day-old wage dispute. The strike, which started with a walkout of twenty employees and spread until approximately 450 workers are affected, has been in progress two weeks. The workers ask an increase of 3.2 cents an hour to 32 cents in the hourly wage of the original strikers.

URGE DEFENCE BE SPEEDED UP

Washington, May 3 (AP)—Congress heard today from the United States navy's senior officer that "the prospect of international disturbance in the near future" makes it imperative for the government to complete its new defence program as speedily as possible.

Prorogation by May 19th Possible If Commons Sits Saturday

Ottawa, May 4—(CP)—Indication that a drive toward prorogation of parliament on May 19 will be made came today as Prime Minister Mackenzie King gave notice in the Commons votes and proceedings of a motion to have the House sit Saturday.

If the members agree the Commons will sit from 11 a.m. to 6 p.m. Saturday with an interval for luncheon from 1 to 2 p.m.

In recent days members have indicated a willingness to co-operate with the government in disposing of business in time to have the King prorogue parliament. If the Commons is not through its business His Majesty will take part in a ceremony in the Senate, giving assent to several bills.

The general opinion in the capital is that, with the Saturday sitting, the Commons will be able to finish next Friday in time to enable Mr. Mackenzie King and members of the cabinet to travel to Quebec and greet the King and Queen on May 15. Adjournment would be taken then until May 19.

However, there is always the possibility that prolonged debate on any one of the several pieces of legislation before the House may defeat the drive.

Settlement of Dispute Anxiously Sought by Italy

MEETING AT COMO

German - Italian Military Alliance Superfluous Owing to Present Understanding

Rome, May 4—(AP)—Diplomatic quarters expressed the belief today that Premier Mussolini is exerting his influence upon Warsaw and Berlin to bring about a peaceful settlement of the German-Polish dispute over Danzig and the Polish Corridor.

Diplomats said the Fascist government was extremely anxious to avert an open break between Germany and Poland, which might put Italy in a distasteful position since she is linked with Germany in the Rome-Berlin axis but long has been friendly toward Poland.

The meeting between Foreign Ministers Count Ciano of Italy and Von Ribbentrop of Germany at Lake Como on Saturday will provide opportunity for an exchange of views with Germany.

There was some speculation that a German-Italian military alliance might be announced, but the general feeling of diplomats was that present understanding between the two general staffs is such that a formal alliance would be superfluous.

HUNDREDS FILE PAST THE CASKET

Mrs. Adeline McDonald's Funeral Being Held in Chatham Today

Chatham, Ont., May 4—(CP) — Hundreds of persons filed past the casket of Mrs. Adeline McDonald, victim of a mysterious shooting Monday night, before her funeral today from a Chatham undertaking establishment. Among the crowds were scores of curious, who came to see Chatham's beauty queen of 1931.

Among the floral tributes was one from her husband, Charles McDonald, held in Kent County jail on a vagrancy charge in connection with his wife's death. It bore a card inscribed in McDonald's writing: "To a loving wife, from Charlie". McDonald was granted police permission to attend the funeral but it was not known whether he would go.

Police Chief C. C. Bagnall and other authorities still were silent regarding circumstances surrounding discovery of the woman's body on the floor of her beauty shop Monday night. A .22-callibre rifle was found beside it.

Magician Says He Knows Headline Used on Sept. 1

Fort Erie, Ont., May 4 (CP)—No one knows what the newspaper head lines will say this Sept. 1—that is, no one but Stewart James, Courtright, Ont., magician who says he can predict that far in the future.

Early next week James will submit his prediction to a committee in charge of the International Piff-Paff Poofers, organization of amateur magicians who open their convention here Sept. 1.

CATCHES TWO TROUT ON ONE CAST

Ligonier, Pa., May 4 (AP)—Fishermen Robert Martin tells this one: He cast a fly with a double hook into a creek and got a strike. When he reeled in the line he had a 10-inch trout on one hook—and 11-incher on the other.

REBUFFED SUITOR BLAMED FOR DEATH OF EIGHTEEN

Shanghai, May 4 (AP)—A jealous suitor was blamed today by police for a wedding day disaster two days ago in which a 17-year old Chinese bride and 17 other persons were killed and 44 others, including the bridegroom, were injured. Two houses collapsed under roofs laden with spectators while the wedding was in progress. Police said the rebuffed suitor sawed away several wooden pillars supporting the buildings.

Empress of Australia Likely to be Used On Return Journey

London, May 4—(CP Cable)—The King and Queen are almost certain to return to England on the Empress of Australia, the liner that will take them to Canada next Saturday, it was learned reliably today.

There is a remote possibility however, that the cruiser Repulse might be used for the return voyage if the international situation brightens in the meanwhile.

Use of the Empress of Australia for both crossings would obviate the rearrangement of accommodation and fittings as would be necessary if another liner were used.

The Australia is due at Portsmouth Friday from Southampton where it is being prepared for the royal voyage.

ESCAPES FROM JAIL

KKitchener, Ont., May 4—(CP)—Floyd Lehman, 20, Waterloo, arrested on a charge of theft, escaped from the town of Waterloo jail last night. He smashed his way through a door leading to a ventilator shaft in the lavatory and wedged his way up the shaft to crawl out through a small trap door. He was still missing at noon today.

THURSDAY LAST DAY FOR APPLICATIONS

J. E. Shortt, Secretary of the Y.M.C.A. and of the Belleville Ki-Y softball groups, announced today that Thursday was the last day for applications for affiliation into the respective groups of the Ki-Y leagues. "All application forms have been given out, but they are slow in returning. The deadline is tomorrow night," added Mr. Shortt as he revealed applications in the midget, bantam and juvenile series had been received assuring competition in each of these groups.

NETTING OF WHITEFISH REPORTED LIGHTER

Whitefish lifts in Lake Ontario off the southern shores of Prince Edward County have been lighter than is customary at this time of the year, during the past two weeks a fish vendor on the city market stated today.

Prices were considerably lower today than they were on Saturday with whitefish and trout selling at twenty cents per pound. This however is not indicative of market quotations it was stated.

Fresh mudcats caught near Glenora attracted lovers of this fish who paid twenty-five cents for two pounds of their favorite Friday food

SEN. GRIESBACH WIRES CONGRATULATIONS TO MAJOR BONE ON SPEECH

The following telegram which is self explanatory was sent as a personal message by Mayor Jamieson Bone yesterday:

Senator H. W. Griesbach,
Ottawa, Ont.:

Congratulations on your armament remarks as quoted in the Toronto papers. Stop. Surely an Empire-minded government could erect arsenals or use the Lindsay one to manufacture guns and employ thousands of destitute men there and in defense. Stop. When our leaders like King, Mackenzie, Dandurand are so weak, what can one expect from the rank and file. Stop. We will not stand for this neglect, vacillation and cowardice much longer. Stop. If they are examples of what democracy produces, we are surely headed for something else, and you can tell them I said so. Stop. Political interference by government members in our so-called air force, army and navy must also be stopped. More power to you.

Jamieson Bone.

Q. A. PUPILS HEARD IN ENJOYABLE CONCERT

Parents and friends of pupils of Queen Alexandra School were invited to attend an interesting concert yesterday afternoon at which the students demonstrated in public the regular classroom work in music and dramatics. Over one hundred children of the junior classes opened the program with a lively chorus. This was followed by a play by Miss Potter's Class entitled "The Enchanted Woods", which was splendidly enacted by the cast. Equally appealing was the play by Miss McGuire's class, "Marigold and the Seven Dwarfs." The concert was concluded by the singing of three choruses by the senior school choir, under the direction of Mr. George Maybee and the excellent work of the singers showed their careful training and application. Quite a large number of parents were present for the afternoon's program.

PLANT RUNS TWELVE YEARS WITHOUT ANY EMPLOYEE BEING HURT

What is conceded to be a world's record for continuous operation without a single accident to employees is held by the Iola, Kansas plant of the Portland Cement Co. of North America, which has operated for twelve consecutive years without an employee losing an hour through accident, according to J. D. Dempster, Montreal, Accident Prevention expert of the company.

Mr. Dempster yesterday reawarded the handsome cement trophy, emblematic of one year's operation without accident to the Point Anne plant of the company.

MONDAY MAY 22 PUBLIC HOLIDAY IN BELLEVILLE

Belleville Merchants Decide to Observe Monday Holiday as Proclaimed by the Mayor

Monday, May 22, has been unanimously approved as the date of the public holiday to be held in Belleville in connection with the visit of Their Majesties, taking the place of the usual May 24th statutory holiday. At a meeting of the executive of the Retail Merchants' Association held Wednesday it was decided to act in accordance with the proclamation His Worship Mayor Bone will issue on Friday that Monday, May 22 be observed as a public holiday. Consequently the stores of the members of the Belleville Retail Merchants' Association will be closed all day Monday, May 22.

NEW GLENORA FERRY TO BE IN USE MAY 15

The new steel-constructed ferry built for service on the Bay of Quinte between Glenora and Adolphustown is expected to be placed in commission on or about May 15 according to advices received from Picton yesterday. The new ferry will fill a long-felt want in its capacity and will relieve the congestion of traffic that occurs every summer.

Built in Owen Sound, the ferry will accommodate a much larger number of vehicles than the one now in use. During the heavy traffic expected to use this route during the Royal Visit, both boats will be in operation.

PASS EXAMINATIONS

Announcement is made that three Belleville men who recently tried their examinations to qualify for higher positions in the Customs and Excise service have all passed successfully and are now eligible for promotion. The three are Sidney Davenport and W. E. TRAVELLED EAGLE LAKE ICE ON APRIL 22ND

Bruce Campbell, of Coe Hill, mail driver between Coe Hill and Lasswade, is reported the first and last man to cross Eagle Lake with a horse and cutter this year. The first trip was made across the frozen lake early in December and the final trip on Saturday, April 22. Since the first breakup of the ice several days ago Eagle Lake at Coe Hill rose over its banks and came close to the cottages on shore.

FARMER MOUNTS HEAD OF TWO-HEADED LAMB

One of the strangest freaks of nature ever seen in this district, a two-headed lamb, born on the farm of Robert Woods, Hillier, Ont., will decorate the hall of the Woods home. The odd freak is being mounted by Edward Bailey, Wellington taxidermist.

The lamb, which died after five days of its birth was born with its dual heads shaped like an inverted letter "V." It had two noses, four eyes, one pair of ears, while its body was like that of a normal lamb.

The noses of the animal were separated just below the eyes and both functioned perfectly. Its abnormal heads, were apparently too heavy, according to Woods, for the lamb could not raise them but a few inches above the ground.

Arrangements Completed to Take 1,000 School Children to Kingston

Those in Charge Would Like Reservations to be in by May 6th.

60 CENTS FOR R. FARE

Arrangements were completed at a special meeting of citizens in the Y.M.C.A. last evening for a rail excursion of an expected 1,000 children of an estimated total of 1,800 children of the city's public and separate schools to Kingston on the morning of May 21st on the occasion of the visit in that city of Their Majesties, King George and Queen Elizabeth.

Accommodation for this number of children in the George T. Richardson Memorial Stadium has been promised Belleville by the Kingston city council and Board of Education.

Special rate of sixty cents return fare has been announced for all public and separate school children of the city who will be accompanied in groups by either parents, guardians or members of local service clubs who may wish to volunteer their services in this respect. Special rates for adults on this excursion are also being arranged by the local office of the Canadian National Railways.

Reg. Moncrieff, Chairman

At the meeting last evening Mr. Reg. Moncrieff, member of the Belleville Board of Education was named general chairman of this school children's excursion; W. H. Morton, treasurer, and James Donahue, secretary. Special committees were also named consisting of Mrs. W. N. Ponton, James Shepherd, H. LaPalm, Mrs. H. Revell, P. C. MacLaurin, Geo. Finch, several of whom today will interview school principals, with consent of the local Board of Education to ascertain the approximate number of pupils, who may wish to go to Kingston. The deadline for reservations was set for Saturday, May 6th.

A general meeting of all committees and officers to which the general public will be invited will be held in the Y.M.C.A. on next Thursday evening, May 11th to complete last minute arrangements.

One firm decision was reached at the meeting. Even if the committee is forced to resort to the use of cars loaned by public-spirited residents, all school children of the city who wish to go to Kingston will be taken.

"We are not sure as yet that we can get this train because of the delay in organizing this excursion. But this committee is determined to take the children, even if the number is reduced to only a hundred or so." it was stated by general chairman Moncrieff. A promise of full support in the matter has been given by all the city's service clubs, it was stated by the chairman.

Train Leaves 7.30 A.M.; D.S.T.

Tentative plans call for the boarding of the train at the North Station by the children at about 7.30 o'clock on the morning of the 21st, Daylight Saving Time. It is hoped to have one adult supervisor for each ten or twelve children, who will carry the tickets and care for the welfare of their charges. At Kingston the children will be marched directly from the train to the stadium to which only school children will be permitted to enter. After the ceremonies the children will again be marched to the train and once more the supervisors will take over their charges. It is believed the return trip will start at about three o'clock in the afternoon.

Lunch will be carried by the children, and an ample supply of drinking water in the stadium has been promised by those in charge at Kingston.

It is hoped to have all Belleville pupils carry small flags, and carry also a banner with the name of their respective schools. It is believed that schools at present have this equipment which may be loaned.

300 FROM BANCROFT TO VISIT KINGSTON

Three hundred residents of Bancroft and district are expected to travel to Kingston by train on May 31st on the occasion of the visit of Their Majesties there, it was stated last evening at the special meeting of citizens in the Y.M.C.A. by Ken. Dyson, local agent of the Canadian National Railways ticket office.

OBITUARY

MRS. RUEBEN HOARD
(Rawdon)

Rawdon— Mrs. Rueben Hoard formerly Sarah Jane Wescott, oldest pioneer of Mount Pleasant, Rawdon, died early this Thursday morning following a lengthy illness, which became serious a week ago.

A daughter of the late Margaret Fox and Nicholas Wescott of Rawdon, she was born on August 4, 1851, the homestead being the farm at which Mr. Bert Bedford now resides. In 1878 she was married to Rueben Hoard, who predeceased her fifteen years ago.

A loyal member of Mount Pleasant United Church the late Mrs. Hoard was closely identified with all activities of the church when health permitted. In 1901 when Mount Pleasant W.M.S. was organized she was one of its charter members and in 1936 the W.M.S. featured a special birthday party in honour of her eighty-fifth birthday. The late Mrs. Hoard was a genuine friend and neighbour. Her sterling qualities of character and consistent Christian life endeared her to one and all. Surviving to mourn her loss are one son, Mr. Ross Hoard on the homestead two grandsons, James and Robert ,all of Mount Pleasant, Rawdon; also a twin brother and sister, Mr. Peter Wescott of Emily City, Mich., and Miss Susan Wescott of Almont City, Mich.

The funeral takes place on Sunday at two-thirty (S.T.) at Mount Pleasant United Church. The service will be in charge of a former pastor, Rev. F. G. Joblin of Scugog, Ontario, assisted by Rev. J. E. Beckel.

JOHN A. LLOYD

Latta, May 4 (Special)—John A. Lloyd, a former resident of this district, died in the hospital at Brantford, Ont., on April 30th. He had been in failing health since last Christmas.

The deceased was born at Mount Pleasant, Rawdon Township, and had he lived until May 25th, he would have been 81 years of age. He was the last of a family of 12 children; except a half-brother and a half-sister. For many years he was employed with the Massey Harris Company at Brantford and for faithful service he was in receipt of a pension from the company. In religion he was a member of the United Church and well esteemed.

Surviving him are his wife; one son, Howard, who is in the service of the post office at Brantford; one married daughter (Gladys) who resides in Toronto; one half-brother, Mr. George Lloyd, and one half-sister, Mrs. Minnie Hale. His wife was ill in the hospital at the time of his death.

Mr. Lloyd was an uncle of Mrs. J. W. Hamilton, who has lost three relatives in April of this year, a brother-in-law, Mr. Stanley Hamilton . who died on April 8th.; a first cousin, Mrs. Wesley Henderson on April 18th, and her uncle on April 28th.

ELGIN P. BELLYOU
Ameliasburg

Elgin Putnam Bellyou late residence at Centre, Prince Edward County, passed away on Tuesday, May 2nd., in the Western Hospital, Toronto, to which institution he was taken for treatment on Friday last. On February 22nd., Mr. Bellyou was working in the woods on his property some distance from his residence and was crushed beneath the limbs of a large tree which he had felled. He was found by neighbors and rushed to the Belleville General Hospital and underwent an emergency operation. Since that time his condition was not encouraging and in the hope of obtaining relief by special treatment, he was taken to Toronto last week.

The late Mr. Bellyou was born in Ameliasburg Township 51 years ago and had resided there all his life. He was well known and in the community he was highly esteemed. In religion he was a member of the United Church and fraternally he was a member of the Masonic Order.

Surviving him are his wife, and two daughters, Mrs. Don Morden, Wellington, and Miss Margaret, at home. The sincere sympathy of many friends will be extended to the family in their bereavement.

The funeral announcement is made elsewhere in this paper.

R. B. Fair Honored On Retirement From Bell Telephone Co.

GETS LIFE MEMBERSHIP

On the eve of his retirement from active service with the Bell Telephone Company's Belleville and Peterborough branches, Robert Best Fair, well known local employee, who this year observes his thirty-fourth year of continuous service as station repairman and installer, and for the last several years in Belleville as officer in charge of the exchange and building supplies, was the recipient of tributes from members and officers of the staff at a dinner in the Queen's Hotel.

Mr. Fair was presented with a comfortable easy chair and ottoman which was the gift of all members of the company through the Belleville district, including employees of the plant, traffic and commercial departments. The presentation was made on behalf of the employees by Mr. G. S. Ridout, district plant supervisor, Ottawa.

A coveted life membership in the Company of Telephone Pioneers of America was also presented Mr. Fair by Mr. J. A. Cokers of Belleville, former local manager who has been on the inactive list for some time past after forty-four years continuous service. Mrs. Fair at the same time was presented with a beautiful bouquet of roses by workers of the local exchange, and the same tribute paid her loyal husband was also expressed by officers.

One other gift remained for the retiring employee, the presentation of the customary president's personal gift, a wallet and presentation card, which presentation was made on behalf of the president by Mr. A. Drew, plant supervisor of the Kingston district.

Among those who expressed their pleasure at being present, and given the privilege of extending best wishes to a loyal worker was Mr. G. W. Proctor, Belleville manager.

V. M. Smith, plant wire chief of the Belleville exchange, was chairman of the evening.

Hume Arena Dance Gardens Resplendent In Gay New Colors

Gleaming in its new Spring "apparel" of colored festoons and lighted Japanese lanterns, the soft shades of which will be reflected by mirror placed intermittently around the floor, the Hume Arena Dance Gardens will present an attractive appearance at its official summer opening this week.

The dance floor has been newly sanded and polished. Pennants of red, blue and green are strung at intervals high above the floor, while strings of the same colors are placed around the entire section of the arena devoted to dancing purposes. New lighting arrangements by which the floor can be illuminated with separate colors of red, green and royal blue have been installed.

The "boards" of the rink gleam in a new coat of white paint. Sitting out accommodation and waiting space has been enlarged practically fifty per cent. The orchestra dais is newly decorated in fresh colors, and every effort has been put forth to make the Gardens one of the most attractive summer dance spots of the district.

Dan Fairman's "Tophatters" band will provide the swing and sweet rhythm so popular with present-day dancers, and Manager Norman Barriage prophecies a gala season in this form of popular entertainment.

NEW HIGH-TEST OXYDOL
...SEE WHITE CLOTHES WASH
UP TO 25% WHITER
GOOD HEAVENS, CLAIRE! WHERE'S THE FIRE?
DON'T STOP ME, DARLING! I'M ON MY WAY TO GET SOME OF THAT MARVELOUS "NO-SCRUB" SOAP EVERYONE'S RAVING ABOUT—NEW HIGH-TEST OXYDOL!
AND YOU SAY THAT NEW HIGH-TEST OXYDOL ACTUALLY GIVES UP TO TWICE THE SUDS OF SOAPS THAT LACK ITS NEW "MIRACLE INGREDIENT"?
YES—AND WHAT'S MORE THEY SAY THE SUDS STAND UP 2 TO 3 TIMES LONGER!
BUT IF IT'S SO MUCH WHITER WASHING, ARE YOU SURE IT'S SAFE FOR WASHABLE COLORED THINGS?
ABSOLUTELY! MY WIFE SAYS IT'S ALMOST UNBELIEVABLE HOW FRESH AND BRIGHT IT GETS HER COLORED THINGS, WEEK AFTER WEEK.

BACK HOME
IT'S TRUE! ONLY 10 MINUTES... AND IT SIMPLY SPARKLES! I NEVER DREAMED ANY SOAP COULD GET CLOTHES SO IMMACULATELY WHITE WITHOUT SCRUBBING OR BOILING!
I CAN'T WAIT TO TRY IT FOR DISHES, TOO! THEY SAY IT MELTS GREASE SO FAST YOU'RE THROUGH IN ALMOST NO TIME AT ALL!

NOW—EXPECT NEW THINGS
OF THIS NEW "MIRACLE-ACTION" SOAP

HERE is a new soap creation, developed to bring you an utterly new conception of easier washdays—of brighter, more sparkling clothes!

For New High-Test OXYDOL is a new type "no-scrub" soap—fortified by a new, SAFE ingredient.

As a result, New High-Test Oxydol washes white clothes up to 25% whiter, as shown by independent laboratory tests. Not merely whiter than "old-fashioned" soaps. But up to 25% whiter than even well-known soaps that lack its amazing new ingredient.

In addition, it gives up to TWICE THE SUDS. Rich, active suds that stand up 2 to 3 times longer.

In tub washing—High-Test Oxydol soaks dirt loose in 10 minutes—without scrubbing or boiling. Even tough spots come clean with a few quick rubs. Yet SAFE for overnight soaking—SAFE for washable colors, hands. Try New High-Test Oxydol. You'll be amazed how white clothes come! Procter & Gamble.

Mountain View

Mountain View—Mr. and Mrs. Earl Wood of Centre spent Sunday with Mr. and Mrs. W. Blakely.

On Monday night, April 24, the friends and neighbors gathered at the home of Mr. and Mrs. William Blakely in honor of Mr. and Mrs. Earl Wood (Jean Blakely) whose marriage took place on April 15th. Mr. and Mrs. Wood were asked to take their places at the table and Mrs. John Black read the following address:

Mountain View, April 25

Dear Jean and Earl:

We your friends and neighbors at Mountain View have gathered here this evening to extend to you our heartiest congratulations and best wishes.

We have known you since childhood days and watched with interest this romance bud and blossom into marriage and hope that this new road you have chosen to follow together will lead to a loving trust in each other and true happiness.

Jean will be missed from the different community activities but we are glad to know that your new home is not so far away as to completely take you out of our lives.

We ask you to accept these gifts and hope that their use will bring pleasant memories of your friends at Mountain View. And we add a sincere wish that success and prosperity will be yours throughout your lives.

Signed: Mrs. John Black, Mrs. W. Bristol, Hazel Minaker.

Misses Hazel Minaker and Doris Black carried in a basket decorated in pink and white and loaded with gifts. The bride and groom spent a busy half hour unwrapping the gifts.

WORLD'S FAIRS

World's Fairs are no longer unusual. Time was when Chicago's attendance at Columbian Exposition was remembered as one of the great events in the lives of many. But Chicago had another fair several years ago. Now New York and San Francisco have worlds fairs, Italy says she is going to have a world's fair in Rome in 1942. New York had a world's fair in 1853.

The San Francisco and New York world's fairs are facts, and are in operation. They exert a steadying power in the world of unsettlement. This they do very effectively—they show the unity of the world however much extreme nationalism and racialism and narrow political theories may be used by ambitious men who rise to heights of power. World's fairs are essentially what the phrase means—world's fairs, with everything of a world cast and outlook about them. World's fairs look at the entire globe in a sensible light and are a healthy antidote to the political and intellectual and racial bigotry shown in the strange forms of socialism which crop up in the world.

If the world's fair is to be held in Rome, the fair, if characterized by the internationalism such a fair should create, then the world will have little to worry about for an international fair at Rome should be one of the world's greatest events for that city can go itself back nearly twenty-seven centuries or ninety generations to make one of the greatest exhibitions of all time. Three years is ephemeral in the life of a city like Rome, but it might be quite a long space in the history of Fascism at the rate things have been moving. If Italy really plans a world's fair in Rome, it will probably mean that for some years the outlook for peace is good.

Science plays a major part in world's fairs. It makes them and is the great show-window of progress.

DUKE OF CONNAUGHT

Belleville remembers the visit paid here over twenty years ago by His Royal Highness The Duke of Connaught, when Governor General of Canada, and many citizens who were present on that date were interested in Tuesday's news that the Duke that day celebrated the 89th anniversary of his birth. He is a son of the late Queen Victoria and a brother of the late King Edward Seventh. It was during the reign of his nephew King George Fifth that he became Governor General of Canada. The Duke has been a figure for many years in the life of the Empire.

IN THE ANIMAL WORLD

There were former dictators millions of years ago in the animal world, comments the New York Times. These despots were the barosaurus, eighty feet long from his nose to the tip of his tail and the brontossaurus, fourteen feet shorter but weighing eighty-seven tons.

These two "lorded it over all creation. When they lifted up their heads out of the slime and roared, all the little dinossaurs scuttled for cover. If they saw a grove where the fern trees looked greener, occupied by a herd of unoffending trachodons, they marched in and occupied it. They were armed to the teeth and there was not a creature on earth who dared resist them, unless it was the tyranossaurus. He was quite a bit smaller but a tough fighter on his own territory. They had sense enough to let him alone. But that was about all the sense they had. They represented merely organized appetites. Now their bones, picked clean, are displayed for all to see at the American Museum of Natural History. They disappeared because they were senseless impediments to the development of intelligence and security. After aeons of forgetfulenss they have been dug up again to showe that grotesque as they were, they actually did exist."

Were it not for the fact that nature preserved them and that their bone structure remains to show the world of today that they once roamed the earth, something that nature allowed, to be developed and allowed to perish because they were overweighted with bone and flesh or "organized appetites". Nature looked for smaller things, far more effective and intelligent. They came and the huge creations passed. Their mentality must have been as slow as their movements and their crushing weight.

In nature's way they were allowed to be but nature is the one that ended them for if a creature in nature does not prove itself, it passes.

How long will dictators carry the load of armor plate and the hard bone structure of armament before more alert doctrines of international life abolish them? No dictators have laft an enduring empire. They lack balance. It is scarcely to be thought that the weight and load and modernness of science which makes dictators possible will prevent their collapse any more than nature prevented the disappearance of the barosaurus and the brontosaurus.

"THE COMMONPLACE"

By HELEN WELSHIMER

"I have deep love for kindly, simple things—
The hot, sweet smell of jam on summer stoves;
The humming song an old teakettle sings;
The fragrant towels which wrap brown-crusted loaves,
For white clothes, clean wind-swept upon a line
Where sun beats down; a playhouse children keep;
A window dim with honeysuckle vine,
And smooth, crisp sheets when it is time for sleep.

"For yellow bowls where I stir batter cakes;
The flower buds outside a kitchen door;
Toy boats in puddles small boys use for lakes
And sunlight in a rug across my floor.
I pray each day that I may win the grace
Which God gives those who love the commonplace."

NEWSPAPER COLUMNISTS WERE BORN IN THE UNITED STATES within recent memory. Whether this birth constituted a "blessed event" or series of "blessed events" is another story — "blessed events" being the invention of the well known New York columnist, Walter Winchell, who added to his reporting talents advance notices of births, marriages and deaths. The newspaper columnists who attained any sort of fame by their new kind of journalism, which might be called more than daring and a mixture of fact, fancy and muck, to the air and became commentators, Winchell posing even as an expert on foreign affairs and specialist in international diplomacy—quite a jump for a hoofer on vaudeville time. U.S. radio commentators have had a harvest during the various international crises, airing their views, or views which they considered would please their listeners. McAree, of the Toronto Globe, recently dissected the pretensions of these columnists and commentators, with special attention to one named Boake Carter, a sample of whose blatter as given below gives an indication of his stature. McAree calls Carter 'rather uncouth' a rather mild application. Here's a typical Carter blast:

> "There is nothing about morality or the saving of democracy in the whole affair in Europe today. We point out that France merely got in on the ground floor in Tunisia, and having gained possession ,tries to kid the rest of the world — especially Americans — that those who would take Tunisia from her are brigands and scallywags for copying her . . . In view of this where does the Roosevelt administration derive the idea that Americans want to go gallivanting forth to play Sir Gallahad again? . . . The question that Americans should remember is: Do we or do we not want to help one gang of thieves against another gang of thieves.

Boake Carter should have no trouble adding every daily paper in Germany to his syndicate string, and receiving life subscriptions from Adolph Hitler and Mussolini. More could be said, but what's the use.

WEEKLY NEWSPAPER PUBLISHERS CERTAINLY EVOKE THE ENVY of their brothers engaged in publishing daily newspapers. Aside from the beautiful vision of only having to publish a newspaper once a week, the lads of the weekly press certainly know how to enjoy themselves in a big way, a thing that most daily scribes have forgotten. The yearly conventions of the weekly press are standouts of affairs of the kind. One year the members of the weekly press association voyaged to England and were entertained at BuckinghamPalace by royalty ,with side trips to Paris—oh, boy! Another trip to the St. Louis World's Fair, another to Vancouver, trips all through the gold and silver mining belt of Northern Ontario, and other notable jaunts. This week they gather at Ottawa in annual convention where they will be addressed by Sir Gerald Campbell and others, and banquetted at The Seigniory Club in Quebec. Gosh, all Hemlock! us fellers what has to get out a paper every day in several editions are lucky if we can get an hour or two off after the rag goes to press to practise a little golf, or do a little fishing off the bridge. Some folks have all the luck.

LOOKING BACKWARD

20 YEARS AGO

Tomorrow evening at 6.30 o'clock the first workout of the Central League baseball team will be held on the Pine Street grounds. All ball players will be welcomed and if desired will be given a tryout for the team.

The opening of the Prince Edward County Hospital was a unique event in the history of Picton and attracted a large crowd. The large building with its many windows, is situated in a quiet part of the town and affords a pleasant view of the harbor and lake. The operating room, waiting room and bath room, furnished by the ladies of Wellington, the Cherry Valley Women's Institute and the Red Cross Auxiliary of Picton Women's Institute, respectively, together with the cots furnished and maintained by the different branches of the Women's Institute reflect much credit on the ladies throughout Prince Edward County.

Judge and Mrs. Deroche have returned home from California.

Mr. and Mrs. Thomas B. Coughlin have sold their property on Dundas Street and have removed to Toronto.

Mr. Daniel Grass left today to spend some time in the Province of Saskatchewan.

Mr. Fred J. Kyle is spending a few days here with relatives prior to going to Melville, Sask., where he will act as agent for the Grand Trunk Pacific Railway.

At last it looks and feels as though summer is about to chase winter from the lap of spring.

After many years of "serious consideration" it looks as though a general sewerage system for this city is on the way at last. The scheme has been before the ratepayers for some time and approval seems to be general. At least nobody has been after it with a hammer and that is a pretty good sign.

The steam barge Water Lily passed up the bay this morning with coal for Trenton.

The annual meeting of the Belleville Bowling Club was held yesterday and the following officers were elected for the ensuing year: President, Charles Lavis; Vice President, W. H. Biggar; Secretary-Treasurer, James Lowrie; Lawn Committee, James Gordon, William Webster, and Geo. H. Pope. W. H. Biggar had the honor of winning the President's prize for making the highest score during the season. The prize was a handsome pair of bowls. A cordial vote of thanks was passed to Mr. P. P. Lynch, the official scorer for the club, for his valuable services during the season. Several new members were proposed and elected.

Real Savages of the Sea

In the popular imagination the shark is regarded as the most savage creature of the sea, and though undoubtedly he possesses what may be termed a "tigerish" nature and will attack the swimmer for food, he is comparatively easily frightened and cannot be said to possess the blind courage of either the sword-fish or saw-fish. The sword-fish in particular is able to "disguise fair nature with hard favored rage."

Some exceedingly interesting authentic stories are told of the fury of this true savage of the sea, and proof of his dangerous nature is found in the fact that at one time he was regarded as so great a danger to ships that he could be insured against in common with other and more readily realized perils.

Sword-fishes attain a length of from 12 to 15 feet, their swords being sometimes three feet long. They feed by dashing among schools of fish, piercing their prey with their swords. When angered, however, they are blind to what they attack. They will attack not only native canoes, which they easily pierce, but will vent their rage upon larger vessels, though, of course, the building of steel ships has done away with the possibility of their damaging vessels of any considerable size.

x x x

In December, 1866, the Court of Common Pleas was called upon to decide how a ship, the Dreadnought, had received an injury while on a voyage to Colombo. This ship, having sprung a mysterious leak, had been docked and inspected, whereupon a round hole, an inch in diameter, running completely through the copper sheathing and planking, was discovered. Expert evidence proved that this damage had been done by a sword-fish, Professor Owen describing the attack of the sword-fish as being "as dangerous in its effects as a heavy artillery projectile," and Lloyd's paid the owners of the ship the sum of £600.

A few years previously the barque Maud, of Tynemouth, had arrived in the Tyne with the beak of a sword-fish stuck through her bottom. A portion of the beak, nine and a half inches long, was removed from the inside of the vessel.

The fish probably attack vessels in mistake for whales and other large cetaceans, which they can kill by repeated stabs. Moreover, they have the habit of attacking in numbers. For a time these "massed attacks" were regarded as mythical, existing only in the imagination of yarn-spinning voyagers. However, proof exists in the British Museum, where there is a piece of ship's planking less than a foot square containing the broken ends of three swords. The strength of the savage of the sea is shown by his having succeeded in penetrating copper sheathing, oak planking and timber.

The saw-fish, a member of the ray family, is as savage in its habits as his brothers, but the shape of his snout prevents him attacking in exactly the same way. The teeth on the snout forming the saw, though very sharp, prevent his piercing his prey with the dagger-like action favoured by the sword-fish. His formidable weapon is used more as a rasp than a saw. It is used for tearing pieces from the body of the victim for food, or ripping open the abdomen, the protruding intestines being then eaten. One of the saw-fish's favorite foods is the cuttle-fish.

Both sword-fish and saw-fish have proved inimical to submarine telegraph cables. The swords of the former have penetrated to the copper conductors , thereby causing faults, and damage of one kind or another has been done by the saws of the latter. Saw-fish do not appear to make the mistake of thinking the cable is food, but inflict injury by scraping off the marine life adhering to the cable, in which process the teeth of the saw sometimes become embedded in the protective sheathing and allow water to penetrate to the conductor.—By Brian K. Lomax, M.N.G.S., in Hamilton Spectator.

A Diet Which Helps Asthmatic Patients

While many cases of asthma are being cured by removal of defects in nose and throat, others by avoiding certain foods and other substances, and still others by a series of injections of the food, pollen, or other substances causing their asthma, there remain many other cases where the cause cannot be found. By the use of breathing exercises daily and the injection of adrenalin during an attack, many of these latter cases obtain a fair degree of relief.

What is known as the ketogenic diet—rich in fat and poor in starch foods—has been used with great success in the treatment of epilepsy. It is interesting to learn that an almost similar diet is now helping many cases of asthma where the cause or causes have not been discovered.

Drs. F. M. Pottenger and F. M. Pottenger, Jr., in California and Western Medicine, tell of a 2300 daily calorie diet of one and a half parts of fat foods (butter, cream, fat, meat, egg yolks) to one and one-half parts protein (meat, eggs and fish) to one part starch foods, (bread, potatoes, sugar, pastry). It is rich in vitamins and minerals.

The two main meals are built around a large, raw, green salad and a portion of meat consisting of not less than four ounces when cooked. Sugar, potatoes, pastries, are greatly reduced in amount but whole grain cereals are permitted in the regular portions. About a half to an ounce of gelatin is used at each meal which aids digestion and the absorption of minerals into the blood. In addition to the vitamins in the large green salad, other vitamins in the form of green pasture milk, malt and cod liver oil are given.

Of the fifty patients treated, 84 per cent (42 patients) showed improvement insofar as the asthma symptoms were concerned and 90 per cent (45 patients) showed general physical improvement.

Evidence of thyroid disturbances was found in 74 per cent of the mothers of the patients, and forty of the fifty patients were taller than the normal standards.

For those asthmatic patients who are not getting relief by other methods, this diet method is very much worth trying as the results obtained by these two physicians are certainly gratifying.

CHANGE OF POLICY

Only yesterday authoritative sources in London had said Litvinoff would meet the Forein Ministers of Great Britain and France at Geneva May 14 to break the deadlock in negotiations for a triple alliance.

(Previously the British cabinet was reported to have rejected the latest Soviet proposals for British-French-Russian guarantees against aggression for all nations in the Baltic and Black Sea areas—a broad plan following Litvinoff's "collective security" ideas. Instead, the British cabinet was reported to have proposed that Russia "re-insure" the Anglo-French commitments to Poland, Rumania.

Divergence of Views

(Polish political circles were reported from Warsaw to believe Litvinoff's replacement came as a result of a divergence of views in high Soviet circles over Litvinoff's ideas based on the League of Nations principle. These quarters said Molotoff, Litvinoff's successor, leaned to the principle of bilateral security agreements such as France and Great Britain have put into effect with Poland Rumania and which they are now asking Russia to reinforce with a paralell declaration.)

The fact Litvinoff for years had been one of the chief targets of Nazi attacks on what the German Propaganda Minister, Paul Goebbels, and his colleagues have described as "Jewish Bolshevism" was no proof that relations with Germany must now become friendlier. Those looking for signs of such a development emphasized, however, that Litvinoff's disappearance from office was not likely to cause displeasure in Berlin.

(Some observers have seen signs of such a rapproachment in a recent speech in which Stalin declared capitalistic powers of Western Europe sought to involve Germany in an unnecessary war with the Soviet, and in the fact that Chancellor Hitler in his Reichstag speech of April 28 failed to make his usual strong attack on Russia.)

Other observers stressed that in recent years the Kremlin has been taking over more and more the direction of foreign policy, a trend which would lead naturally to the elimination of such a strong personality as Litvinoff.

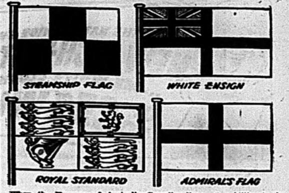
Although his departure was announced in a laconic radio broadcast and confirmed by Tass, the official news agency, the foreign office had not yet spoken. Molotoff, his successor, will continue his duties as President of the Council of People's Commissars, a post corresponding to Premier.

Move is Hailed

Berlin, May 4—(AP)—Political circles today hailed with enthusiasm the retirement of Maxim Litvinoff from the Soviet Commissariat of Foreign Affairs.

They also drew attention to Foreign Minister Joachim von Ribbentrop's departure for Italy where, in talks with the Italian Foreign Minister, Count Galeazzo Ciano, he will measure the results of axis efforts to combat the French-British alliances.

Royal Liner Will Fly These Flags

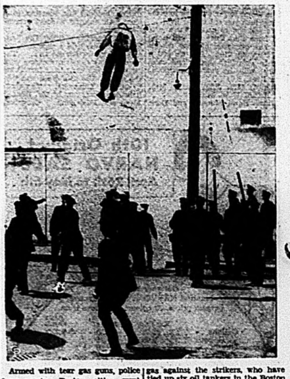


When the Empress of Australia steams across the Atlantic with the King and Queen aboard, four important flags will be flown by the Canadian liner. In addition to the steamship flag, the white ensign and the admirals' flag, the royal standard will also be flown to denote the presence of the King.

British Industrial Advisor Attends Church

Sir Horace Wilson, industrial advisor to the British government who sprang into the public eye during the Munich crisis, is pictured here on the steps of St. Paul's cathedral, London, after attending the annual service of the Order of St. Michael and St. George. Sir Horace is credited with being one of most important men behind the British political scene.

Police, Gas, Break up Striking Seamen's Riot



Armed with tear gas guns, police from greater Boston cities were rushed to Everett, Mass., when rioting broke out among striking seamen. Police are shown here as they unleashed a barrage of tear gas against the strikers, who have tied up six oil tankers in the Boston area and more than 100 along the Atlantic coast in their two-week strike. An effigy of a recruiter of non-union labor may be seen hanging from the telephone wires.

With six non-aggression treaties offered to Scandinavian and Baltic countries as a wedge aimed at breaking "encirclement" in that direction, Von Ribbentrop and Count Ciano were expected to examine the rest of the French-British "imaginary circle."

The proposals to Sweden, Norway, Denmark, Finland, Estonia and Latvia for non-aggression treaties were seen here as a move to isolate and cripple Poland in her diplomatic relations because she rejected Chancellor Hitler's offer to settle the Danzig and Polish Corridor questions.

Agitation in some Polish newspapers for a "Polish protectorate" over Danzig and for cession of East Prussia to Poland was foremost in the thoughts of Nazis as they considered the Polish question. Hitler's Voelkischer Beobachter headlined its story from Warsaw, "Polish greediness for German land."

Casus Belli

The importance with which the question was regarded was seen in a statement of a foreign office official that "if Beck (Polish Foreign Minister Joseph Beck) comes out in his speech to the Sejm (parliament) Friday in favor of a Danzig protectorate, Germany will consider it a casus belli (cause of war.)"

(Polish circles generally have expressed doubt Beck would go so far to voice such demands, which have been made in the opposition press of Warsaw.)

In general German newspapers expressed surprise over the sudden resignation of Litvinoff and said it was due to "the failure of his policies."

990 Consecutive Days of Operation Without a Single Accident is Record

PRIZES GIVEN

J. Dempster, Accident Prevention Expert of Montreal, Addresses School Children on Safety

Commemorating nine hundred and ninety consecutive days of safety in which not an accident has occurred, the handsome cement trophy emblematic of one complete year's operation without accident to employees was warded to the Point Anne plant of the Canada Cement Company for the fourth time yesterday by Mr. Jack Dempster, Montreal, Accident Prevention expert of the organization.

The trophy which bears in relief the figures of Wisdom and Safety was won for the first time by the Point Anne plant in 1927. In 1932 it was won for the second time and again in 1937 and 1938.

From a flag-draped platform in front of the structure, surrounded by two hundred and fifty school children, their teachers and a large number of employees of the plant, Mr. Dempster, on behalf of the Portland Cement Company of North America, officially awarded the trophy and rededicated it to the cause of safety throughout the continent.

"On behalf of the Accident Prevention Committee of the Portland Cement Company, Chicago, I am instructed to convey their sincere congratulations on the marvellous accomplishment of Point Anne plant in winning this trophy for the fourth time," Mr. Dempster said, "and in addition their splendid achievement in operating 990 days without a single accident. It is only a piece of stone but in it are the aims, aspirations and sincere endeavours of the Portland Cement Company of North America".

In officially presenting the trophy to Mr. J. H. Legate, plant superintendent, Mr. Dempster expressed it "as a reward to you and your employees".

Certificates Presented

Previous to a brief address by Mr. Dempster, certificates were presented by him to employees who have been in the employ of the firm for a number of years without suffering an accident. Some of the veterans' certificates bore the proud figures of twenty-five and twenty-six years without losing a day's pay through the medium of being incapacitated through accident. Mr. Legate assisting with the presentation, complimented his employees on their excellent records.

Following addresses by Mr. Dempster, Mr. Legate and Mr. Harry Brown, first-aid instructor of the plant, the school childen were presented with shiny brand new nickles by officials of the company. Three draws were made through the medium of tickets in which two prizes of $2.00 each and one of $1.85 in nickles were presented to the lucky ticket-holders. Winners were John Germanovitch, J. Lloyd and William Howard.

In his opening remarks especially addressed to the school children present Mr. Dempster emphasized the need of safety. "You should be fortunate in that you are not like children of other countries where boys and girls are taught, not the lessons you learn at school but how to shot a gun in order to kill somebody else," he said.

"You are the ones that are building Canada," Mr. Dempster told the children. "Your parents have done their share and by what you learn today they can tell what you will be tomorrow". He warned them about riding on running-boards of cars and appealed to them to always walk on sidewalks and not in the middle of the road.

Addressing his remarks to the men and women present, the speaker stated the real conception of safety was not so much accident prevention and guarding against mechanical ills in the plants, as much as it was laughter, loving, living and happiness. Referring to unemployment, he told his listeners that "I know what it means to be out of work and hungry. But believe me," he added, "this thing is not of our choosing and not of the choosing of the Canada Cement Company. It goes across the ocean and back a number of years. Our warehouses are full of stock. We cannot sell our product unless someone is willing to buy and that will not happen until the big money loosens and is distributed. Canada has a tremendous amount of work to be done, such as public works bridges etc. and when it starts it will go ahead toward building a better Canada and a nobler country".

The speaker paid tribute to Mr. Harry Brown, first aid instructor of the plant. "He has given much time and attention to giving you this important instruction", he said "and officials of the company appreciate his efforts. The finest thing in life is to be able to do something for someone else and that is what Mr. Brown has been teaching you."

Mr. Brown expressed appreciation of the plant officials and employees for the excellent address.

OBITUARY

LATE MRS. A. BLANCHE ANDERSON (Ameliasburg)

Wednesday afternoon the funeral of Mrs. Alma Blanche Anderson, widow of Alexander Harper Anderson, took place from the residence of her son, Mr. Roy Anderson at Ameliasburg, Prince Edward County, to the United Church, Rednersville, where an impressive service was conducted by the pastor, the Rev. W. H Boomhauer, who conducted also the service at the graveside in Albury Cemetery.

The bearers were Messrs. H. Adams, R. Wannamaker, G. R. Wannamaker, A. Dempsey, R. Roblin and Rae Roblin.

Kingston Presbyterial W.M.S. Holds 53rd Annual Meeting

The 53rd annual meeting of Kingston Presbyterial of the W.M.S. of the Presbyterian Church was held in St. Andrew's Church, Picton on Friday, April 28th, 1939 with a fine attendance of ladies from Gananoque, Kingston, Wilton, Deseronto, Belleville, Madoc, Stirling, West Huntingdon, Trenton, Roslin and Picton present. The president, Mrs. W. A. Hunter, Madoc was in charge of all the sessions. The executive meeting was called at 1.30 and a very large representation was present. Mrs. Duff, Kingston, Mrs. Douglas, Deseronto and Mrs. Shaw, West Huntingdon, were chosen for nominating committee. A resolutions' Committee composed of Mrs. Baragar, Belleville, and Mrs. Donnan, West Huntingdon was selected.

Arrangements were made for a summer meeting for the eastern section to be held in the fall at Sunbury. Also for a mission band rally to be held in Stirling during the last week of June. The supply secretary, Mrs. K. Bateman resigned and some one in Belleville was to be asked to take her place. The Glad Tidings Secretary, Miss Cameron Newburgh, had to give up work on account of ill health and Mrs. Douglas, Deseronto, was asked to fill the position. Mrs. W. H. Walker, Stirling agreed to be mission band secretary. A finance committee composed of Miss Fowler, Kingston, and one from Gananoque also one from Sandhill. The public session at 2.30 in the body of the church was opened by an invocation by the president. Mrs. Baragar gave a talk on "Life as a River" and carried it into our missionary work. She closed with prayer along the same line. Mrs. F. H. Minaker of Picton gave a very fine address of welcome and Mrs. Hunter, Madoc responded. The minutes of the last executive meeting were not read on account of the absence of the secretary. Mrs. Ranson, Belleville, the recording secretary, gave a very full resume of the year's work and then took the roll call at which each auxiliary was to give a point of interest in their work. This was very interesting and each auxiliary present replied. Then the reports of each department were given. The treasurer reported an increase over the year before and increases were given in most departments. An exceptionally fine report for the library and literature department was given by Mrs. Fargey, Belleville, who also read some letters of appreciation from recipients of literature. Mrs. MacDonald of Roslin then gave the prayer of dedication of our year's work. The report of the provincial meeting in Hamilton in April was given by Mrs. Jas. Fargey and Mrs. P. Ranson of Belleville. Both ladies declared it perfect in arrangements, programme and in every detail. Mrs. Fargey took the first day's programme representing our past achievements, then Mrs. Ranson gave the second day's work, representing our present achievements, then Mrs. Fargey reported the third day's programme. These reports were exceptionally good and both ladies spoke of the perfection of every detail. Mrs. Sayers, Picton then sang "Brightly Gleams Our Father's Mercy." As some of the delegates could not stay for the evening session they asked if they might hear the guest speaker for the evening session, Miss MacArthur, Deaconess of Kirkland Lake. She gave a very interesting account of her work there and also of the opening of a Presbyterian church there in October, 1938. Then the ladies of St. Andrew's Church served a generous supper at 5.30. During the supper hour Mrs. Palmateer brought greetings from the Picton United Church. Mrs. Allen from the Baptist Church and Mrs. Owens from the Church of England. These were responded to by Mrs. Darling, Deseronto.

Evening Session

The evening session opened with a hymn. The devotional period was conducted by Mrs. Gothard and Mrs. Duggan of Trenton Auxiliary. Greetings were received from the Presbytery by the Moderator, Rev. W. A. Hunter of Madoc.

Little Miss Marlene Boudreau sang "The Old Rugged Cross," accompanied by her father, Dr. M. E. R. Boudreau. After the offering, Miss Lily MacArthur gave the address of the evening.

Missionary Work in the North

Miss MacArthur told of her work as Deaconess in Saskatchewan, including Regina, Moosejaw and the small town of Kipling, the latter with almost an entire population of Hungarians. Their homes were comfortable, quite modern and humble. The inhabitants still wore the colorful costume. A survey of Chinese found 700 Children for the most part purely Chinese. The Speaker gave a vivid picture of the conditions after they suffered from drought, grass-hoppers, etc. Miss MacArthur's work is now in Kirkland Lake, a typical mining town with a population of from 26,000 to 27,000. Taxes are very high now, and owing to that fact, the community does not wish to incorporate as a city. The homes in the most part are equipped with electrical conveniences. Their schools are not large enough to accommodate all children at once and it was found necessary to attend in shifts.

The inhabitants live in constant dread of accidents, owing to the blasting, cave-ins, etc.

The building of the Presbyterian church there was purely a venture of faith. It is situated on the highest point in Kirkland Lake, 200 feet above the road below. The first pastor was Rev. C. J. McKay, formerly of Portage La Prairie.

Mrs. Kenneth Johnson and Miss Christina Mitchell sang a duet, "Go and Tell," accompanied by Miss Edna Jones.

Elect Officers

Rev. W. J. Walker, pastor of St. Andrew's church, Belleville, received the report of the nominating committee and installed the officers.

Hon. Presidents, Mrs. G. A. Reid, Belleville; Mrs. H. R. Duff, Kingston; Mrs. Morrice, Belleville; Mrs. W. A. Hunter, Madoc.

President, Mrs. G. E. Darling, Gananoque.

1st vice-president, Mrs. Wm. Shaw.

2nd vice-president, Mrs. Gothard, Trenton.

3rd vice-president, Mrs. H. R. Rollins, Trenton.

4th vice-presiden, Mrs. M. E. R. Boudreau, Picton.

Corresponding secretary, Mrs. Percy Ransom, Belleville.

Recording secretary, Mrs. A. E. Cameron, Pittsburg.

Treasurer, Miss A. Fowler, Kingston.

Department Secretaries

Young Women and Teen-age, Mrs. W. H. Penwarden, Kingston.

Mission Band, Mrs. Walker, Stirling.

Glad Tidings, Mrs. Douglas.

Home Helpers, Mrs. W. White, Roslin.

Welfare and Welcome, Mrs. K. Watson, Kingston.

Library and Literature, Mrs. J. Fargey, Belleville.

Life Membership, Mrs. Wallace, of West Huntingdon.

Exchange, Mrs. M. Tomkins, Stirling.

Student, Miss MacFarlane, Kingston.

Supply, Mrs. C. E. Bateman, Belleville.

Press, Mrs. John McCaffery, Madoc.

Reports were also received from Sudbury and Wilton.

The newly elected president, Mrs. Darling expressed her appreciation for their faith in choosing her as president. Mrs. Baragar gave the report of the resolution committee which included a very beautiful tribute to Mrs. Hunter which read "We would be pleased to place on record our great gratitude to Mrs. Hunter who has served us as president for 5 years. Her pleasant personality has implanted cheerfulness and optimism in our members. Her exceptional executive ability and her devotion to duty have helped us and we do thank her for her devotion to our work."

Also thanks to Miss MacArthur for her inspiring address; to the ladies of St. Andrews' for their delicious meal so nicely served; to those who contributed music and song and a program set aside for prayer at home and abroad. Mrs. Hunter, retiring president, was most grateful for the cheerful optimism of the executive, for ability and devotion during her term as president.

After a hymn and the doxology, Rev. Dr. Boudreau pronounced the benediction. Miss Edna Jones was pianist.

Will Be Ready When Time Comes

New York, May 4—(CP)— The fact the British building at the New York World's Fair was ready for the opening last Sunday, while the pavilions of most other participating nations were behind schedule today caused the New York Times to comment that "whatever the occasion, when the time comes, England will be ready."

"Great Britain today may seem leisurely, unhurried, confused and long-suffering under gibes and provocations," the editorial said. "But those who know her best feel sure that, whatever the occasion, when the time comes, England will be ready."

Made as only Kellogg's know how!

You'll agree it can't be an accident that Kellogg's Corn Flakes are Canada's most popular breakfast cereal? It isn't! Their satisfying corn-and-malt richness is a closely-guarded Kellogg's secret! Get a head start tomorrow, and every morning! Ask your grocer for Kellogg's Corn Flakes, today. Made by Kellogg's in London, Canada.

"I get to work at 8 a.m.

And believe me, I don't get up till I have to ... breakfast was a problem till I started on Kellogg's every morning. Easy to serve, always appetizing ... starts me up and helps keep me going till I knock off for lunch."

BOYS! GIRLS!

ENGAGEMENT NOTICES

Mr. and Mrs. B. C. Tucker announce the engagement of their daughter, Laura Bernice to Ray Ernest, son of Mr. and Mrs. Mark Shortt, Springbrook, the marriage to take place in May.

Mr. and Mrs. B. C. Tucker announce the engagement of their daughter, Nellie Irene, to Carleton Edgar, son of Mr. and Mrs. W. B. Potts, Mount Pleasant, the marriage to take place in May.

Mrs. E. L. Donaldson, North Park Street, and Mrs. O. Bates of Moira Street, returned to the city on Tuesday evening from St. Petersburg, Fla. En route they spent Monday in Cincinnati, Ohio.

At the home of Mrs. Harry Taylor, 31 North Front Street, a miscellaneous shower was held last evening in honour of Miss Annie Savage, (bride-to-be). An enjoyable evening was spent playing cards, after which lunch was served. Miss Savage received many useful gifts.

The members of Laurel Rebekah Lodge, Stirling, were guests of Quintena Lodge in this city, at their regular meeting on Tuesday evening. Fifty members of Stirling Lodge were present and their degree team exemplified the Rebekah degree in a beautiful and impressive manner. There were also several members present from Glenford Lodge of Frankford, as well as other visitors. At the close of lodge all present repaired to the banquet hall, where an enjoyable supper was served.

The weekly meeting of the St. Andrew's Y.P.S. was held on Monday evening, May 1st. The meeting opened with the singing of Hymn 393 followed by a prayer "The Blessing" by the President. Hilda Murray read the Scripture Lesson, Psalm 25, verses 1-11. The minutes were read and approved followed by the roll call and offering. A short business discussion followed. The president introduced the guest speaker for the evening, Mrs. Bunting and her subject was "Missionary work in China". Mrs. Bunting was very interesting and showed the young people many souvenirs that she brought with her from China. Bob Kidd thanked Mrs. Bunting at the close of her discussion and the meeting closed with hymn 74 followed by the Lord's Prayer.

Quints to Wear White on Visit To Royalty

Callander, Ont., May 4.—(CP)—Mrs. Elzire Dionne, mother of the quintuplets, said today she would wear an ensemble in the new Japonica shade—a rust tan—for her presentation to the King and Queen in Toronto, May 22. The famous daughters and the father Oliva also will be presented.

The quints, it is believed, probably will don white dresses, shoes and stockings.

"I'm just a farmer and don't know what I should wear," Dionne said "I guess it will be an ordinary business suit."

Weddings

COCHRANE—CAMERON

St. John's Presbyterian Church, Pittsburg, was the scene of a pretty Spring wedding at three o'clock on Tuesday afternoon, April 25, when Isobel Jean, only daughter of the Rev. A. E. Cameron and Mrs. Cameron, formerly of Melrose, became the bride of Mr. Charles Clarke Cochrane, son of Mrs. William Cochrane and the late Mr. Cochrane of Orillia. Ferns, lilies and hydrangea banked the pulpit in the church and formed an attractive setting for the bridal party. The Rev. A. E. Cameron, B.D., father of the bride, performed the ceremony and Miss Lois Baker of Kingston, played the wedding music.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her cousin, Mr. Donald Macfarlane, of Toronto, was a winsome figure in her wedding gown of white taffeta, made with a tight fitted bodice, a long bouffant skirt and short puffed sleeves. She wore a white turban with a short veil and carried a shower bouquet of Bridal roses, lily-of-the-valley and orchids. The bride was attended by Miss Ruth Clement as bridesmaid, wearing a frock of dusty pink crepe, a pink turban and carrying an arm bouquet of Bridal roses and blue iris. The best man was Mr. John K. B. Robertson of Toronto and the ushers were Rev. Graham Jamieson of Beaverton and Mr. Wilbert Gates of Pittsburg.

After the ceremony a reception was held at "The Manse". Mrs. Cameron, mother of the bride, wore an effective gown of teal blue crepe a black hat and a corsage of roses; Mrs. Cochrane of Orillia, mother of the groom, wore a smart gown of navy blue lace, a matching hat and silver fox fur and a corsage of roses.

Later the bride and groom left on their wedding trip to Quebec City and upon their return will reside at Geraldton, Ont. The bride and groom are graduates in Arts from Queen's University and the groom is also a graduate in theology from Knox College, Toronto. The out of town guests included—Mrs. William Cochrane of Orillia, mother of the groom; Judge and Mrs. Arch Cochrane and young daughter, Anne Boyd Cochrane of Brampton; Mrs. J. D. Robertson, Mrs. Mary Macfarlane and Mr. and Mrs. D. E. Macfarlane, all of Toronto; the Rev. A. Crawford Jamieson of Agincourt; Mr. and Mrs. William Bibby of Brighton; Mr. and Mrs. Robert Sherman, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Macfarlane, Mr. and Mrs. F. O. Bennett and Mr. and Mrs R. C. English all of Belleville and Mr. Raymond Cameron and Miss Margaret Cameron of Perth.

MURPHY—MELTZ

An interesting wedding took place at St. Mary's Cathedral, Kingston, on Monday morning at eight o'clock when Anna, daughter of Mrs. Meltz and the late Peter Meltz of Kingston, became the bride of Mr. Jack Murphy of this city, son of Mr. and Mrs. Jeremiah Murphy of Hamilton. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Father Brady.

The young couple were attended by Miss Molly Cassidy and Mr. Peter Meltz, brother of the bride, both of Kingston. Wedding breakfast was served at Thomas' Cafe, Belleville, and a reception was held at the home of the groom's aunt, Mrs. S. Harris, South Park Street.

Mr. and Mrs. Murphy left on a wedding trip and upon their return will reside in Belleville.

Adults Like Children's Desserts

By ALICE LYNN BARRY

TODAY we come through with some delicious desserts that have been selected with an eye to the requirements of the children. But we must warn you that grown-ups won't refuse servings of these sweets. In fact, they are likely to leave little for the little ones unless watched!

"Apricot Tapioca Cream" comes first. It is made with one egg yolk, two cups milk, three tablespoons quick-cooking tapioca, two tablespoons sugar, one eighth teaspoon salt, one egg white, one-fourth teaspoon almond extract, one-half cup of cream whipped. The sauce requires 18 dried apricots, one and one-half cups water and one-half cup sugar. Mix egg yolk with small amount of milk in top of double boiler. Add remaining milk, tapioca, sugar and salt. Place over rapidly-boiling water and cook 8 to 10 minutes after water boils again, stirring frequently. Beat egg white until just stiff enough to hold shape. Fold hot tapioca mixture gradually into egg white. Cool (mixture thickens as it cools). When slightly cool, add flavoring and cream. Chill. Serve in individual dishes with apricot sauce. Serves six. For the sauce cook apricots in water two to three hours. Remove apricots, add sugar to the water and cook ten minutes or until mixture is of consistency of thin syrup. Add apricots, simmer for five minutes. Chill.

Chocolate Cream

Chocolate Tapioca Cream is made with one egg yolk, four cups milk, four tablespoons quick cooking tapioca, two-thirds cup sugar, one-fourth teaspoon salt, two squares unsweetened chocolate cut in pieces, one egg white and one teaspoon vanilla.

Mix egg yolk with small amount of milk in top of double boiler. Add tapioca, sugar, salt, chocolate and the remaining milk. Place over rapidly-boiling water and cook ten to 12 minutes after water boils again, stirring frequently; then beat with rotary egg beater until chocolate is blended. Remove from fire. Beat egg white until just stiff enough to hold shape. Fold hot tapioca mixture gradually into egg white. Cool (mixture thickens as it cools). When slightly cool, add vanilla. Chill. Serve in sherbet glasses, garnished with whipped cream. Sprinkle with plain or toasted cocoanut or grate chocolate over the top. Serves eight.

St. Clement's Style

St. Clement's Tapioca Cream is made with one egg yolk, two cups milk, three tablespoons quick-cooking tapioca, three tablespoons sugar, one-fourth teaspoon salt, one-fourth teaspoon grated orange rind, one-fourth teaspoon grated lemon rind and one egg white. Quarter cup fruit juice and water, two-thirds cup sugar, one orange and one lemon, sections free from membrane and drained, are the ingredients needed for the sauce. Mix egg yolk with small amount of milk in top of double boiler. Add remaining milk, tapioca, sugar and salt. Cook over rapidly-boiling water and cook eight to ten minutes after water boils again, stirring frequently. Remove from boiling water and add grated orange and lemon rinds. Beat egg white until it is stiff enough to just hold shape. Fold hot tapioca mixture gradually into egg white. Chill (mixture thickens as it cools). Serve in sherbet glasses, pouring small amount of sauce over each portion just before serving. Serves four. For the sauce, add water to juice drained from the fruit to make one-fourth cup. Combine liquid and sugar and boil rapidly for four minutes. Add orange and lemon sections and boil gently five minutes longer. Chill.

NEW 'LITTLE GIRL' DRESSES REQUIRE SLIM, TRIM WAIST

HELEN PARRISH . . . this human rocker exercise keeps her waistline in trim.

By HELEN FOLLETT

PLUMP GIRLS would do well to get a divorce from the bonbon box. They love their cream puffs, they shovel sugar in their tea, and you never saw one that didn't dote on fried potatoes. Unless they curb their appetites they will keep on gaining. And birthdays are no help.

Fashion has ordained that the neat, slim waistline is imperative. If you haven't got it, you aren't entitled to wear the new "little girl" dresses or quaint evening robes with bouncing skirts and ruffles. The heavyweight should understand that adopise tissue packs itself around the heart and other organs, and that she has less resistance to disease than skinny little slimps.

Now and then overweight is due to glandular disturbances, but the average case is due to nothing else than fattening foods and not enough exercise. Certain foods won't put on an ounce of flesh; they include lean meats, vegetables that grow above ground, buttermilk, cottage cheese, fruits and unsweetened fruit juices. Cut down on fats, starches and sweets. Do not delete them entirely; they are energy builders.

To slenderize the waistline spend five minutes night and morning doing the windmill exercise. Place the feet far apart. Touch the floor with the right hand while lifting the left one and vice versa. Don't be slow about it. There will be a muscle tug from armpits to hips and that does the business.

Notes in Diary Of a Fashion Model

Old-fashioned Charm

By Grace Thorncliffe

HAD A LETTER from Pam today. She is overjoyed at the news that the shop isn't going to open until autumn. She is planning to bring her youngsters east and spent a couple of months. While here she will be able to go over the ground with Madame and Eileen and really plan things. So everything is working out beautifully.

I have been very busy arranging our Fair display and helping Madame in her work for some of the big fashion shows. Madame takes possession of her country place next month but has decided to keep her apartment in town going. Bill has rented his apartment and looks forward to a handsome profit. He is going to stay with his sister at her little house in Westchester and will stay at a friend's place when he has to remain in town. Madame has asked him to spend week-ends at her Sands Point home.

Hurrying Home

Heard from Dodo and she is hurrying home and expects to sail Saturday. She doesn't write one word about her private affairs, so I don't know whether she obtained a divorce or whether she and her husband have been reconciled. Igor has got a swell job at the Fair, something that will lead to a good permanent connection at its conclusion, so that Helene, at last, is getting herself a lovely little place at Great Neck, a country home with all the advantages of town. Bill is going with her to the various furniture and household equipment people and getting her things at cost. That girl is blissfully happy, for her dream of her own little home is coming true.

What a good thing it is that Igor didn't listen to his sister and that husband of hers and return to France! He is clever, honest, sensible—just the type of person who appreciates this country. So now they will have their nice little home, a good job and prospects for the future. I told Consuelo about it last night, and she, like the darling that she is, is buying them a marvelous radio and gramophone, one of those sets with automatic changer and a built-in record cabinet, the sort of thing that runs into a small fortune.

Those dresses of old-fashioned charm, yet up-to-the minute styling are pretty devastating —when worn by the right girl! Here's a delightful model of this type done in black crepe, its square yoke topped off by a guimpe of white eyelet embroidery with a tiny turn-down collar and black tie. The embroidery is also used for a deep ruffle on the underskirt, which has a black velvet ribbon drawn through it. Bodice is snug, skirt softly gathered.

Causes Rumpus

Following Prime Minister Chamberlain's announcement of conscription, a bit of a rumpus was caused by this car, which was driven near Whitehall bearing the placards of the Social Credit party, and calling for the conscription of bankers first.

To Organize Schoolboy Patrol To Guard Children at Crossings

Two Boys from Each School to be Selected for Duration of School Term

EARLIER LUNCH HOUR

Smart young public school students wearing Sam Browne belts and other identifying insignia, to be known as the Schoolboy Patrol, will do guard duty at the dangerous street crossings near the four city public schools during the noon luncheon period. H. B. Fetterly, chairman of a special committee appointed by the Board of Education for the purpose, announced yesterday.

Boy pupils selected from each school will be appointed for the duration of each term to direct their fellow pupils across the street and maintain a general lookout for motor and other vehicles forming dangerous hazards to the children. Appointments and duties will start immediately, Mr. Fetterly stated.

Contributing to the plans laid down by the committee to safeguard the lives and limbs of the children is the new arrangement whereby classes of all the schools will be dismissed at 11.45 a.m. and re-assemble at 1.15 p.m., instead of at twelve o'clock noon and 1.30 p.m. as formerly. This arrangement was made so that children would be well on their way, or at home, during the heavy noon traffic.

"Belleville has yet to have a fatal accident with regard to its school children," Mr. Fetterly stated. "We have been very fortunate in that respect, although of late years there have been a few accidents near one of the schools in which children were hurt. Our new plan however, will, go a long way toward eliminating accident possibilities."

"The Schoolboy Patrol will be maintained during the noon recess only," he added. "New guards and patrols will be appointed at the beginning of each school term."

Police Blotter

Property damage resulted following a motor accident on Pinnacle St., yesterday which ultimately saw three motor cars involved. Joseph Hawes, Flinton, was proceeding northerly on Pinnacle St., and according to police investigations apparently failed to observe another motor car, driven by Ernest Crook, Mountain View, emerging from the curb. Mr. Hawes' car collided with the Crook car with the latter careening into the rear of a parked automobile, owned by I. G. Hefkey of this city. Property damage resulted to Mr. Hawes and Mr. Hefkey's car, but the matter of damages was amicably settled upon the arrival of P. C. Ellis. No charges were deemed necessary, however.

Police were called into Foster Ward yesterday to settle a dispute between two families, which arose out of altercations originating between the children of the respective parents concerned. The police advised the family heads to instruct their children to refrain from keeping company while at play, thereby eliminating any further repetition of discussions.

No arrests have been necessary in Belleville for the past 48 hours which resulted in the cell block being available for the 11 transients, who sought shelter at that point last night.

Mrs. Clarence Marshall had a quilting on Wednesday to raise money for the W. Institute.

Mr. J. W. Hamilton spent Thursday at Mr. Levi Lattone's doing some carpenter work.

Deepest sympathy is extended to Mrs. Frank Treverton in the loss of her loving father Mr. Charles Hyde of Belleville.

Mrs. W. Elliott, Mrs. Bernice Moore, Mrs. Orval Rollins and baby Douglas and Mrs. Robert Rollins and children Faye and Joan attended the quilting at Mrs. Clarence Marshall's on Wednesday.

Mrs. W. Elliott and family spent Wednesday evening with Mr. and Mrs. Walter Hall.

Deepest sympathy is extended to Mrs. Stanley Hazzard in the loss of her loving mother, the late Mrs. Sinfield of Belleville.

Mr. and Mrs. E. Denyes spent a Sunday recently with Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Sills, Foxboro.

Mrs. J. Blue and three daughters of Belleville and Miss Irene Murphy, public school teacher, spent Sunday with Mr. and Mrs. H. McCreary.

Miss Mary Emerson spent Sunday with Miss Margery Creeper.

The junior choir was much enjoyed by all present at Church Sunday evening.

Mrs. J. G. Latta came to her home at Plainfield on Sunday afternoon to spend the summer. Her nephew Mr. Cyril Latta brought her home. She had several callers after she arrived. All had to welcome her back after spending the winter in Toronto.

Her son Mr. Norman Latta of Dartford came on Saturday.

Misses Evelyn and Marjery Outwater spent the week end with their grandmother Mrs. James Hamilton and aunt, Miss Minnie Hamilton, Tyendinaga.

Dr. McQuaig and Mrs. McQuaig and two sons spent Sunday with Mr. and Mrs. Fred Hall.

ABOUT TRUSSES

This Truss represents one of twenty-one types we make and is the result of over 70 years of experience in making and fitting trusses. It is built on good, sound, legitimate common sense principles and, when made specially to your measure, and fitted, securely closes the opening and allows Nature to thicken the parts so that the bowl cannot escape. With regular use, the Truss will soon permanently relieve the condition.

4th Sidney

4th Sidney—The many friends of Mrs. C. Vermilyea are sorry to know she is a patient in the General Hospital. Her many friends wish a speedy recovery.

Many attended the shower on Friday evening in the Dining Hall April 21st in honor of Miss Margaret Johnson who was married at Harrowsmith on May 2nd. Her many friends wish them bon voyage.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Harris returned home on Monday having attended the funeral of the late Mrs. (Rev.) T. Wallace of Greenbank. Much sympathy is extended to Rev. Wallace and family from their host of friends. Rev. and Mrs. Wallace and family spent four years on the Sidney circuit. Mrs. Wallace was buried at Newtonville on Monday, April 24th.

Quite a number attended the bee at the Stone Church appointment on Thursday last. The ladies served a very appetizing dinner.

Mr. and Mrs. P. Harris spent a few days with the latter's sister and husband, Mr. and Mrs. R. Logan of Hamilton, also visiting with Rev. and Mrs. E. B. Honey of Myrtle during the past week.

The many friends of Mr. Clayton Phillips are sorry to know that he is a patient in the General Hospital. All hope a speedy recovery.

Mr. Carman Lott is visiting at his grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. J. Hannah.

Bonarlaw

Bonarlaw—Mrs. J. C. Sills of Ivanhoe, District President Women's Institutes, was the guest speaker at a meeting of the Springbrook Branch held at the home of Mrs. Geo. S. Eastwood on Wednesday afternoon of last week.

The roll call, "Name a battle of the great war" was well responded to. Mrs. Sills' contribution to this portion of the program was very interesting as she was a nurse overseas.

A report of the social evening held in St. Mark's Sunday School rooms was given and the President, Mrs. J. F. Baker, thanked Mrs. D. Wellman for success in selling tickets on a quilt.

Expressions of thanks were received from Mesdames Swayne, McComb and Haslett for flowers received from the Institute.

Mrs. J. M. Barlow gave a splendid reading on "Home and Country." A comic reading was given by Mrs. G. S. Eastwood. All joined in community singing with Mrs. Jason Baker at the piano.

Mrs. Sills explained the Co-operative program. The branch decided to have a local leader this year. It was also decided to have an officer's rally. Mrs. Sills gave a splendid talk on the "Life of Adolf Hitler." A reading on the study of weeds was given by Mrs. D. Wellman, Agricultural convener. Mrs. Walter Heath put on a contest. A dainty lunch was served and a social half hour spent.

One Friday of last week a miscellaneous shower was given the newlyweds Mr. and Mrs. Anson Grant, at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Thos. Hannah. About one hundred persons were present and the large number of beautiful and useful gifts attested to the popularity of the bride and groom. An address was read by Miss Iva Brown wishing the couple health and happiness throughout the coming years.

Both Mr. and Mrs. Grant replied in a few well chosen words thanking all present for their many gifts and kind expressions.

All sang for they are jolly good fellows and to the strains of music furnished by Messrs. Bert Kouri and Eugene Reynolds of Marmora, dancing was enjoyed by all until a late hour. A bountiful lunch was served and all report a splendid time.

Rev. Canon W. G. Swayne spent a couple of days last week at Merrickville, Ont.

Mr. John Eastwood was admitted to Kingston Hospital on Tuesday of this week in a serious condition.

At a recent meeting of the vestry committee of St. Mark's Church it was decided to paint the rectory and do some minor repair work. Mr. A. H. Reid was engaged to do the painting and the work will be proceeded with at once.

KISS YOUR TIRED FEELING GOODBYE!

Pepless Many Suffer Low Blood Count—And Don't Know It.

The baffling thing about low blood count is that you can weigh about as much as you ever did — even look healthy and strong, yet — you can feel as if you had lead in your legs, dopey, tired and pepless.

Low blood count means you haven't got enough red blood corpuscles. It is their vital job to carry life-giving oxygen from your lungs throughout your body. And just as it takes oxygen to explode gasoline in your car and make the power to turn the wheels, so you must have plenty of oxygen to explode the energy in your body and give you going power.

Get Dr. Williams Pink Pills today. They are world-famous for the help they give in increasing the number and strength of red corpuscles. Then with your blood count up, you'll feel like bounding up the stairs as if you were floating on air. Ask your druggist for Dr. Williams Pink Pills today.

Fashion Flashes

The age of innocence or the little girl air is an important feature of the new mode. Piquet, credited for the silhouette, makes an exquisite evening frock of white tulle with crinolined skirt. The off-shoulder neckline is entirely bordered by old-fashioned lace-frilled bouquets tied with black velvet ribbons.

The pretty picture of the new fashions is aided by dainty hats. For wear with a suit and frilly lingerie blouse there is a tiny flat sailor fashioned entirely of row on row of white Val type lace, trimmed with pink camellias.

We'll be satisfied with silver fox despite all the furore about the new rare foxes and exotic shadings. A lumber jacket coat for spring with buttoned mid-section is fashioned of several silver fox skins and heralded for day or evening wear.

Print the good news that print frocks are more interesting than ever. A beauty of a frock is an apron style in black crepe de chine with a design of gaily colored wings, lilies, joined hands, masks and dice.

Advice to the Lovelorn

Famous Authority on Problems of Love and Marriage.

Beware of These Lohengrin Boys!

This is not the first time this column has warned girls against the Lohengrin boys— gentlemen who appear out of space and can give no investigable proof of whence they came, where they're going, their families, friends and visible means of support.

Distrust them doubly when they point out a magnificent home, claim it as the family residence, yet never ring the doorbell. Doubt their cozy chats of being a scion, a younger son perhaps, temporarily out of favor owing to a recent scrape or two, but sure to inherit the wealth of one of those sixty families who own most of the millions of these United States.

Lohengrin, the splendid knight who appears drawn by the swan, to claim the hand of Elsa of Brabant, is one of Wagner's finest operatic creations. We thrill to the mystery surrounding Lohengrin and we wonder at Elsa's lack of faith. But, dear girls, who live in this hard age of realism, please don't fall for a Lohengrin who presents himself out of nowhere claiming to be a scion of a multi-millionaire family.

A few days ago, a 50-year old Lohengrin claiming to be a member of the Spreckels family, married a girl, got what little money she had, pawned her jewelry, her clothes, even her luggage, before her suspicions were aroused, and she discovered he was an imposter, who had been up on the same charges previously.

We shall not give the bride's name and hope that when the police finish investigating her man of mystery, she may become decently divorced and at least partially forget her troubles.

At the present time she is at Detention Hospital suffering from a serious nervous breakdown. The fakir she married six weeks ago had told her he was Claus Spreckels, heir to the multi-million dollar Spreckles sugar fortune.

Today he is held in jail for vagrancy. He was booked as George Bell, 50 years of age, but was known to the police as Nathan Desmond, who was arrested in 1915 for posing as another member of the Spreckels family, while displaying a fictitious bank book with a $90,000 balance in his favor.

He seems to have the Spreckels millions on the brain for he made love to the 26-year old girl as Claus, heir to $30,000,000. He led her to an imposing mansion on Nob Hill in San Francisco and pointed it out as his mother's home. He intimated that his mother might be angry if he took in his prospective bride in this informal fashion, but said all would be forgiven when he announced they were really and truly married.

And so they were married, the bride agreeing to elope. They went to Portland, Oregon, on a wedding tour, and then returned to San Francisco. The fraud was reported by Attorney Leo K. Wilson, a family friend. The young bride came to him, after her slow growing suspicions had been aroused by his demands for money, the pawning of her jewels, clothes, and finally her travelling bags. The police made it clear that this was the second case of Spreckels' impersonation and promptly arrested the bridegroom, while the bride went to the hospital suffering from a nervous breakdown.

If this were an isolated case one might be led to believe that the girl was soft and a bit silly. But it happens continually. Hardly a week passes that some girl doesn't write to this column, telling me she has been taken in by the same old Lohengrin hoax. Perhaps her man of mystery may not have posed as a Spreckels, a Vanderbilt or a Rockefeller, but he's always a man of millions, temporarily hard up. And by the time he has got the trusting girl's savings, her jewelry, if any, he makes a getaway.

Unless they are jail-birds, there are mighty few men who can give no account of themselves, and when they point out a spectacular house as the family residence it might be well to do a little investigating.

GOOD MANNERS

MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

Taste Revealed Here and There

Every time I go to a wedding in which the attendants are 'paired off', I wonder why in the world brides persist in planning the recessional in this way. This is never done in the correctly planned recessional, and this pairing-off of maid of honour with best man, bridesmaids with ushers, gives too much the appearance of a musical comedy sextette. Besides that this arrangement doesn't abide by the traditional idea of the attendants, which is that the bridal attendants shall be grouped together, and the groom's attendants shall be grouped together.

In the brief walk of the bride and bridegroom in the recessional from the altar, the dramatic highlight should be on the bride and bridegroom, who should be the only 'couple' in the recessional. To have even the maid of honour walk with the best man gives much the effect of a double wedding. I'm all for having the bride and bridegroom have all the spotlight in the recessional. It is their day!

Our words echo our taste, good or bad. The dynamic truth of this was revealed recently in the interviews given to reporters by Miss Margaret Rawlings and Mr. Godfrey Tearle, as they sailed after the failure of 'The Flashing Stream' a play in which they had been appearing. The critics, its seemed to me, had given the play very fair reviews, admiring some qualities, disapproving of others, but the play closed after eight performances.

Said Miss Rawlings, bitterly, as she sailed: "Offering this most beautiful play, this great work of art, here was like pouring out vintage claret to people who want their Scotch straight. I drink both, but I know when to drink them."

Said Mr. Tearle: "I have nothing to say."

Yes, words echo our taste, bad or good!

Attention, hostesses! An "extra added attraction" in the service of buffet parties has lately found many enthusiasts. Most guests, especially men, like to start a buffet meal with hot soup. In the new form of service, the hostess has a soup tureen or any generous-sized bowl filled with steaming hot soup, on the buffet table, with bouillon cups and saucers, or cream soup cups and saucers, arranged near it. Each guest brings the hostess his cup and saucer to be filled with delicious hot soup, and the guests finish this course before they go about serving themselves to the following courses. A sensible idea . . . . . sustaining, too.

I heard two engaging little boys talking together on the bus the other day. Suddenly the eyes of one brightened with a lovely light, as he said, "We have such a nice time at home!" What pleasant, understanding people his parents must be!

DR. DAFOE'S COLUMN on the Quintuplets and the Care of Your Children

From the moment the result of Dr. Jenner's first vaccination, in 1796, was known, every case of smallpox became preventable. But just think how many cases there have been since that time.

One would think that with such a simple precaution there would have been a rush for the cure, and that in a few years the disease would have disappeared or, at least, become exceedingly rare.

Unfortunately this wasn't the case. The public didn't acclaim Jenner's discovery. Instead they scoffed at the whole business, and went on contracting smallpox and dying of it just as they had before this great discovery was made. In fact, it is only within comparatively recent times that the state stepped in and made vaccination compulsory; it was only when this rather drastic step was taken that a very large proportion of the people began to be vaccinated.

There are still people who oppose vaccination, and announce that they don't believe in it. Personally I can not understand how any intelligent person can look back over the record of smallpox and the reduction in the number of cases since vaccination without realizing what a great benefit to mankind vaccination has been.

In most cases it is impossible for the state to make vaccination compulsory until the child has started school, and as long as children go for the first six years of their lives without vaccination, there will be occasional outbreaks of smallpox throughout the country.

Vaccination is free in almost every city on this continent today. I don't know of a place, in fact, where it isn't free, so cost is no argument against having your child immunized. This vaccination should be performed toward the end of the first year of your child's life, for by that time any immunity he may have inherited from his mother will have pretty well worn off.

As in the days of Jenner, the basic principal of vaccination is to give the patient cowpox, a mild disease resembling smallpox. The vaccine is secured by infecting young healthy cows with cowpox. When the disease reaches its height in the animal, after about a week, the skin of the cow is shaved and the material so collected is saved. These scrapings contain the organism which causes cowpox. This organism is not a bacteria, but belongs to the virus group, which are smaller and cannot be seen under the microscope. I might mention here that this is the great obstacle we face in fighting infantile paralysis—the disease is caused by a virus which cannot be detected under the microscope. Someday, however, we hope we will be able to discover just what it is, and then we may be able to put an end to it, just as we can to smallpox.

But to get back to our vaccine—these scrapings from the cow are mixed with carbolic acid to kill any organisms other than the cowpox virus. The scrapings are then stored in a refrigeration for several weeks. At the end of that time they are examined again to make sure no bacteria is present. When the mixture is known to be pure, it is put into sterile glass tubes and is then ready for use.

Program of Athletics For All

By Garry C. Myers, Ph.D.

PRETTY generally throughout the United States the public funds spent on physical education in the high schools are used for a mere handful of youth who are highly trained for the varsity teams, chiefly football and basketball. Most of the students are just fans.

Even where there is an intramural program, relatively few participate at all, or they do so half-heartedly, since the interest in the varsity games overshadows all else. Can we ever have an effective intramural athletic program under the present system of interscholastic contests?

While visiting the Weber County High School of Utah I learned of a good program. Here is how Glenn Arnett, director of physical education, reported it to me:

Teams Selected

At the beginning of each year all gym classes are divided into teams of equal ability. Each team elects a captain and he in turn appoints an assistant to take charge of their team in case of his absence.

"Activities participated in are: softball, touchfootball, basketball, paddleball, table tennis, track pyramid building, speedball, volleyball, badminton, wrestling, horseshoes and tumbling.

"There are 16 teams competing in each activity with 13 men on each, making a total of 208 participants out of a student body of 325 boys. The fundamental rules and skills of the activities are taught during the class period and as soon as they are mastered the preliminary rounds of the tournaments are run off in class. The championship teams of each class meet in the final rounds of the tournament during the noon hour, and are witnessed by approximately 500 students.

New Activity

"While the final rounds of the tournament are being run off, a new activity is taught and practiced in class, thus we have a constant program of entertainment for those students that bring their lunches to school.

"At the end of each year the team winning the greatest number of points in all activities wins the intramural league for that year."

Notice large number of activities engaged in and how large a proportion of the students (boys) participate. One does wonder about the girls. They don't seem to count for much in this or almost any other high school sports program.

DOGS KILL SHEEP

Picton, May 3—When dogs attacked a flock of sheep owned by Ralph Dodds at Cherry Valley, four valuable pure bred Hampshire ewes and five spring lambs were worried to death. One of the dogs responsible for the damage was later located and destroyed, the other still being sought. Though shots were fired at the pair as they fled when several men appeared on the scene in response to the barking of the canines, they were not hit.

The ewes killed were all young ones and last year won all prizes in their classes at Picton fair.

Farmers are taking extra precaution to guard their flocks. Most of them are keeping their sheep inside at night and remaining alert for the sound of dogs.

HOUSE DAMAGED BY HEAVY BOMB

Birmingham and Liverpool Suffer Damage Possibly Through Retaliation

London, May 4 (CP-Havas) — Birmingham and Liverpool suffered bombings last night, apparently in retaliation for the sentencing here of two Irishmen convicted of engineering the Hammersmith bridge bombing five weeks ago.

In Birmingham, unidentified men set off a bomb near the Cliff Rock Road, damaging a house. First reports did not indicate any casualties.

In Liverpool, tear gas bombs exploded in two motion picture houses. About fifteen persons affected by the fumes were taken to hospital. Police believed members of the outlawed Irish Republican army were responsible.

In London, William Browne, a bartender, and Edward John Connell, a salesman, both 22, were found guilty of the Hammersmith bridge explosion, and were sentenced to 10 and 20 years' hard labor, respectively.

VISITORS BARRED FROM PROPERTY

Power Plants and Stations Throughout Quebec Take Precautionary Measures

Montreal, May 4 (CP) — Power plants and stations throughout Quebec, as well as many heavy industries, have barred visitors from their property as a precautionary measure against possible sabotage, according to reports at Royal Canadian Mounted Police Montreal headquarters.

None but fully-accredited visitors or representatives of the federal government will be allowed into the plants in future, it was learned. Vital industries are co-operating with a civil security defence committee to decrease the possibility of sabotage.

A survey of plants, power stations, transmission lines, docks and harbors, and other transportation facilities and heavy industries has been almost completed, it was declared. A few vulnerable industries have yet to be approached but it is believed they will be brought into the protection plan shortly.

ONLY MINOR INJURIES

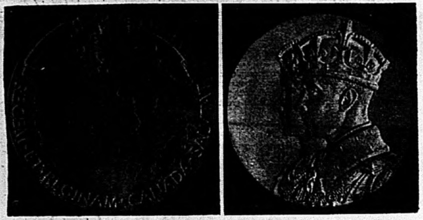
Campbellford, Ont., May 4 (CP)—Austin Keller, 21, of Toronto, suffered only minor injuries yesterday when his automobile crashed into a garage at the foot of Potts' hill after turning over four times.

The sedan got out of control at the top of the hill, near here, and hurtled to the bottom, ending upside down against the garage. Keller, who had been starting on a fishing trip, suffered a wrenched left leg and a shaking-up.

New U. S. Minister to Canada Expected to Arrive for Royal Visit

The nomination of Daniel Roper as United States minister to Canada is expected to be ratified by the U.S. senate in time that the new minister may be present in Ottawa in time for the visit of the King and Queen. Mr. Roper, who will fill the vacancy created by the transfer of Norman Armour, former U.S. minister to Canada, to Chile last year, is shown here with Mrs. Roper, who will accompany her husband to his new post.

Official Commemorative Medallions for Royal Visit



Canada's official souvenirs of the visit of Their Majesties, King George VI and Queen Elizabeth, are commemorative medallions—bronze and silver replicas of the official gold medallions which will be presented to the King and Queen by the government of Canada. The silver medallions will sell for 50 cents and the bronze ones for 10 cents. The silver souvenir will be the size of a fifty-cent piece, and the bronze one a little smaller. These official mementos struck at the Royal Canadian Mint, Ottawa, display on the obverse side joint likenesses of Their Majesties wearing crowns and robes. The reverse side traces the royal itinerary across the map of the Dominion, the design being ensigned by the Crown and Canadian Coat-of-Arms. The metals used in the official souvenir medallions are Canadian mine products. Through co-operation of Hon. N. A. McLarty, K.C., M.P., postmaster-general, they will be sold to the public at all post-offices, sub-post-offices and by letter carriers.

AT THE McCARTHY

"THE YOUNG IN HEART"

The most fascinating family that ever strolled across a silver screen is holding court at the McCarthy Theatre this week. So run down and welcome the Charming Carletons in David O. Selznick's gay comedy romance, "The Young in Heart," starring Janet Gaynor, Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., and Paulette Goddard, with Roland "Topper" and Billie Burke heading one of the grandest supporting cases ever assembled for a motion picture.

It's our guess you'll take every last one of these lovable frauds to your heart—and thank this reviewer for tipping you off to the finest evening's entertainment this season has produced.

Based on I. A. R. Wylie's Saturday Evening Post story, "The Gay Banditti," "The Young in Heart" tells the lovable, laughable story of the Carleton Family, who live by their wits and their charm and can boast of having been kicked out of only the best places from the Riviera to London.

There's Father "Sahib", Carleton, an ex-actor, whose family loyally supports him in the preposterous myth that he is Colonel Carleton, late of the Bengal Lancers, and the role is made to order for Roland Young. There's charming, twittering "Marmy," played to the life by Billie Burke. And there are the two children; George-Anne (Janet Gaynor), who has become engaged to a sober, wealthy young Scot, who sees through her family and says so; and Richard (Fairbanks, Jr.) who has hooked a girl rich enough to take care of the entire family for the rest of their lives.

When the story opens the "Sahib's insistence upon mixing brandy, sleight of hand and poker results in their being unceremoniously evicted from their rich Riviera hunting ground. They head toward an unpromising England, leaving the aforementioned lush possibilities behind.

But something will turn up, they are certain. And something does, in the person of little Miss Fortune, whom George-Anne discovers on the train. This tiny, timid and fabulously wealthy old lady, who has emerged from a life of obscurity to spend her last days getting a glimpse of the big world, takes this charming family to her bosom. And what more fitting return could she make for their charmingly effortless efforts to gladden her last days than to make them her heirs?

The setup looks perfect and is perfect. But things begin to happen that surprise even the Carletons. For one thing, they discover that they have hearts, and that hearts have a habit of getting in the way of schemes like theirs.

After a series of surprising developments the story ends on a tender note, with the daughter joyously reunited with her young Scot; the son happy with a lovely young secretary (in the person of Paulette Goddard) who has made him forget his search for an heiress, and the "Sahib" and "Marmy" happier—and more useful than they'd ever dreamed of being.

"Screen Snapshots" and an amusing technicolor Merrie Melody cartoon "A Day at the Zoo" are two fine added featurette subjects on the programme and are certain to meet with approval in entertainment, by all.

AT THE BELLE

"The Mikado"

The press of the world has taken recognition of the Technicolor motion picture of Gilbert and Sullivan's "The Mikado" and has classed it as Snow White— with humans as characters".

In New York, Dorothy Kilgallen, columnist of the New York Journal American, writes, "The Mikado' is the cutest thing in Technicolor since 'Snow White' ." And, according to Hy Gardner of the Brooklyn Eagle "The Mikado" is the most charming 'live' competition 'Snow White' ever got."

In Toronto, Roly Young of The Toronto Globe and Mail states, "The film has a fairy tale atmosphere—like 'Snow White' " Mr. Young goes on to suggest, "Settle down to see 'The Mikado' in the same frame of mind you went to see 'Snow White'. If you do, I'll bet dollars to doughnuts you will enjoy it hugely." The Toronto Daily Star predicts, ". . . a fantasy of the type Walt Disney might produce, with humans as characters . . . . will be a revelation."

In London, the Daily Mail finds that "The Mikado", "Combines the best qualities of musical comedy with the fascinating fairytale flavor of 'Snow White and the Seven Dwarfs' . . . . Nothing could be more lovely than the color." In the same vein, the London Evening News says, This picture is the most notable thing contributed to film entertainment in years, excepting 'Snow White and the Seven Dwarfs;' " and the London News of the World thinks "The Mikado" is "As much of a revolution in screen making as 'Snow White and the Seven Dwarfs' . . . . the color is lovely and the acting of Jean Colin and Kenny Baker in the top roles is everything that can be desired."

Starring in "The Mikado", which is now on the Belle Theatre Screen is Kenny Baker with Jean Colin, Martyn Green, Sydney Garnville, John Barcley and the D'Oyly Carte Chorus. Orchestral accompaniment is supplied by the London Symphony Orchestra. The film was adapted, conducted and produced by Geoffrey Toye and the entire production was under the baton of director Victor Schertzinger.

TRUDEAU'S

50-50 30-Day
Warranty

against mechanical defects . . . here's HOW we can give you such guarantees.

• We think of our future customers before we take a used car in trade. The long training and experience of our appraisers protects your and our interests. Only the pick of the "trade-ins" are eligible for the R & G rating. Our shop foreman then makes his reconditioning inspections and lists the various operations to be made on the cars before they're R&G. Modern test sets are used to diagnose and adjust carburetion and ignition. Motors are overhauled and tuned up. Dented fenders and metal work are restored. Chassis, steering, alignment, brakes, springs are checked. Upholstery is cleaned or repaired. Paint work is retouched or refinished, for bright, new appearance. The car is then ready for the final inspection . . and the R & G label. We then KNOW the car. Know what has been done to make it acceptable; know what it can do. And knowing how good it is — we can confidently guarantee it.

We invite you to visit our reconditioning department at any time and see for yourself how our cars are put in condition.

The Stars Say

By GENEVIEVE KEMBLE

MUCH relating to progress and business advantage on this day may depend upon the interest devoted to workaday matters, according to the astral influences. But all may be neglected in favor of the emotional, sentimental or adventurous. However, the mind should be particularly keen, alert and audacious. Unusual plans or schemes, with speculative angles, may prove lucrative. The opposite sex may prove a stimulating force.

Those whose birthday it is are confronted by a year in which adventure, romance and thrilling experiences may overwhelm all urges of a commonplace nature. Although the mind is creative, inventive and alert, it is probable that emotional or romantic impulses may predominate. The unusual and speculative may have a surprising climax and be profitable.

A child born on this day may have a creative and progressive mentality, wih abilities for unusual and surprisingly successful operations in the way of science, drama, invention. However, its inner urges may be stronger in the line of romantic or spetacular adventure, with the opposite sex its inspiration.

GERMAN AND ITALIAN ENVOYS IN TOKYO CONFER WITH ARITA

Tokyo, May 4 (CP-Havas)—Possible strengthening of the pact against Communism was believed discussed here today when Foreign Minister Hachiro Arita called the German Ambassador, Major-General Eugen Ott, and the Italian envoy, Giacinto Auriti, to his office.

Domei (Japanese) News Agency said the diplomats exchanged information "regarding the tense European situation". Earlier Arita reported to Emperor Hirohito on the situation in Europe.

MAY IMPORT MORE CANADIAN BEEF

London, May 4 (CP-Havas)—The international beef conference opened its sessions at Bush House today under the chairmanship of Sir Henry Fountain.

At a meeting of the Imperial Meat Conference here yesterday proposals were discussed for increasing imports of Dominion meat into the United Kingdom at the expense of the South American quotas.

It was understood after today's meeting that Empire proposals for a two per cent reduction in the South American quota were meeting opposition and that a compromise might be arrived at by reducing it by one per cent.

MISS NAPOLEON

By Violet M. Methley

Then....she plunged, went down in one swift, silent movement which seemed scarcely to disturb the surface of the sea around her. In a second she was gone, leaving a vast and ghastly emptiness of sky and ocean.

Struan brought round the boat's bow with a sharp movement of his improvised paddle.

"We must go back and pick up all we can," he said.

"But we can't," a woman cried from beside him. "There's no room—we shall only be swamped if we take in any more."

"All the same we must do it," Struan said harshly, and those at the oars obeyed him.

The sea was ink-black under the deep blue sky; only here and there floating hummocks and cakes of ice showed death-white. And then appeared other objects, darker than the ice, lighter than the sea, masses of wreckage, a life-raft with people clinging to it, a bundle of canvas deck-chairs supporting two men and a woman.

"He—elp!" The appeal came from close beside the boat; within a yard of his oar-blade Hall saw a floating life-belt, the body in it sagging over from the knees rather than the arm-pits, the head sunk forward.

Hall drew in his oar, reached out and grasped the dripping shoulder; the sailor nearest him helped to drag the drowning body aboard. He lay across Hall's knees, a lad of nineteen or so, gasping, limp.

Towards Morning

In spite of the danger of swamping, they took in a few more, until one of the sailors protested sullenly:

"What's the use of sinking the boat so that we'll all drown? There's no sense in that—don't help anyone."

So they drew slowly and reluctantly away from that space of tormented sea.

"We'd better not go too far away," Hall suggested. "Surely there will be ships coming up soon—we must have sent out wireless signals from the Gloriana.

The boy across Hall's knees stirred and began to mutter:

"Wireless —yes—yes —Signals —we sent them—he sent them—"

The sailor leant forward.

"Why, it's young Robins," he said. "The assistant wireless operator."

"Robins —yes —Robins. But it ought to be Hammond—" The boy's head moved feebly from side to side as he spoke.

"Hammond should be here—But he wouldn't come—went on signalling."

Robin's voice died away into vague mutterings; Hall felt the lad's thin shoulders tense across his knees, as the boat lurched and wallowed on. They dared not let her drift, for fear of collision with ice or wreckage; even in that still sea it was necessary to be alert all the time. And it was bitterly, cruelly cold. Gradually it seemed to numb them all; even the arms of the rowers ached so that they could hardly move them, and so hours dragged on.

Slowly dawn returned to the sky, turning it from the deepest indigo to a dim grey.

Looking around on that desolate sea, it was hard to distinguish between ice hummocks, wreckage from the Gloriana, or other ships' boats. It was rather the same in their boat, Hall thought; the disaster seemed to have tended to obliterate individuality for the time being. They had been suffering in community, as it were thorough that long night of cold and misery; only very occasionally and for a few moments had any personality amongst them stood out with any clearness.

Except that of Leonie Valence. Hall realized that he had been vividly aware of her the whole time, as though of a spark amongst grey ashes.

It seemed natural enough that it should be her voice which spoke suddenly:

"Look! Isn't that smoke over there—the smoke from a steamer?"

Peering under his hand, one of the sailors answered:

"Aye, that's about it. An' comin' this way."

Gradually on the greying horizon the dark smoke-plumes grew higher, spread away from the now visible funnels of the steamer, rose with her above the horizon until she could be fully seen, bows on, speeding through the scene of the disaster, changing the whole aspect of things with dramatic quickness.

The light strengthened; three or four other scattered boats could now be seen converging in the same direction. Feeble cheers came from them; scarves and shawls were waved on the blades of oars to make certain that they would be seen by the rescuer.

But any such pitiful expedients were unnecessary. The newcomer was there for one purpose only, as the megaphoned question from her bridge told them, coming like the bellow of a giant across the ice-strewn, wreckage-strewn sea.

"Ship's boat ahoy! This is the steamship 'Calderon.' We picked up a wireless signal from 'Gloriana.' Where is she?"

Struan in the nearest of the boats, tried to shout back, failed to make his voice carry, and answered with a gesture of the hands which was eloquent enough.

The steamer, moving slowly, came within earshot. From the bridge her captain, dark and keen-faced, looked down at them, and his natural voice could now be plainly heard.
STORYTWO ETC.

"Lower the starboard gangway, Mr. Horne; get them aboard as soon as possible."

CHAPTER VI

Wilson Hall's immediate reaction to the Gloriana disaster was a sharp attack of pneumonia.

Afterwards he only remembered vaguely, and as though from a vast distance, the arrival of the rescue ship in port on a drearily wet day. His sole desire was to reach the house of an old friend just outside Liverpool.

When after all the drawn-out degrees of illness, weakness and weariness, Hall reached convalescence at last, it was with the edge of his feelings curiously dulled, and with something—perhaps a protective instinct — which held him back from retrospection. He did not want to talk about the Gloriana disaster, at present, did not want to see the newspaper reports or be reminded of it in any way.

Consequently it was not until he was practically well, that his host rather deprecatingly produced some letters and scribbled telephone messages from his desk.

"Those all came during your illness," he said. "They're from fellow-passengers of yours on the Gloriana, I believe....I wouldn't bother you with them if they were only inquiries, but some of them are more than that."

Hall turned over the papers. Some were letters and cards from comparative strangers, but there was a short note from Chrissie Ryland: "We're so terribly sorry you are ill. Do let us know how you get on and come to see us when you're in town—" on the headed letter paper of a Kensington hotel. There was a visiting card, too, from Struan, with inquiries scribbled upon the back, and the name of the same hotel written above the printed address of his Service Club.

Within three days of Hall's arrival in London he sought out the Kensington hotel where Struan was staying, a place with an indefinable atmosphere of Service people home on leave.

He asked for Struan, but turned at the sound of a lighter step and a girl's voice.

"Oh! Mr. Hall, I am glad that you've come! I do hope that you're really well again....but I can see how ill you've been."

Chrissie Ryland, both hands outstretched, spoke warmly, sincerely, but with only a shadow of her wide, merry smile. Her face was pale under its golden powdering of freckles, shaded by a wide black hat. She looked older, too, and thinner—but perhaps that was only a result of the long, close-fitting lines of her black dress.

"Miss Ryland, are you....is this ....?" Hall touched her sleeve and the girl nodded, tears rising in her eyes so that they looked like sun-flecked pools.

"Yes.... didn't you see in the papers....?. Oh no, of course —I forgot how ill you'd been. The boat that Mummy was in .... it was found bottom upwards.

"I'm sorry," Hall said gently. "More sorry than I can tell you, Miss Ryland."

She smiled in something like her old fashion.

"Not THAT any longer, Mr. Hall."

"Why—do you mean....?"

"Yes," Chrissie nodded. "Ranny and I were married quietly a month ago. You see, he wanted to be able to look after me, when we knew that mother had gone. I've not many relations, none who cared much, so it seemed best not to wait, just to be married quietly and quickly."

"Much best," Hall agreed. "And I congratulate you both with all my heart."

"We shall be going to India in the autumn. Ranny has been especially attached until then to the new Central Flying School; he's considered rather an expert, you know."

"It will be good for you, won't it? The entire change of scene. And have you come across any other of our 'Gloriana' friends, the Burpham-West family, for instance?"

"Yes, Mrs. Burpham-West and the children are staying at an hotel in Cromwell-rd. We've seen them several times."

"And—Miss Valence? Is she with them still?"

"Until the autumn. Then—she is coming to India with Ranny and me."

Chrissie gave the information with a casual air, but before Hall could answer she went on speaking, almost as though to forestall any objections.

"You see, we found that she wanted to go to India tremendously, if she could find a job there. And so Ranny—we both thought that it woud be spendid for me to have her as a sort of companion. Then it gives me a chance to repay a little of what I owe her; after all she saved Ranny's life, and we can't forget that, either of us. It—it was magnificent what she did; I'd never have believed a woman could be so brave."

Chrissie broke off with a shiver. Hall, his eyes watching her, spoke calmly.

"And yet, in spite of all these conclusive arguments, you'd much rather Miss Valence was not going with you."

Chrissie's Indiscretion

Chrissie flushed crimson, turned to him with a rather piteous little gesture of appeal.

"Oh, Mr. Hall, why do you .... how did you....? I haven't even let myself....I won't feel like thing of that sort to Ranny; I that! Please don't suggest anywouldn't for worlds let him think that I—that I—"

"I'm right, then?" Hall interrupted.

"In a way—yes." The word seemed dragged from her. "She— she frightens me!"

"How?" Hall was startled by the girl's vehemence.

"It's something I can't explain.. I think ruthless is the word I want. When I remember how she shot down that man....And yet, if she hadn't done it, Ranny .... Oh! I am hideously ungrateful."

"No, I think I understand what you mean. But you must remember Miss Valence wasn't brought up like you."

"I'm afraid I'm a cat, so hopelessly ordinary myself, that I'm happier with people more ordinary than she is." Chrissie smiled suddenly, disarmingly. "So do please forget what I've said."

"Of course I will....and don't imagine that I can't understand," Hall hesitated, then went on, choosing his words soberly. "Leonie Valence has extraordinary strength of personality; I've felt it myself. One might be afraid of her as an enemy, but if one had her as a friend...."

"And she has been the best of friends to me—yes." Chrissie nodded gravely. "I do realize that. I'm afraid I must go now; I've got to meet Ranny, but you'll come again, won't you? How about dinner on Monday?"

The engagement made, Hall found himself once more in the wide Kensington street. The chill greyness of the sky was still unbroken, except where an ineffectual sun, like a tarnished silver disc, tried to peer through the fog.

In Kensington Gardens wisps of mist railed round tree trunks, and the shouts and laughter of children, the barking of dogs, sounded thin and muffled. Hall strolled along aimlessly until through the trees he caught the flash of wings and the sound of wild bird-voices calling.

He came out upon the verge of the Round Pond, dark grey under the pale grey sky; high in the air skimmed and wheeled and circled the endless ballet of the sea-gulls, their pink feet dipping daintily now and again in the water.

One group, a boy and two girls, especially caught Hall's eyes. Then, as his glance passed on and beyond, he stopped short, watching.

On the edge of the pond, slim and erect, a grey-coated figure, standing motionless, with one arm raised and outstretched. All round the grey and white sea-gulls swooped and screamed, in close and ever closer circles until first one and then another snatched something from the extended hand.

Hall moved forward and at the same instant the level eyes under the black hat saw him, the firm lips curved into that dazzling smile which he would have remembered less had it been more common. Simultaneously the three children flung themselves towards him, shrieking his name shrilly.

"Is there anywhere near where you can buy candy?" Hall inquired gravely, distributing shillings, then held out his hand with a laugh as three pairs of black-gaitered legs went flying towards a chocolate-seller.

"Now, we can say how-d'you-do properly. What luck, meeting like this—for me. But I've just come from the Struans."

"Then you know that I'm going with them to India?"

"Yes. So the way East has opened to you more quickly than you expected, eh? That's your reason for going?"

"Of course. I don't do anything without reason. And I use any means, any person," it was a mere statement of fact, not a boast. "I want you to help me, too—to learn about India. I'm already studying the language, in return for lessons in English, with a young Hindu at our hotel."

"You mean museums, libraries? I could take you to the India Office and the Imperial Institute."

"Thanks. I'm free to-morrow."

"Very well. Shall I call for you at eleven, say—" Hall began and was told curtly:

"Nine o'clock would be better. No need to waste time."

She was ready for him next morning on the steps of the hotel, and Hall, well-informed enough to be a good guide, found her an almost over-intelligent companion. She listened with intense concentration, shook her head when he suggested note-taking.

"There's no need. I don't forget anything I want," she answered. "I just clear the rubbish out occasionally to leave room for important things—pigeon-holed."

By the end of the day Hall felt exhausted, sucked dry, but Leonie was as alert as ever, after those hours spent among the Indian treasures of the museums. She spoke impatiently, anger in her eyes.

"Why should it all belong to the British? We French were there first, in India."

TORONTO STOCKS

Toronto, May 4 (CP)—The Toronto market opened with a weak tone but prices stiffened as the day advanced and by noon only the industrial index showed a setback. Base metal shares were a little higher and the golds and western oils unchanged.

The action was concentrated in the early period with 131,000 shares changing hands in the first hour and 50,000 to 70,000 shares in the second and third hours. Senior golds, with exception of Lake Shore, were steady to strong and most of the secondary issues were firm. Noranda, Ventures and Falconbridge were strong base metals.

A strong tone ruled for Walkers Common, and other interlisted industrials, including Ford A, C.P.R., Fanny Farmer and several of the steels. Western oil gainers included Royalite, Home and East Crest.

WALL ST. CLOSE

New York, May 4—(AP)—Stocks took on further selective rallying tendencies in today's market after hesitating in the early part of the session.

Fractional losses at the start were later converted into gains running to a point or so in many cases. Dealings, fairly active in the morning, tapered off appreciably near the final hour. Transfers were at about 70,000 shares.

SHUT - DOWN IN SOFT COAL MINES SEEN BY FRIDAY

New York, May 4 (CP)—A shut down of the soft coal industry in the United States, with some few exceptions, by midnight Friday was assured today by John L. Lewis, president of United Mine Workers of America and chief of the Congress of Industrial Organizations.

Lewis said 126,000 miners would be added to the 338,000 who have been idle since April 1 when the old contract with bituminous operators in the Appalachian area expired.

3 OFFICIALS SUMMONED

Toronto, May 3.—(CP)— Three officials of the Riverdale Kiwanis Club have been charged with "conducting gambling devices" it was announced at the Attorney-General's office today. The charge arose from disposal of an $11,000 model home by the Club. Summonses have been issued to Ferdinand Sturbeon, past president; Harry Phillips, president and Alex Deachman, secretary to appear in County Court May 12.

The home was awarded Miss Bertha Schmidt, Toronto, one of 25,000 persons who contributed one dollar to help the Club in its work among boys.

Cookstown Doctor Has Narrow Escape

Toronto, May 4 (CP)—Narrow escape Dr. W. J. Scott had from death was revealed today as the Cookstown medical man underwent treatment in a Toronto hospital.

Dr. Scott was driving between Rosemount and Violet Hill, west of Barrie when his car got out of control while going downhill. Smashing off four posts of a guard rail, the vehicle went over a 70-foot embankment.

Dr. Scott dragged himself from the wreckage and wandered about in a dazed condition. He collapsed in a gravel pit, where a posse found him two hours later.

MEN ARRESTED ADMIT SHOOTING

Police Engage in Running Gun Fight Before Arrest is Effected

Detroit, May 4 — (AP) — Detroit police said today that two men arrested here last night after a running gun fight had admitted participation in a Tuesday night Chicago tavern shooting in which a patron was killed and two policemen wounded.

Lieut. Leo Doyle of the Homicide Squad said one prisoner, Orville Watson, 29, was wounded in the Chicago shooting and is the man who submitted to a razor blade abdominal operation performed by an unwilling surgeon without anaesthetic.

Watson was taken to receiving hospital for observation although his wound appeared superficial the removed bullet struck near his spine and he complained of exhaustion after many hours without sleep.

Arrested with Watson were Edward Riley, 37, and a young woman booked as Susanna Smith, 22, until recently of Detroit.

Detroit police received information Wednesday that the suspects were headed here to the residence of Watson's mother. A description of their car was given Shortly before midnight one of several Homicide Squad details gave chase to a car occupied by two men and a woman.

After a two-mile pursuit at high speed, during which guns were thrown from the Illinois car, the suspects stopped and got out with their hands up. "We give up," one said. "I'm shot," exclaimed the other man.

County Court

"It's is only what a lot of other people do in their own homes without molestation and for much higher stakes", pointed out Mr. C. A. Payne, K.C., as he appeared on behalf of five Stirling residents, who were charged with gambling on Sunday, contrary to the Lord's Day Alliance Act before Magistrate E. J. Butler K.C. in today's County Police Court held in Belleville.

The 'quintette' pleaded guilty to playing poker on the Sabbath and each individual was fined $5.00 and costs. They were playing poker in a room at the rear of a Chinese restaurant when we went into the premises," stated Provincial Constable W. E. Smith, who preferred the charges following complaints received by the authorities.

"I understand it was only a small five and ten cent game, but there is the admission of guilt", added Crown Attorney B.C. Donnan K.C., previous to the meting out of sentence. The charge read "that they did gamble with cards on the Sabbath, contrary to the Lord's Day Act.

James Dunlay, Tyendinaga, pleaded guilty to the theft of two bags of barley, the property of John Craig. Restitution was promised and the accused man was given a six months suspended sentence upon the payment of the costs of the proceedings. The Crown Attorney suggested leniency be shown the youth in view of his age and the excellent reputation he bore as a farmhand in Tyendinaga. A Belleville resident was fined ten dollars and costs, amounting to $21.50 in all, after pleading guilty to a charge of reckless driving, the charge being preferred by H.T.O. Sam Ervine.

THE CEMENTKARRIER ARRIVES AT TORONTO

Among the arrivals in Toronto harbor yesterday was the Cementkarrier owned by the Canada Cement Transport Ltd., of Montreal, whose home port is Point Anne. She was in command of Captain E. Knudsen of Belleville and her arrival at Toronto was the first trip of the season.

"This is late for you, isn't it Captain," he was asked by reporters.

"Yes, but we couldn't get out before," stated Captain Knudsen who added that until April 17 the ship was iced in her berth at Point Anne.

BOY SCOUT TOTAL NEARS 100,000 COUNCIL IS TOLD

Membership in Past Year Shows Very Rapid Growth

ACTIVITIES INCREASE

Montreal, May 4—(CP)—The Boy Scout movement in Canada is approaching the 100,000-membership mark, it was shown today in the annual report of the Canadian general council of the Boy Scout Association now in session here.

Grand total of all branches, including La Federation Des Scouts Catholiques, The Salvation Army Life Saving Scouts and The Provincial Council was 95,327 at Dec. 31 last, as compared with 86,290 the previous Dec. 31. Ontario with an increase of 4,080 topped the list. Highest percentage increase was New Brunswick with 28.4 per cent.

Appeals made by Lord Tweedsmuir, Chief Scout for Canada, and by Sir Edward Beatty, President of the Association, were given chief credit for the increased membership.

Toy Shop Work

The report of S. B. McMichael, commissioner for training, showed an increase in activities. The patrol leaders' training course, initiated in 1937, was carried on in 1938 with 57 courses held.

For the 15th year, Scouts carried on Christmas toy shop work. In Calgary, Montreal and Ottawa the Scout shops were the chief sources of toy supply for welfare agencies. Bulk shipments of toys were made from the east to help Saskatchewan Scouts meet heavy calls.

"Probably no other scouting enterprise more truly nor more arrestingly interprets scout training principles to the general public scout ingenuity and resourcefulness in organized action for the happiness of many thousands of needy children," the report said.

Scouting For Rural Boy

If money could be found, scouting could be made more accessible to the rural boy, "who needs it as much as does his brother who lives in the city," the report said in commenting on the lone Scout work.

Increasing interest is being taken by Scouts in tree planting, it was reported. At Longley, B.C., Scouts formed a tree-planting club and invited adults to earn membership by planting trees.

Since the inception in 1929 of the Ontario Scout Forestry camp, 729,000 young trees have been planted, mostly white, red, jack and Scotch pines. Halifax, N.S., Scouts in 1938 added another thousand trees to the thousands planted in former years.

Examples of Enterprises

Many examples of enterprises for the good of the community as a whole are cited in the report. Among these are:

At Gravelbourg, Sask., Scouts published a weekly community paper, the Prairie Optimist.

Thorold, Ont., township Scouts maintained pheasant feeding stations

A Rover crew in the Niagara Peninsula started and operated a public library.

Says Gov't Proposes To Engage Engineers For R. R. Analysis

Ottawa, May 4—(CP)—Senator Raoul Dandurand, government leader in the Upper House, told the Senate Railways Committee today that the government would not accept the committee's proposal to engage a firm of engineers and accountants to analyse the evidence relating to Canada's railway problem, given before the committee in the past two sessions.

The government took the position this might have the effect of creating another commission to go over the ground that had previously been explored. Such a body would be too costly, Mr. Dandurand said.

Expressing disappointment with the government's decision, Conservative leader Meighen said, a wave of resentment would sweep the country on this account. All that had been sought was the engagement of a competent firm of engineers and accountants who could analyse the evidence and present its conclusions.

Western Powers Butt of Jokes

Berlin May 4 (AP)—German evening newspapers today made the western powers the butt of their jokes over the resignation of the Russian Foreign Commissar, Maxim Litvinoff.

"At the very moment that the Britons were looking expectantly into the pot in which their alliance plan is boiling there was a big crash." said propaganda Minister Paul Goebbels' newspaper, Der Angriff.

"Fat comrade Foreign Commissar Litvinoff-Finckelstein exploded in Moscow. The news struck the (British) Foreign Office like a bomb.

WITNESS DENIES

Clancy was questioned closely on his record as the trial was resumed.

Two crown witnesses have sworn Mickey MacDonald admitted "I killed a man" the night an execution squad invaded Windsor's North Toronto home. Mickey is accused as the trigger man in the shooting.

May Take Stand

The first intimation the MacDonalds may be placed on the stand came yesterday during defence counsel Frank Regan's cross-examination of John R. Shea, self-admitted criminal who quoted the alleged MacDonald admission during evidence Tuesday.

Early in the cross-examination, Regan stressed the effect of Shea's story on the position of the accused.

"Do you realize," he asked, "that the jury must decide who is telling the truth when one of the MacDonald's takes the stand to deny your story?"

Cecil (Doc) Clancy told Mr. Justice G. F. McFarlane and the jury that he was present when the elder MacDonald made the alleged admission. Clancy, a bookmaker who described himself as a "very good friend of Windsor," followed Shea to the witness box and described how the MacDonalds drove him to Shea's apartment about six o'clock the night of the slaying. He saw two revolvers in the hands of Mickey MacDonald and then the brothers left.

Under the Weather

Clancy said he had been drinking that night and was "pretty well under the weather." He thought it was just a joke when, according to him, Mickey insisted a man he shot was dead because "I seen his eyes roll."

The question of whether three or four participated in the crime cropped up as Shea was being cross-examined by Defence Counsel Regan. He said that to the best of his knowledge four men were there.

In a statement given police by Shea. the witness had mentioned as the gunmen the two MacDonalds, Louis Gallow and "the other fellow." (Gallow is not charged).

"Did the police tell you Gallow could not have been at the Windsor home at the time of the shooting?" Regan asked Shea. Witness replied they had not. nor had the police told him "that Gallow could satisfy them of his innocence."

Regan and Isadore Levinter, defending Alex. MacDonald, closely questioned Shea as to a trip he said he made to Ottawa January 3 with Leo Gauthier and Mickey MacDonald. He said its purpose was "to pull a holdup."

Never Used Gun

Clancy told court today he twice had been convicted of keeping a book on horse races, once of having liquor illegally and once of reckless driving. But he never had been involved "in any business with the use of guns,' he declared in answer to a question from Crown Counsel Cecil Snyder.

Clancy identified two overcoats and a fedora produced in court as similar to clothes worn by the MacDonald brothers when they gathered at Shea's apartment on January 7. Mickey wore a dark, close-fitting coat, he said, and Alex a dark blue overcoat and dark green hat.

To Defence Counsel Levinter, Clancy said he often "drank too much." He started on a "drunk" Thursday, January 5, continued on Friday and Saturday.

On the morning of January 7th, he polished off the remnants of a bottle he had the day before. Around two o'clock, he continued, he got got another bottle of whiskey and it was finished about 5.30 p.m. at Teddy Wells' house. The next bottle came from a bootlegger named O'Grady.

He had met the MacDonalds at Wells' and the brothers went with him to the Shea apartment, Alex. driving the car.

"You were fairly drunk?" he was asked.

"I suppose there are different stages of drunkenness," Clancy replied. "I wouldn't drive my car."

Admits Drunkenness

"Then you were fairly drunk?"

"I wasn't sober."

After the MacDonalds left, Clancy said he continued drinking.

"And by eight o'clock you were fairly groggy?" "Yes."

"Isn't it a fact that by the time you got to Shea's apartment you were so drunk you didn't know who drove you there?" "No, that isn't right."

Levinter confronted the witness with a sworn statement he gave police on February 2nd. In this Clancy said it was Wells who drove him to Shea's, that he wasn't sure whether Mickey MacDonald was there at all that night.

Clancy said he had given this statement reluctantly and "wasn't in very good shape" at the time he was interviewed.

"In your business as bookmaker you meet fast people?" Levinter suggested. Clancy agreed.

"You met Shea through Dorland, didn't you?". "No, Shea came to my house when he got out of the pen about a year ago. He said he had a message for Charlie Dorland."

"Do you know Charlie Dorland's brother?" "No. But Shea had a message from the brother, who was in Kingston."

Levinter asked Clancy about a visit he made to the MacDonald home after the brothers' arrest and of a talk he had with the two MacDonald girls.

Denied Allegation

"Did you tell Florence MacDonald that Windsor was a man who welched on his bets and he got what he deserved?" Levinter asked.

"No. I never did."

Defence Counsel Frank Regan asked Clancy if he remembered going to the Regan home the night of Friday, January 6, in connection with a loan to Mickey MacDonald to help finance Mickey's defence on another charge.

"I certainly don't remember it," Clancy said. "Was I drunk?"

"You had been drinking, but you're like me—you can drink and still navigate.'

"Please don't indulge in boasting, Mr. Regan," Mr. Justice G. F. McFarland put in as laughter rippled throught the courtroom.

"I never knowed Windsor to welch on a bet," Clancy testified.

"Did you ever hear of him welching on a $1,000 bet placed with him by a man from Hamilton the latter part of December?" Regan asked.

"No. I never did."

"Not even a rumor about it?"

"No."

"Did you tell the police Windsor had refused to pay $25 a week to a protective association?" 'No. sir."

SPECULATION RIFE OVER LITVINOFF

British Foreign Office Awaits Indications from Moscow

London, May 4 (AP)—Great Britain, surprised by the sudden resignation of Maxim Litvinoff as Soviet Russia's Commissar of Foreign Affairs, sought today to determine its relation to the Anglo-French effort to bring Russia into their new security system.

Although there was no official comment, informed sources here believed Litvinoff's replacement by Vyacheslaff Molotoff was closely linked with the negotiations with Great Britain and France. Some indication from Moscow on these vital points was anxiously awaited by the British Foreign Office:

1. Whether the replacement of Litvinoff marked a change of Soviet foreign policy which thus far has favored some sort of an alliance with Britain and France.

2. Whether talks which Litvinoff was said to have agreed to—talks with Foreign Minister Georges Bonnet of France and the British Foreign Secretary, Viscount Halifax, at Geneva May 15—would still take place, with Molotoff representing Moscow.

3. Whether the new commissar would speed up negotiations.

Negotiations Have Been Slow.

Some unconfirmed reports in London said the slowness of the negotiations had been one of the causes for Litvinoff's resignation. Some observers saw the Russian move as foreshadowing a break-up in the talks with Russia. Diplomatic quarters thought it significant Litvinoff's resignation followed the deadlock in negotiations.

Help Middle Class Pay Hospitalization

Toronto, May 4 (CP)—David Williams of Collingwood, President of the Ontario Hospital Association, believes action should be taken to help Canada's middle class pay for necessary hospitalization.

He told the annual banquet meeting of the association last night there was a class between the class that would not or could not pay their hospital bills and the class whose financial position freed them of worry.

This middle class, he said, "suffers untold financial privation" in an endeavor to meet expenditures caused by illness. Among the solutions he suggested were state medicine, hospital insurance schemes, group hospitalizations, and unemployment insurance.

NO ROOM IN STADIUM CAN BE OBTAINED FOR BELLEVILLE CITIZENS

Full support is given by Mayor Jamieson Bone to the school children's excursion from Belleville to Kingston by rail on May 21st, as decided at a meeting of citizens last evening.

"It's a splendid thing, and I hope every pupil will be able to go," commented the Mayor this morning.

Efforts have been made by Mayor Bone to obtain special accommodation for Belleville residents who wish to go to Kingston to see Their Majesties, but the best that could be done, the Mayor has been advised by Mayor H. A. Stewart, is special accommodation for members of Belleville city council and city officials in the Stadium, it was learned in a communication received today.

"This thing of arranging for all the visitors has given us the biggest headache we have ever had," Mayor Stewart told Mayor Bone.

POLISH PEOPLE AWAITING SPEECH

Certain Premier Beck Will Answer "No" to German Demands

Warsaw, May 4 (AP)—The Polish people, certain Foreign Minister Joseph Beck will answer "no" tomorrow to German demands for Danzig Free City and for a 15.5-mile wide artery across the Polish Corridor, awaited the speech today without excitement.

The entire nation will gather at 11:15 a.m. (6:15 a.m. E.S.T.) around its radios to hear Beck address parliament. The original speech will be broadcast outside Poland by short wave, followed by translations in English, French and German.

Semi-official sources said the address was not expected to close the door on further negotiations but would be "very firm". The tone of the press has made clear that both Poles and their government are determined to resist any attempts to cut Poland off from the Baltic.

In Polish Political quarters, the resignation of the Russian Foreign Commissar, Maxim Litvinoff, was viewed optimistically. Litvinoff's successor, Vyacheslaff Molotoff, was regarded as friendly to the principle of bilateral pacts with Great Britain, France and Poland instead of the League of Nations-style collective security advocated by Litvinoff.

FUMIGATING GAS CLAIMS 2 LIVES

Mrs. F. Mitchell Found Dead and Daughter Dies on Way to Hospital

Ottawa, May 4—(CP)—Fumigating gas today claimed the lives of Mrs. Florence Mitchell, 49, and her daughter, Edna Vaughn, 29, in their home here. Mrs. Mitchell, twice married, was found dead in bed while the daughter died en route to hospital. Coroner W. T. Shirreff ordered a post mortem examination. An inquest was opened and adjourned indefinitely.

The two women were found by Mrs. Frank Martin, who also lived in the house. It had been fumigated yesterday with a mixture to destroy insects.

Mrs. Martin said neither Mrs. Mitchell or her daughter had complained of the odor before they retired but when she went to awaken them this morning there was no response. After efforts to revive them failed, she called a doctor.

According to the fumigator, M. B Dunn, he had given instructions to occupants of the house to leave their windows and doors open overnight. The door and windows of the bedroom occupied by Mrs. Mitchell and her daughter were closed.

Other occupants of the house were unaffected.

Ottawa Union Station Closed Six Hours Before Royal Departure

Ottawa, May 4 (CP)—The Union Station here will be closed to the public by Royal Canadian Mounted Police six hours before the King and Queen leave Ottawa May 20, it was learned today.

Every approach to the station will be blocked by scarlet-coated guards and only "indispensable" officials and employees of the station will be allowed to enter. The prohibited area will extend beyond the confines of the station to the immediate neighborhood.

All trains that would ordinarily arrive at the station or depart during the six hours it will be closed will operate under altered schedules, presumably stopping at sidings on the city's outskirts to detrain and pick up passengers.

WOMAN IS SENT TO TRIAL

London, Ont., May 4 (CP) — Mrs. George Taylor, mother of 11 children, was committed by Magistrate Donald Menzies today for trial on a charge of murdering her 65-year-old friend, Mrs. Annie Templeton.

Lorne McDougall is President Of Bay of Quinte Ball Loop; R.C.A.F. Fliers Join League

Accepts Post After Ken Colling Asks Loop to Accept His Resignation

UMPIRES NAMED

Belleville Will Play at Home on Morning of May 22nd.

W. Lorne McDougall, who for many years has been connected with the executive of the Belleville Baseball Club, was elected President of the Bay of Quinte League at a special meeting of the League held in the Y.M.C.A. last evening. Mr. McDougall possesses a fine working knowledge of the executive end of baseball and is thoroughly acquainted with the operations of the Quinte loop. Previously this week Mr. McDougall was appointed as convener to the Ontario Baseball Association, the appointment coming through the office of W. J. Snyder, secretary of the O.B.A., it was also learned last evening.

Of further interest towards the rejuvenation of baseball throughout the Bay of Quinte area was the application for entry to the league of the R.C.A.F. "Flyers", who officially were accepted into the fold last evening, thereby rounding out a compact four-teamed league, that now composes Napanee, 1938 league champions, Picton, Belleville and the R.C.A.F. The "Flyers" have been connected with organized hockey circles in this section of the province for the past three years, but only came into the baseball picture last evening, when they officially applied for a berth and were accepted into the Bay of Quinte League.

Triple Schedule

Considerable business was presented on Secretary Lynn Crossman's agenda, which saw the adoption of a playoff system identical to that as in vogue during 1938. A triple schedule was adopted, the clubs feeling, that more baseball was needed to keep the game alive. At the termination of a triple schedule the clubs finishing in second and third positions will play-off, with the second placed team having the right of the first and possible third game. The ultimate winner of the series will meet the team finishing first in the league schedule in a best-in-three series, with the initial placed club having the right of the first and third games.

The R.C.A.F. entry requested their opening of the schedule be postponed until after June 8th, owing to the visit of Their Majesties, the King and Queen, during which the permanent military forces of Canada will be engaged in military manoeuvres. The remaining three clubs agreed to open the season with games at home prior to the Flyers appearing on the baseball horizon. The opening games agreed upon were as follows:

May 22nd (a.m.): Napanee at Belleville.
May 30th: Picton at Napanee.
June 7th: Belleville at Picton.

The remainder of the league triple schedule was left in the hands of Secretary Crossman and will be drafted and presented for approval to the league by that official at a later date.

Umpires Named

In the question of umpires the league voted to adopt the same system as was employed in 1938, the home umpire system, with the visiting club providing the umpire-in-chief and the home club the base umpire. A maximum fee of $4.00 was set for league officials. The clubs named the following as umpires for the year—Napanee, R. Loucks, G. E. Gibbard and Les Richardson; Picton—Dave Young and H. Welsh; Belleville — Don Thomas. The Air Force reserved the right to name their officials at a later date, while the Belleville delegates asked the privilege of adding to their names.

The officers elected at the meeting caused by the resignation of President Ken Colling, were as follows:

President: W. Lorne McDougall.
1st Vice-Pres.: Squad-Ldr. Van Vleit.
2nd. Vice-Pres.: K. J. Colling.
Sec.-Treas.: Lynn Crossman.

The league executive is composed of one delegate from each club composing the league. The delegates present last night were — Picton, L. Yanover; Napanee, W. Gerow; Belleville, H. Wilkins and R.C.A.F., L. Legris.

Plug and Fly Casting Tourney Held at Armouries

Completing a five week period of the art of practicing at plug and fly casting, the Belleville Anglers' Club held their annual casting tournament at the armouries last evening. The casters were divided into three groups by Chairman Fred Croft including class "A", composing the more proficient casters, class "B" those who had previous experience in tournament casting and group "C" for those of a lesser dexterity.

Keen competition marked the evening's matches, that saw casts ranging from 40 to 80 yards in all categories. The results of the tournament were as follows:

Group "A": 1st. W. Simpson; 2nd. H. Burley and B. Morton (tied).

Group "B": 1st. J. C. Palmer; 2nd. Dr. Van Blaksiee; 3rd. Doug McBride.

Group "C": 1st. "Star" McDonald. 2nd. I. Hefkey; 3rd. J. Lynch.

Following the tournament President J. E. Shortt of the Belleville Anglers' Club announced that prizes awarded for first and second place in each group will be available at the Y.M.C.A. office on Saturday next.

The judges for the competitions were: Russ White, Harold Legate and Fred Croft, all officers of the association.

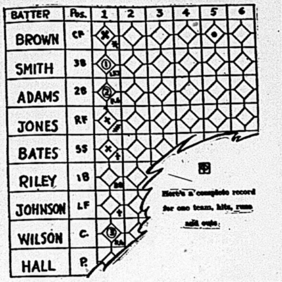
HOW TO KEEP SCORE

Keeping the Records Straight for the Fielders.



By Central Press Canadian

Scoring your own baseball game on your own scorebook or score-card can add tremendously to your enjoyment of the game.

In this special series, designed to help beginners start their own baseball scoring, we have already described the symbols to record details of baseball play, illustrating the use of these symbols by describing part of the opening inning in an imaginary game.

Brown opened the game by hitting a double to left field. Smith fouled out to left field. Adams popped out to the third base-man. Jones then scored Brown with a three-base hit against the right field fence. The story of the game thus far is told in the symbols opposite the names of these four batters in the first inning column.

Bates follows Jones at bat and hits a single over second base, scoring Jones from third. Mark an X in the diamond opposite Jones' name. Bates' single is marked by the one-base hit symbol, as illustrated. There are two outs, two runs have been scored, and there is a runner, Bates, on first base. Riley is the next batter. He walks. Johnson, next up, singles to centre, scoring Bates. Riley going to third. Wilson, next at bat, lines out to the third baseman, retiring the side. Mark the symbols P-6 in Wilson's diamond. The figure "3" in a circle in Wilson's space indicates he was the third out.

Now for the marks thus far on the fielding movements. If the scorer is making a box score and keeping a summary of the game, he tallies each put-out and assist in the columns of the score-sheet of the opposing team in the spaces opposite the names of the men credited with each playing act. Brown's double requires no marking insofar as the fielding is concerned. Smith's foul-out to left field calls for a put-out credit to the opposing left fielder. Mark a dot or a small straight vertical line in the space opposite the left fielder's name under the column headed PO in the other team's score-sheet. These dots or lines are tallied at the end of the game and the total figure marked in this column.

Jones' hit requires no fielding mark. Riley's walk is charged to the pitcher in the summary. Johnson's single requires no marks in the fielding scoring. Had there been a strike-out, the catcher rather than the pitcher would have been credited with the put-out because should the catcher muff a third strike he would be charged with the error. Wilson's line-out is a put-out credited to the third baseman who caught the ball.

In the next article we will go over more actual situations and draw up a proper box score summary.

The Toronto Maple Leafs are scheduled to pry off the 1939 International League home schedule at Maple Leaf Stadium today. Although the present-year crop of Leafs do not appear to look quite "so hot," Toronto has had some outstanding ball clubs since their initial entrance into organized baseball in 1886. Lest you have forgotten — the International League was known as the Eastern League back in the 80's and 90's and is the second oldest baseball organization in the world. The National League being the oldest in existence. Toronto played its first league game on May 8th, 1886 at Rochester, N.Y. and won 6-4 before a crowd of 4,000 paying guests. During the 49 years the Leafs have operated in the league they finished first on seven occasions and last four times. The Leafs have won a total of 3,703 games and lost 3,237 games during that period. The Montreal club, during a 33 season stretch won 2,162 games and dropped 2,352 games. Montreal twice won the league pennant and seem headed towards a possible third this year under Burleigh Grimes.

At least seven Canadians are earning their bread and butter in the International League this year, five with Toronto, Leo Dugas, of Joliette, Que., Baltimore outfielder, and Bill Howard of St. John, N.B., Buffalo outer gardener. The Leafs have three Ontario-born hurlers —Art Calhoun, Toronto and former Belleville moundsman, Lloyd Coleman, London and Phil Marchildon the Penetang ace right-hander, Bob Porter, Toronto outfielder and Lanigan, an Ottawa laddie. These seven are aside from any Canadians who might subsequently be farmed out by major league clubs. There are several Canadians in the American Association and other class "A" and "B" leagues. Radio announcers throughout the International League had better not interview Marchildon, unless they are prepared ahead on pronunciations, because there might be considerable tongue-twisting on the part of the radio announcer if he was suddenly confronted to pronouncing Penetanguishene without previous knowledge of the pronunciation of that name.

We must give full credit to Walter Gerow, skipper of the Napanee Gibbards, for his fine sportsmanship shown at last night's Bay of Quinte League meeting. Napanee, as 1938 champions, had the right to the opening ball game of the current season. However, the Belleville interests pointed out they had for years depended upon an opening game on Victoria Day until baseball on that day had become a fixture. Walter, realizing the situation in Belleville, forewent his claim on the opening day and consented to waiver his right so that Belleville might have its conventional opener, which will be held on the morning of the 22nd, the official holiday declared this year instead of the 24th of May. Walt went one further and agreed to come to Belleville with the league champions to meet the 1939 edition of the Belleville team in the Bay of Quinte opening game. At this time we must also add our congratulations to W. Lorne McDougall newly elected President of the Bay of Quinte League. Lorne has served the cause of baseball in Belleville long and well and will make an excellent league head.

When the R.C.A.F. "Flyers" officially applied for entrance into the Bay of Quinte League last evening the stocks of the league increased to an unlimited degree. For the past two years the Quinte League moguls have been trying to interest the "Flyers" into affiliation and last night saw their fondest dreams come true. With the "Airmen" in the fold the Quinte loop has the most compact league possible in this section of the province. Not only are the Flyers interested in intermediate ball, but may also affiliate with the Hastings County junior league, along with Picton and Napanee. Belleville will not be entered in junior O.B.A. circles this year, but maybe better conditions may prevail before the summer vacation rolls around in this respect, we hear. Due to the visit of Their Majesties, the King and Queen, the R.C.A.F. entry cannot guarantee league play until after June the 10th, owing to the extensive military manoeuvres scheduled by Canada's permanent forces, but after the middle of June the Flyers will swing into baseball action and providing they give Belleville the competition on the diamond, as provided on the ice lanes, some real ball can be assured the fans of the Quinte League in 1939.

Beating the pre-season drums of lawn bowling to a fever heat, the local lawn bowlers held a banquet and get-together at the Y.M.C.A. last evening, President Correll delivering an eloquent oration relative to the increasing of the club membership. Incidentally we hear the greens at the Belleville Lawn Bowling Club wintered in the most splendid manner hoped for and are in fine condition awaiting the opening of the bowling season on May 22nd. Lawn bowling has been increasing in popularity in and around Belleville for the past few years and is a game that can be enjoyed by both the young and old. Many a delightful evening is spent trying to "take the kitty out" with the lawn bowlers.

We're Telling You That Freddie Hutchinson, Detroit's $50,000 pitching beauty, proved to be just another minor leaguer and is back in the sticks with Toledo.. With baseball earnings of at least $400,000 in the kick, Lou Gehrig has little worries regarding the future....In order to try and bolster their inner works, the Cleveland Indians purchased Lyn Lary from the Dodgers—just a jump from the frying pan into the fire....Selkirk got a brace of hits yesterday....The SOS call has been sent out by the Newark Bears for reinforcements—the help coming from Kansas City of the Rupert chain....Babe Dahlgren feels he is a lucky gent to be on hand to step into Lou Gehrig's shoes, but it's a long way from now until world series time....Ki-Y entries close tonight.

LIKE LOST TRACTION IN SLIPPERY MUD

Poor lubrication wastes power . . . WASTES GASOLINE. It's easy to see waste when your wheels slip and spin in mud, but what you don't see is the gasoline loss caused by sticky valves and gummed pistons. Veedol keeps valves opening and closing on time. Fill your crankcase with it and watch it cut down gasoline consumption. You'll agree, with motorists the world over, that Veedol is "the extra-mileage motor oil."

How To Overcome Piles And Rectal Soreness

If you are annoyed with itching piles or rectal soreness, do not neglect the same or run the risk of an operation. Any itching, soreness or painful passage of stool, is nature's warning and proper treatment should be secured at once. For this purpose get from J. S. McKeown or any druggist, a package of Hemroid and use as directed This formula, which is used internally, quickly relieves the itching and soreness and aids in healing the sore, tender spots. Hemroid is a physician's prescription and is highly recommended. It is easy to use and it seems the height of folly for anyone to risk an operation when a simple remedy, which is so pleasant to use may be had at such a reasonable cost.

Nine Nazis Not Fifty To Be Expelled

London, May. 4—(AP)—Sir Samuel Hoare, Home Secretary, announced in the House of Commons today that nine Nazis had been or would be expelled from Britain but denied London newspaper reports that the government had decided to expel 50 members of Nazi organizations.

Sir Samuel said that "altogether nine persons will be asked to leave." He added that the "expulsion of six further Germans (in addition to three who already have left) is not in any way connected with the recent expulsion of three British subjects from Germany."

(Berlin countered the first three expulsions by ordering three British business men to leave Germany and today six additional Britons had orders to depart by May 24.)

Main County Roads In Good Condition

With the exception of a few isolated spots, roads of the Hastings County system came through the winter in fairly good condition, W. L. Langlois, county roads superintendent stated today.

At present all roads are passable with the exception of Mudcat Lane connecting Foxboro with Plainfield and which was covered by flood waters of the surrounding areas. This road is still closed, Mr. Langlois stated but is expected to be navigable in the near future. Flood waters that poured over the road a few days ago did slight damage to a wooden bridge, shifting it slightly from its original position. Reconstruction work will start immediately.

Flood water also poured over the Marmora-Cordova, and Stoco roads during the recent rains, but water is receding rapidly and roads are passable with care exercised in driving.

A few frost-boils are apparent on the Madoc-Millbridge road but these have caused negligible damage. North of Millbridge the road is in excellent shape, Mr. Langlois said, adding that all main highways throughout the county are in fine condition.

The Ormsby-Coe Hill road is in fair condition but there are spots where the utmost care should be taken by drivers of motor and other vehicles, the superintendent added.

IN MEMORIAM

HALL — In loving memory of Maria Ellen Hall, who passed away at Plainfield, May 4th., 1934.

Gone dear mother, gone forever
How we miss your smiling face
But you left us to remember
None on earth can take your place
A happy home we once enjoyed—
How sweet the memory still
But death has left a loneliness
The world can never fill.

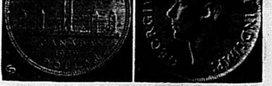
A Car For "The Forgotten Man"

"The forgotten man's car, fit for a king" is what Powel Crosley, Jr., the manufacturer of this new low-priced automobile, believes his car to be. The car was demonstrated at the Indianapolis speedway and will be further demonstrated at the New York World's Fair. The car is 10 feet long, nearly five feet in height and weighs less than 935 pounds. It is expected to achieve an economy up to 60 miles to the gallon of gasoline and to attain a speed of 50 miles an hour. This model accommodates four passengers and is planned to sell for approximately $300.

New Silver Dollar



The royal visit to Canada will be commemorated by a new silver dollar, the obverse side of which will carry a likeness of His Majesty. The reverse side will show the parliament buildings in Ottawa.

HON. J. R. MANION

So sure was Dr. Manion that the electorate of Canada shared his views of the government's record that he invited—and even challenged—the government to call an election early in the autumn, as soon as possible after the royal visit.

"Public opinion today is as much against the government as it was against us in 1934 and the result will be the same," he said. As happened to all governments which hung on for the full five-year term, the present government would only suffer worse defeat by postponing a general election until next year.

Frequent Clashes

The Conservative leader's speech of more than an hour and a quarter was punctuated with frequent clashes with questioners in government benches, particularly while he chided the government on some of its 1935 election circulars and reviewed the railway situation.

Dr. Manion told the House frankly he did not think there was a complete solution to the railway problem. He was not blaming the present condition of the railways any more on the present government than on the former government. The railways were the victims of changing conditions.

"I say there is no solution, if by solution is meant the wiping out of the deficit of the Canadian National Railways. The business is not there; it has dropped so much."

However, he did think substantial economies could be effected if the Canadian National and Canadian Pacific Railways would take advantage of the great opportunities they had for further co-operative measures. There was, though, no way the C.N.R. deficit could be completely eliminated or even nearly wiped out.

Speaks on Deficit

He noted the railway loss this year was $54,000,000 compared with $62,000,020 deficit in 1933 at the bottom of the depression, and $48,000,000 in 1935.

"We gave the employees a little more money," Transport Minister Howe interjected.

"My friend can't take the credit for that," Dr. Manion retorted. "My friend dare not take credit for it. It is between the employers and the company."

He charged Mr. Dunning had added more to the C.N.R. deficit in one year than in any other year. He charged Ross Gray, Liberal whip with having tried to discredit the former government's effort to clear up the railway "mess" left by the Liberals in 1930. He said the C.N.R. interest charges to bondholders outside the government had increased $20,000,000 a year between 1921 and 1930.

Debate Wheat Legislation

Today the House will begin debate on the government's long-awaited and recently altered wheat legislation, expected to prove one of the most vigorously-fought issues of the whole session.

Dr. Manion, noting the government's revised wheat guarantee of 70 cents a bushel, predicted the price might later be boosted to 80 or 90 cents "to get votes."

"It is not a case of helping the western farmer but of helping this government hang on to power," he contended.

He levelled sharp criticism at the budget itself, in which, he said, there was nothing for the poor man. The sales tax and sugar tax remained the same. There was no indication of any solution of the plight of the unemployed and the cost of living index now stood at 84, compared to 79.1 when the Conservatives went out of power.

Cheese Bill Condemned

As a result of bungling in the negotiating of the United States trade agreement the three per cent import excise tax had to be removed almost entirely, he said. Because of this pulp from Scandinavian countries was being shipped to Canada and a dumping duty had to be applied. Several industries in London might have to close their doors and had already reduced employment because of the treaty.

Agriculture Minister Gardiner's cheese bill was condemned by leading cheese dealers with whom Dr. Manion had communicated. They said the cheese bonus would increase prices temporarily, cause increased production and lead British buyers to lower their prices.

The mining industry was one of the bright spots in the Canadian economy. The government should encourage it by stability of taxation and in other ways.

"I know something of the mining industry," he said, "for I have been grubstaking prospectors for years and only once did I get a break and that turned out the wrong way in the end. But that just illustrates the gamble involved in mining and the risks that go with making a mine."

Against Commissions

As a program for the government, Dr. Manion recommended more economical service all round in the federal administration. He advocated elimination of all royal commissions because their recommendations were rarely acted upon.

The government could stop playing politics with the C.N.R. It could reduce the extreme power set up by the Prairie Farm Rehabilitation Act. It could buy post office and rifle range sites more cheaply.

The great tragedy was that nothing was offered in solution of the unemployment situation but external trade which alone would solve none of Canada's problems.

As the report of the Royal Commission on Dominion-Provincial relations would not be ready till July, what was to become of the proposed inter-provincial conference on unemployment?

What about the government's promise of unemployment insurance?

When the government did go to the country, it would be nagged with "a very-hurricane of antagonism."

Can be Cured

Then there was Labor Minister Rogers, "a theoretical reformer and a practical reactionary, another professor gone wrong another intellectual crashing his head against a wall of reality," said Dr. Manion.

Unemployment could be cured, but it required courage, vision, leadership. The fact was relief figures were practically the same as four years ago when the government took office. There was discontent and new political parties springing up all over the country.

The budget, in short, promised no stability for business, nothing for the unemployed, no real plan for the west, only a hit-and-miss program, taking the path of least resistance.

Discontent, disharmony, and demoralization of the youth was the order of the day. What was wanted was less tariff tinkering and lower municipal taxation.

Trying to Save Seats

Some Liberal members were trying to save their own seats by attacking their own government, said Dr. Manion. That was clear evidence they knew the people were dissatisfied with the administration. It was no wonder Liberal members and some Ministers were shaking in their shoes and talking of holding the election off until 1940.

Labor Minister Rogers had come into office to clean up the unemployment situation. One tenth of the population was now on relief, just about the same as before the Liberals came into power.

"Like the Prime Minister, the Minister of Labor is a theoretical reformer and a practical reactionary," said Dr. Manion. "He is another professor gone wrong, another intellectual crashing his head against the wall of reality."

Against Reductions

Hon. C. H. Cahan (Con. Montreal-St. Lawrence-St. George) said that the government, while appealing to private industry to expand its operations, was destroying by tariff reductions the foundations on which many industries have been established.

Mr. Cahan believed expanding industry in Canada could absorb the unemployed but the government was going about matters the wrong way in seeking to enlarge exports of primary products. It should develop the domestic market by seeing that the commodities Canadians required were made in Canada as far as possible.

A wider distribution of secondary industries throughout Canada was desirable in Mr. Cahan's opinion. Development of coal mines and Hydro-electric power in the Prairie Provinces would assist in bringing secondary industries to that section of the country and so give employment at home to young people of the west who were not required in agriculture.

Cahan Criticises Dunning

"The budget address of the Finance Minister," said Mr. Cahan, "might be described, without exaggeration, as a complacent expression of platitudinous inexactitudes, designed to please his hearers by combining into one innocuous pronouncement the variable tenets of the several political groups in the country."

Walter Kuhl (S.C. Jasper-Edson) presented a constitutional argument to the effect the power to disallow provincial legislation exercised by the federal government under the British North America Act was non-existent. He contended the B.N.A. Act was an imperial statute which did not accurately reflect the decisions of the Quebec conference which preceded its enactment. It had not, therefore created a federal union and Canada could not become a federal union until the sovereignty of the provinces was recognized and the will of the people was expressed.

Gasoline prices in Saskatoon were excessive said Dr. A. M. Young (Lib. Saskatoon) They were a handicap to farmers in northern Saskatchewan and were due to a high price for gasoline at Calgary and high freight rates from Calgary to Saskatoon. He claimed both should be reduced.

Heading For Disaster?

Because of conditions disclosed in the textile industry by the Turgeon Royal Commission, Dr. Young thought a special minister should be appointed to investigate continuously the operations on tariff protected industries.

In a brief speech Gordon Graydon (Con. Peel) said Canada was heading for disaster if unbalanced budgets continued. The sales tax remained at the highest level since confederation and regardless of the means used it had to be reduced.

"Why not revert to the old sound ideas of economy all along the line?" he asked.

Arthur Slaght, (Lib.-Parry-Sound) said Dr. Manion had placed a strange example before Canadian youth. He had said he told the people in 1935 that the Conservative party would win the election when he knew they would not.

"The police have an instrument they call a lie detector," he said. "I think the leader of the opposition should at least equip himself with red and green lights so that when he speaks in the House he can flash a green light when he speaks the truth and a red light when he does not."

Interpretation 'Nonsense'

Later Dr. Manion described as "nonsense" an interpretation placed by Mr. Slaght on a passage in his book "Life is an Adventure."

Mr. Slaght retorted Dr. Manion needed a third light to indicate when he was speaking 'nonsense.'

Mr. Slaght berated Mr. Cahan for reflecting on a former head of a friendly nation, President Theodore Roosevelt, in a speech in the House in February.

"It is time we tell the people that we in the House of Commons are not in accord with that kind of vile traducing of the head of a friendly country, for purely political purposes."

He berated Dr. Manion, too, for the "abuse" he poured on Hon. H. H. Stevens, former leader of the now-defunct reconstruction party, in his book when Mr. Stevens had made a greater contribution and more reasoned speeches this session than the Conservative leader.

Dr. Manion was calling for an election. "Are the people of Canada going to be fooled again by the old gang?" Mr. Slaght asked.

"No," shouted Conservatives.

"As in Ontario, the old gang didn't dare come back again but put up a new front-man," Mr. Slaght said.

Stirling

Stirling — Prominent in every phase of community life, active in church and Sunday School work Mr. and Mrs. E. Munro and family will be greatly missed by many friends of the district when next week they move to their new home in Norwood. Mr. Munro came to Stirling several years ago when he and his brother, Mr. Lawrence Munro, became owners of the Stirling Cheese Box and Basket Co. formerly operated by J. S. Marshall and Company. The factory was one of the foremost local industries under direction of Munro brothers and a lumber business worked in conjunction with the plant also operated successfully until three years ago when the aforementioned plant was totally destroyed by fire. At that time the firm found it to its advantage to purchase a similar plant in Norwood rather than rebuild in Stirling. For the past year or more Mr. Munro has operated the plant and resided in Stirling. This week however, he and his family will move to that town to be closer to his work. During their residence in Stirling the entire family have made many friends.

Services Appreciated by Choir

On Monday evening the members of St. Paul's United Church Choir called at the Munro home to bid farewell to one of its most faithful members, Mrs. Munro. Twenty five guests thoroughly enjoyed a pleasant evening of games and contests and musical numbers. Mr. R. A. Patterson expressed the regret felt by those present because of the enforced departure from the village of one who not only possessed the needed talent for choir work but who always managed to be in her place. Mr. G. L. Clute presented the family with a silver tray and cream and sugar. Both Mr. and Mrs. Munro suitably responded.

St Paul's Women's Association

About forty ladies, members, officers and friends of St. Paul's United Church Women's Association were present at the May meeting of the organization held on Tuesday afternoon, May 2nd, at the home of Mrs. George Mason. In the absence of Mrs. McKee, president, Mrs. Sid Williams directed the opening exercises and devotional period. The meeting opened with the theme song. In presenting the secretary's report Mrs. N. Wescott read several letters of acknowledgement received from those who had been sent cards and other greetings. Mrs. Wescott had received personal expressions of gratitude. Fifteen cards had been sent during the month, she reported. The Treasurer's report prepared by Mrs. Duffin was also read by Mrs. Wescott showing a bank balance of $105.78. The attendance recording system revealed about forty ladies present. The visiting committee for the next month will be Miss E. Donnan and Mrs. Geo. Pollard. Following a general discussion on the convention to be held later in the month at Tweed, Mrs. F. N. McKee and Mrs. J. B. Thompson were appointed official delegates. Three new names were added to the roll.

Fine Program

Mrs. Carleton Wright, convener of the program committee, was in charge of the remaining part of the meeting which opened with hymn 351. Mrs. Arthur Scott read the Scripture lesson and led the gathering in prayer. An instrumental solo given by Mrs. C. Clapper was greatly enjoyed. The topic of the day was given by Mrs. Wright who spoke on the subject 'Life is what you make it." In reviewing life of today the speaker mentioned the advance in scientific achievement as means of improving the life of men yet the skilled minds that created it are unable to find that something that will establish peace among nations. Still in the face of this personal and national insecurity there is happiness for the man or women who strive to find that for which they are fitted and devote their lives to it. The address revealed careful study a preparation and was well given.

The next musical number was a soprano solo by Miss Laura Mason of Springbrook with Mrs. N. E. Eggleton playing the accompaniment. Mrs. F. Hubble offered an amusing reading. Mrs. W. J. Scott spoke briefly of the coming departure from the district of Mrs. E. Munro who for years has been an active member. Norwood will gain a worthy family and a keen church worker in Stirling's loss. All members joined in wishing Mrs. Munro every success in her new home.

The thanks of the organization to Mrs. Mason for her kind hospitality and the capable program committee for the fine program was expressed by Mrs. George Luery. The meeting closed with Benediction and the ladies served luncheon. The arrangements for the meeting were under the direction of Mrs. C. Wright, convener of the program committee ,assisted by Mrs. F. Hubble, Mrs. Clapper, Mrs. Arthur Scott, Mrs. W. Hagerman, Mrs. W. Pitchett, Mrs. N. E. Eggleton.

Work is progressing rapidly on the new Post Office building. The brickwork is completed and the carpenters have started work on the interior. Occupying a site that has been nothing more than a vacant lot, the structure will add much to beauty of the village in addition to being almost in the centre of the village, yet just off the main street. It is situated on the corner of Charlotte St. and Highway No. 14.

For the satisfaction of that numerous unimaginative company who like to ask "who?", "when?" and "where?" it may as well be admitted that this chapter in two young lives reached its consummation in the month of January, 1926; that it was enacted in a cafeteria within walking distance of the State house (if one was a good walker) and that "he" and "she" involved might have been that young couple you noticed at the table across the aisle.

"I hoped I'd find you here, only I hoped I'd get in before you were seated so I could carry your tray for you."

"It's lucky you don't overtake me every night, you'd soon spoil me."

"Was it a hard day? Are you tired?"

"Not a bit. I feel great. I had a raise today, and after the first of April I'm to have my own office."

"What do you mean by your own office? Are you going to leave where you are?"

"Oh, no, I should hope not. I mean that I'm not to work in the general office with a lot of other girls. I'm to have a little corner near my boss."

"Is he married?"

"I never asked."

"Would you care?"

"Not a snap."

"Do you mean you like him so much it wouldn't make any difference whether he was married or not?"

"I mean it wouldn't matter to me, yes. What have you been reading since I saw you last?"

"Why do you ask that?"

"You sound as though you might have been examining a shipment of would-be best sellers—a bit Freudian. But I wish you'd eat something."

"Say, do you agree with that chap?"

"Who, my boss?"

"No, that Freud."

"I never read him. I don't have time to read anything but novels, working all day, and in the evening sewing and mending, and a dash of washing and ironing; and sometimes I like to go to the pictures or a show."

"You've ever let me take you to a show yet, and I've asked you times enough, Lord knows."

"Oh, you've been fine to ask me, and I do appreciate it; but, you see, I can't quite bring myself—I'm not exactly flapperish, you know, and —we don't even know each other's names."

"Well, what of it? Say, listen. Did you ever think it out like this? Suppose you're walking with a girl friend and a man comes along that she knows and she names him to you and you to him and you all walk along together and come to her house and she says good-by and goes in. You walk along with this strange man and it's all right for you to ask him in to your house just because she's told you his name. And perhaps he's a man you ought not to know at all."

"Would you be so kind as to fill my glass for me?"

"What I was going to say was," he continued, "that if we were introduced a hundred times we wouldn't know each other any better on that account. We've talked about books—of course, I didn't believe what you said just now about not reading—and music and pictures and life, and that's the way you get to know people. Why, I can read your thoughts about things as if they were photographs."

"Oh you can, can you? Just to test you and show you up, what am I thinking now?"

"You won't be angry?"

"No, I'll take the risks."

"Well, then, you're thinking things are reaching a point when I'm going to talk about something besides books and music and pictures—something more personal, and you want to hear and you're half afraid. You're held back by inhibitions that aren't worthy of you. You rather envy girls that take the bit between their teeth and bolt, but still you cling to old-fashioned ideas. Am I right?"

"Yes, and you make me feel ashamed, somehow."

"Look here, what is your name?"

She told him.

He left her abruptly, to return in a few minutes with the manager of the cafe.

"Good evening," said he, "this young man is a neighbor of mine and he's very anxious to be introduced to you. You'll excuse me if I don't stop. I see I'm wanted at the desk."

"I'm pleased to know you, and now that the conventions have been observed, will you marry me?"

"You make me more and more ashamed with every word you speak—to take me on trust like that—"

"But I love you, YOU, no matter what your name is. If you distrusted me, why did you let me join you night after night?"

"I don't distrust you. I love you, too."

"Come on, let's cut dessert."

They went out, the young man carrying both checks conspicuously in his hand.

Little Benny's Note Book

Me and ma were eating breakfist and pop was still up shaving his face, and ma said, O deer, this is Nora's afternoon off and I have so many things to do I dont know how to start or where to finish. If your father would only agree to eat in a desterant occasionally it would solve the whole complication. O well, it wont hurt to ask him, nothing ventured nothing saved, she said.

And when pop came down she waited till he started his 2nd cup of coffee, saying, Have you noticed the big beautiful new resterant up on the Avenue, Willyum?

Why yes, it's quite an imposing place to pass, pop said, and ma said, It sounds quite intristing, I mean they're even avvertizing in the Speaker every Sattiday in the Where to Eat department, so I mean they must have excellent food to make it worth while avvertizing about.

I know the chap that owns that place, pop said. His name is Ripmayer and he's been a successful resterant man all his life, he said, and ma said, There, you see, what does he say about the food in his new place?

He doesn't know a thing about it, pop said. You see, he claims if you dont believe in your own business you cant very well make others believe in it, and the surest way to stop believing in a resterant is to eat there. So he's never had a meal there, even on the gala opening day. There's a sign on the wall saying Our ooFd is Matchless, but nobody knows it's hung directly over an old fashion embroidered motto, There's No Place Like home, pop said.

Willyum Potts now that I remember that avvertizement, it says Bruno Paskally, owner and manager, so no Ripmayer has anything to do with it and there is no Ripmayer you crazy thing, and I wish you'd stop laughing, ma said.

The result being he laughed all the harder, making him feel so good he promised to try the new resterant.

Picton

Picton, May 3 (Special)—At the town council meeting Monday night, it was decided that the Mayor would issue a proclamation calling for the observance of the next two public holidays on Mondays instead of the regular days. The May 24th holiday which falls on a Wednesday, will be observed here on Monday, May 22 and the July 1st holiday, which falls on a Saturday will be observed on Monday, July 3. There was no discussion regarding observance of May 20 as a holiday and it is expected that this will be combined with the May 22 holiday, since Saturday is the big day for merchants in Picton.

The council took steps to provide a tourist park for Picton. The town owns property on Hill Street above the Yacht Club and this will be used along with property nearby which is part of the pumping station lot. This latter runs to the water's edge. For the part above the Yacht Club, steps will be built over the bank to the club house below and the tourists would have the use of the building. There has been a great increase in tourists here in the last few years and such a camp is greatly needed.

The council voted $75 to augment the grant given by the County Council for the purpose of printing and distributing publicity matter.

An invitation was read from Kingston for municipal officials to be present on the occasion of the visit of Their Majesties. They will be given places on the city hall steps. The council is asking for 21 reservations for themselves and wives.

Chief of Police Bert Biddle reported that 22 revolvers had been registered with him during the past two months.

The council discussed the deficit arising out of the Centennial celebration but took no definite action on the matter, being opposed to paying the bills themselves.

Expect New Ferry

The new ferry at the Glenora and Adolphustown crossing is scheduled to arrive on May 15 and efforts are being made to have it in operation before the visit of Their Majesties to Kingston on May 21, as there will be a great traffic that day. As far as can be learned at the present time, the present ferry will be kept at Glenora and both ferries will be used when necessary. New docks to accommodate the new ferry are being built on both sides of the Bay. The new ferry is being built at Owen Sound and will be much faster and carry more cars than the present ferry, which is inadequate to handle the traffic which has increased greatly since highway 33 was paved.

Members of Picton Legion are organizing to go to Kingston where they will act as part of the guard along the route taken by the King and Queen. Members of 'D' Company, who are able to act in a similar capacity, are holding a parade Wednesday in preparation for the event. It is expected that many hundreds of local people will be going to Kingston on that occasion.

With fine weather for the past week, farmers are working on the land from dawn to dark, endeavoring to make up for lost time, due to the backward season.

Plans are being made to have a roller skating rink in the present market building, in the upstairs portion. This building was originally built as a roller skating rink and is ideal for the purpose. There has been a great increase in this recreation here and town council last night approved of skating there twice a week with Saturdays for children.

New Safety Heads

The newly-elected officers of the Industrial Accident Prevention Associations are shown above. The safety organization operates under the authorization of the Workmen's Compensation Board. The safety work is carried on throughout Ontario through the medium of nearly 10,000 member firms.

Top, left to right, are A. Ross Robertson, president, of Toronto, and E. C. Steele, vice-president of Chatham. Below, left to right, are M. P. Verity, second vice-president, of Brantford, and E. E. Sparrow, honorary-treasurer of Toronto.

Canada's Youngest Air Passenger

Canada's youngest air passenger to date is Donald Findlay, only six weeks old, who flew all the way from Ottawa to Vancouver in a Trans-Canada Air Lines plane. He is seen in his mother's arms at the Vancouver airport just after the plane landed. Donald slept through most of the 2,300 miles. His brother, Billy, all of 18 months, paid more attention to the thrills of the journey. Daddy W. O. Findlay, is executive assistant, Canadian Broadcasting Corporation. The family was enroute to Victoria, where the Findlays lived before going to Ottawa.

"Wonder Pitcher" Unable to Finish any of His Three Starts

(By Judson Bailey Associated Press Sports Writer).

Baseball's most persistent blight is the one which withers "wonder pitchers" in their second year and there are signs it is threatening Johnny (double no-it) Vander Meer.

The boy who was a sensation last year for Cincinnati with two consecutive hitless performances has made three starts without finishing one. The team's present third place standing in the National League shows clearly enough that the Reds aren't getting the pitching they expected from the big sophomore.

He gave up six hits, six passes and a balk in 4 1-3 innings yesterday, and only the fact that Cincinnati temporarily tied the score kept him from being charged with the 6-4 loss to New York Giants which Bucky Walters subsequently assumed.

Hutchinson Shipped Back

Vander Meer is not the only 1938 star learning the bitter lesson that esports headliners can be heroes one edition and bums the next. There is young Freddie Hutchinson, the year's most costly rookie. Estimated to have cost Detroit Tigers $100,000 in cash and players after winning 25 games for Seattle, he was shipped back to minors yesterday after giving up eight runs in less than an inning in his one big league showing.

Even Buck Newsom, of St. Louis Browns, who turned in 20 victories for a seventh-place team last year, has been able to win only one decision in four starts. Twice he has escaped a verdict either way, as he did in yesterday's 11-10 triumph of the Senators, which lifted Washington into third place in the American League.

Red Sox Second

Boston Red Sox moved back into second with a 5-1 victory over Cleveland Indians, whom Eldon Auker tamed with five-hit pitching, and Chicago White Sox vacated the runner-up spot in the face of three hit hurling by George Caster which gave Philadelphia Athletics a 3-1 verdict. New York Yankees retained the lead with a 10-6 shellacking of the Tigers, although Hank Greenberg got his fourth homer of the season.

The Phillies stopped the Cubs, 4-1, in one of the day's two National League contests. Cold weather kept the first-place Bees and St. Louis Cardinals and the Pirates and Brooklyn Dodgers idle.

Deloro Athletic Association Plans Season's Activity

Marmora—The annual meeting of the Deloro Amateur Athletic Association was held in Deloro Hall on Monday evening. Donald Robertson presiding over a moderate attendance. The chairman in his report touched generally upon the various activities of the past year while managers of the different sports fostered by the association dealt specifically with their own branch of sport. A good surplus on hand was shown by Michael Corrigan, secretary treasurer as he gave the financial report. Softball will come under the wing of the association for the first time this coming season and the Deloro team hope to be embraced in a league which is being mooted for the district. The election of officers resulted as follows:

President—D. Robertson.
Vice President—W. Townson.
Secretary-Treasurer—M. J. Corrigan.
Auditor—H. A. McNally.
Managers:
Baseball—F. Leal.
Tennis—I. F. McIntosh.
Bowling—D. Robertson
Football—P. Gray.
July 1st Celebration—W. Simmons Sr.
Softball—W. Townson.
Rink—To be appointed later.

Marmora Council No. 279 C. O. C. F. met at the home of Friend Mrs. W. R. Gray on Tuesday evening. At the conclusion of the business session the hostess served a delicious lunch.

Group No. 1 of St. Paul's Ladies' Guild held a euchre party in the Parish Hall on Monday evening. Prize winners were Clayton Burkitt and Mrs. C. Nichol.

Mr. Robt. Elliott who is attending Queen's is vacationing at his home in Deloro.

Family Jewels Ride on Johnstown In the Derby

Louisville, Ky., May 4 (AP)—The family jewels were riding right on Johnstown's white-marked nose today, so strong was the conviction that Jamestown's big boy would be the horse to beat Saturday in what shapes up as the smallest Kentucky Derby field since the Great War.

Astonished at the sparkling 1.36 3-5 mile he worked yesterday in his first crack at the Downs' cuppy footing, the folks outshouted supporters of all other contenders to such an extent the chances are he will be less than even money by post-time. The field figures to contain no more than eight other horses in the march to the barrier.

With Joe W. Brown's T. M. Dorsett suffering from a slight fever and a doubtful starter, W. E. Boeing's Porter's Mite showing no inclination for the 1 1-4 mile distance and several other eligibles lacking Derby class, the 15 earlier possibilities were falling off in bunches.

Only six are definite: Johnstown, Herbert Woolf's Technician, W. L. Brann's Challedon, William Ziegler's El Chico, Valdina Farm's Derby trial winner, Viscounty, and Heather Broom, the chestnut colt Earl Sande brought to Derbytown for J. H. Whitney.

7 IMPORTS FOR FERGUS THISTLES

Team Will Play in the Senior Senior Ontario Lacrosse Loop

Fergus, Ont., May 4 (CP)—Seven new players will be with Fergus Thistles when the team hits the trail for the 1939 Ontario Lacrosse Association title.

Henry Soloski, forward and Len Wilkes, pivot man have signed playing certificates. Both were former Brampton players. Bob McCully, Stratford boy, is trying out for a defence position along with Lawrence England of Paris who played for Orillia last year.

Lawrence's brother, William, who saw several seasons with Brantford has also joined the team. Two former Thistle players, Yorky Jordan and Hiram Dean have returned to the fold.

In addition to the newcomers, members of last year's squad Rusty Simpson, Lorne Campbell, Watty Henderson, Alf Richardson, Austin Tott, Dan Bergin Teamer Bergin, Jack Chapman, Perry Wilson and Fred Smith have been turning out to practices.

British Polo Ponies Hurt in Train Wreck

New York, May 4 (CP)—Veterinary surgeons today said the 28 British polo ponies now resting at Mitchel Field stables will recover quickly from the accident that killed one of their number, bruised two and shook up the others during the long train ride from California.

The first contingent of Britain's 60 mounts for the International polo series in June against the United States were in a minor train wreck at Hilton, Calif., Saturday. Viscount Cowdray's mare, Queen's decision, was killed, Pandora showed a bruised hip and lacerations of the head, and another horse was hurt.

The horse train crashed into two stalled fruit cars, which rolled down a 150-foot embankment. The cars carrying the horses remained upright. Upon arrival here Tuesday the British grooms were installed under canvas at Mitchel Field to remain until the Challenge Cup matches are over. They are scheduled for Meadow Brook June 4, 11 and 18.

(By The Associated Press)

George Caster, Athletics: Held White Sox to three hits as Philadelphia won 3-1.

Jim Ripple, Giants: His pinch double tied up ball game and gave New York chance to go in front of and beat Reds 6-4.

Eldon Auker, Red Sox: Pitched five hit ball to beat Indians.

Rick Ferrell, Senators: Hit double and three singles to bat in two runs and score once as Washington nosed out Browns 1-10.

Red Rolfe, Yankees: Batted in three runs and scored twice.

WASHBURN QUITE VERSATILE IN RING

Meets Scotty McDougall in Main Bout of Wrestling Card

"Gentleman Jack" Washburn, the Tennessee badman of the wrestling ring, who meets Scotty McDougall, the former Canadian heavyweight wrestling champion in the main bout of Friday night's professional wrestling card at the Hume arena, is one of the most versatile men of the wrestling business today. Washburn once boxed Jack Dempsey, when the latter was champion of the world, he fought in the Great War and put in three years making moving pictures at Hollywood, having doubled for Fred Thompson during the making of the picture Kit Carson.

Outside the ring Washburn is one of the best dressed and best men in the grappling business, but once inside the ropes he has no scruples and shows no mercy towards his opponent, the referee or the patrons, who he antagonizes with his brutal attacks upon all and sundry within reach. His favourite hold is the punishing body slam. Washburn ran away from his Tennessee home to join the 89th Division of the United States army and served one year and 14 days at the front, having been wounded on several occasions. Washburn has met and defeated all of the top-ranking wrestlers on this continent his prolific ring career and was only persuaded to come to Belleville in an effort to revive professional wrestling in these parts.

A complete three-bout card has been arranged with the agile light-heavies featuring in the preliminaries with such top-ranking wrestlers as Joe Conkle, the Red Devil, Ed Kimisky of Buffalo, Mike Mikveroni, the Russian from Windsor and Jack Cox of Toronto being featured on the first wrestling card to be presented in Belleville in some time.

JR. BALLSTERS TO FORM LEAGUE

Napanee, Picton and the "Fliers" Likely to Have Teams

Just when the district junior O.B.A. loop seemed headed for the rocks of destruction, the R.C.A.F. "Flyers" loomed on the baseball horizon and announced they were materially interested in the sponsoring of a junior baseball team at the Trenton Air Base. Last night the Hastings County junior league met at the Y.M.C.A., last year's roster of Napanee, Belleville and Picton being present.

At the outset Secretary Jack McVeigh announced the Belleville Kiwanis team, last year's champions, had disbanded and no junior baseball would be sponsored in this city during 1939. With only Napanee and Picton left to consider the future of the league seemed doubtful when A.C. Louis Legris, representing the R.C.A.F. Sports Club, announced the Flyers were keenly interested in sponsoring a junior baseball club, but that the Airmen's Sports Club desired more information regarding age limits and other essentials before launching upon the project. The necessary information will be supplied the Air Force, who also entered the Bay of Quinte League last evening, by O.B.A. officials.

The three clubs represented at Hastings County junior league were Picton by Lockyer; Napanee by Walt Gerow and the R.C.A.F. by L. Legris. The annual meeting, election of officers and adoption of a schedule will be held at a later date.

Sports Roundup

(By Eddie Brietz, Associated Press Sports Writer).

New York, May 4 (AP)— Tony Galento is boxing only two-minute rounds on his western junket, if that means anything to you .... Railbirds at Louisville vote Johnny Dupuy, the New Orleans jock, the standout rider at the Downs so far, and Ben Jones (who handles Technician) the No. 1 trainer.

Mail Box: Bobby Riggs: Alice Marble says you are America's Davis Cup hope.... Max Baer: Commissioner Bill Brown, who has called you many a bum in his day, now admits you have changed — for the better..... Frank McCormick: Your boss says if you were a flash in the pan last year he'd like to have a carload of 'em.... Bill Tilden: When Fred Perry looked over the Perry-Budge house at Buffalo the other night, he said: "Bill Tilden in a wheel chair would have drawn more than this."

What they say: Harry B. Smith, San Francisco Chronicle: "The Galento exhibition was a joke and we want no more of them .... James C. Doyle, Cleveland Plain Dealer: "Louisville, Ky., will be Johnstown, Ky., next Saturday unless things should get muddled up —with the accent on the mud" ... Dizzy Dean: "Seems I have saw my best days."

It happened in B'klyn.... Just as Dolph Camilli, Dodger first sacker, was about to catch a foul pop (which would have retired the side) an intrepid man reached out and speared the ball.

BOMBS INJURE 3

Road were injured when the shop was wrecked by a third bomb. They were taken to hospital. A policeman at another shop found a bomb in time to prevent its exploding.

Meanwhile in Old Bailey Police Court Pearse McLaughlin, a young Irishman, was convicted of possessing illegal explosives and was sentenced to 10 years hard labor. Yesterday William Brown and John Connell were sentenced for bombing Hammersmith bridge.

Hundreds of theatregoers rushed from two buildings in Liverpool last night after tear gas bombs exploded under the seats. A bomb shattered part of a house in Birmingham and shortly afterward explosions wrecked four shop fronts in Coventry. Fifteen persons were taken to hospitals for treatment following the Liverpool blasts.

Supplementary Plan to Support Poland and Rumania Against Possible Aggression

FRANCE CONSULTED

Foreign Affairs Committee Approves Note to be Sent in Reply to Russian Proposal

London, May 5—(AP)—The government today accepted Soviet Russia's proposal to form a British-French-Russian military alliance and offered a supplementary plan for supporting Poland and Rumania against possible aggression.

London, May 5 (AP)—A responsible source said tonight that the government had agreed to the formation of a flat triple military alliance with Russia and France.

This disclosure followed a meeting of the Foreign Affairs Committee of the cabinet.

The committee approved a note to be dispatched, probably tonight, to Britain's Ambassador at Moscow, replying to Russian proposals for a security combination of the three powers.

British official quarters said that a plan had been devised which may get around Polish and Rumanian objections to receiving aid from the Soviet government.

Why the Weather!

By Major A. H. Thiessen
Science Service Meteorologist

Spring weather! This is the time of the year when the weather is changing from the winter to the spring type. Indeed, in the South the spring type has already merged into summer, while in the North and in southern Canada the spring type is dominant. The spring type is distinguished by an occasional cyclone (or general storm) which might be very severe, accompanied by chilly, northeasterly winds, rain or even snow in the extreme northern tier of states or in southern Canada. Such a storm may have been preceded by a condition approaching a warm wave, the former a suggestion of the past winter and the latter a pledge of the coming summer.

Memorable Send-Off To King and Queen Planned by Britain

By EDWIN JOHNSON
Canadian Press Staff Writer

London, May 5—(CP Cable)—Britain's pulse beat faster today as the hour approached for the nation's farewell to her democratic King and Queen who sail from Portsmouth tomorrow aboard the Empress of Australia on an historic journey to North America.

Six weeks' absence in Canada, the United States and Newfoundland will mark the longest separation of the sovereigns and their homeland subjects since their accession. Also, when the monarch steps ashore at Quebec May 15 it will be a precedent-making stride as George VI is the first British King to visit one of his Dominions during his reign.

Rousing Send-Off Planned

Seized with the significance of the event, the motherland is determined to give the King and his popular consort a rousing and memorable send-off. Citizens have been streaming into London for days to bid them "bon voyage" and cheer them on the first leg of their great adventure.

Thousands more are converging on the Portsmouth naval base from where Their Majesties will set sail for the "new world" at 3 p.m. (10 a.m. EDT) tomorrow.

Sharp at 12:20 p.m. tomorrow Their Majesties will leave Buckingham Palace for Waterloo station accompanied by a captain's escort of lifeguards and members of the royal suite going to Canada.

In carriage with the sovereigns will be Princesses Elizabeth and Margaret Rose, who while disappointed over not being able to go on the tour, are overjoyed over being permitted to travel with their parents to Portsmouth and say goodbye aboard the liner. Incidentally, it will be the first time the Princesses have been aboard an ocean-going vessel.

During Their Majesties' absence the Princesses will be left in the care of Governess Marion Crawford and will divide their time between Buckingham Palace and the Royal Lodge, Windsor Great Park.

453,000 MEN NOW IDLE IN THE U. S. SOFT COAL STRIKE

25 Per Cent Curtailment Ordered in Transit Services in N. Y.

SEC'Y. LABOR HOPEFUL

New York, May 5 (AP) — The United States Soft Coal Industry, stagnant since April 1, was further paralyzed today by the walkout of 95,000 additional miners, bringing to 453,000 the number of men who are idle. In addition, 5,000 others were ready to join the walkout by midnight tonight.

The walkout, bringing the threat of a coal shortage sharply to the fore, was the biggest stoppage in the industry since 1922 when 500,000 men were out from April 1 to Sept. 16.

Royal Couple Anticipating Their Trip With the 'Greatest Possible Pleasure'

Ottawa, May 5 (CP)—The King and Queen are anticipating their Canadian trip with the "great possible pleasure," said a cable received today by Lord Tweedsmuir in reply to greetings sent Their Majesties by Canada's Governor-General on behalf of the Canadian people.

The King's cable from England to Lord Tweedsmuir said:

"The Queen and I deeply appreciate the kind message which you have conveyed to us on behalf of the people of Canada and will be glad if you will express to them our sincere thanks for their good wishes. We look forward to our arrival in the Dominion with the greatest possible pleasure."

12-CAR ROYAL TRAIN IS LAST WORD IN COMFORT

Complete With All the Appointments As in a Modern Hotel

ROYAL SUITES

Montreal, May 5—(CP)—A symphony of blue and silver, Canada's Royal train needed only a few finishing touches tonight before moving to Quebec for the start of its 8,000-mile transcontinental tour with the King and Queen.

Never before has a Canadian train carried such distinguished passengers—never before has such painstaking attention to detail produced such a composite picture of luxurious beauty. From headlight to observation platform, the twelve-car hotel on wheels represents the work of the most skilled workmen on Canada's two major railways.

Exterior decoration of the train is carried out in royal blue with aluminum panels between the windows, rounded, silver-tinted roofs and thin, car-length lines of gold above and below the windows. The aluminum has been applied in diamond-shaped designs to flash more brilliantly in the sun.

The two cars at the back of the train—those in which the King and Queen will travel—carry the Royal coat of arms in the centre under the windows, while all other units bear the Royal cipher and crown in the centre and the Royal Crown at each end, below the roof line.

JAPANESE PLANES BOMB CHUNGKING AND 2,000 PERISH

One - Eighth of Provisional Chinese Capital, Chungking, in Flames

100 BOMBS DROPPED

Thousands in Streets When 27 Planes Start Emptying Racks

By KARL ESKELUND

Chungking, May 5 (AP)—Hundreds of Chinese were reported today to have been trapped by the flaming devastation spread by incendiary bombs in a Japanese air raid yesterday and it was estimated 2,000 had perished or had been injured.

Fires raged today through at least one eighth of this provisional Chinese capital. Thousands of terrified natives milled along the banks of the Yangtse River, seeking conveyance from the city.

Most foreigners were taken aboard the British gunboat Falcon and the United States gunboat Tutuila. Landing parties escorted them to safety past lines of burning buildings.

REEVE OF BATH PLEADS GUILTY

M. H. Mellow Admits Theft of $15,000 Over a Period of Seven Years

Napanee, Ont., May 5 (CP)—Morton H. Mellow, former Reeve of Bath, pleaded guilty yesterday to fourteen charges of stealing tax money. The thefts extended over a seven year period and amounted to about $15,000.

Sentence was reserved until May 8 after Defence Counsel J. A. Regan asked for mercy because of Mellow's six children. Regan blamed the administrations system of the village of Bath and the township of Amherst Island, from which the money was stolen, as partially responsible for Mellow's thefts.

Young Woman Asks to be Kissed By Handsome Clerk

New York, May 5 (AP)—A prim young woman walked into the United Air Lines offices on 42nd. Street and bought a ticket for Chicago. She gazed soulfully at Passenger Agent Ernest Albrecht, 21, tall, dark, and handsome. Some one called the Airlines bus was ready to start for the airport. But the young woman refused to leave.

"I want that man to kiss me goodbye," she said.

Albrecht saw his duty. He came from behind the counter and kissed the young woman. She left.

B. KILLEEN ROSS FATALLY INJURED ON STATION ST.

8 Year Old Girl Sustains Multiple Fractures of Skull When Hit by Truck

INQUEST OPENED

Driver of Truck, John Fleming, Rendered All Assistance at Time of Accident

Beverley Killeen Ross, eight year-old daughter of Employment Superintendent William D. Ross and Mrs. Ross, 20 Grier Street, was fatally injured a few minutes after four o'clock yesterday afternoon when she was struck by a heavy oil truck driven by John Fleming, 31, of 38 Cedar Street, while crossing the Station Street-Pinnacle Street intersection.

The injured girl received first-aid treatment by Dr. Austin Walters immediately following the accident and was rushed to Belleville General Hospital by Martin's Ambulance where she succumbed to her injuries a few minutes after admission. The cause of death was given as multiple fractures of the skull.

A preliminary inquest held at the Thompson Funeral Home, Everett Street, last night under Chief Coroner Dr. J. J. Robertson, was adjourned until Thursday May 11th at 7 p.m.

HUSBAND, WIFE KILLED IN CAR

Mr. and Mrs. Beaumont Flood, of Brockville, Victims of Car Accident

Brockville, Ont., May 5 (CP)—K. Beaumont Flood, 21, and his wife, Jeanne Flood, died in St. Vincent De Paul Hospital today of injuries received last night when the car driven by Flood left No. 16 highway two miles south of Spencerville. The car was wrecked in a ditch after striking a culvert.

After the couple had been brought here by occupants of a passing car and trailer, it was found that Mrs. Flood was suffering from a compound fracture at the base of the skull, fracture of the legs and of the lower jaw. Her husband also had a compound fracture at the base of the skull and internal injuries.

Flood died at 7.30 a.m. while Mrs. Flood died shortly after 2 a.m.

Traffic Constable Johns of Prescott found the car lying in the west ditch alongside the highway and badly wrecked. It had travelled for about 130 feet along the shoulder of the road before striking the end of a culvert.

Flood, an employee of the John B. Stetson Co. (Canada) here was a son of Mrs. Mary Flood, Brockville. His father was killed in a motor truck accident some years ago. Mrs. Flood was a daughter of Henry Garland, Brockville and was Mrs. Jeane Marie Friars, of Montreal, before her second marriage Nov. 16, 1938.

Illegal Anglers At Napanee Fined

Napanee, Ont., May 5 (CP) — Charged with catching pickerel from the Napanee River during spawning season, four anglers were fined $10 and costs when they appeared before Magistrate E. J. Butler yesterday.

Three other charges were laid over for a week till further investigation is made. Game wardens from Toronto who made the arrests said offenders were catching the fish in large quantities and peddling them.

Veterans Refused Liberty From Jail To Take Part in Ottawa Ceremony

Ottawa, May 5 (CP)—When the King and Queen arrive here May 17 on their tour of Canada, six war veterans will sadly stare at grey walls while their comrades line the route the Royal visitors will travel through the city. They are in Carleton County jail.

The men, penitent of their crimes and eager to take part in the various festivities connected with the four-day visit, attempted to respond to the call for ex-soldiers. They wrote a joint letter to Mayor Stanley Lewis of Ottawa seeking their release for the four days at least.

The Mayor, after consulting jail Governor Alonzo G. Dawson, replied that it would be impossible to set them free. So May 17 the loyal veterans will sit despondently in their cells, unable to answer the call to duty.

Foreign Minister Leaves Door Open For Further Talks

Colonel Joseph Beck Tells Parliament That Poland Will Not Allow Herself to be Barred from the Baltic—Germans Allowed Full Use of Corridor and Poland Will Allow Extension of Facilities to Road Transport Says Beck

FRANCE, BRITAIN CONCUR IN ADDRESS

Diplomatic Observers Characterized Address as "Most Reasonable" and "A Remarkable Combination of Firmness and Finesse"—Beck Carefully Avoided Any Possible Embarrassment to Hitler and Reich

By ELMER PETERSON
Associated Press Foreign Staff

Warsaw, May 5—(AP)—Foreign Minister Joseph Beck of Poland replied to Germany today with the firm rejection of Chancellor Hitler's demands for Danzig and a wide German right-of-way through the Polish Corridor, but left the door open for further "peaceful convrsations."

Speaking before the Polish Parliament, and interrupted constantly by thunderous applause, the Foreign Minister declared that the Polish Corridor and rights in the Free City of Danzig belonged to Poland and that Poland would not give them up.

Claims Called "One Sided" Demands

He called Germany's claims "one-sided demands" in which the element of reciprocity was lacking.

Poland is willing to negotiate, he said, only on the basis of "peaceful intentions" and "peaceful methods of action" and only as regards matters not directly affecting Polish sovereignty over the Corridor and her rights in Danzig.

A memorandum to this effect, Beck announced was being delivered today to the German Foreign Office in Berlin.

The German Ambassador in Warsaw, Adolf Von Moltke, was not present to hear Beck's address.

Beck began his address at 11:15 A.M. (6:15 A.M. EDT) and for 20 minutes delivered a calm, carefully-worded declaration of Polish policy which left no doubt as to the attitude of his country toward Germany's claims.

"We in Poland do not know the conception of peace at any price. There is only one thing in the life of men and nations and states which is without price—That is honor."

Principles Enumerated

Beck enumerated four principles which he insisted must be respected in negotiations with Germany:—

1. Poland stands firmly by her rights and interests in overseas trade and Maritime policy in Danzig.

2. Poland will not let herself be barred from the Baltic.

3 Poland will not permit her sovereignty to be restricted in the Corridor—Which Beck insisted is rightfully called the "Provinve of Pomorze"—Although she has no desire to obstruct Germans in their communications with East Prussia.

4. Although the population of Danzig is predominantly German, its livelihood and prosperity depend upon Poland.

Supreme Soviet Called to Meet May 25th

Moscow, May 5.—(AP)—Russia's supreme Soviet was summoned today to meet May 25 in the midst of grave international events centring immediately on Poland and in general on efforts of Great Britain and France to form a security alliance with the help of Russia.

The call for the session was issued soon after Foreign Minister Joseph Beck of Poland had replied firmly but pacifically to Chancellor Hitler's demands on Danzig and the Polish corridor.

News of convocation of the session aroused much interest in foreign diplomatic circles. It was expected the international situation and matters of national defence would be discussed, but no program was published.

PLANES ENGAGED IN NIGHT FLYING

Planes of the R.C.A.F. Trenton air base have been engaged in night flying during the present week, and considerable activity in the air after dark has been observed by local residents.

Last evening shortly before 9.30 o'clock one plane dropped a brilliant landing flare which lighted up the entire district in the vicinity of the airport.

The drone of motors was also heard over Peterboro on Thursday evening and excited residents telephoned the newspaper office there to discover the reason. Long distance telephone enquiry to the airport at Trenton revealed that "just ordinary night flying was taking place."

HUFF'S ISLAND FARMER ACQUIRES PRIZE BULL

One of the highest prices paid in years for a pure-bred Holstein-Friesian yearling bull was reported yesterday when it was announced that William Nightingale, son of Thomas Nightingale, prominent Huff's Island breeder, purchased an animal from the herd of J. Henderson, Portsmouth, Ont., breeder for the sum of $500.

The bull is said to be a scion of one of the best Holstein-Friesian blooded strains in the country, and his get will add much to the prominence already acquired by heards of the district.

FOUR MORE HOLIDAYS FOR MAIL COURIERS ON THE RURAL ROUTES

Rural mail delivery couriers have been granted four more holidays a year.

Heretofore they have been granted only Christmas and New Year's Day as official holidays. Now they will receive in addition Dominion Day, Labor Day, Thanksgiving Day and Good Friday.

Announcement has been received locally from the Ottawa office of the Hon. N. A. McLarty, Postmaster General.

ONE-HALF OF SCHOOL CHILDREN REGISTER

Almost one-half of the total of 1,000 city school children expected to take part in the rail excursion over the Canadian National Railways from Belleville to Kingston on May 21st has already been registered in local schools, it was believed this morning by the committee in charge. With two schools yet to hear from, 400 public school children have already been registered. This morning a request by Foxboro officials for Belleville to make arrangements to take school pupils from that village was received by general chairman, Reg. Moncrieff. They will be permitted to accompany the local children if sufficient accommodation is available, it was announced.

REQUESTS JUNK DEALERS FENCE IN THEIR PREMISES

A request for city junk and metal dealers whose locations of business border on the main streets of the city to "clean up and fence their yards with some suitable material to hide the present unpleasant view," was made today by Mayor Bone.

Numerous complaints have been received lately regarding these locations which have become detrimental to the appearance of our city, and if dealers wish to carry on in these locations they should attempt some sort of cover for their work.

"If this request is not complied with the matter will have to be brought to the attention of council with the possibility that a regulatory bylaw will have to be passed," declared the Mayor.

PREPARES TOURIST CAMP FOR SEASON

In preparation for the official opening within the next few days, first spring work was commenced at the city tourist camp by caretaker Geo. Wilder this morning. Lawns are being cut and trimmed, and flower beds are receiving the first attention. Buildings and equipment have come through the winter in good shape.

OBITUARY

FRANCES KILLEEN B. ROSS

Sincere sympathy is entertained by many citizens for Mr. and Mrs. W. D. Ross, 20 Grier Street, in their bereavement occasioned by the sudden death caused by motor accident of their little daughter, Frances Killeen Beverly, which occurred in this city late yesterday afternoon.

The little one was eight years of age, and was named Killeen after the late Rev. Father Killeen, who was a much loved parish priest at St. Michael's Church here some years ago. She was a bright, cheerful child and endeared herself not only to the members of her family, but to many of her elders. At St. Michael's Academy she was popular with the teachers and with her little playmates.

Surviving to mourn her loss besides her parents are three brothers, William Donald, Jr., John Raymond and Leo James, one sister, Rose Mary Adele, all at home.

The funeral announcement is made elsewhere in this paper.

REDNER FINKLE

(Los Angeles)

Redner Finkle, well known in Belleville where he lived for many years, died on Friday evening last at his home in Los Angeles, California and was laid to rest in Inglewood cemetery beside the grave of his wife.

The late Mr. Finkle who was born in Sidney was in the evaporating business with the late R. J. Graham for a number of years and also with Mr. H. W. Ackerman at Bowmanville.

About 30 years ago he removed to Los Angeles, California. He made visits to Belleville almost annually except in the past few years since his health had been failing.

He was a life member of Moira Lodge No. 11 A.F. & A.M., and of Moira Chapter, No. 7 R.A.M.

The late Mr. Finkle would have been eighty-two years old had he lived until No. 11th of this year.

A man of the highest character and kindly in disposition, he was held in high esteem by all who knew him. In business he was liked by everyone with whom he came in contact.

JOSEPH CRADDOCK

The death occurred early this Friday morning of Joseph Craddock, who passed away at the home of his daughter, Mrs. Emily LaBrash, Herchimer Avenue, after a lengthy illness. The late Mr. Craddock was born in England eighty-five years ago.

He leaves to mourn his passing three daughters, Mrs. Emily LaBrash, Thurlow Township, Mrs. Madgett, Toronto, Mrs. William Harris, Toronto, three sons, Mr. William Craddock, Toronto, Mr. George Craddock, Toronto, Mr. John Craddock, Goderich, thirty-three grandchildren and eight great grandchildren.

The funeral notice appears elsewhere in this edition.

Mr. C. A. Cameron, M. P. Writes Of Royal Itinerary on May 21

Member Refers to Uncertainty Whether Their Majesties Will Appear on the Platform of Their Train at Belleville on Evening of Sunday May 21st

HOUSE OF COMMONS, CANADA

Ottawa, Ontario
May 4th., 1939

Editor, The Ontario Intelligencer,
Belleville, Ontario.

Dear Sir—,

From the time that it was publicly announced that Their Majesties were coming to Canada and plans for the itinerary were started I have made every possible effort to ensure that Belleville and the Riding of South Hastings would have an opportunity of seeing Their Majesties and paying their respects to them, which I am sure every citizen would like to do.

I have received every possible consideration from the Chairman of the Committee having charge of the tour and from the Ontario Cabinet Ministers.

After a perusal of the details of the tour, as given in the public press from time to time, it must be realized by all what a strenuous month Their Majesties will have when in Canada, and that it is not possible to make public appearances or even stops in every municipality, but, from the information given to me, I am quite sure that every effort has been made to the end that as many people as possible will have an opportunity at some large centre in their district to see the members of the Royal Party.

On May 21st., Their Majesties will be in the City of Kingston, and will attend Divine Service at Fort Henry. I understand that they will proceed by one route from the Station to Fort Henry, and, after the service, will return by a different route, so that, in that way, a large number of people will have an opportunity of seeing them.

They will leave Kingston at 7:00 p.m. Standard Time, on Sunday evening, and proceed on the main line on the C.N.R. to Toronto, where they will spend Monday, May 22nd.

The chief, and the only, difficulty I think as far as Belleville is concerned is that Their Majesties have made a definite decision to observe Sunday as a day of rest, except for appearances at Divine Service. For that reason, and while the Committee has endeavoured to meet my wishes on behalf of the residents of South Hastings, I am now advised that it is impossible to give any definite or positive assurance that Their Majesties will appear on the platform of their train at Belleville.

According to present arrangements, there is to be an operating stop of ten minutes (from 8:00 to 8.10 p.m., Standard Time) at Belleville, or in the station yard there. It is confidently hoped (but again I would emphasize the fact that no possible assurance can be given) that if a large number of citizens are in attendance, Their Majesties will appear on the platform during the stop. It may also be possible to have the train proceed slowly through the station.

A few weeks ago, His Worship the Mayor and the City Council appointed a Committee to take charge of the arrangements, and they are co-operating with the Railway authorities on connection with this matter, so that adequate plans may be made to accommodate as many as possible in the station yards and at the station.

In view of the uncertainty of the situation, it is suggested that as many as possible should go either to Kingston or Toronto, but that all those who are unable to attend at either of those places should gather at the station, or in whatever place is provided by the railway authorities, on Sunday evening.

When the details of the arrangements for the station are completed, ample notice will be given to the public, and I am quite sure that the committee in charge will give special consideration to children, veterans, the militia, all those advanced in years and those who are unable to proceed to Kingston or Toronto.

Yours faithfully,
Chas. A. Cameron

$5000 GREYHOUND PASSES THRU CITY

'Miss Upside' Holder of International Track Records Viewed by Many Here

TRAVELS BY TRAILER

A sleek aristocrat of dogdom, a tawny, streamlined racing greyhound, four-year-old "Miss Upside", holder of the international record for speed on this and other countries' dog racing tracks, for which the owner has repeatedly refused offers as high as $5,000 for sale, visited Belleville during a brief stop-over this morning.

The champion was accompanied by eighteen other racing greyhounds of national and international record owned by Clifford and Arthur Allore, en route from St. Petersburg, Florida for Williamsburg, Ontario, for a brief vacation. Following this visit they will visit Steubensville, Ohio for the first races of the season's international circuit.

Travelling in a specially constructed airy trailer drawn by a large and modern car, the "stable" was observed by scores of residents during its brief stop in the downtown section. During the pause here, "Miss Upside" poked a brown muzzle against the fine screen of the windows in answer to the friendly words of the owner.

"We're proud of that dog. She's one of the best in the business. And we wouldn't take a lot for her" declared Clifford Allore.

"How much? Well we've turned down a $5,000 bid for her just recently, and I suppose we could get more if she were for sale. But she's not."

"Miss Upside's" track record of 500 yards in 26.4 seconds which she made at the Sportsmen's Sweepstakes race in Massachusetts last year still stands. A purse of $2,500 was earned in this race. She was timed for this record from a standing start.

The possibility that Belleville residents may see "Miss Upside" and her stablemates in action in Belleville this year was voiced by Mr. Allore. "I believe the Belleville Fair Board has been negotiating for us to appear here, and if possible we will do so" stated Mr. Allore.

Well known in Trenton where they have relatives, the Allores are residents of Toronto when not touring the continent with their racers.

Skipper of Freighter 'Glen Allen' Begins 55th Year of Sailing

Capt. Ben Bowen, Trenton, Started Career at Sixteen Years

When the Hepburn Brothers freighter "Glen Allan" pulled away from her Picton berth yesterday on her inaugural 1939 trip, at her helm stood Captain Ben Bowen, veteran mariner, beginning his fifty-fifth successive sailing season.

Scion of a noted Trenton marine family, Captain Bowen has three sons who are captains, all of whom are on active duty.

The family's marine history dates down through the years. One hundred years ago his grandfather was operating a barge running out of Deseronto to various Bay of Quinte points.

Born in Deseronto, the genial skipper started his sailing career at the age of sixteen. After serving his apprenticeship, he graduated to "steam" becoming master in 1906. Since that time he has manned every type of fresh water vessel from a lowly tug to a Great Lakes grain-carrier.

For the past seven years he has been the master of the "Glen Allan" and previous to that served eleven seasons on the "M. Sicken." Both vessels operated between Trenton and Montreal.

He survived the disastrous storm on Lake Erie in 1913, one that took tremendous toll of Canadian fresh-water mariners. He was then in charge of the grain-carrier "Compton" which weathered the storm without mishap.

Some years ago he invented the swing-boom, a device for landing sailors from ships without danger of mishap. It was initially tested on the "Compton" and was immediately declared a success. Since that time practically every boat on the Great Lakes has adopted Captain Bowen's invention.

He has lost only one man during his colorful career as a mariner. A first mate, Tommy Munro, Kingston, was drowned in Kingston Harbor, in 1913, when attempting to dislodge an anchor.

Farewell Party Is Arranged for Rawdon Family

Rawdon — On Monday evening, May 1st, friends and neighbors of Mr. and Mrs. Norman Weese gathered at Mount Pleasant Hall and tendered them a farewell before their departure to their new home at Hoards.

Rev. J. E. Beckel was chairman and gave a brief address. Messrs. John Coggins, Robert Melville and Bert Jeffs sang two trios with Mrs. John Holmes as accompanist. Miss Perne Hubble gave a reading entitled "Farewell."

Miss Gladys Summers sang "Long Long Ago" with guitar accompaniment. Mr. and Mrs. Herb Higgs contributed two musical numbers guitar and harmonica. Misses Lois Weaver, Marion Rose, Ruth Rose and Marion Phillips sang two quartettes with Mrs. Kenneth Weaver as accompanist.

Miss Anna Sharp read a selection and Master Don Spencer gave a guitar solo.

Mr. George Roberts, Trenton, contributed several musical numbers on his electric guitar. Miss Muriel Sine read a selection and Mr. J. C. Stacey, Trenton, gave a humorous story.

Mr. and Mrs. Norman Weese, Don and Orla and Mr. Ellis Smith were given seats of honor and Mrs. Percy MacMullen read the following address:

Mr. Ernest White, made the presentation of a pair of upholstered occasional chairs and each of the boys was given a silk tie. Just recently Orla was presented with a Watermans Fountain pen at the Allan School.

Mr. and Mrs. Weese and family all graciously replied thanking their friends for the gifts and inviting one and all to visit them in their new home. All joined in singing "For they are jolly good fellows" and the National Anthem. An appetizing lunch was served at the close.

Moont Pleasant, May 1st., 1939
Mr. and Mrs. Norman Weese,
Don and Orla and Mr. Ellis Smith,
Dear friends,—

We, your neighbors and friends of Mount Pleasant have gathered to spend a social evening with you before your departure to your new home at Hoards. As a community we wish to express to you in some tangible way that we are delighted to call you friends and please remember that the latch-string will always be on the outside whenever you wish to visit our burg.

Norman, we have found you a willing neighbor always ready to assist when help was needed and it is our wish that you may be most successful in your new venture and that you will soon feel very much at home in your new surroundings.

Myrtle, the members of the Woman's Missionary Society are pleased to have you remain as one of our members for the balance of this year. During your sojourn in our midst we have found you worthy and have appreciated your assistance at our quiltings and meetings and we shall look forward to seeing you several times this summer. We know that you will in time become an interested member of the Seymour auxiliary and our loss will be their gain.

Don, some of your boy friends will miss you but hope you will frequently visit them, while others are glad that you will be close enough to chum with them and to still attend High School. We folk of Mount Pleasant wish you every success in your educational career.

Orla, the pupils of the Allan school will miss your cheery morning greeting as evidenced by their farewell party and we hope you will make many friendships at your new school.

Ellis, you too seem a part of the family as you have resided here continuously during the past three years and it is our wish wherever you may be that health and happiness may be your portion of life's blessings.

Our wish for you all is that the loving angels may guard you whereever your home may be and when He bids us welcome to that Heavenly Home above we may meet as we have parted "Friends" on earth and "Friends" above.

And now we ask you to accept these gifts not for their intrinsic value but rather as a slight remembrance of your friends at Mt. Pleasant and as you use them may they remind you of the three years spent on the fourth concession.

Signed on behalf of the community, Ernest White, Percy MacMullen, Bert Jeffs, Allan Simpson, Lindsay McKeown, Alice Jeffs, Florence MacMullen.

Mr. Harvey Couch of Carmel delighted with a harmonica number and at the close Miss Eileen MacMullen staged a couple of games.

FIRST OF SERIES

partially through the committee stage.

Today the Commons will continue its deliberations over that bill, dispose of a few senate amendments to bills originating in the Commons, and then go on to debate the two biggest wheat bills, providing an acreage bonus and empowering the Canadian Wheat Board to pay an initial price of 70 cents a bushel, basis No. 1 Northern at Fort William.

The wheat bill approved yesterday provides government backing for co-operative wheat agencies, guaranteeing an initial payment of 60 cents a bushel on all wheat delivered to such agencies. This is an arrangement distinct from that proposed for the Wheat Board.

Placed Near Cash Basis

Agriculture Minister Gardiner predicted the co-operative bill, in conjunction with the acreage bonus bill, would place the average wheat producers on the prairies nearer a cash basis than he had ever been before, with a definite minimum income of which he would be assured.

Critics from the three opposition groups, Conservative, C.C.F. and Social Credit, were united in attacking the government's failure to effect the same results through the Wheat Board. C.C.F. spokesmen saw in the proposed marketing scheme, which will not likely come into effect this year, the exact opposite of co-operative marketing. It was contended that the intricate world wheat market could only be coped with successfully if Canadian wheat was marketed through one selling agency.

Mr. Gardiner recognized that a large proportion of farmers favored a producer-controlled central agency, rather than one controlled by parliament. His bill would not choke off any particular marketing method, he said.

Principle Wrong is Claim

T. L. Church (Cons.-Toronto-Broadview) said this was "the first of a series of Santa Claus bills" sponsored by the Minister. The principle was all wrong and he was completely opposed to them. The bill contemplated a form of insurance for agriculture but the industrial workers, who would have "to pay the shot for it," were told they had to wait until the royal commission on Dominion-Provincial relations reported before they could get unemployment insurance.

If this policy continued the government would soon have to raise the sales tax, the income tax and all other taxes. In an emergency year the policy might cost the treasury $100,000,000.

The greatest lobby in his parliamentary experience had been carried on in the last few months, organized by western interests to get the wheat price boosted "from 60 cents to 70 cents, 80 cents, 90 cents and goodness knows how high."

T. C. Douglas, (C.C.F.-Weyburn) could not see why the wheat board could not do all that was being proposed under this bill. He asked whether the Board would continue merely for another year, be held in the background for other emergency years or be used as a central agency for the pools.

The Minister said the difficulty in saying far in advance what policy might be. The Board was necessary to deal with present emergency conditions and was being continued for this year's crop. The new bill was not likely to come into effect as long as the price was on the upgrade as in recent months.

Against Set Price

"Does the government think there is only one way they can win the next election by putting a special set price on wheat?" asked Harry Clarke (Cons.-Toronto-Rosedale).

If the government would pay a little attention to "the rest of Canada" as well as to the Middle West it would be much better for it.

After the bill received third reading, Mr. Gardiner proceeded with the agricultural products co-operative marketing bill, designed to extend the same principle of a guaranteed initial price through co-operatives to other farm products in all parts of Canada.

The bill aimed to provide primary producers equal returns for agricultural products of like grade and quality, the Minister said.

The initial price was not to exceed 80 per cent of the average wholesale price for the three years preceding the year of production. Where the initial payment exceeded the average wholesale price obtained the difference would apply only if a proportion of producers in a certain area was judged sufficient by the Minister to justify application of the act in the interests of the primary producers.

Mr. Gardiner said farm organizations all across Canada could operate under the bill. At present one packing plant was operating cooperatively and practically all cheese factories were operated "more or less" on a cooperative basis.

Bill a Gesture

He was afraid the bill was more a gesture to the farmers on the eve of an election than anything else, doubtless because of the assistance offered the wheat producers, the Minister of Agriculture felt some consideration had to be given the mixed farmers.

Arthur Slaght, (Lib.-Parry Sound) asked if the Minister could consider including pulpwood in the act for many settlers depended on pulp for a large part of their income. He got no reply.

Hon. Earl Rowe (Cons.-Dufferin-Simcoe) questioned the government's purpose in leaving until the 11th hour, until the "dying days of a floundering government" such apparent attention to the needs of the mixed farmer.

The bill was conspicuous by the fact it failed to analyse the problem let alone offer a solution, he contended.

A Loss Leader

Agriculture had been a "loss leader to a haphazard economy." Had agriculture not taken the punishment it had in the last few years, the country would have been bankrupt. Many farmers on mixed farms had worked long hours for years for less a day than many would accept as relief in the cities.

A death bed repentance was better than none, so he was glad Mr. Gardiner was turning his eyes towards the mixed farmer even at this late date, said Mr. Rowe. The result was a "hysterical stampede towards a solution just before election."

If agriculture was to be supported from the public treasury, then the government must find markets for surplus products.

Mr. Rowe said he recognized the tremendous importance of wheat but Canada could no longer live by wheat alone. Wheat was now only 18 to 20 per cent of total agricultural production, but he heard wheat discussed incessantly in parliament and in parliamentary committees.

Pre-election Bid

This bill, he contended, was a pre-election bid to everyone, giving the Agriculture Minister a blank cheque to be filled out as he found expedient. It was government by arbitrary will of the Minister as contrasted to government by law.

Mr. Rowe declared the greatest camouflage in Canadian politics was "the great free trade bogey." He challenged any free trader in the House to rise and show himself. None did.

Mr. Slaght asked Mr. Rowe if he was using the "green light for truth or the red light for romance."

"There was little romance and less integrity in what my friend said during the last Ontario election," said Mr. Rowe, "when he told the electors a vote for Earl Rowe would mean their stocks would drop 15 per cent."

"Are you against the bill?" asked a Liberal.

"Yes, I'm against the bill," he replied. "Because it is a goosestep plan for the individual instead of a plan for world competition."

J. F. Pouliot, (Lib.-Temiscouata) said he thought Sir Wilfred Laurier had meant well by creating the provinces of Alberta and Saskatchewan but "they are costing us so much now by loans, grants and guarantees."

"Would it not be better to make these provinces territories again with commissions running them?" he asked.

M. J. Coldwell, (C.C.F. Rosetown-Biggar) wondered what would happen to the eastern dairy industry if westerners took the advice of Mr. Rowe, forgot wheat and confined themselves to dairy production.

ON THE EVE OF THE ROYAL JOURNEY

Tomorrow will be one of the most eventful days in the lives of Their Majesties King George Sixth and Queen Elizabeth, Princesses Elizabeth and Margaret Rose, Queen Mary and other members of the Royal Family, the people of the United Kingdom and Ireland, the people of Canada and of every Dominion and Colony and the United States, for on Saturday the British Sovereigns sail from England for Canada on the Empress of Australia, escorted by two British cruisers. In a few hours the Sovereigns will begin their journey which will keep them out of the United Kingdom for more than a month.

The world of English speaking peoples is athrill with interest at this time as the momentous journey begins. It is the highest honor Their Majesties can bestow upon a Dominion and Canadians are appreciative of this mark of royal interest. The world will think in the last hours before the King and Quen set sail how they are to be eparated from their two daughters, the Princess Elizabeth and Margaret Rose, who are to remain at home during the first protracted absence of their parents.

In that month and more, all Canada will be rejoicing in welcome and homage to their noble rulers. Millions of Canadians in many centres will gather to pay honor to the visiting heads of the Empire. Then for some days the United States will be en fete as the royal party crosses the Canadian-American border to become the guests of the great Republic and of President and Mrs. Roosevelt.

There are the normal human aspects of the royal tour and there are the state angles to this memorable event. Who does not picture the Princesses in these last hours, excited and thrilled with the thought of the grand tour their parents will make, or the King and Queen on this the eve of their departure, with the innumerable matters which come to their attention, and with their farewells, particularly their separation from their family, the Queen Mother, and their Royal Highnesses, the sister and brothers of the King, the Queen's separation from her own kindred and all are thinking of the long series of events which await the King and Queen as they cross a continent Dominion, stretching for four thousand miles from the Atlantic Ocean to the Pacific Ocean—and from the Canadian-American border to the northernmost parts along the Arctic Ocean.

Their Majesties in their mind's eye, have a complete impression of the Canada they are to see with its romantic history which deserves more attention than Canadians have been paying it, and its wealth in a happy and fortunate people and in its treasures of lakes, rivers, forest, soil and rocks. Above all they have a vision of the people who live in Canada, bound by ties of love to Britain with whose history the family of the King has been associated since the earliest days of Britain, dating back far beyond Alfred the Great, the ruler who gave the first impetus to the royal navy.

The days ahead are rich in thoughts that will surge through the hearts of King and Queen and the people in the United Kingdom and Ireland, Canada and the other Dominions of the Empire. These thoughts are of the very life and air British people breathe. They will be days of lasting impression upon Canada and the United States as well as the British Isles. They will present a view to the world what Empire in the British sense means, a tie of free states which is indissoluble, not because it is prevented by law and power but because it is cemented by love and liberty.

Canadians feel as their Sovereigns come they are a blessed people in the freedom they have, within an Empire, for the Mother Country asks no recompense for what she has done for the Dominions. The British Empire is a human family as the late King George Fifth saw it and in a family there is sacrifice and there is love.

An English poet once wrote, "Nor England did I think till then, what love I bore to thee." The same sentiment might be paraphrased by Canadians to refer to the present occasion for the royal visit will intensify the emotions of the people of Canada, and their love for the Motherland. The coming of the King and Queen is a great Empire event and an occasion when Canadians will entertain their beloved rulers for their own sakes because of their charming personalities and because of what they represent.

THE TOUCH OF THE MASTER'S HAND

'Twas battered and scarred, and the auctioneer
Thought it scarcely worth his while
To waste much time on the old violin,
But held it up with a smile;
"What am I bidden, good folks," he cried.
"Who'll start bidding for me?"
"A dollar, a dollar — now two, only two
Two dollars and who'll make it three?"
"Three dollars, one, three dollars twice
Going for three"—but no!
From the room far back a gray haired man
Came forward nad picked up the bow
Then wiping the dust from the old violin
And tightening up all the strings,
He played a melody, pure and sweet,
As sweet as an angel sings.
The music ceased and the auctioneer,
With a voice that was quiet and low
Said: "Now what am I bid for the old violin?"
And he held it up with the bow.
"A thousand dollars—and who'll make it two?"
Two thousand—and who'll make it three?
Three thousand once, three thousand twice—
And going—and gone," said he.
The people cheered, but some of them cried,
"We do not quite understand—
What changed its worth?" The man replied:
"The touch of a master's hand."
And many a man with a life out of tune,
And battered and torn with sin,
Is auctioned cheap to a thoughtless crowd,
Much like the old violin.
A "mess of pottage," a glass of wine,
A game—and he travels on.
He's going once and going twice,
He's going—and almost gone!
But the Master comes, and the foolish crowd
Never can quite understand,
The worth of a soul, and the change that's wrought
By the touch of the Master's hand.

SIDELIGHT FAN SUGGESTS THAT WE GIVE SOME ONE A POKE IN THE SNOUT, meaning that the column is too pacific, and that a more militant attitude would make the column more interesting. Take a poke at me, if you like, said the fan. Trouble is that this poking business is a boomerang and to take a poke at people means that people will take two or more pokes at us. Not that we're afraid of that, particularly, but when things are moving along fairly pleasant it is easier to say pleasing things, try to extract humor from sunbeams nad cucumbers, and pursue a peaceful path. Contentious questions make us skittish, but if the customers insist we will have to try a few pokes here and there. So cheer up, the worst is yet to come—A poke a day might keep the megrims away.

FAT IS LIKE MONEY IN THE BANK, according to a doctor's paper read before a convention of biochemists in Toronto. The author of the paper said: "If you are accumulating a little fat at your waist line there is no immediate need to become alarmed because you are simply putting money in the bank as a reserve against a rainy day." Fat is a reserve force which the system draws upon when the usual strength producing elements slow up or cease to function. Time to change the slogan "Nobody loves a fat man," for the fat men and women have all the best of it. Present health and fatty reserves for a rainy day, if the expert on fat is correct.

Trailer Travel

Gettysburg, Pa., May 1, 1939 — Spring is late in the southern part of the State of Pennsylvania. While this Trailer Travel is headed for Gettysburg, it is being written in Sunbury, Pa., as a rather important service station manager at Gettysburg wanted to put me up an alley while I worked. We intended to write it at Frederick, Maryland. Parked in the city parking park (free parking) some city official, we have no doubt, of a very thrifty turn of mind snapped off the current just at dusk so your friendly Trailer Travelling Reporter was like Moses "In the Dark." However we got a break as we had just finished "Mow'n them Down" with an electric razor. We were pretty sore about this thrifty treatment so putting on a topcoat against the chilly night we fully intended to find the Chief Magistrate but ran into a police officer at the main corners of the city. This officer 63, has been on these corners for 17 years. Frederick, Md. has no pension plan for the police. This man has saved up $7,000.00 so is looking for a small business, just to make a living as he informed me, as the city can dispense with his services at any moment. We became friends quickly as he spent a month in Miami in January at a cottage close to Ollie Trout's Trailer Paradise where we were parked up for three months. His wife is all for travelling by trailer. You know, they say, a woman "Always gets her way" so Police Officer Miller of the Frederick, Md., police force is greatly interested in trailers. He has an Olds so is all set to go when the trailer materializes. Some men are fortunate in marriage.

There was a frost in Sunbury last night. Potato planting is late. Generally done in April about here. Apple blossoms are fully out and in some cases the petals falling. We noticed dandelions gone to seed which we always mark up in Ontario as the first [illegible] of Spring. Dog Wood and Red Bud are beautiful in the State of Virginia. Travelling slowly from the Deep South of Florida where the sun shines hot, where the oranges and grapefruit still hang on the groves your Travelling Reporter passes from lovely summer in tropical surroundings to gradually changing climate conditions. In Georgia the scene starts to change. Mules and colored farm hands start to show up. In South Carolina wheat is headed but and turning, green oats are being taken in as you approach North Carolina. Green peas in hampers stand along the highway ready to be picked up by trucks for northern markets. Virginia is busy setting out tobacco plants. In this state you first feel the air of the north. Near Bishopville, S. C., we stopped to have a chat with five colored boys who were ploughing up a large acreage. Each had a mule with the exception of one who had a horse. We thought we would find out which was the best to work, a mule or a horse. On stepping across the ditch into the field suddenly our legs felt as if someone was sticking pins into them. Upon looking we found we had stepped on a small red ants' nest and were being eaten alive; brother we very nearly tore off our pants on this busy artery leading to the north. Telling my story to a Georgian he drawled out the information those ants were sure hard to get "Shut of."

From Harrisburg, Pa., to this point the last 50 miles is over a branch of Alleghany Mountains, following the Susquehanna River. We are now about to enter the hard coal section of Pennsylvania, Danville — Bloomsburg — Berwick — Wilkes-Barre — Scranton. Pa. is an important state with an estimated population of some 11,000,000. At Forty-Fort some 70 miles ahead we have an invitation to stop over and visit one of the largest coal mines in that district.

Without reflection on Belleville the Beautiful or our Chief Kidd and Officers we write what we think a Hick Town is:

"A Hick Town is a place that builds sidewalks so pedestrians can escape from automobiles and be run down by BICYCLES". So long Folks as your friendly Trailer Travelling Commentator will proceed to Forty-Fort, Pa. (so called as during the Civil War 40 citizens decided to remain and defend a Fort), to inspect a large hard coal mine.

Surgery in Severe Cases of Epilepsy

Many of us who have followed the treatment now given to prevent attacks of epilepsy, or if not prevented the number and severity of attacks is lessened, have perhaps believed that this treatment was effective in all cases. That there are some cases not reached by the three diet methods and phenobarbital is only too true. Surgery is now used in cases that cannot be helped by other methods.

The diet treatment is—

(a) —Cut down on all starch foods—bread, sugar, potatoes, pastry.

(b)—Cut down on all liquids—water, tea, coffee, milk, and all soft and hard drinks.

(c)— Increase the fat foods — cream, butter, fat meat, egg yolks.

To these diet rules is added a daily dose of phenobarbital as prescribed by the physician.

While the cause in most cases of epilepsy is unknown, a cause in a number of cases is damage to a part of the brain, either by a fall or by infection which has arisen in some other part of the body and has found its way to the brain by the blood stream.

After mentioning some 'tests' which help to show that there is some damage in a portion of the brain, including Xrays, Dr. J. P. Evans, Cincinnati, in Ohio State Medical Journal, says:

"Before the complete surgical operation to remove this damaged part is undertaken, this part should be stimulated by electricity. If this stimulation causes an epileptic attack, the surgeon is justified in removing the damaged portion of the brain."

However, before even this test is made, Dr. Evans states that the patient should be given a thorough trial of phenobarbital or other "quieting" drugs, party to avoid unnecessary operation, partly to prove that any quieting drug used after the operation is not bringing the benefit instead of the operation itself.

The aim of the operation is to remove the damaged part of the brain, leaving a lessened degree of damage than was caused by the original injury.

The thought then is when the above diet and drug treatment does not bring relief to epileptics, damage from injury or infection may be the cause. And if by careful tests this is believed to be the cause, surgery offers a fair chance of relief.

GLANCE AT POWER

In a despatch to the Hum Hector C. Bywater, the British naval expert, refused to get excited over the present manoeuvres of the German fleet around Gibraltar and in the Mediterranean. The German navy always manoeuvred in those waters prior to the Spanish civil war, he wrote, and on this occasion informed the British Admiralty several weeks ago of its intention to resume its former practice.

It is possible, of course, to make a more sinister interpretation of the facts. But even this interpretation leaves Mr. Bywater's calm still unrufffled. The Italian navy as it now exists in the Mediterranean, is little more than a nuisance to Great Britain's fleet there. It could not survive more than six weeks or two months at most in the event of a general war. The addition of the German fleet would alter the situation, but not materially. The facts he says, are fully known to the professional strategists in Berlin and Rome.

There is nothing new in all this, of course. But since there has been, in this country, a growing tendency to discount British naval might and to accept as an awful truth the pretended omnipotence of the axis, it is well to have the actual situation set forth in such simple and understandable terms. Sea power is still a prime factor in the situation, and it is one that, in the event of a long war, grows steadily more important. —Baltimore Sun.

THE BUSY MAYOR

When fire broke out in the Glass Centre at the Fair Mayor LaGuardia was at Radio City. He got to the fire before the firemen had finished their work. Next morning the first of the new express trains between Flushing and Times Square left Main street, Flushing, at 6:25. The Mayor was a passenger.

Running through the printed accounts of his activities during the month of April, one finds the mayor always there when needed. During the month he has flown to Burlington, Vt., and back to negotiate an airline contract for the North Beach airport; he has intervened to settle a plumbers' strike and avoid a building service strike; he has personally inspected the buses which will carry people around the Fair grounds; with Mrs. La Guardia he attended the Easter dawn services in Central Park, in spite of rain, sleet and high winds; he and Mrs. La Guardia found time to escort Marian Anderson to a reception in her honor after her Carnegie Hall concert; he took occasion to deliver a talk at the commencement exercises of the Police Academy.—N.Y. Times.

BARN RADIOS

Salesmen for radio sets might gain new inspiration from the statement of a Kitchener district farm woman who says that milk production on her farm has been considerably increased since she installed a radio in the barn.

This agriculturist had read that cows are fond of music and so she proceeded to put the theory to the test. She now asserts that in the several months since she introduced the music the nine cows have responded by giving a total increase of a pail of milk a day. It is also said that the horses are pleased with the music and one of them dances when the harmony is turned on.

Stores engaged in the merchandising of radios can visualize the opening of a new field for their wares. If the livestock responds as well as this Kitchener farm woman says it does, there ought to be quite a thriving business in providing the instruments that will accelerate milk production and get the horses performing to the latest allurements of swing.—Woodstock Sentinel Review.

HYMN OF HATE

In their current anti-British campaign the Nazis are reviving old war-time hatreds and such slogans as "Gott strafe England!" Are they likely to revive the most celebrated anti-British ballad ever composed—the notorious "Hymn of Hate," written just twenty-five years ago? Perhaps not, because its composer, Ernest Lissauer, was of Jewish extraction. He died quite recently, and was said to have greatly regretted the song that became so widely known.

His "Hymn of Hate Against England" ("Hassgesang gegen England") was first published — appropriately enough, as it now seems—at Munich in 1914, and at once swept over the Kaiser's Germany. It was sung, declaimed, and recited everywhere—in theatres, streets and houses—and was included in school song books. The composer, a private in the army, was decorated with the Iron Cross.

It sizzled with hatred for this country — "the perfidious Power which stands by the grey flood, full of envy, full of rage, full of craft, full of guile"—and declared that Germany had but one single foe—England. Its famous refrain thundered:

We have all but a single hate.
We love as one—we hate as one.
We have one foe and one alone—
England!

No doubt it would come in very handy, with some Germans at present—but for those unfortunate non-Aryan associations. — Manchester Guardian.

FISH CHARMER

Tom Mackay, drum major of the Highland Pipe Band, claims he charms fish with bagpipes. He said that recently, with other members of the band, he was having a barren day's fishing from the rocks at Kilcare.

To fill in the time he had a little bagpipe practice. Within 30 minutes, to the strains of Maids of Kintail, 20 fish were caught, one weighing 50 pounds.

Mackay said some time ago, when playing the pipes along the banks of a small creek, he saw half a dozen reptiles with their heads above the water swaying to and fro. They were following in the direction he was walking.— Australian Press Bureau.

Let's All Get Together In Clean Up Campaign

Clean Up, Paint Up, Plant Up, and all the other ups are now to the fore, and with spring well advanced and fine weather present and prospective householders and business men get the urge to Brighten Up, Paint Up, Clean Up, and Plant Up. Hence the Belleville Chamber of Commerce will launch the annual spring clean up campaign Monday next for a Paint Up, Clean Up, Plant Up Campaign which will if fully co-operated in make Belleville the Spotless Town it deserves to be. Canada is preparing to present its brightest face for the visit of the King and Queen and even if Their Majesties do not stop here we will have the satisfaction of being prepared should they change their minds, or circumstances permit a change of plans to include Belleville. In any event this Clean Up, Paint Up, Plant Up, Campaign will make us feel better, look better and contribute to better health, better times and better feeling.

This is a campaign in which every citizen has a part and the Chamber of Commerce will appreciate active assistance, helpful suggestions, and co-operation all along the line.

His Worship Mayor Bone has issued a proclamation asking all citizens to cooperate in this Campaign.

Let's get together.

PAINT UP! CLEAN UP! PLANT UP

History Up to Date, New Modern Encyclopedia Is Now Available

Ontario Intelligencer Readers Get New Publication at Reduced Price. "A Book a Week" Habit Begins Strong and is Growing Every day. Brisk Demand for Volume No. 1

Great interest is being taken in the offer to readers of this newspaper of the new Standard American Encyclopedia at a price which amounts to little more than a gift. Brisk demand for Volume 1 has developed and recipients are delighted with the book which more than bears out advance notices.

Many readers are no doubt planning to get A BOOK A WEEK habit, using the Courtesy Coupon in the large newspaper announcement for Volume 1, and saving five regular coupons from the Daily Ontario Intelligencer for Volume 2 and succeeding volumes until the entire set of fifteen volumes is acquired.

With the Courtesy Coupon and 59c Volume 1 is acquired, while five regular coupons and 59c will secure each succeeding volume.

The set comprises 15 volumes and will be made available to all readers of this paper on the book-a-week plan. You sign no contract and you are not obligated to continue getting a book a week if you decide to discontinue getting them. But once you get Volume 1 we are sure you will not want to miss the other succeeding volumes — the value is so exceptional.

Over 50,000 subjects are dealt with and the set contains over 5,000 illustrations. The binding is most attractive, and the set will make a handsome addition to your book shelf. It is something you will be proud to own. It will be the envy and admiration of all your friends, who will be amazed when you tell them how little it cost you.

This is how the book-a-week plan works. All you need do is to save a coupon a day out of the Ontario Intelligencer and present these coupons together with the small additional sum required to any of the redemption stations which will be listed in the paper next week.

If you are a regular subscriber to the paper you may obtain the complete set right away if you especially desire it, but we wish to point out that it will cost you the same whether you get it all at once, or on the book-a-week plan.

The set is thoroughly international in its scope, the British Empire and Canada in particular, being given the prominence which we as Canadians think it deserves. There are no less than six pages devoted to the Coronation of our present King and two whole pages are devoted to pictures of the Royal Family.

Volume 1 contains many things of interest to us. With world events moving so rapidly, the 16 full page coloured maps contained therein show at a glance just where the changes in frontiers are taking place. It also gives the complete story of the abdication of King Edward the VIII, one of the most sensational events in the history of the Empire and certainly in our times. You probably heard his speech over the air, but have forgotten the actual words, even though you may have retained the memory of the main points of the speech itself. (You will find the complete speech in Volume 1)

And in the same volume you will find also the Story of the history of Abyssinia, the history of Aviation, of Agriculture and a host of other things of equal interest and importance to young and old alike.

Point Anne

Point Anne—On Tuesday evening May 2nd, a large crowd numbering about 200 gathered in the Parish Hall to honor Mr. and Mrs. Frank Insley, bride and groom. The early evening was spent in progressive euchre. The prize-winners were Ladies 1st, Mrs. Ray Gilmour, 2nd, Mrs. J. R. MacDonald. consolation, Mrs. John Maher; Gents 1st, Joe DeForge, 2nd, Geo. MacLaughlin, consolation, Nelson Burshaw.

Following cards Mr. and Mrs. Insley were called to the platform by Mr. A. B. Charlton and the following address was read:

Point Anne,
May 2, 1939.

Dear Frank and Gladys,—

We, your friends of Point Anne are gathered here tonight for the purpose of wishing you success and happiness on your matrimonial career. It sure takes a lot of courage to start married life these days.

You, Gladys, are a stranger here in our vicinity but should you take up residence in our village you need not be a stranger very long. You will find the people in this village to be very sociable if you are the same. We are satisfied that you must be just about right or you would not have been Mrs. Frank Insley. And you (Dick) we know all about you. Of course there is always a little bit of bad in every good little boy and all the bad there is in you we are sure that Gladys will soon take it out of you. You have always been ready to lend a hand in sports, in church and community work, and now we desire to present to you these gifts, not for their intrinsic value, but as a slight token of our esteem and we hope you will accept in the same spirit as they were given.

Rev. T. Lally, S.J., of the Martyrs' Shrine, Midland, is spending a few days in the city.

Major Harry Walker, who spent the winter months in Florida and the Southern States is the week-end guest of Mr. and Mrs. R. A. Bull, 265 Charles Street.

A communication received in the city yesterday brought word that the condition of Mr. George Beare, vocational instructor at Belleville Collegiate Institute, who underwent a serious operation in Toronto Western Hospital recently, is improving satisfactorily.

At the home of Mrs. R. A. Flynn, Queen Street, yesterday, the very successful afternoon tea, sponsored by the Catholic Women's League, was held in aid of St. Michael's Girl Guides. The door was opened to the many visitors by little Miss Mary Flynn. Mrs. A. B. Collins, president of the C.W.L., assisted Mrs. Flynn in receiving and Mrs. E. J. Butler invited the guests to the dining room. Colorful Spring flowers in profusion were used in the decoration of the living room, while the tea table with its handsome lace cloth, centrepiece of crimson roses and blending tapers made a charming picture. Mrs. W. F. Allore and Mrs. J. L. Callaghan poured tea. Mrs. G. Wilson, Mrs. F. Fitzpatrick and Mrs. J. M. Trumbach assisted while members of the Girl Guides in their smart school uniforms were attentive tea assistants and included Misses Jean Allore, Grace Wilkinson, Shirley Johnson, Lorraine Dell, Eurithe Parkhurst, Betty Raycroft, Shirley Meagher, Marie Chappelle, Rita Frawley and Mary McDougall. Mrs. P. E. Doyle was in charge of the home cooking assisted by Misses Marie Carey and Barbara Flurey and Mrs. D. Donoghue was treasurer of the tea. The St. Michael's Girl Guides, a recently formed company is in charge of Captain Peggy Webster. Drawing was made yesterday for a quilt on which chances had been sold. The lucky winner was Mrs. Fleming, 119 Victoria Ave.

Weddings

COOK—GRAY

Shannonville, (Special)— A very pretty wedding was quietly solemnized in Deseronto on Wednesday afternoon, when Miss Violet Gray, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George Gray of Belleville, was united in marriage to Mr. Ray Cook, son of Mr. and Mrs. Hudson Cook of Shannonville.

The wedding ceremony was held at the home of the Rev. W. H. Clarke of Deseronto and was performed by Mr. Clarke.

Immediately following the wedding ceremony the happy couple left on a wedding trip throughout various Ontario cities. On their return they will reside in the village.

OSBORNE—HUBBEL

On Wednesday, May 3rd., at 393 Front Street, Belleville, Joseph Frank Osborne and Mary Eleanor Hubbel of Campbellford, were united in matrimony by Rev. L. M. Sharpe of Fenelon Falls, Ont.

PARR—HAY

Rawdon, (Special)—A very pretty wedding of local interest took place on Wednesday, May 3rd, at eleven o'clock at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Andrew Hay, Rawdon, when their only daughter, Florence, was united in marriage to Kenneth Edwin Parr, son of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Parr of Hoard's Station.

Twenty-five relatives and friends were present. The Rev. J. A. MacMillan, Burnbrae, officiated at the ceremony which took place beneath an arch of evergreens banked with flowers. The bride given in marriage by her father entered to the strains of Lohengrin's Bridal Chorus played by Mrs. J. A. MacMillan. The bride looked charming in an ankle length gown of turquoise blue net over taffeta with matching bolero and a full length veil of silk tulle. She carried a bouquet of Sweetheart roses and Baby's breath.

Miss Maudie Hay was her cousin's bridesmaid. She was gowned in an ankle length frock of pink satin. Her bouquet was of Sweetheart roses and maiden hair fern. Mr. Everett Parr was his brother's groomsman. During the signing of the register Miss Fern Weatherill of Burnbrae, sang "O Perfect Love".

Following the ceremony a dinner was served by Misses Fern Hubble, Ethel McDonald, Essie McQuigge and Thelma Wallace. The table decorations were in pink and white with a large bell suspended over the centre of it.

The happy couple left amid showers of confetti and good wishes on a trip to Kingston and points east. The bride travelled in a Queen's blue dress and coat with navy accessories. Upon their return they will reside on the groom's farm at Hoard's.

The groom's gift to the bride was a travelling case, to the bridesmaid and soloist lockets and to Mrs. J. A. MacMillan a purse.

Kitchen Shower For Bride-Elect

The members of the Alert Bible Class of Cannifton gathered on Monday evening to honor Miss Anne Savage, a bride-to-be of this week.

After playing several games, the following address was read by Mrs. Gerald Brenton.

Dear Anne:—

Hearing of your approaching marriage the members of the Alert Bible Class of Cannifton have gathered here to spend a social time before you depart from this community.

Although we have known you a comparatively short time Anne, you have been a willing worker in our Sunday School class and other activities. We will miss you and we all wish you much happiness and prosperity in your new home. As you are not going very far we hope you will visit us often.

Let's live each moment to the full,
For though they soon are gone,
Piled up, they'll make us quite a part
To build our future on.

On behalf of the Alert Class, we ask you to accept these and may they remind you of Cannifton.

The bride-to-be was then presented with a large basket to overflowing, with a large variety of kitchen necessities.

After unwrapping them she very graciously thanked the class and everyone sang "For She is a 'Jolly Good Fellow". A dainty lunch was then served.

ST. ANDREW'S W.M.S.

St. Andrew's W.M.S. met in the S.S. room on Wednesday, May 3, Mrs. Fargey presiding and Mrs. Mantel at the piano. After the opening hymn "When Mothers of Salem", Mrs. Worrell led in prayer. Mrs. C. Barager read the Scripture lesson. Regret was expressed for the unavoidable absence from the meeting of a very active member in the person of Mrs. Morrice.

The business reports were given as usual by Mrs. Fleming and Mrs. Ranson. Both reports showing increased interest in the W.M.S.

Then came the reports of the Provincial annual meeting held in St. Paul's Presbyterian Church, Hamilton, in April, by Mrs. Fargey, and Mrs. Ranson, who were the delegates at that meeting. A vote of thanks was given for their splendid reports and the remainder of the meeting was placed in the hands of group leader, Mrs. C. Barager.

Mrs. Barager had prepared a fine paper on the Study Book "Moving Millions" which book is the centre of interest in the Society for 1939.

Tea was served in the Ladies' parlour, Miss Fargey and Mrs. Ranson assisting Mrs. Barager.

Allan Mills

Allan's Mills — Mrs. Percy Bateman is spending a few days with her father, Mr. Fred Fenn of Springbrook who is seriously ill.

Mr. and Mrs. Phil Ray and Mrs. M. E. Hogle visited Mr. and Mrs. A. Burkitt on Sunday.

Maple Leaf Cheese Factory opened on May 1st.

Mr. and Mrs. Wm. McComb were Sunday visitors at Mr. and Mrs. Anderson's of Stamwood.

Mrs. J. S. McKeown, Mrs. Fred McKeown, Mrs. D. Wellman, and Mrs. A. Burkitt attended the W. I. at the home of Mrs. Geo. Eastwood on Wednesday afternoon.

A miscellaneous shower was held on Friday night at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Thos. Hannah in honor of Mr. and Mrs. Anson Grant. A very enjoyable evening was spent in cards and dancing. The bride and groom received many beautiful gifts.

Mr. and Mrs. Dave Wellman spent Monday and Tuesday in Toronto.

The W. I. auditors, Mrs. Fred McKeown and Mrs. A. Burkitt, met at the home of Mrs. W. J. Barlow on Monday evening.

Famous Authority on Problems of Love and Marriage.

Ideals Pay in Girlhood

Dear Miss Fairfax

I had to work too hard as a girl to afford dressing well enough to attract boy friends, as most of my earnings were given to my widowed mother to help out at home. Finally I gave up trying to get a college education, and my great ambition to be a doctor.

I met a man sixteen years older than I am, but hardly noticed the difference in our ages, as I never had any jolly, youthful times in my life. This letter is in confirmation of something you said in a recent article that it pays a girl to be good if she expects to make a happy marriage."

My husband said that was why he was attracted to me, that he knew I'd make a faithful wife because I was not what is called "easy". My husband says "A man expects to have his fun—but he wants the girl he marries to be straight." He also says that his past is none of my concern. And when I get thinking over this, I can't help a lonely feeling that he shared his youth with other women.

I really am happy in my simple way and much in love. But sometimes can't help feeling a tingle of jealousy when I think about my husband's earlier years.

"Nice Girl".

A good many women feel as you do, my dear, when their husbands tell them the past is none of their concern. But I'm afraid that nothing can be done about it, as things go in this troublous world.

Multitudes of women would bless their fate, if they could be as sure as you are of their husbands' fidelity, after marriage. Please let me quote, for your benefit: "Take the good the gods provide thee."

Symptoms Running True to Form

Dear Miss Fairfax

Sometimes when I call she treats me most hospitably. At other times she acts in a very distant manner, and is ready to pick a quarrel. Yet, if I stay away from her home altogether, she starts a series of discreet inquiries to know the cause of my absence.

When in a good humor she takes a keen interest in my career, my personal affairs, even my dress. But if I praise another girl before her, she'll do everything possible to turn me against the young lady. Are these symptoms of love, and what makes her so changeable in her various attitudes?

Perplexed

You have described to perfection all the elements that go into the making of a first love affair. I could quote you yards of poetry to the effect "Oh, woman, in our hours of ease, uncertain, coy, and hard to please." But I'll spare you. Don't lose any sleep over this young lady's mood. She's probably saving even your old cigarettes stubs.

A Nice Crowd

Dear Miss Fairfax

Recently in your column there was a letter signed "In Doubt", asking if parties could be successful without kissing games. We think so; to us it's childish and silly.

We ar a group of girls around 17. We have parties once a week, dance, eat and perhaps we may kiss the one and only goodnight, but no kissing games.

A Nice Crowd

Congratulations on having found what is known as "good, clean fun." Kissing games are decidedly outmoded. And if you get tired of ball-room dancing, why not learn some good folk dancing? Folk-dancing is very popular just now.

Formal Wedding Invitations

If your wedding is to be a large formal wedding, the correct way of inviting the guests is by engraved invitations. The paper is a double white or ivory sheet, of fine quality. There are a variety of correct sizes. Very popular now is the small size, which fits unfolded into the envelope. The paper may or may not have a panel . . . to my taste it is handsomer when it doesn't. The size of the enclosed cards must correspond to the size of the sheet.

For mailing wedding invitations, there are two envelopes. The inner envelope (with unmucilaged flap) contains the invitation and any cards that are sent with the invitation. On the outer envelope are the name and address; on the inner envelope only the name of the guest or guests.

The sheets and envelopes cost so much per hundred; then there is the cost of the engraving plate, and of the engraving. In the making of the plate, shaded letters are charged for by the letter, and script is usually charged for by the line.

A conservative style of engraving should be used. Script is always correct, and is less expensive than shaded letters. At the moment, the style of shaded letter most in fashion is Shaded Antique Roman, with Shaded Modified Roman and plain and shaded block letters as other popular and correct choices.

The following is the typical invitation form:

Mr. and Mrs. George Pierce Graham request the honour of your presence at the marriage of their daughter Dorothy to Mr. Alexander Bryant
on Tuesday, the sixth of June
at half after four o'clock
Grace Church
Haven, New York

The formal reception card reads

Mr. and Mrs. George Pierce Graham request the pleasure of your company
on Tuesday, the sixth of June at five o'clock
The Haven Country Club
The favour of a reply is requested to Ten Prospect Street

If an At Home card is enclosed with the invitation, it does not carry the name, since the bride-elect has not yet acquired her married name. It reads—

At Home
after the first of July
Four Hundred Day Street
Buffalo, New York

When You Start to Go . . . Go!

Guests who take forever to leave a party are social pests. They are the despair of a hostess. They say "good-bye". They start toward the door. They keep on talking to the hostess, although it should be obvious to them that she wishes to return to her other guests. They think of one more thing to say, another thing to say, another thing to say. They may even sit down again, and begin another topic of conversation. The hostess is stymied . . . . she must smile, if she can, and take it. I have never been able to solve this problem of the start-and-stop guest. Have you?

Annual Ladies' Night Sponsored by Tweed Masons

Tweed — The Annual Masonic Ladies' Night, sponsored by Tweed Lodge No. 239, A. F. and A. M., was held on Friday evening. There was an attendance of about three hundred members and their families, all of whom greatly enjoyed an evening with Ralph Gordon, entertainer of Toronto. Mr. Gordon, a poet of no mean order, sometimes referred to as the Canadian Edgar Guest, quoted some of his original poems.

Mr. Edward Rath, W. M., welcomed the members and their guests and introduced Mr. Gordon who gave a varied programme of cartoons, impersonations and sleight-of-hand feats.

The following was the program Rag Picture cartoons, R. Gordon Original poems; Orchestral selection. The Austin family, Wooler Song "Old Soldiers", impersonation; Orchestral selection; Impersonation and sleight-of-hand; Ventriloquist act.

Following the programme dancing and cards were enjoyed. Lunch was served at the conclusion.

The annual meeting of Tweed Parks Commission was held on Monday evening with Mr. W. S. Gordon in the chair. Following the minutes of the last annual meeting, the officers for 1939 were elected:

Chairman, W. S. Gordon (re-elected); Secretary, S. H. Connor; Treasurer, G. D. C. Morton (re-elected); Dance Committee, T. N. Beatty, G. D. C. Morton, Joe Fobert; Grounds Committee, S. B. Rollins, chairman, W. S. Gordon, Jas. Ryan, C. H. Kerr, S. H. Connor.

Receipts for the year were, — Dancing $831.03; other receipts, $110.25.

Expenses were as follows: — Dancing $565.14; other expenses $539.70, leaving a net operating loss of $163.56.

During the year a great deal of work was done in the eastern section including an extensive filling and levelling project, and the construction of a retaining wall from cement blocks obtained from the old Hub factory.

Mr. Jas. Lowry was engaged as caretaker of the Park for the year. His excellent services for the past year were favorably commented upon by several members of the Board.

The Parks Board voted an additional grant of $20 to Tweed Horticultural Society towards their expenditures for plants and shrubs for the Park. The Board referred to their indebtedness to the Horticultural Society for their work over a period of years in beautifying the Park.

MOHAWK W. I.

Tyendinaga Reserve — The fourth annual meeting of the Mohawk Women's Institute was held at the Council House on April 26th, with 16 members present and visitors. The teachers of the Reserve and the girls of the February Short Course who exhibited dresses, slips, blouses made of materials given them by the branch. The meeting opened in the usual way by singing the ode and repeating the Lord's prayer. The president, Mrs. Eade, thanked all for help during the year and read a short piece of poetry, "What Kind".

After all reports and business of the past year had been dispensed with Mrs. R. H. Hill was asked to take the chair and conducted the election which resulted as follows:

President, Mrs. Eade; 1st. Vice President, Mrs. H. Claus; 2nd Vice President Mrs. R. Hennon; Secretary, Miss Eliza Bell; Treasurer, Miss Beatrice Maracle; District Director, Mrs. E. Amey; Cheer convener, Mrs. Benson Brant; Social convener, Mrs. Clarence Brant; Pianist, Mrs. J. C. Brant; Press Reporter, Mrs. R. H. Hill; Auditors, Mrs. E. Harvey, Miss Doris Brant.

It was decided to put on a flower exhibit at the Fall Fair and Mrs. Claus, Mrs. L. Maracle, Mrs. S. Maracle and Mrs. J. A. Brant were appointed to look after the purchase of seeds and bulbs and the exhibit, also a demonstration of Indian work on Fair Day, Mrs. R. H. Hill to be in charge.

Winners of prizes on the sewing were as follows:

Dresses: Sara Hill, Doris Brant, Mary Maracle.

Aprons: Norma Maracle, Bernice Maracle, Keitha Lewis.

Jumper: Marguerite Whalen.

Blouses: Myrtle Maracle, Velma Maracle, Ruth Brant, Lorraine Doreen.

Slip: Lizzie Hill.

The program consisted of a piano solo by Mrs. J. A. Brant; reading, Mrs. E. Harvey.

The Branch donated a quilt to the Boy Scouts to be sold to help purchase uniforms that they might go to Kingston when the King and Queen visit that city May 21st. Mr. Leslie Claus, Scout Master, thanked the W. I. for their donation. The meeting closed by singing the National Anthem.

MISS NAPOLEON

By Violet M. Methley

"Well, I don't know that we Americans have much cause to complain— and you're fifty per cent American," Hall argued.

"Mr. Hall. I'm not fifty per cent American in anything that matters. I am all French? And now— where will you take me tomorrow? Remember, I've so much to learn and so little time."

CHAPTER VII

"India—Grim Stepmother of Our Kind"

Pathapore was not a picturesque nor romantically situated station. The cantonments looked like a child's brick buildings dumped in the middle of the plain's flatness, with the untidy muddle of the native bazaar some little distance away. In neither was there a single structure of any architectural value; even the Club was an unpretentious red-and-white bungalow, with grounds which showed no sign of blossoming like a rose in the desert.

Beyond the Club, beyond the barracks at the extreme edge where the cantonments met the plain, with a dusty road running northwards across it like an unrolled tape measure, stood a small bungalow whose compound showed more than a feeble attempt at cultivation. There was a bed of pansies, mignonette and wallflowers, all seeming rather to deprecate their presence in this strange land, while a jasmine tree flung itself recklessly over the veranda, and shed a galaxy of starry flowers upon the ground beneath.

There were orange and red croton lilies in tubs sunk into the ground, and a gardener squatting before a small flower-bed was gravely inserting into the dust of its soil the decapitated heads of marigolds, forming them into a close, thick carpet. The mem-sahib loved flowers and her tastes should be gratified, even though by to-morrow the labours of Tantia would be withered and dead. And for the moment the flower-bed looked far gayer than if the marigolds had been planted, roots and all, after the stereotyped method.

Tantia looked up and grinned as the mem-sahib herself came out on to the verandah. Undoubtedly she would be pleased....And Chrissie Struan, encountering that gaze of childish satisfaction, just managed to hide her dismay and smile at the man encouragingly.

"It looked ver ynice, Mallee" she said, and sank down into one of the long chairs, with the feeling that she should cry if she did not cling to her perception of the funny side of it. And it was so like India—one phase of India.

Wearily she pushed back the limp hair from her wet forehead. Although she had only just bathed and changed, her clothes were moistly to her again; there was no trace of freshness in the air. Her body felt heavy and listless; she had scarcely energy to lift her feet on to the chair and lie extended, and the cushions under her head struck damp.

She had said that she might go down to the Club, but now that it came to the point she simply couldn't muster the energy; perhaps she would feel better if she rested for a bit, more fit to face dinner time.

And then, the hoot of a horn, the throb of an engine; a motor c: unmistakeably stopping at the gate.

"Oh, dear!" Chrissie pressed her fingers to her aching eyes.

She would have to drag herself up; there was no help for it. She swung her legs over the side of the chair; sat on its edge, then sprang to her feet with a little cry.

"Oh, Mr. Hall, how tremendously glad I am to see you!" she cried, her breath catching almost in a sob. "But how....when.. why..?"

Hall took the two outstretched hands in his own and pressed them warmly.

"Why, now, that's wonderfully nice of you," he said. It means a lot, a real welcome like this."

His trained eyes took in quickly her pallor, the heaviness of her eyes, the drooping, sagging lines of her whole body.

"You want to know why I'm here," he said in his pleasant Southern States voice, with its slight drawl. "Well, you see, somehow England felt very lonely after you all left in October. I'd got to finish my commissions, but I didn't feel inclined to linger on after I'd got through with them. And I'm bound to say that Christmastime bored me."

"Here it was....rather pathetic," Chrissie was laughing at the remembrance, but again came that little catch in her voice. "Snowy, frosty hymns— and the cook served up the Christmas pudding in a soup tureen—like porridge. So then you decided to come to India?"

"Oh, I'd always had it as a possible end in view, you know! But what settled it was a commission from a big thing in potentates out here, the Maharajah Zindia—Lakhsman Singh."

"Yes—of Khotalghar; his place is not far from Pathapore," Chrissie spoke eagerly.

"Only about six or seven miles, I understand. So I thought I'd come here and see you first."

"And stay with us? That will be splendid."

"No, my thoughts did not mount to those heights, Mrs. Struan. The portrait will take some time, and I couldn't possibly foist myself on you indefinitely."

"Oh, but we should be delighted. I'm sure that Ranny will say the same, and then Leonie .... she knows you and likes you too...."

"Ah!" Hall's quiet eyes were observant. "She's still with you?"

"Oh, yes. I don't know what we should do without her." Chrissie spoke with almost feverish haste and there was a bright spot of colour in each cheek. "More especially now that I....can't go about with Ranny so much. You see...." She raised her eyes to Hall's with a kind of grave simplicity. "I'm going to have a baby at the end of the year."

"I'm glad," he answered as simply and sincerely.

Hall glanced expressively. "Surely— perhaps I'm wrong—but don't women generally go up to the hills on these occasions? But perhaps you are going away....later."

"No, I don't think so," Chrissie answered quietly. "Ranny would like to arrange it like that, but there's the question of expense, you see. Ranny can't possibly get away, and he wouldn't like me to go alone."

"Miss Valence? Didn't she come out here as your companion?" Hall raised his eyebrows.

"Oh, yes....yes!" Again the two feverish red spots appeared in Chrissie's cheeks. "But then, I should hate to take her away from Ranny. She's such a companion to him, too. I mean it, really,Mr. Hall. You see, the experimental Flying Grounds are a longish ride away and Ranny's job takes him over constantly. And I'm not riding much at present....Besides, Leonie is so wonderfully well-informed about aviation; it's marvellous how she's picked it up, the technical side. And I'm a perfect idiot about those things—I simply can't remember the different kinds of 'planes and their records and who built them. But Leonie can discuss it all, man to man Ranny says she can even make useful suggestions about design and that sort of thing. So, of course, he likes being with her."

Leonie Again

Chrissie leaned back in her chair with an air of finality. Hall put his next question quietly, in almost an off-hand manner.

"You've grown to like her yourself, then? She doesn't frighten you any longer?"

Rather a long pause followed before Chrissie answered hastily:

"Of course not!"

"You know her better—trust her better?" Hall persisted, rather as a doctor persists in his catechism of a patient.

"No! I mean..... No, I can't say that I know her any better, really. I don't think she wants one to. It's ....it's like fish in an aquarium; you see them and all they do quite plainly, but there's always glass between you. You can't touch them or know what they are thinking."

"But you say Struan likes her in spite of her....fishiness?"

"It sounds a horrid comparison put in that way!" Chrissie laughed. "Though it's my fault for having made it first. And it is really marvellous the way Leonie manages the servants. She speaks Hindustani far better than I do, and they like her, too, although I as well. She's an extraordinarily as well. She's an extraordinary capable person in every way; she leaves me very little to do in the way of housekeeping; every thing is taken off my shoulders really."

"What do you do with yourself then?"

"Oh!—I sew—and read—only it's difficult to get anything new. And I've been working at music again, practising quite a lot."

"You play, then? I didn't know that."

"Yes, the piano; I was taught rather well in Paris and London. I compose a bit, too, or try to, and I've been studying harmony and counterpoint. I was lazy at that as a pupil."

"Will you play for me some time?"

"Why, of course!" Chrissie smiled at Hall. "Ranny likes it too, so long as the stuff isn't too classical—although he can appreciate good things too, especially if they are not labelled Bach or Brahms! He's more musical than he knows, really."

"And Miss Valence?"

"Oh, she declares she doesn't know one tune from another. I don't think she has much ear really; she's not good at distinguishing voices. Now, that's how I know people, how I remember them—an aural memory, it's called, isn't it? Leonie's must be the visual sort. She never forgets a face, or a book she has read—anything she has seen."

"I believe I must has a nasal memory!" Hall laughed. "I'm sure I remember places and people most keenly by smells—or tastes."

"And that reminds me that I've been most abominably inhospitable —never to offer you a drink or anything else! Whatever would Ranny think of me?" Chrissie's voice held real perturbation, as she sat up sideways. "What will you have? When did you get a meal last?"

"I'm not needing anything, really,and please don't get up, Mrs. Struan. I shall have to be off."

"Indeed you won't! Ah, here comes Ranny! I can hear their horses, so I shall have reinforcements to persuade you to stay.

The clatter of hooves and the sound of voices came from the side of the bungalow, and in a few moments two figures appeared on the veranda. Struan strode forward, hand outstretched, an attractive figure in his riding-kit, from smoothly brushed head to well-polished boots.

"Hall! What a pleasant surprise! I wondered whose car it was. And what brings you to India—and to Pathapore?"

"Business and pleasure combined, as I've been explaining to Mrs. Struan. Well, Miss Valence, we meet again, and I only hope you're half as glad as I am."

"I'm glad, of course." There was just a flicker of a smile about her lips, but her eyes were grave and intent, as they stood hand-clasped. And Hall, looking at her, realized that here was a phase of Leonie Valence. Up to now she had always been the same grey-clad figure, on the Gloriana, in the boat, at the Kensington Hotel. Now, in tussore coat, Jodhpur riding-breeches and a terai felt hat, she looked younger, prettier. But no, even now, "pretty" was not the word to describe her; that epithet, which might be bestowed equally well on a daisy, a lamb or the pattern of a wall-paper.

More of a woman, even in that boyish kit—was that it? Certainly the tropics must suit her. There was colour in her pale face, a soft brightness in her eyes which was surely new; the beautiful lines of mouth and jaw seemed less sculptural.

"Of course, you're staying with us, Hall," Struan's voice, broke in on his thoughts. "I won't hear of anything else. Chrissie says you're painting our local potentate, but you won't want to spend all your time at Khotalghar, Gorgeous, of course—something between Windsor Castle and Aladdin's Palace, but not exactly what you'd call homely! I couldn't stick it myself for more than a few days, although India is pretty thoroughly Westernized—Harrow and Christchurch, and all that."

"I've no doubt I can arrange to run over to Khotalghar for His Highness's sitting, perhaps spend a few days with him later."

"Then that's settled — good!" Struan said heartily. "I'll speak to the butler, Chrissie."

In the bare, matted room, with the green sun-blinds and mosquito-curtained bed, where the light admitted by one side-window shone purple through a falling veil of bougainvillia, Hall surveyed the situation mentally.

"I wonder why I'm glad to be staying here—I wonder what's the real attraction—or who? I'm hanged if I care! A looker-on—that's what I've always been, that's what I am still."

CHAPTER VIII

Indian Gala

It was a gala day at the Gymkhana Club. The ground was crowded; the long side adjoining the pavilion had the appearance of a herbaceous border in full bloom, so gay-coloured were the dresses of the women, their silks, organdies, and muslins.

Chrissie Struan's primrose-patterned chiffon under a pale yellow silk coat was new for the occasion, yet somehow, leaning back listlessly in her canvas chair, she looked quenched, colourless.

Leonie Valence, standing beside her, erect against one of the pillars of the pavilion, made the yellow gown seem almost dowdy beside her dress of delphinium blue, with a long chiffon scarf to match draped round her huge black hat, framing the clear paleness of her face.

Her look, intent and interested, was fixed upon Struan's pony, from which he had just dismounted in order to join the group by the pavilion, a compact, cleanly-built little chestnut.

"Look at him!" Leonie said. "One would think he understood the meaning of every stroke."

"And so he does!" Struan answered.

"'Duke' is an old polo pony—he's played for years and knows the game. And loves it!"

"The darling!" Leonie said softly, and Chrissie laughed.

"I believe you like horses better than men, Leonie," she said.

"I believe I do—on the whole. They're so thorough. 'Duke,' now, hasn't a single thought in the world except for the game he's watching. He doesn't fritter away his energies, trying to do several things at once."

"'Duke' ,and his master would both like to be playing," Struan laughed. "I'll be getting obese for want of exercise."

"There doesn't seem much fear of that at present!" Chrissie glanced up at the tall, well-knit figure beside her. "You're still quite passable."

"Ah, but flying tends to fat, I'm afraid."

Struan broke off, staring away over the polo ground to where a faintly blue, serrated line of hills ringed the horizon to the north.

Then he shrugged his shoulders and laughed.

"Oh, well, pioneer work of any kind is always good fun, I suppose. Hullo!—who's the new arrival? No, I needn't ask. There's only one such car-owner in the neighbourhood—His Highness the Maharajah Zindia, G.C.S.I., and all the rest of it."

"I've not seen him yet," Leonie spoke carelessly.

"Oh, haven't you, Leonie?" Chrissie looked up. "No, of course, you didn't come with Ranny and me to pay, our duty call, and he's been away from Khotalghar ever since. Well, we'll introduce you now; he's nearly as resplendent as his car. It's rather like a modern version of Cinderella's coach. There's the Maharajah himself getting out—oh, and Mr. Hall. I wonder if he's leaving Khotalghar for the present, if he's coming back to us. I do hope so, don't you, Leonie?"

But Leonie Valence, with lips pressed close and gravely appraising eyes, was gazing at the tall figure which had preceded Wilson Hall from the car.

A handsome man with his pale olive skin, long-lashed black eyes, and small ink-black moustache, curled away from the full, beautifully-cut lips. He wore a white silk suit of perfect tailoring, and gleaming patent leather shoes. But his head was covered with an exquisitely-folded puggri of blue silk threaded with silver, clasped at the side with a single enormous emerald, whilst another equally large, held the folds of his white silk hunting stock.

He stood like one who rests his hand on the hilt of a sword, head raised, eyes roving until they met those of Leonie Valence.

"Ah, Capt. Struan — and Mrs. Struan! This is very pleasant." The Maharajah's voice had only the faintest intonation to differentiate it from that of a European. Struan returned the greeting stiffly; it was Chrissie who made the introduction.

"This is my friend, Miss Valence, Your Highness."

"Ah, I am delighted; Mr. Hall has spoken of you, Miss Valence. as a compatriot. And now I wonder less than ever that he decided to return to Pathapore."

Rookies Really Rampaging In Major Baseball Leagues, Bob Feller Loses First Game

Sensational Cleveland Hurler Knocked Out by the Yankees

VAN MUNGO STARS

Leading Batter in National at Present is Rookie May of Phillies

(By Judson Bailey Associated Press Sports Writer).

Rookies are rampaging in the major baseball leagues this spring in perhaps the greatest spree the freshman class, as a unit, has ever had. There is scarcely a club which isn't depending on one or several recruits for regular service and most of them have responded heroically.

Boston Red Sox met Detroit Tigers 7-6 and five of their seven runs were knocked in by Ted Williams with a pair of homers. Williams came of age just last October after a great season with Minneapolis in the American.

White Sox New Third

Chicago White Sox replaced Washington in third place by beating the Senators 4-3 and two of their runs came on a homer by catcher Ken Silvestri, who came up this year from St. Paul.

St. Louis Browns humbled Philadelphia Athletics 9-3 with John Henry Kramer, a professional pitcher just three years, going the route on eight hits. He was given plenty of working margin by sophomore Mel Mazzera, who batted in four runs on two homers.

In the National League New York Giants trounced St. Louis Cardinals 6-3. It was Manny Salvo, late strike out king of the Pacific Coast League, who weathered Johnny Mize's third homer of the year in a three run first inning outburst and finished the game with a total of seven hits.

The losing team have some rookie stars, too, and the leading batter of the senior circuit is Merrill May of the Phillies, who had a perfect day at bat even though his team was beaten by Pittsburgh Pirates 6-4 on home runs by Jim Tobin and Johnny Rizzo and some swell relief hurling by Russ Bauers.

Van Mungo Stars

No youngsters figured in Brooklyn's 6-2 conquest of Chicago Cubs. Van Lingle Mungo gave up only one run in eight innings of relief pitching and batted in two himself.

The Yankees and Cleveland Indians also are using rookie Cylinders, although they played minor parts in the champions' 10-inning 10-6 victory. This marked the collapse of Bob Feller's playhouse, for the young Indian lost his first game after three victories by giving 10 walks and 10 hits in 9 1-3 innings. The New York standout was veteran George Selkirk of Huntsville, Ont., who got his third homer with two on in the fourth and singled home an extra run in the 10th.

Boston Bees and Cincinnati were rained out.

3 Times Winner Back for More

Wealthy Auto Racer After Another Indianapolis Victory

By Walter L. Johns

Central Press Canadian Sports Writer

New York, May 5.—The scene is the Indianapolis Speedway. The date is Tuesday, May 30. The time is 10 a.m. The speaker is a veteran racing fan, but witnessing his first 500-mile classic, annual auto event that attracts more than 100,000 spectators.

Lou Meyer

"Isn't that the famous Lou Meyer in Car No. 10?"

"Yes, that's him," answers his companion, who has seen many races.

"Say, that guy must be nuts, entering again this year. Hasn't he already won the grind three times?"

"Yeah, he's won three times."

"He sure must have guts, to tempt fate after he's come out of so many races alive. Does he need the money?"

"No, he's one of the wealthiest of racing drivers."

"Well, what's he entered again for?"

"I don't know; guess he must like to drive."

This may well be a conversation overheard in the stands during the running of the 27th annual 500-mile automobile speed classic at Indianapolis, May 30. Meanwhile the subject of the conversation, Lou Meyer, is readying himself and his car for an attempt on a fourth win and a mark that may stand for all time.

Meyer, the Californian speed demon, has been tempting fate year after year in the toughest of all sports events. He has come out on top so far, and has managed to carve a name for himself on the athletic scroll of honor of all time.

The Californian Dutchman is the only driver ever to win the event three times. Only one other speedster has even won the classic twice. He is Tommy Milton.

Meyer won in 1928, 1933 and in 1936. He was second in 1929, fourth in 1930, and out of the money in 1927. He had been serving as a mechanic and driver in 1928 and bought a car a week before the race. He won it for the first time. Meyer's father was a bicycle racer in Germany. His brother Eddie once was Pacific coast champion.

When not racing, Meyer likes to golf and hunt. He shoots in the 80's in golf.

Sports Roundup

(By Eddie Brietz Associated Press Sports Writer).

New York, May 5 (AP)—Any hour now Marshall Goldberg is expected to announce he will play football with Chicago Cardinals this fall..... Also, they say Trader Gerry Nugent is readying a revised price list for the few ball players remaining with the Phillies....Charlie Graham, the silver-haired San Francisco baseball baron, says Joe DiMaggio belongs with Cobb and Babe Ruth in the mythical all-time outfield.

Old Tony Lazzeri has started a consecutive game streak of his own .....He was playing his seventh in a row for the Dodgers when Gehrig ended his string and made it eight yesterday.

Today's guest star—Jack Miley, New York Post: "I hope Larry MacPhail lays off Gehrig....He'll have him hitting fungoes by gas light at country fairs or belting 'em off the tail board of a wagon at street carnivals....Larry exploited Babe Ruth right up to the hilt and got back several times the Babe's salary."

Al Simmons will retire when he saves up another $25,000 for a rainy day....That will give him $200,000 all told....If Patty Berg's ears are pinned back this summer, Virginia Guilfoil of Syracuse may be the one who'll do it. They say she is ready for her best year.

Monty Stratton, who received almost $30,000 out of that baseball benefit, will pay off the mortage on his farm and salt the rest away in annuities.

MONTREAL TEAM IN SECOND PLACE OF INT. LEAGUE

Kemp Wicker Leading All Moundsmen With Four Victories

TORONTO BEATEN

Syracuse Chiefs Spoil Opening in Queen City

(By The Associated Press)

As a former big league hurler himself, it was only natural for Burleigh Grimes to concentrate on the pitching staff in trying to make a first division club out of his Montreal Royals. He appears to have done his hardest and best work with Kemp Wicker.

The Carolina-born southpaw, who spent a good part of his baseball career commuting between teams in the New York Yankee chain, today stands out as the top moundsman in the International Baseball League. You can't beat perfection, and that's what Wicker has been so far—four starts, four victories.

He notched No. 4 yesterday, turning back Baltimore Orioles 8-1 as Montreal made its home debut.

Not only did Wicker's triumph lift the Royals into second place, but it again showed that the 32-year-old left-hander, once a member of the Yankee corps, is improving steadily. He was nicked for 31 hits in his first two games, then gave the Newark Bears only five hits in victory No. 3, a 1-0 shutout, and yesterday turned in a four-hitter. Over the last eight innings he pitched two-hit shutout ball.

The league-leading Jersey City Giants, meanwhile, dropped their first road game, 7-4, to Buffalo Bisons, whose four freshmen—Ray Mack, Lou Boudreau, Bill Sodd and Henry Helf—got seven of the 10 hits. Mack and Sodd hit homers.

With Baltimore and the little Giants beaten, the two other visiting teams came out on top. The Bears, scoring six runs in the first two frames off Roy Henshaw and Mike Ryba, beat back the Rochester Red Wings, 7-5, and Syracuse Chiefs, behind Jake Mooty's six-hit flinging, pushed the Toronto Maple Leafs deeper into the cellar iwth a 4-1 trimming.

Technician's Owner Switches Jockeys At Last Moment

Louisville, Ky., May 5 (AP)— A spectacular switch in riders, placing Johnny Adams astride Technician in tomorrow's 65th running of the Kentucky Derby, supplied the chief topic of mint julep conversation today as every train, car, bus and airplane poured the horse pilgrims into this temporary mecca of the equine world.

The news struck the bars and bistros last night that Herbert Woolf, owner of the west's hope in the 1 1-4-mile scramble, had hired Adams, boy wonder from California, to replace Ira Hanford on Technician.

The news took the talk away from Johnstown, which for two days past had monopolized the conversation. Without much doubt, the shift in jockeys will make Technician a firm second favorite to Johnstown by the time they face the barrier tomorrow afternoon.

Woolf, they say, brought in Adams over the strong protests of Ben Jones, trainer of Technician. Jones finally told him: "All right, you own the horse and you're shooting at the $50,000." In the opinion of most of the experts here however, Woolf's move was a smart one.

Previously in this series we have depicted by text and diagram the scoring system of experts, including batting code symbols and fielding movement signs, actually applied to half an inning of baseball.

Today we will examine more actual baseball situations and prescribe the scoring formula and provide a form for your "box score summary". The average scorebook fan may not keep a complete box score and summary. This additional information is provided, however, for those who may wish to maintain a professional type of scorebook for use by school newspapers or magazines, or for those who may want to make comparisons of their scorebooks with the daily newspaper accounts.

Baseball provides a horde of interesting situations to the scorer. He will constantly revise and enlarge his scoring system as he progresses in skill. He will do well to devise special symbols of his own to indicate special playing developments. Even the experts use special symbols and it is rare indeed when two experts agree absolutely on all the signs.

Using our original imaginary team, for instance, we will assume that Prown, the lead-off man, hits a single instead of a double to left field. Smith instead of fouling out, dumps a bunt sacrifice in front of the plate. One expert would use the symbol letter-sign C to represent Smith's "bunt-sacrifice," and score it C 1-3, meaning that Smith bunted to the pitcher who threw him out at first, Brown advancing to second. Had the pitcher erred, the sign would be C-E-1, meaning that Smith was safe on the fumble, Brown advancing on the play. Had the bunt rolled safely free, the scorer would mark it T, presuming that T was his safe-bunt symbol. Brown would be charged with a time at bat and a safe hit, whereas with his sacrifice his time at bat is not recorded. He would be credited with a sacrifice, however.

There are other possibilities to consider. Suppose, for instance, that there is a run-down between first and second base in which two basemen, the shortstop and pitcher, participate. When the runner is finally tagged out four defensive players have handled the ball. Each player is credited with an assist and the second baseman, who finally tagged the runner, is credited with a putout and, if he handled the ball prior to the putout, with an assist as well.

However, it is emphasized that no player may be credited with more than one assist on any one putout. This special situation involving this rundown may be scored 1-3-4-5-4, indicating that the ball went from pitcher to first baseman to second baseman to shortstop and back to the second baseman who made the putout by tagging the runner.

Your finished score on any single game if you record everything—should include:

The batting record—Number of times at bat, runs, base hits.

The fielding record—Number of putouts, assists, errors.

The summary—Score of each inning and total runs, number of stolen bases, of sacrifice hits, of three base hits, of home runs, of double and triple plays, of runs batted in by each batter, of inning in which each pitcher pitched, of base hits made off each pitcher, of strikeouts, number of bases on balls, of wild pitches, of hit batters, or passed balls. The summary should also include the time of the game and the names of the umpires.

In the next and concluding article we will retrace briefly the more important points of scoring and offer a few hints that may be valuable in puzzling pinches.

Never front page sport news but of increased interest this year because of the British-American matches next month, polo, in its most ordinary matches is a tough game on both the players and their mounts. A couple of Californian teams were only practising when this spot of action was taken, but it isn't hard to see that the sturdy ponies are putting plenty of muscles to work as the rider about to hit the rolling ball is checked.

SOCCER SCHEDULE CLOSES SATURDAY AFTER LONG GRIND

Everton, Blackburn, Newport and Barnsley Winners of Divisions

MANY DEMOTED

Leicester City and Birmingham Are Teams to go Down to Second Division

London, May 5 (CP Cable) — Summer games complete with soccer tomorrow when the latter's long winter stand is brought to a close in England. The Scottish season ended a week ago and the lucky Scots chosen to tour Canada and the United States embark at Greenock Saturday for the trip across the Atlantic.

There is joy at Everton, Blackburn, Newport and Barnsley where championship pennants fly for the leaders of the English League's four divisions, but gloom prevails in other towns.

Leicester City is doomed to spend next season in the second division after finishing at the bottom of the major circuit and only a sensational reverse by Chelsea tomorrow can save Birmingham from sharing its Midland rival's fate.

In the second division the hardest battle of the day will find Norwich City and Notts Forest battling on the former's ground to avoid demotion to the third division along with Tranmere Rovers, luckless Birkenhead squad. Norwich must win by a clear six-goal margin to retain its position in the intermediate league.

Blackburn's partner in promotion to the first division will not be known until tomorrow's games are played. Sheffield United entertains Tottenham Hotspur and must take at least a point to go ahead of Sheffield Wednesday on goal average for the coveted runner-up position.

Accrington Stanley will be called upon to apply for reelection to the third division's northern section. In the southern loop either Walsall or Bristol Rovers will be called upon to make the same request. If Walsall is successful against Cardiff the Bristolians will drop into the cellar.

WITH THE LAWN BOWLERS

by

GEO. E. WATKIN

Our banquet on Wednesday night was a decided success. There were a goodly number present and those who did not get out missed a real treat. The President and his committee are to be congratulated. They produced a real good program. Those who took part are as follows: Mr. Whittle, Harold Williamson, Miss Helen Sulman and Mrs. Correll and Albert Wonnacott with Mrs. Fred Houston presiding at the piano. A hearty vote of thanks was passed to all the above.

The items on the programme were all well rendered but special mention must be made of the fine voices of Helen Sulman and Mrs. Frank Correll. Helen has a very rich soprano voice and blended with Mrs. Frank Correll's fine deep contralto voice made a real hit, these two young ladies should go a long way in the musical world.

Ab Wonnacott's cornet solo "O Dry Those Tears" was splendid. Personally I would say Ab is better with his cornet than he is on the greens if that is possible.

The first tournament of the season will be held on Wednesday, June 7th mixed doubles.

To those who were not present at the banquet, the report brought in on the membership was gratifying, fifteen new members have signed up to date, the objective is forty, so we have twenty days to get twenty-five more members, this should be very easy if everyone does their share. "Have you signed your man yet." When you have Phone Joe Black the chairman.

Mrs. O'Conner president of the ladies' club, told the members of her club big things were in store for them this year.

Harvey Stewart is a very busy man, and he will be until next fall.

John Shaw's annual list of the members he is going to trim this summer is ready for print, but on looking at the first name on the roll I noticed it was Charlie Sulman. Perhaps it would be better to wait until John gets rid of Charlie before we bother with the other boys.

Canadian scullers, aspiring for limelight in the Royal Henley regatta in England this year will have to look to their laurels. Joe Burk, of the Pennsylvania Athletic Club and who won the Canadian Henley last year, is entered in the world premier singles sculling race at Henley. Burk is recognized as the king pin singles sculler in the business and apparently is the man to beat for the Diamond Sculls. Burk has an awkward style and even does not row in what is conceded as an orthodox manner, but he still holds the Canadian and United States singles title. This year will mark the 100th anniversary celebration of the Royal Henley and the famous Diamond Sculls, that have been won on several occasions by Canadians. Whenever scullers are discussed, however, fans and experts alike agree Bobby Pearce, with Hamilton as his adopted rendezvous, has no peer in the game of oar pulling today.

Local wrestling fans will doubtless be curious to see "Gentleman Jack" Washburn, the Tennessee terror, in a local ring. When the grappling business was at its height in Belleville a few years back; B.S.I. (before sport indifference) Washburn was not included in the numerous big shots of the wrestling game to appear locally. "Gentleman Jack" does not exemplify any of that heralded Southern hospitality once he crawls through the ropes and is recognized as one of the roughest hombres in the business. "I always collect a large crop of razzberries everywhere I go—it doesn't bother me though—as a matter of fact they encourage me in my art and profession." Washburn once told a news stand. Tonight's three-bout card marks the return of professional wrestling to Belleville after an absence of slightly over a year. With no sports scheduled until after the Royal visit the grapplers should get a good play, especially with men the calibre of Washburn, his opponent, the reliable Scotty McDougall, the Red Devil (his name is Joe Conkle by the way), Jack Cox and Kimisky, the Russian lad from Windsor way an action card can almost be assured.

With fire in his eye and sharpness in his speech, W. J. "Peeney" Mills boarded us for a verbal going over yesterday. "Whatta mean by publishing that youngsters never got a chance with a Belleville baseball club in past years?" howled "Peeney" and continued without interruption—"Just name me one youngster who never got a chance. Why the whole trouble was there wasn't enough of them to replenish us old fellows," Mills added with indignation as he apparently accepted the entire responsibility to contradict our recent article pertaining to the matter. We made no mention of any time, period or persons and Mills should remember he has been out of the game these past three or four years, during which time much has happened along these lines. Only last season the local clubs leading batsman was benched in favour of a veteran during an important game, but the desired results were not forthcoming and that's only one incident we can recall.

Although the general sports thoughts are not exactly towards hockey gossip, there is a rumour making the rounds to the effect that the Campbellford Maroons may again enter the O.H.A. wars and in the senior "B" series. Talk of importing players into the Hydro Town is quite prevalent and with a contending club in Campbellford good support would be assured as the Hydro Village was always a good puck centre. However, here's what the Peterboro scribe has to say relative to the subject: "Just heard a rumor the other day that Campbellford hockey interests are thinking of putting a senior "B" squad in the O.H.A. next winter. Grouped with the Petes and maybe Belleville and the Fliers—or some such setup. Just in the rumor stage yet, and they'd like to have Buster Whitton as playing coach. With a number of good imports. Some four years or so ago the Campbellford Maroons were grouped with the locals in O.H.A. intermediate "A" company and they iced a swell squad, packing in the fans here and in Hydro Town for some dandy tilts."

When Tom Fleming, White Sox pitching recruit, was pitching in the Hammond, Ind., Industrial league two years ago he all but pitched a no-hitter. Not a hit was made by the opposition until with two out in the ninth inning. He had the batter two and two. The next pitch was high and inside. The batsman fell away and as he did so, the ball hit his bat and bounded over the first baseman's head. The next batter was easy.

Dick Porter's Syracuse Chiefs spoiled the opening International League game for nearly 10,000 baseball fans yesterday when the Chiefs beat the Leafs 4-1 at the Fleet Street stadium. Babe Marchildon, who hurled for Penetang in the intermediate O.B.A. ranks last year, showed a nice curve ball, but it is quite apparent that Don Ross' need some hitting strength in the outer garden, if they expect to get any place in the baseball realm of today. The three outfielders counted exactly one hit collectively and baseball games aren't won in that manner.

We're Telling You That— Dahlgren isn't busting any more fences than was Gehrig, but the Yankees are winning now, so everybody seems happy about the whole thing....Bud Johnson was in to see us yesterday following which he is leaving for Northern Ontario to play baseball with the Dome Mine club of the Nickel Belt League ....."Nugger" Bennett, another Belleville ballster, trekked north earlier this week, while "Sexy" Grey has been up there for some time....As a matter of fact Belleville is well represented in hockey, baseball and softball circles in the "gold belt"

Along Broadway they like Johnstown to win the Kentucky Derby, with Challedon hard to shake off as a favorite, while Technician is being given better than an outside chance.... Our guess calls for a rank outsider.

School Boy Catches Two Large Suckers With His Bare Hands

You can't keep 'em down. And by that is meant a good man — and flaming or fishing youth. No sooner had the presses stopped rolling the other day on the edition that carried the story of a Massassaga resident who unceremoniously yanked a large fish from its natural habitat in the Bay of Quinte with his bare hands, than along comes the yarn of a twelve-year-old Melville schoolboy who goes his elder one better.

It seems that the youngster, Leonard Root, by name, was returning from school when he noticed a large "sucker" attempting to develop a sun-tan in the water along the shore of Consecon Lake.

Then it happened and the youngster can't be blamed. The sight of the big fish figgling its tail and apparently flaunting a finny defiance to mankind in general was too much for him. So without more ado he unceremoniously heaved his dinner-pail in a nearby bush, closed his eyes and plunged his hands in the water. A second later he came up with the five-pound beauty struggling in his hands.

Flopping on the beach, the mullet looked anything but happy. In fact it must have looked a bit lonesome, at least in its young captor's opinion. Gazing about he saw another fish, somewhat smaller, 'tis true, but nevertheless inviting capture as it lazily turned in the shallow water.

Again the youngster's hands darted into the water and again they came up, this time with a member of the same fish family that weighed three pounds. Which is a fair day's haul in any young fisherman's life, and one that like the Root youngster—causes him to trip cheerily homeward whistling a schoolboy refrain, and wondering what the oldsters grouch and grumble about yhen they come home blaming the lack of the catch on the bait, when they have two good hands.

Not Significant Matter

In a further allusion to the question of Danzig and the Corridor Beck declared, "in his speech the Chancellor of the Reich proposes as a concession on his part the recognition and definite acceptance of the existing frontier between Poland and Germany.

"I have to state that it would have been a recognition of our property indisputably de jure and de facto, so that this proposal also cannot alter my point that the German claims with regard to Danzig and the motor road remain one-sided demands."

Referring to Germany's denunciation of the Polish-German non-aggression pact which he described "as an attempt to give some better course to history between two great nations," Beck said this was "not an insignificant matter."

"However, every treaty is worth as much as the consequences which follow it. And if the policy and conduct of the partner diverges from the principles of the pact, we have no reason for mourning its slackening or dissolution."

Reviewing Anglo-Polish relations, Beck declared, "it was possible to establish rapidly the principles of Polish and British collaboration, first of all because we made it clear to each other that the intentions of both the governments are concordant on basic European problems certainly neither Great Britain nor Poland has any aggressive intentions whatever, but they are as determined in the defence of certain basic principles of conduct in international life."

Will Not be Barred

"Is it the freedom of the German population of Danzig, which is not menaced, or matters of prestige—or is it a matter of barring Poland from the Baltic, from which Poland will not let herself be barred?"

As regards the Corridor which Beck described as "ancient Polish land, with an insignificant percentage of German colonists," he said: "We have given to the German Reich all railway facilities; we have allowed its citizens to travel without customs or transport formalities from the Reich to East Prussia. We have suggested the extension of these facilities to road transport. And again the question appears—what is the real aim of it all?"

Again reverting to his firm attitude as regards Poland's territorial integrity, Beck declared: "We have no reason to obstruct the German citizens in their communication with their eastern province. But we have on the other hand no grounds whatever for restricting our sovereignty on our own territory.

"In the first and the second instance, that is in the matter of the future of Danzig and of the communications from Pomorze, it is still a case of one-sided concessions, which the government of the Reich seems to be demanding from us. A self respecting nation does not make one-sided concessions. Where is the reciprocity? It looks rather vague in the German proposals."

Regard Problems Objectively

"If the government of the Reich is actually guided by these two conditions in its relations to our country, all conversations, naturally respecting the principles which I have enumerated, are possible.

"If, such conversations materialize the Polish government will, according to its custom, regard the problem objectively, with a view to experiences of recent times. but without refusing its best will."

Reviewing the history of German-Polish relations, including the non-aggression pact denounced by Germany, Beck gave specific attention to the question of Danzig and Pomorze (the Polish Corridor) in relation to German demands.

As regards Danzig he said Poland's attitude has been a correct one. "Seeking reasonable and conciliatory solutions, we have purposely not endeavored to exert any influence on the free national, ideological and cultural development of the German majority in the Free City," he said.

No Examples Quoted

"I shall not extend my address by quoting examples. They are sufficiently well known to all those who have been concerned in any way with the matter. But when, after repeated statements of German statesmen, who respected our views and expressed the opinion that 'this provincial town will not be the object of a conflict between Poland and Germany'—I heard a demand for the annexation of Danzig to the Reich, when I get no reply to our proposals of March 25 of a common quarantee of the existence and rights of the Free City and I learn subsequently that it has been regarded as a refusal of negotiations —I have to ask myself what is the real aim of it all?

Referred to Allusions

Observers saw special significance in Beck's unexplained reference to the "various other allusions" which he said were made in conversations with the German government. These allusions, he declared "reached far wider and further than subjects now under consideration" and he reserved the right to "return to this matter if necessary."

It was believed in some quarters that Beck referred to proposals by Hitler for a joint policy of Poland and Germany in regard to other European nations. Observers pointed out that Beck, in not amplifying the point, carefully avoided any possible embarrassment to Hitler and the German government.

During prolonged applause at the end of the address, aged General Lucjan Zeligowski, a member of parliament and Polish military hero who occupied Wilno in 1920, went to Beck and congratulated him. He was obviously greatly moved by the speech.

Diplomatic observers in Warsaw characterized the address with such terms as: "Most reasonable" and "a remarkable combination of firmness and finesse."

The general opinion was that it was a strong but entirely, statesmanlike declaration. It was asserted it could not be regarded as in any way detracting from the dignity of Hitler's position.

Offer Fully Endorsed

London, May 5—(AP)—The British government fully endorsed Foreign Minister Joseph Beck's offer today to negotiate with Germany on a basis of peaceful intentions and methods.

In quarters close to the government the view was expressed that Colonel Beck, in his address to the Polish parliament, had defined Great Britain's as well as Poland's position that the Danzig problem can be settled peacefully if Germany genuinely desires to negotiate on a basis of equality.

His firmness, on the other hand, in refusing "one-sided concessions" also was considered to reflect the views of Britain and France, both of whom have promised to help Poland resist any threat to her independence.

French Officials Concur 4

Paris, May 5—(AP)—Sources close to the French government today characterized the speech of Foreign Minister Joseph Beck as "a calm, logical answer to Hitler."

French diplomats expressed themselves as in complete accord with the tone of the declaration by Poland's Foreign Minister. It was "moderate but undeniably firm," one said.

Colonel Beck's objections to "one-sided" concessions by Poland in favor of Germany were hailed here as evidence of Poland's intention to maintain her territorial integrity.

Answering reports of wavering French support of Poland, Premier Daladier last night issued a surprise statement declaring "the position of France as I defined it by my radio speech of March 29 has not varied and will not vary."

Asserting that in the international situation "a single question is in fact posed—that of domination or collaboration in Europe," Daladier declared: "It is thus definitely the security of France which is at stake and also the future of civilization which we, with the immense majority of men in the world, are determined to defend."

Nazi Leaders Called

Berlin, May 5—(AP)—Chancellor Hitler called his Foreign Minister and Nazi leaders of Danzig into conference this afternoon at his Bavarian Mountain retreat to weigh the address of Foreign Minister Joseph Beck of Poland.

The men summoned for the talks were Joachim von Ribbentrop, his Foreign Minister, who arrived in Berchtesgaden on his way for a conference in Italy; Albert Forster, Nazi district leader in Danzig; and Arthur Greiser, a Nazi leader and Danzig Senate President.

A slight indication of the German attitude toward Beck's speech came in descriptive phrases incorporate in the official German news agency account of the address.

Put in Brusque Form

It asserted "Beck put the reasons for declining the German proposals (concerning German-Polish issues, including Danzig and the Polish Corridor) in very brusque form."

After the conference with Hitler, Von Ribbentrop is to go to Lake Como for talks with Foreign Minister Galeazzo Ciano of Italy.

Von Ribbentrop did not arrive in Berchtesgaden in time to listen to Beck's speech at Hitler's side but was able to tune in on the broadcast from Warsaw in his hotel.

Authorities in Berlin however refrained from comment, stating that "only the highest quarters" could express Germany's reaction in so grave a matter.

Victorious Eldorado Hockey Club Feted at Community Banquet

Eldorado—A very enjoyable event in the form of a banquet was tendered the Eldorado Hockey Club at the home of Mr. Chas. Thompson, on Friday evening, April 28.

The tables and dining room were very tastefully decorated with the red, green and orange colors of the team. The Central Hastings Trophy which the hockey team had captured during the past season was very prominently displayed in the centre of the room.

After a very delightful dinner, Dr. F. J. Nickle called the gathering to order and in a most capable manner performed the duties of toastmaster. The toast to the King was responded to by singing the National Anthem after which a minute's silent tribute to the late Chas. Thompson of Queensboro, one of the donors of the cup. The toast to "Our Country" was very ably proposed by Mr. John Thompson and responded to by Mrs. F. J. Nickle. The toast to "Our Community" was proposed by Mr. Dorian Stewart and responded to by Mrs. Charles Pigden. The toast to the donors of the cup was proposed by Mr. Kenneth Holmes and was responded to by the toastmaster, a donor himself, in the absence of Mr. Frank Reynolds of Cooper. The toast to the "Team" was proposed by Mr. Chas. Pigden and responded to by Mr. Cecil Hagerman. The toast to "Our Manager" was proposed by Mr. Gordon Pigden and responded to by Mr. Sandy Martin. At this point Mr. Martin was presented with a duplicate of the large cup suitably engraved by the players of the team. The toast to the ladies was proposed by Mr. Frederick Stewart and responded to by Miss Gladys Martin. The host, Mr. Chas. Thompson was called upon for a few words and at the conclusion of his remarks the tables were taken out and dancing was enjoyed to the music of Messrs. McKilligan and Wannamaker.

The Eldorado Hockey team created a record in the Central Hastings loop by being the first team to capture, the trophy two years in succession since the cup was presented in 1932. And it was clearly understood at the banquet that the boys would be out strong to win the third time next winter.

Y.P.U.

The Eldorado and Union Young People's Union met at the Union Church on Thursday evening for their regular meeting.

The meeting opened with Mrs. George Palmer leading in a singsong. Then the President, Miss Florence Walker, conducted a short business period. It was decided to hold one more meeting before closing for the summer season and the conveners are responsible for the programme. The offering was received and the Roll Call was well responded with 'Missionary Needs'.

The programme was in charge of the missionary convener, Miss Annie Holmes, who opened the Worship Service by singing one verse of "God Reveals His Presence" and the call to worship. The Bible lesson was read by Mrs Harry Parnell and prayer by Miss Annie Holmes.

Mrs. George Palmer gave a very lovely rendering of "If Jesus goes with me". The subject for the evening "Beckoning Frontiers" was given by Miss Annie Holmes, with Mr. Walter Moran a reading on "Frontier Equipment," an. "O Canada", the Church of All Nations' version was sung by all which made a very fine background for the programme.

Rev. S. B. Smith very feelingly sang "The Sinner and the Song" and the meeting closed with prayer.

AT THE BELLE

"3 SMART GIRLS GROW UP"

What is said to be the most pleasing picture in which Deanna Durbin has ever appeared, Universal's "Three Smart Girls Grow Up," next at the Belle Theatre.

Deanna Durbin became a full fledged star with her first picture, "Three Smart Girls." It was followed by "100 Men and a Girl," "Mad About Music" and "That Certain Age." Each picture was hailed by critics as a better one than its predecessor. Now critics and preview audiences are claiming that "Three Smart Girls Grow Up" is the best of the five.

Recalls First Success

Directed by Henry Koster, who directed "Three Smart Girls" and "100 Men and a Girl", the current offering is a happy reminder of "Three Smart Girls." It presents approximately the same cast — Deanna, Charles Winninger, Nella Walker, Nan Grey, and Ernest Cossart, with the addition of Helen Parrish, Bob Cummings and William Lundigan.

It will present Deanna as a slightly older youngster who tries to straighten out the tangled love affairs of her two sisters, with amusing and amazing results. With this plot it is much more of a comedy than any of the 16-year-old singing star's previous offerings.

Music in Story

In the picture Deanna sings four songs, "Invitation to the Dance", by Weber, with a special vocal arrangement by Charles Henderson; "The Last Rose of Summer," from Flotow's opera, "Martha"; "La Capneira" (The Wren), by Sir Julius Benedict; and "Because", by Edward Teschemacher and Guy D'Hardelot.

The Popular Belle Newsreel, Walt Disney's funniest color cartoon, "Practical Pig" and a clever screen novelty "Stranger Than Fiction", will be presented on the same program.

"The Mikado" Departs

Visual splendor such as Gilbert and Sullivan dreamed for their brain children, but despaired of giving them on the stage, has now been achieved for one of these immortal musical comedies after fifty-four years of waiting. The lucky Savoyard show is "The Mikado" generally considered the most popular lyric drama ever composed. First of all the Gilbert and Sullivan charades to be filmed, "The Mikado" is now being presented at the Belle, as a technicolor production with elaborate costumes, brilliant lighting and mammoth sets, not possible within the narrow confines of the theatre.

"Going Places", an interesting screen novelty with Graham McNamee as commentator, and "Pie A La Maid," a funny all-star comedy precede the feature attraction.

The Ladies' Guild held their regular meeting on Thursday afternoon at the home of Mrs. William Sandford.

Miss F. Deady of Millbridge, spent the week-end with Miss Annie Ray.

Miss M. Mution of Brighton, was renewing acquaintances at Union during Easter vacation.

Miss Carrie Bateman of Malone, is spending a few days with her grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. James Bateman.

Mr. and Mrs. Carman Hyland of Camden East, spent a few days last week with the former's sister, Mrs. Ken Bateman.

Miss Hazel McCann is spending some time at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Fred McCoy.

Mr. and Mrs. Bert Jones of Crookston, were guests at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur McCreary.

Mrs. Ken Bateman has returned home after spending a few days with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Hyland of Camden East.

Mrs. Arthur McCreary spent Friday evening with Rev. and Mrs. S. B. Smith.

AT THE McCARTHY

"THE YOUNG IN HEART"

Breaking away from the management of Charlie Chaplin, who gave her her first chance on the screen, glamorous Paulette Goddard begins moulding her own film career under a new banner with David O. Selznick's "The Young in Heart," in which she is currently starring with Janet Gaynor and Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., at the McCarthy theatre. The production marks her first talking role, for in the only other motion picture she has made, Chaplin's "Modern Times," the young actress played a silent part.

A gay comedy romance of a fascinating family of charming chiselers, based on I. A. R. Wylie's Saturday Evening Post story, "The Gay Banditti," "The Young in Heart" offers Miss Goddard the role of a pretty London secretary with whom the heiress-seeking son, played by Fairbanks, falls in love. Roland Young, Billie Burke, Henry Stephenson, Richard Carlson and Minnie Dupree are featured in Paulette's first vehicle for Selznick International Pictures.

Even while under the Chaplin aegis, Paulette Goddard was jealously eager to preserve her own identity and to make a name for herself as an actress rather than as the protege of a famous man.

As to statistical data: the gorgeous Goddard stands 5 feet 4 inches and weighs 110 pounds. Her hair is a deep, lustrous brown and her eyes are ocean blue. She is as brainy as she is beautiful and talented and is blessed with an instinctively right sense of line and color.

She celebrated the start of her new career—which proved to be one of the biggest screen news events of the year—by arriving on the set garbed in a striking gray tweed gored skirt and a short yellow and gray tweed bolero jacket.

She was greeted by waiting news photographers and reporters, and shortly after Director Richard Wallace issued the order to "Roll 'em." Fairbanks walked into the scene, which placed the actress at a desk in a London engineering office.

She spoke her opening lines.

And the new film career of Paulette Goddard was under way.

"Screen Snapshots"

"Screen Snapshots", which presents a host of Hollywood's favorite stars at a huge-size "Ice Skating Arena" situated near the studios and showing how they enjoy themselves, amongst themselves, is truly an excellent added attraction on the programme and the Merrie Melody all technicolor cartoon in addition entitled "A Day At The Zoo", also adds great merriment both for adults and children alike. "Flying G-Men", the popular chapter play is also presented.

A Story Without Words

Beyond informing you that this photo was made in London, there is nothing for us to say. The faces of the boys reading the headline are story enough. England will always muddle through as long as her sons manage to live to the slogan embodied in their world war song—"What's the use of worrying? It never was worth while. So pack up your troubles in your old kit bag and smile . . . smile . . . smile."

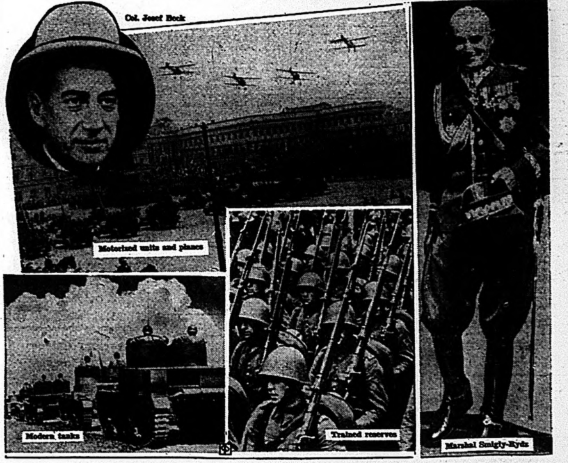
Polish Soldiers on the March in Face of Hitler's Demands



Mobilizing her armed forces in face of Hitler's threats against the free city of Danzig and the Polish corridor, Poland has announced that she will fight rather than abandon any of her territory. More than 1,000,000 men have been mobilized under the direction of the army commander, Marshal Edward Smigly-Ryd. Col. Josef Beck, Polish foreign minister and chief political figure in Poland today, has, up to the present, showed open defiance to all Nazi threats against Polish territory. Political observers, however, predict that a peaceful settlement of the Danzig question will be found.

TORONTO STOCKS CLOSE

Toronto, May 5 —(CP)— Prices held up in the average today on the Toronto Exchange but volume dropped to about the lowest level of recent years. Aggregate turnover was only about 225,000 shares. Narrow gains and losses left the indices about where they were at the close Thursday. Continuance of strained relations between Germany and Poland apparently inspired the note of caution in the market operations.

Base metals, including Nickel and Noranda, were up in the first hour but they forfeited the gains later and at noon the gold shares were down slightly for the day. Western oils also had minor net losses with Home and Calgary-Edmonton showing recessions of 2 to 4 cents.

Industrials held about steady. Senior oils posted gains of minimum fractions and the steels and utilities were irregularly lower.

WALL STREET CLOSE

New York, May 5. —(AP)—The stock market tilted downward today, although selling pressure was unusually light.

A small-sized rally was short-lived and fractional gains were converted into declines of as much. With the ticker tape barely creeping near the final hour, signs of a comeback were in evidence here and there. Transfers were about 400,000 shares.

TIME OF REGISTRATION EXTENDED TILL SATUR.

Due to the fact that immediate notification of the accommodation required is needed by the railway, decision was reached today by the committee in charge of the Belleville school children's special excursion to Kingston on May 21st to set tomorrow Saturday evening as the limit for registrations.

All children wishing to attend this excursion may register at the Canadian National Ticket Office at 243 Front Street, or have their registration made by parent or guardian. Tickets may be purchased separately at this office at the same time. The rate for public school children will be 60 cents return fare. Teachers and school principals may also register their children in groups if it is more convenient.

TWO BOYS ON MOTOR SCOOTERS ENJOY NEW THRILLS OF PLEASURE

The envy of homegoing school children especially those mounted on bicycles, two motor-scooters, said to be the first to invade Belleville "putt-putted" their way up and down East Bridge Street yesterday afternoon.

Two boys who rode the machines eyed disdainfully the foot-propelled machines of their less fortunate fellow youngsters as they darted in and out of the schoolboy parade small motors chugging merrily as they drove the diminutive machines along the pavement.

EFFORTS BEING MADE TO GET SPECIAL TRAIN

Efforts to have a special train calling at intermediate points in the county, to either travel in Kingston or connect with main-line trains at Trenton during the Royal visit, are being made by residents of Prince Edward County, a report from Picton states today.

County residents feel that their chances of seeing Their Majesties will be greatly enhanced if they travel by rail, as they apparently believe parking places will be at a premium while the King and Queen are in Kingston.

THREE BRITISH FLIERS KILLED

London, May 5 (CP-Havas)—Three Royal Air Force fliers were killed last night when a military plane crashed at the Cottesmore airdrome near Catkham, Rutlandshire. Those killed were Pilot Officer Ferale Cooper, Sergeant John Tomkins and Aircraftsman John Sweeney.

Toronto Egg Prices Slightly Easier

Toronto, May 5. — Although a slightly easier tone was evident in eggs, generally unchanged prices ruled for all lines on the Toronto open produce market Thursday, according to the Dominion Department of Agriculture.

Fresh receipts showed some increase on the egg market, and dealers experienced difficulty in keeping offerings clear of prevailing prices. Graded shipments closed at 20½c for grade A-large, 18½c to 19c for medium, 18c for B's and 17c for C grades.

The butter market remained steady, with trading sufficient to absorb receipts. Buying was not in large quantities, but the demand was consistent. Offerings were available however, at 21½ cents. Prices for Ontario creamery solids closed at 21c for No. 1 grades and 20¼c for 38 score.

Montreal, May 5.—Quebec butter and Ontario cheese prices eased fractionally while other offerings held unchanged on open produce markets here yesterday, the Dominion Department of Agriculture reported.

Creamery butter prints to retailers sold for 21½-22 cents a pound and solids for 21-21½ cents.

Graded eggs in used cases were offered at 21½ cents a dozen for A-large; 20, for A-medium; 19, for A-pullets; 19-19½ for B large, and 18-18½ for C. Receipts: 2,345 cases.

12-CAR ROYAL

Inside, the train contains all the appointments of a modern hotel, with living-rooms, business offices, bedrooms, baths and showers, and an inter-car telephone system which can be connected to land telephone wires.

Car No. 1 at the rear of the train contains two bedroom suites for the King and Queen, a sitting-room overlooking the rear platform, and two bedrooms for members of the Royal staff. The sitting-room is panelled in curly birch with ivory ceiling and light brown carpet over a cork floor. One set of furniture has coverings of green, self-toned damask with green taffeta drapes, while an alternative set is done in blue and beige printed homespun with gold drapes.

Dining-Room for Twelve.

The Royal suites each consist of a bedroom, dressing-room, and bathroom. The Queen's bedroom and dressing-room are done in blue-grey colors, with dusk pink taffeta drapes and a white eiderdown. The King's suite is painted cream with drapes and coverings in blue and white glazed chintz and a blue taffeta eiderdown. Both bathrooms are finished in mauve tile, complete with a full-sized bath and shower.

The car also contains a maid's bedroom and a lady-in-waiting's room, both in cream, and a white-tiled bathroom.

The other car to be used by their Majesties contains a large sitting-room in Nile green with old rose furniture and rose taffeta curtains. Ahead of the sitting-room is the Royal dining-room seating twelve persons, and equipped with a set of roller maps so the Royal couple can trace their progress across the Dominion. The car also contains a pantry, kitchen, steward's room, a bedroom for his Majesty's secretary and an office panelled in oak.

JAPANESE PLANES

Chungking is 1,370 miles up river from Shanghai.

While thousands of persons were thronging the narrow streets at 6:30 p.m. (5.30 a.m. E.S.T.) yesterday and with Chungking barely recovered from a raid of the day before which caused perhaps 200 casualties, 27 planes swept overhead and started emptying their bomb racks.

One False Alarm.

There had been a false alarm at 4 p.m. The people had grown tired of sweltering in dugouts tunnelled into the hills of the city and had emerged to go about their business.

This correspondent witnessed the big fires caused by air raids in Canton before that South China metropolis capitulated October 21 and Chungking's fires today looked just as bad—apparently unlikely to be controlled for several days.

Sixteen Chinese planes took to the air at 4:20 p.m. after the first alarm but when the Japanese bombers finally appeared the defending craft were not to be seen.

At least 100 large bombs were dropped. One fell within 60 feet of The Associated Press office which this correspondent had just abandoned. Probably the building was burned. I have not had time to find out.

One bomb struck the electric power plant. The Chungking wireless station was silenced. The home of the British Vice Consul was struck three times and John Tajourdin, Secretary to the British Ambassador, suffered a head injury from falling rock.

B. KILLEEN ROSS

According to information given investigating Police Sergeant Arthur Booth, Fleming was proceeding in a southerly direction on the north side of Station Street, and had arrived at the intersection when the deceased girl is said to have run across the pavement from the direction of Pinnacle Street in front of the heavy truck.

The left headlight of the vehicle is believed to have struck the young girl on the head. Measurements made by police reveal the fact, that the truck stopped within slightly over twenty-four feet from the scene of impact. Fleming, told police, that he immediately got out of the cab, rendered what assistance he could and telephoned police. The glass in the left headlight of the truck was smashed.

According to an eye-witness the vehicle was not proceeding at a fast rate of speed. Two other witnesses who stated they did not see the accident but saw the truck a few moments before it occurred told the same story to police officers.

The mechanical condition of the truck, police stated, was good. Brakes were tested by Police Sergt. Booth and Police Constable Ellis immediately following the accident and found to be in better than ordinary condition.

Preliminary Inquest

At the preliminary inquest held last night under Coroner Dr. Robertson and conducted by Crown Attorney B. C. Donnan before a coroner's jury empanelled by Police-Sergt. Harman, identification of the deceased child was made by an uncle, Dr. F. R. Ross, Bridge St. physician. In his evidence Dr. Ross stated, that he had been called to the hospital, where he made an examination of the injured girl. She was suffering from multiple fractures of the skull, which he stated, resulted in death a few minutes after her admission to hospital.

Questioned by Crown Attorney Donnan, Dr. Ross stated that the deceased girl had a slight turning in one of her eyes, and wore glasses. "She was very careful regarding approaching vehicles when crossing the street," he said, "and could readily distinguish one." He was of the opinion however, that she was not possessed of normal vision.

The jury under Sergt' Harman viewed the body prior to the preliminary hearing. The jury includes Messrs Harry Greenleaf, foreman, Morley Duff, W. K. Kerr, Eddie George, Walter Luscombe, Harry Green, Louis Yeomans and Terry Scanlon.

The 95,000 men who quit the mines last night and early today did so in response to orders from John L. Lewis, Congress of Industrial Organizations chief and head of the United Mine Workers of America, after two months of contract negotiations with bituminous operators collapsed yesterday.

As the pinch of soft coal shortage made itself felt in various sections of the United States — notably in New York, where a 25 per cent curtailment in transit operations was ordered—hope that a solution for the impasse might be found today was expressed in Washington by Frances Perkins, Secretary of Labor.

"I think quite definitely there is a hope that things may be worked out when the policy committee meets again," Miss Perkins said. "It is a very delicate and difficult situation."

be in daily communication with them as they cross the Atlantic and on the tour through Canada and the United States. When Their Majesties return home late in June their daughters will meet them on the quay.

At Waterloo station the departing sovereigns will be met by Queen Mary, the Duke and Duchess of Gloucester, the Duke and Duchess of Kent and Hon. Vincent Massey, Canadian High Commissioner to Great Britain, who will accompany them on the royal train to Portsmouth.

Prime Minister Chamberlain, Foreign Minister Viscount Halifax, Sir Samuel Hoare, Home Secretary, Sir Thomas Inskip, Dominions Secretary and Joseph Kennedy, the United States Ambassador, will bid farewell at the station but will not proceed to the naval base.

The place of honor on the station platform will be given to a detachment of the London Association of Canadian Ex-Servicemen representative of practically every unit of the Canadian corps during the Great War and every province in the Dominion.

King to Inspect Guard

Picked representatives of the three branches of the defence service will supplement the honor guard which His Majesty will inspect before boarding the train.

The royal train is due to leave London at 12:45 p.m. and arrive at Portsmouth at 2:15 p.m.

After the ancient ceremony of presenting the Portsmouth fortress keys to the sovereign on the steps of the city's Guildhall, Their Majesties will board the liner which is resplendent in a fresh coat of white paint. The vessel has been berthed at a special jetty to receive the royal passengers.

As the Empress of Australia leaves the harbor she will be met by a squadron of Royal Air Force planes, which will escort her as far as The Needles, reaching Spithead, the ship will pick up the cruisers Southampton and Glasgow which will escort her across the Atlantic. Other ships of the home fleet in full ceremonial dress will escort her well into the English Channel.

Repulse to Escort Part of Way

The H.M.S. Repulse, originally selected as the ship for the royal voyage but withdrawn as the result of international tension, will accompany the royal squadron part way across the Atlantic. There still is a possibility the Repulse may be commissioned to bring Their Majesties back, but at present it is reported either the Empress of Australia or the Empress of Britain will get the call.

The King and Queen spent today at Buckingham Palace engaged in final preparations for the tour. Apart from a farewell audience for the Prime Minister, His Majesty's day was kept free from official appointments. The King, however, devoted part of the morning to dealing with state papers and clearing up business which must be attended to before his departure.

BRITISH GOV'T

The Prime Minister said views

tions which it was beloved here might be acceptable to Russia.

Earlier in the House of Commons, Prime Minister Chamberlain said a reply to the Soviet proposals would be dispatched "in the very near future."

on the Russian plan had been exchanged with "interested governments" and particularly with France.

"A communication was received yesterday from the French government and it is hoped to be able to send further expression of His Majesty's government's views to Moscow in the very near future," he told the House.

It was believed that the French government had urged Mr. Chamberlain to make some concessions to the Russian point of view.

Delay is Denied

The Prime Minister, under a barrage of questions from the Labor benches, denied there had been any avoidable delay by the government in negotiations which he said were complicated by the fact that France, Poland, Rumania, Greece and Turkey must be consulted.

In a heated exchange across the floor of the House, Mr. Chamberlain accused the Labor leaders of attempting to create the impression that the delay in negotiations was due entirely to the British government.

He declined to make public details of the various proposals and counter proposals advanced by the British and Soviet governments until final decisions were made.

WELLINGTON TO GO ON D. S. TIME

For the first time in its history, since "Smoke" Reynolds, sturdy pioneer built the first log cabin within its confines in 1760, the village of Wellington will observe Daylight Saving Time.

Clocks will be advanced one hour at midnight on Saturday and will remain that way until September 1. The action was decided upon at a special meeting of the village council held a few days ago.

MANY COMPLAINTS OF DUST ON BELLEVILLE-STIRLING HIGHWAY

First complaints regarding dust on the highway between Belleville and Stirling have been voiced by both Belleville and Stirling car owners. Veritable clouds of dust are churned up by the passage of each car and truck, so heavy that at times portions of the road are obscured, it was stated today by a local driver.

Transient Given One Month on Theft Charge

John McMurray, 39-year-old Kingston transient, was sentenced to serve one month in the common jail after being convicted of the theft of a leather windbreaker when the accused appeared before Magistrate E. J. Butler, K.C., in today's local police court. The coat was produced in court and identified by a lad named W. Falkner, 44 Catherine street, as his property.

Mr. Ben Sopha; local second hand dealer, testified he had purchased the coat from the accused for 75c.

"I never saw this man before in my life," protested McMurray. Three ladies, all residents of Catherine street, identified McMurray as being in that section of the city the evening the coat was stolen.

"I was in the hotel drinking beer at that time," interrupted McMurray as Crown Attorney B. C. Donnan, K.C., presented the evidence of one lady.

His Worship did not hesitate in registering a conviction ,especially after Mr. Donnan read a lengthy list of previous convictions, which had been registered against McMurray.

Pleads Guilty to Tea Theft.

Victor Whitely, Belleville, appeared on a charge of the theft of 68 pounds of tea, the property of F. Windsor, of this city. Whitely pleaded guilty through his counsel, Allan Sprague.

"Whitely delivered this tea and knew how to gain entrance to the warehouse. He was the ringleader," suggested Mr. Donnan as he introduced Whitely's list of previous convictions and asked for a penitentiary sentence. "He's pretty young for that," suggested His Worship.

In speaking on behalf of his client, Mr. Sprague pointed out the poor home environment in which the accused was brought up. "To send this young 21-year-old boy to the penitentiary would make a hardened criminal of him," pointed out Mr. Sprague.

"He is of the manufactured product right now," interrupted Mr. Donnan.

As there are three others implicated in the case, His Worship remanded the accused for sentence.

Charge Dismissed.

"Do you wish to pass judgment in the Chaggares case?" asked Mr. Donnan of the bench, Nick Chaggares, local restaurant proprietor, having appeared on Monday charged with causing an unnecessary noise and disturbance at night by playing an electrical musical device too loudly. The charge arose following complaints of nearby residents.

"The city bylaw covering this matter is completely out of date, it was passed in 1888, I find," commented His Worship as he dismissed the charge and the accused.

Given Suspended Sentence.

Norman T. Ferguson, Oshawa, pleaded guilty to a charge of perjury, the charge arising from the evidence given by the accused in a recent U.P.A. court held before Judge Madden in Belleville. Ferguson was given a year's suspended sentence and assessed the costs of the proceedings. He was represented in court by Mr. F. S. Swartz, Oshawa lawyer, who requested leniency and introduced character evidence on behalf of his client.

WORK ON THE LAND BECOMES GENERAL

With the advent of weather favorable to "Spring's work", farmers of the district are slowly overcoming unusual seasonal difficulties in the preparation of the soil for seeding. While early peas have already been sown in many high-lying parts of the district, lower levels in many parts are still too wet for cultivation.

The ground is gradually drying out and by next week seeding operations are expected to be general.

Albert Weir, Allisonville farmer stated yesterday that ground in his district appears to be hard beneath the surface. "A good warm rain would work wonders" he said, "not only in stimulating Spring growth of fall grains, but would prove valuable aid in the prepara? tion of as yet uncultivated fields."

WITNESS STICKS TO IDENTIFICATION OF M. MACDONALD

By WILLIAM H. HOGG
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Toronto, May 5—(CP)— Bookmaker Jimmy Windsor was not the kind of man who could be shaken-down by racketeers, according to evidence produced today by the crown at the MacDonald murder trial. The statement came from the brother-in-law of the slain bookie, John McDermott, an employee of a Toronto bottling plant and an eye-witness of the shooting.

Despite rigorous cross-examination by defence counsel, McDermott stuck to his identification of Mickey MacDonald as the man who fired the fatal shot into Windsor's abdomen the night of Jan. 7 and of Alex as one of the two other gunmen who invaded the Windsor home.

Witness Denies Story.

McDermott denied telling police or newspapermen that Windsor paid $1,200 to any "protection association which had been exploiting small bookmakers." He added the opinion: "I don't believe Windsor ever would pay for protection."

Through identification witnesses, the crown is attempting to put the finger on the Toronto brothers as Windsor's gangland slayers. At resumption of the trial, Mr. Justice G. F. McFarlane refused a crown motion for permission to question Cecil (Doc) Clancy, a prosecution witness, about a statement he gave police Feb. 10.

In an earlier statement, Clancy had given police certain information that differed from his evidence at this trial and the crown wanted to get the second statement on the record as well. According to Clancy, Mickey MacDonald admitted on the night of the murder that he had "just killed a man."

To Recall Clancy

Crown counsel Cecil Snyder indicated Clancy would be recalled, however.

The jury foreman announced it was the jury's wish to see the north side home of Windsor where the bookmaker was slain. The judge said this would be arranged.

John McDermott, Windsor's brother-in-law resumed his testimony, declaring it was Windsor's habit up to three months before his death to bring home the receipts from his barbecue stand at Lansing just north of the city limits, in a canvas bag.

McDermott quoted the "No. 1" gunman in the slaying (identified by him as Mickey MacDonald) as saying: "give us the bag."

Photographs of the interior of the Windsor home were introduced. One showed Windsor's body lying in the hallway, where McDermott said Windsor fell and where he was kicked by his slayer.

After being herded upstairs with other members of the family, McDermott heard and automobile pulling away "with a roar" from the front of the house. He called police and went downstairs.

Died in 10 Minutes

Windsor died about 10 minutes after the shooting, McDermott said his face showed a black mark over one eye and blood came from a cut in the lip.

Those in the house were "hysterical for days" after the shooting, the brother-in-law said.

"It was terrible around there for a week," he continued. "My wife had to have a doctor and I couldn't eat for three or four days because of the excitement."

McDermott told of interviews by police in the days following the shooting.

The night after the murder, McDermott said, he picked out a rogues' gallery photograph as that of the No. 1 gunman (the one who did the shooting). It was among 40 or 50 and later he picked out another picture of the same man. On four or five occasions at police headquarters he viewed lineups of prisoners.

Anglers Convicted Of Illegal Fishing

Charged with violations of the Game and Fisheries Act, two local residents were convicted of illegal fishing and convicted before Magistrate E. J. Butler, K.C., today. A fine of $10 and costs was imposed in each case.

The first man to appear was charged that he did fish by means other than angling, to wit, snagging, contrary to the Ontario Game and Fisheries Act.

"I am on relief and not working" pleaded the one man in defence.

The second was charged with spearing fish, both charges being preferred by Game Warden Sitwell. "I was informed it was all right to spear fish in the river," replied the accused as he admitted the offence. Both men were apprehended illegally fishing in the Moira River recently. The fines will be paid, the accused men assured the court.

VOTE $100 GRANT TO CHEESE SHOW

First among the district counties to contribute towards the holding of the second annual British Empire Cheese Exhibition and Dairy Show which is scheduled for this city at the end of November next, a grant of $100.00 was made to the Central Ontario Cheesemakers' Association at a meeting of the Hastings County Cheese Producers' Association last evening at Stirling. Ed. Pyear, Stirling, is county president of this group.

HEARTBURN KEPT HIM AWAKE

Afraid to Eat Square Meal

What a worry he must have been to his wife! No food agreed with him. Acid indigestion made him positively wretched. In this letter, his wife tells how he got welcome relief:—

"My husband developed a wretched form of gastric acidity," she writes. "Meals were a misery to him. He often could not sleep for heartburn. Business kept him from home a great deal, but when he did get a spell at home, I gave him Kruschen Salts. I was amazed at the results. That weary look left his face, and his indigestion gradually disappeared. It is a treat to hear him say, 'I'm hungry.' It seems too good to be true."—(Mrs.) K.M.E.

The numerous salts in Kruschen help to promote a natural flow of the digestive and other vital juices of the body. Soon after you start on Kruschen, you will find that you are able to enjoy your food without distressing after-effects. And as you persevere with the "little daily dose," you will see that Kruschen brings glorious relief.

Mayor Bone Orders Checkup of Cars Parked Over Limit

Makes Survey at 9.30 and Finds Parking Space at a Premium

Before nine-thirty o'clock this morning the Mayor upon the invitation previously of a number of local motorists, had made a personal inspection of Front Street, and found that, even at this early hour, parking spaces on Front Street for shoppers both from the city and outside points, were as scarce as dollar bills on the street.

That, in his own personal opinion, Belleville merchants themselves were the biggest offenders, arriving early on Front Street and parking their cars for the day in the only available locations.

An immediate trip to the police station was made by Mayor Bone where an order for police to begin an immediate checkup of cars violating the one-hour parking bylaw was made.

Albert Students Have Long Week-End May 19 - May 22

Students Have Opportunity to Attend Any of Three Welcomes To Their Majesties

Students of Albert College will have every opportunity to attend the celebration at Ottawa on Saturday May 20 when His Majesty King George Sixth with Her Majesty Queen Elizabeth will unveil the Dominion War Memorial, or the visit to Kingston on Sunday May 21st or the reception and welcome by the City of Toronto on Monday May 22nd as a long week-end has been declared to begin May 19th at 4.00 p.m., after classes and to extend to Monday evening May 22nd.

Registrar Taylor K. Franklin in a letter copies of which have been sent to all parents and guardians of students, information to this effect has been sent states that "our students if they so desire it, may have the "once-in-a-lifetime" opportunity of seeing Their Majesties."

It 's pointed out that there will be the privilege of going to Ottawa, Kingston or Toronto to see the King and the Queen. The question of taking the students in a group to Kingston was canvassed but it was decided to leave the choice with the students as to which of the celebrations they wish to attend. It is pointed out that parents wish their sons and daughters to see the King and Queen and in view of this the long weekend has been arranged.

AIR MARSHAL BISHOP TO VISIT AIRPORT

Montreal, May 5 (CP)—Air Marshal W A. Bishop took off by airplane today from nearby St. Hubert Airport on a trip which will take him to Kingston, Trenton and Port Hope to ascertain facilities for military flying at those Ontario points.

The marshal, a Canadian Great War ace, was accompanied by Mrs. Bishop.

Ottawa, May 5 (CP)—In his tour of Ontario cities to ascertain facilities for military flying, Air Marshal W. A. Bishop is acting in his capacity as a member of the Honorary Air Advisory Committee, established by the Dominion Government to advise the Department of National Defence.

It is believed here the trip is entirely a personal one, taken by Marshal Bishop so that he may keep in touch with developments in military flying. There is a Royal Canadian Air Force base at Trenton.

104 WILL DINE WITH THEIR MAJESTIES

Washington, May 5 (AP)—A maximum of 104 guests will attend the White House dinner June 8 for King George and Queen Elizabeth and all will be public officials and their wives. Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt disclosed yesterday that the number was limited by the size of the horseshoe table in the state dining room.

Perspiration Road

By HATTIE OXFORD

Rolfe Rupert Cleverton could flash enough charm into the eyes of his intimates, his wife included, to blind them to the shame of his joblessness and his easy acceptance of an inadequate living on the little his late parents had left behind them.

For months Rolfe had been keeping a secret until it should be ripe enough to share. That time had now come.

Madeline, his wife, had closed a fat, family magazine with emphatic energy and turned to smile at her handsome husband just entering the room. "Rolfe, once more I've had to shut up that insistent salesman who jumps out at me here, there and everywhere in this magazine. He interrupts my reading of household economy articles by showing me tempting luxuries I know I can't afford."

"Scrap the economy articles, but open your book and tell me what luxuries you see there you want," Rolfe invited graciously.

Madeline complied, laughing: "This and this and this and—" she continued turning pages.

"You may have all these and — more," her husband assured her grandly; "for I am a rich man!"

In this way came the Clevertons' good fortune: Years back, three brothers, Richard, Rupert and Rolfe, loved the charming and beautiful Miranda. Richard won her. The two others went their separate ways to foreign lands to forget Miranda in piling up the dollars. Their piles grew higher and higher, but they did not forget.

In the course of time, they received photos of a little niece who had Miranda's big brown eyes. Their checks made life easy for Richard, Miranda and the little girl.

A few years later, uncles received photos of grand-nephew, Rolfe Rupert, who also had Miranda's eyes. Uncles' checks sent grand-nephew, grown to young manhood, through college.

The bachelor uncles, now old and broken in health, were living together in California, surrounded by all the comforts their wealth could buy. Rolfe Rupert, shortly before his marriage, was summoned thither to meet these relatives for the first time. Uncle Rupert was hobbling around on a cane, Uncle Rolfe was in bed.

Said Uncle Rupert: "The bulk of our possessions will go to you; we are glad to do this for Miranda's grandson."

"Miranda's eyes!" Uncle Rolfe murmured weakly, studying young Rolfe's face.

Uncle Rupert, apparently the stronger of the uncles, died soon after the young man's return home, and now young Rolfe was in full possession of a substantial legacy from him.

But, a few years later, Rolfe and Madeline could see clear through to the end of those "everlasting dollars."

"You must get a job, Rolfe," urged Madeline.

Rolfe shrugged his shoulders. "Oh, Uncle Rolfe can't last much longer."

Suddenly, out of the West, Mr. Vincent Carr, advanced in years, but powerful in personality and possessions, sprang onto the activities of the eastern city where the Clevertons lived.

One day he was standing before a decadent, colonial mansion he had bought to restore. Rolfe, money all gone, his first child recently arrived, approached him for a job, just plain job, anything.

"I have an excellent opening for you in South America," Mr. Carr surprised him one day. "It will be hard at first, but it will pay you roylly in the end, if you do right by it."

Rolfe studied the ground in frowning thought.

"What!" Mr. Carr shot at him. "Hoping your remaining uncle will die soon?"

Rolfe started nervously, blushed, "I—I—he—he—he suffers and wants to go, and I—"

"I know more about him than you do. Listen. He got wind of the fact that you had exceeded all decent speed laws in racing through his brother's money. 'Get me out of bed,' he commanded the best physician in the country. 'I want to spend my own hard-earned money myself, as it ought to be spent. I want the spoiling of my nephew to stop right here; I've spoiled relatives enough.' The man's will and the doctor's skill changed your uncle sick in bed to the Rolfe Vincent Carr before you now, fine and fit, and likely to make what he leaves behind look like 30 cents. As for you Rolfe Rupert Cleverton, if you want to spend magnificently: first travel PERSPIRATION ROAD as I did. Go to South America, but DON'T keep sending me photos of my great-grandniece."

Rolfe controlled his feelings and accepted PERSPIRATION ROAD.

Little Benny's Note Book

Pop was smoking to himself in his private chair and ma said, Well, Wilyum, you ought to feel honored sitting here talking to me so informally.

I do, but why ought I? pop said, and ma said, Because it seems I'm getting to be quite a fish in the social swim. I received an invitation today that will make you sit up and refuse to believe your eyes, she said.

You cant possibly be presented at the English court, because we're not going to England, pop said, and ma said, I've been invited to attend Mrs. Therston Willows' garden party to open her big country place for the season, and of course you know it's an open secret that Mrs. Therston Willows is the exclusive of the exclusives, with her picture in the siosiety collums practically every time you look.

That's swell, I hope you have something to wear, pop said, and ma said, I'll have something, you can count on that.

I'd even lay a bet on it, but it would only add to the expense, pop said, and ma said. Only one thing puzzles me, shall I send her a check before or afterwards?

A check for Peet sake? pop said, and ma said, Well naturally, I'd hardly expect to go out there and sordidly hand her the cash. The proceeds are to be divided between 3 hospitles and the tickets are strictly by invitation and each one is numbered, that's what pleases me.

I think perhaps I'd better wait to send the check, I dont want to appear too anxious, ma said.

If I were you I'd wait till she sent me a bill, that'll show her who's who pop said, and ma said, Now Willyum dont be out of the question. On 2nd thoughts I'll send it to her right now while I think of it, that'll make her realize she's not the only one that can dash off a casual check, she said.

And she sat down at her desk and did it.

Halloway

Halloway —The closing meeting of the Halloway Y. P. S. was held on Wednesday evening in the church with a good attendance present. The president Mrs. Don Rose opened the meeting. Responsive reading was taken from the hymn book. The treasurer, Mrs. Ed. Emerson reported the sum of $60.00 realized after paying expenses. Mr. Cooke then gave a few remarks. Mrs. Clayton Reid had charge of the program. The Scripture lesson was read by Mr. Colin Donald after which Mrs. Coleman Townsend outlined the topic "Pause for Refreshment". Miss Dorothy Reid gave a humorous reading entitled "Taxes". Miss Aleita Horton then favored with a beautiful solo "The Church by the side of the Road". Mrs. Ed. Emerson then thanked all those who had taken part in the play and who helped in the Young Peoples' Society. Reading entitled, "View-Points" was given by Mr. Ralph Smith. The meeting closed with hymn 284 followed by prayer by Mr. Cook. Mrs. Reid then conducted an interesting contest.

NERVOUS WOMEN

If you are nervous, weak or have headaches or backaches, take Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. It tones the female organs, calms the nerves, improves nutrition and so strengthens you. Mrs. J. M. Stott (photo above), of 265 Brock St., Brantford, Ont., says: "I was so awfully nervous that everything upset and irritated me. I felt weak, draggy and worn-out and often had such miserable headaches I could cry. After using Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription a short while, my appetite improved. I was stronger, wasn't so nervous, and became sturdy and robust. I felt better in every way." Buy it in liquid or tablets at your drug store.

Mr. and Mrs. J. B. Hagerman and family, Minto, were Tuesday evening guests of Mr. and Mrs. Harold Rowe.

Mr. and Mrs. Ed. Emerson and Eric were Sunday visitors of Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Townsend.

Mrs. W. Cadman is spending some time with her sister, Mrs. Herrington, Wooler.

Judge Rewards 23 Years' Faithful Service

Working without pay for 23 years on the farm of his uncle, with the understanding that the farm would be bequeathed to him and then finding the farm had been bequeathed to another person, was the fate of Jimmy Dunbar, 67-year-old Wingham farmer. Mr. Justice Godfrey, of the supreme court of Ontario, however, upset the will and gave Jimmy his payment for 23 years of faithful work by awarding him the farm.

Polish President's Daughter Visits America

Leaving her troubled countryland for a brief time, Mrs. Alexander Bobkowski, daughter of President Moscicki of Poland, is pictured with her husband as they arrived in New York to attend the World's Fair. Mr. Bobkowski is vice-minister of the ministry of communications in the Polish cabinet and is an official delegate to the Fair.

Their Majesties Inspect King's Scouts

Despite the hectic preparations for their visit to Canada, the King and Queen still found time to attend to their official and social duties in the few days preceding their departure for this country. The Queen is shown here greeting a lady spectator as she and King George, RIGHT, attended the Old and New King's Scouts' St. George Day parada at Windsor castle.

Operates at Gun Point

In a diny back bedroom in a north side Chicago rooming house, Dr. S. Hirschfeld, was forced at pistol point, to remove a bullet from a gunman's body. The gunman had, with a companion, a few minutes before, staged a hold-up in a tavern with resultant death to a civilian and probable mortal wounds to two policemen who participated in a gun battle with the bandits. Dr. Hirschfeld is holding the razor blade with which he performed the major operation.

Wreckage of Old Sailing Vessel May Solve Mystery

Experts Say it May be That of Lasalles Griffon Which Disappeared 260 Years Ago

Ottawa, May 5 (CP)—The weatherbeaten wreckage of an old sailing vessel lying half-submerged in Mississagi Straight in Lake Huron at the western end of Manitoulin Island may solve a 260-year-old mystery—the fate of the good ship Griffon, which disappeared in September, 1679.

Sieur De Lasalle, French explorer who first followed the Mississippi from the Great Lakes to the Gulf of Mexico, loaded the Griffon with furs in Green Bay, Lake Michigan, and sent it back to Niagara Falls. The vessel was lost, and many historians believe the bleaching skeleton near Mississagi Straight lighthouse off Manitoulin might be that of the ill-fated exploration ship.

Roy F. Fleming, Ottawa historian and expert on Lasalle's explorations, has asked the Dominion government to raise the wreck this summer. The Transport Department has an appropriation of $25,000 in this year's estimates for raising wrecks and destroying derelicts.

Examined By Experts

The old wreck has already been examined by numerous historical experts and identity of the ship has been under dispute. Samples of its oaken timbers have been sent to the Anthropology Department of University of Chicago to determine whether the timbers might have come from the Niagara Peninsula where the Griffon was built. A bolt and nut were sent to the National Laboratories of the Department of Arts and Trades at Paris, and the French authorities reported they were made in France prior to the 18th century.

An anchor believed lying on the bottom of the straight may have been the personal gift of Louis XIV to Lasalle and will be sought when and if the Griffon is raised, in the belief it may bear identifying markings.

Mr. Fleming examined the wreck in 1930 on behalf of the Ontario Public Works Department, but without reaching a definite conclusion. Since that time the skeleton has been inspected by such experts as H. G. Tucker, Owen Sound, Ont.; Dr. W. J. Baskerville, Wayne, Mich.; C. H. J. Snyder, Toronto; Dr. Fred Conboy, Toronto; Commander E. F. McDonald Jr., Chicago; Dr. George Fox. President of the Michigan Society of Anthropology; and Prof. M. Y. Williams of Vancouver.

By GENEVIEVE KEMBLE

A DAY of stirring events, with the faculties and forces under very high pressure, is read from the predominant lunar and mutual aspects. Elders and long-established organizations may provide the main interest, although new matters are also under excellent stimuli. There is a sign of some duplicity or trickiness, calling for vigilance and shrewdness in all dealings. The sentimental, social or domestic qualities also have benefic auguries for activity and happiness.

Those whose birthday it is are assured an extremely lively and interesting year, with high activity in both old and new affiliations. Elders figure importantly, promising gain. But there is an undercurrent of fraud, treachery of the mysterious. The personal relations afford much gratification.

A child born on this day may be active, enterprising, versatile and responsible, with many intellectual, cultural or social traits. It may have leanings to the mystical.

Poland United Behind Beck on Danzig Issue

Poles See No Need For Mediation Report at Warsaw

People Undisturbed as Possible Demonstration by Germany Against Danzig is Rumored

MOVE UP TO HITLER

Belief is Held Next 24 Hours May Determine Future of German-Polish Relations

Warsaw, May 6 (AP)—Belief the next 24 hours may determine the future of Polish-German relations prevailed here today as Poland awaited the full German reaction to Foreign Minister Joseph Beck's speech rejecting demands on Danzig and Pomorze.

The Polish view, both among officials and the people, was that Poland had nothing more to do or say—that the next move was Germany's.

Rumors that Germany might stage a warlike demonstration in the direction of the Free City ofb Danzig and Pomorze (the Polish Corridor) produced no visible alarm: Poles only shrugged their shoulders and said they were ready for anything.

Reports that Germany might suggest mediation through a third power brought the assertion from semi-official circles that Poland has never believed in outside arbitration and sees no reason to resort to such methods.

Observers agreed that more complete unanimity would be difficult to find than in the press comment on Beck's speech. Throughout the comment, the thought ran that Poland had not closed the door to negotiations with Germany, that the Polish memorandum clearly indicated the basis on which Poland would negotiate, and that any gestures toward peaceful relations must come from Germany.

Wind and vegetation! It is well-known that evaporation increases as the wind speed increases, and therefore wind is a great drying agent in the case of all vegetation. As wind generally increases with elevation, the taller the plant the more drying it must endure. Therefore, in a windy country or exposed places, low plants as grasses do best. Wind thus limits the heights to which plants grow, because the higher they grow the greater becomes the drying action due to wind and the more water is lost by transpiration, or evaporation from the leaves. It may be noticed that trees standing alone have the largest part of their crowns on the lee side; likewise the tallest trees in a grove are on the lee side.

Negotiations Still Possible Over Hitler's Demands for Danzig and Strip of Land Opinion in Berlin ....

German Newspapers Allege Attacks in Poland Upon Germans and German Property

By LYNN REINZERLING
Associated Press Foreign Staff

Berlin, May 6—(AP)— German spokesmen emphasized today that negotiations still were possible with Poland over Chancellor Hitler's demands for Danzig and a German-controlled strip through Pomorze (Polish Corridor).

They added, however, that the impetus for further discussions must come from Joseph Beck, the Polish Foreign Minister, who in a parliamentary speech yesterday condemned as "one-sided" those demands and Hitler's denouncement of the Polish-German non-aggression pact of 1934.

A flood of newspaper comment spread through the controlled German press which tried to put Poland in the unhappy position occupied by Czecho-Slovakia last fall before the Fuehrer's demands caused the disintegration of that republic.

Calls it 'Insult' to Hitler

While Nazis denounced Colonel Beck's address as an "insult" to Hitler, no word came from the mountain chalet near Berchtesgaden where the Chancellor planned for the future.

Foreign Minister Joachim von Ribbentrop conferred with Hitler six hours yesterday and left later for Italy. It was believed Von Ribbentrop took with him Hitler's reaction to the address to a conference with Count Galeazzo Ciano, Italian Foreign Minister.

Manslaughter Charge Follows Girl's Death

Toronto, May 6.—(CP)—William Jefferies, 24, and Milton Ritchie were charged with manslaughter last night in connection with the death of five-year-old Verna Groves, killed instantly when struck by a truck in front of her home.

Three men were seen to leave the truck after the accident according to police. Jefferies and Milton were arrested sometime later while a third man who gave a voluntary statement at police station was allowed to go. Jefferies also was charged with being drunk in charge of a car and having no driver's licence. Milton also was charged with being drunk in charge of a car, having defective brakes and allowing his car to be driven by a person not possessing a driver's licence.

Recommendations for Improved Front St. Lighting to be Made

Recommendations and plans for a new Front Street lighting system, and adoption on Catherine and West Bridge Street of the system now in use on Dundas and other residential streets of the city will shortly be placed before the City Council, Alderman Harry Rollins, chairman of Light, stated today.

Adoption of the system now in use in Brampton, Ontario, will be urged in the report. This system is composed of sidewalk standards with right-angle overarms upon which are placed powerful lights with reflectors placed above them. The standards are "staggered" or placed at alternating intervals on both sides of the street.

The decision to recommend the Brampton system followed a recent survey of the street lighting systems of Brampton, Orillia, and Bowmanville by Chairman Harry Rollins; Alderman Laurie Lewis, representing the Belleville Retail Merchants' Association; Chairman Morley Duff of the Belleville Public Utilities Commission, and O. H. Scott. manager of the same organization.

"Front Street is urgently in need of a brighter and better lighting system." Chairman Rollins stated, "and it was with the view of seeing what could be done and what systems other cities and towns are using that the survey was made."

"A change in the systems of Catherine and West Bridge Streets will also be recommended," he added. "If possible the present lighting system on, these streets will be changed to that now in operation on Dundas Street."

Initial cost of the scheme is now being worked out by Manager O. H. Scott of the Utilities Commission, and in the near future a concrete report, and recommendations will be placed before the City Council.

King George To Perform Great Acts of State In Ottawa

London, May 6—(CP Cable)—"O! come back soon," said one newspaper placard today in farewell to the King and Queen who left today on their journey to Canada.

Others printed simply "God speed Their Majesties" and still others told readers where they could best watch the royal procession from Buckingham Palace to Waterloo station.

The morning papers editorially hailed the royal trip.

The Times said: "The King will be welcomed in Canada, not as a visitor, but as the natural head of Canadian society and the embodiment of Canadian national life. He will take counsel with Ministers and perform great acts of state in Ottawa."

DIPLOMATS JOIN GENERAL FLIGHT FROM CHUNGKING

Casualties in Bomb-Wrecked Chinese Capital Estimated at 5,000

FIRES UNDER CONTROL

Chungking, May 6 (AP)—Foreign diplomatic officials joined a general flight today from this bomb-wrecked Chinese capital, parts of which still were burning from Japanese air raids that caused an estimated 4,000 to 5,000 casualties.

The British consulate and embassy were moved from their badly-damaged buildings to the south bank of the Yangtse River. Staffs of the German embassy and consulate, whose buildings were not damaged, took new quarters in the outskirts.

Before the raids Wednesday and Thursday, the British consulate general buildings were opened as a shelter for Chinese. Subsequently bombs fell in the compound, killing an estimated 30 Chinese and wounding 55.

Many foreigners took refuge in the Canadian Mission Agency. The Methodist Hospital Mission could not be approached because of fires, but it was said that all foreigners there have reached safety in the outskirts of Chungking.

Explanation Unacceptable.

(Sir Robert Craigie, British Ambassador in Tokyo, informed Renzo Sawada, Assistant Secretary of Foreign Affairs, of the "gravity" of the bombing of the British consulate in Chungking and described as "entirely unacceptable" the Japanese explanation that anti-aircraft units were located near the consulate.)

Chungking, whose normal population of about 650,000 had been swollen by refugees to an estimated 2,000,000 before the raids, began to assume a deserted aspect as hundreds of thousands crossed the river or fled to the countryside. Nearly all foreign firms in Chungking proper prepared to come across the Yangtse.

Fires started mostly by incendiary bombs had been brought under control, despite a water shortage. A light rain fell Friday afternoon.

The German consulate for a time was in the path of two fires. German diplomatic officials, unable to help, witnessed the death by burning of more than 100 persons trapped in the fires. One German woman named Huber was killed and her body found near the consulate.

Their Majesties on Way to Canada

BECK IS FIRM NOT PROVOCATIVE IS VIEW OF PRESS

London Daily Express Says It is Duty of Britain to Support Poland

TIMES' VIEW

London, May 6—(CP)— Morning papers of the United Kingdom today generally agreed that the Warsaw speech by Colonel Joseph Beck, Polish Foreign Minister, was firm but not provocative.

The Daily Express (Independent) called the speech "an utterance of a man who was ready to take his seat at the conference table if he could get anyone to join him there."

The Manchester Guardian (Liberal) saw Danzig "just as much as Austria or Czecho-Slovakia a test of German readiness to negotiate," and said: "Even if the German claim to Danzig were justified (which it is not) it will still be the duty of this country to support Poland in insisting that the matter can only be discussed amicably without the threat of armies mobilized on the frontiers."

The Times (Independent) said the problem of Polish-German relations was one which must be settled by diplomacy and added: "No doubt the government of Warsaw are ready to make improvements in the position of German minorities in Polish Pomerania and elsewhere and to grant yet more facilities to Germans on through journeys. There are also other points which might be brought up in the course of their negotiations."

'Danzig Not Worth War' Says Times

Repeating its previous statement that the problem of Danzig was "not worth a war" The Times said any attempt to solve it by force would "convert it at once from a local dispute into one more instance of methods which the world is no longer prepared to tolerate."

The Yorkshire Post (Conservative) said the speech was "perfectly firm but also quiet in tone and unprovocative..... In view of our guarantee to Poland the speech is of the greatest importance to the people of this country but it also is such a speech as can raise here no regrets that the guarantee was given."

The Daily Mirror (Independent) wondered whether it was any use of showing moderation to Chancellor Hitler anyway.

Agricultural Minister Gardiner Defends Act as Necessary and Helpful

DAIRY INDUSTRY

Ottawa, May 6—(CP)—If it is proper for parliament to vote millions to maintain labor in industrial centres during a depression, it is equally proper for it to maintain in western wheat areas the farmers who produced great wealth and purchasing power in past years, in the judgment of Agriculture Minister Gardiner.

At the same time, he refuses to concede that western wheat growers have had more than their share of public aid, in comparison to other branches of the agricultural industry. He has figures to back him up:

Up to this year, the only losses the Dominion government has taken in connection with its wheat marketing operations were $11,000,000, lost on its handling of the 1934 crop.

In contrast, the government has spent $36,800,000 in the last 10 years on the livestock and dairying industry, and of that amount $27,500,000 was spent east of Winnipeg.

'Small Industries Committee' Formed At Quebec

Will Seek to Establish Small Industries

Quebec, May 6—(CP)—An organization to be known as the "Small Industries Committee" has been formed here, for the purpose of promoting the business of small industries, it was learned from the Department of Trade and Commerce yesterday.

The committee setup with the cooperation of Hon. Joseph Bilodeau, Minister of Trade and Commerce, Agriculture Minister Bona Dussault and two members of the legislature, Emile Boiteau, representing Bellechasse and Hormisdas Langlais, sitting for Magdalen Island will be accorded necessary credits by the government.

The organization will specialize in establishment and stimulation of small industries, seek to bring about improved relations between the producer and consumer, and aid farmers in marketing their produce.

Emile Boiteau was chosen President of the committee, H. Langlais, vice-President and J. E. Chartier, Quebec, Secretary. Albert Rioux, Deputy Minister of Agriculture and Louis Coderre, Deputy Minister of Trade and Commerce were named directors.

Ship's Band Plays 'O Canada' as Empress of Australia is Slowly Pulled Away from Dock by Tugs

'HAPPY VOYAGE' SHOUT

(By R. K. Carnegie)
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Portsmouth, May 6.—(CP-Cable)—King George and Queen Elizabeth sailed from this naval base today for their precedent-breaking trip to Canada, the United States and Newfoundland amid the salute of warships and shore batteries and the cheers of their subjects.

The Canadian Pacific Liner Empress of Australia, glistening under a new coat of white paint, weighed anchor at 3 p.m. B.S.T. (10 a.m. E.D.T.) and headed out across the Atlantic for Quebec City.

As the mooring ropes were cast off and tugs pulled the liner's nose slowly out from the dock, the King and Queen stood watching flag-decked warships in the harbor and the cheering thousands of spectators massed on the shore.

Wave Hands as Ship Draws Away

Frequently they waved as the ship drew away and as the liner passed through the narrow harbor mouth, the roar of cheering and thunder of salutes rolled out.

The King and Queen smiled broadly as they stepped from the train which brought them from London to the cheers of hundreds who massed about the station. They wave acknowledgment of the welcome.

They were greeted officially by Lord Mottistone, who as Jack Seeley was war-time commander of Canadian cavalry. In his present office as Lord Lieutenant for Hampshire he headed the official party receiving Their Majesties.

With Lord Mottistone, L. N. Blake, Lord Mayor of Portsmouth and P. J. Sparks, town clerk, the King and Queen walked to the Guild Hall, about 100 yards from the station, where the ancient ceremony of presenting the King with the keys of the Portsmouth garrison was observed with traditional pomp.

It was the first time the ceremony had been performed since 1818 when Queen Victoria visited the great naval base on the way to the Isle of Wight.

Through Flag-Decked Streets

From the Guild Hall Their Majesties were driven through 1 1-2 miles of flag-decked streets of the great city. The streets were thronged with cheering subjects, many of whom had stood in line since early morning.

The progress of the royal procession was kept to a strict schedule and precisely at 2:40 p.m. (9.440 a.m. EDT)) Their Majesties reached the naval jetty where the Empress of Australia was berthed.

Canadian Veterans Cheer Sovereigns in Old London

By JACK BRAYLEY
Canadian Press Staff Writer

London, May 6—(CP Cable) —The King and Queen today heard from 72 Canadian war veterans "the three heartiest cheers ever heard in Waterloo Station."

As the royal train started for Portsmouth, where Their Majesties were to embark on their voyage to Canada, Captain J. R. Aldridge, commander of an honor guard of 72 Canadian ex-servicemen, doffed his blue beret and led the cheers.

Their Majesties, leaning out of the train window calling good byes, quickly looked beyond the gathering of government and diplomatic well-wishers to the double line of cheering Canadians. They smiled broadly and waved enthusiastically.

Summoned by King

Previously Major C. G. Arthur, Chairman of the Canadian Veterans Association was summoned by the King who told him:

"I want to thank you Canadians for coming here to bid me good bye. It was a thoughtful gesture and the Queen and I appreciate it very much."

The veterans subsequently sent a "bon voyage" message to Their Majesties aboard the Empress of Australia.

Before the King and Queen arrived at the station, Hon. Vincent Massey, Canadian High Commissioner in London, reviewed the former soldiers and complimented them on their smart appearance.

The men wore civilian dress with berets carrying the insignia of their wartime regiments and green maple leaves.

Princesses Ride With Parents

Accompanied by an escort of Lifeguards, the King and Queen drove from Buckingham Palace to Waterloo Station.

In the carriage with their Majesties were the Princesses Elizabeth and Margaret Rose, who went to Portsmouth with other members of the Royal Family.

The King wore the uniform of an Admiral of the Fleet while the Queen wore her favorite shade of pale blue. The princesses dresses also were of pale blue.

For hours before their Majesties left the gates of Buckingham Palace crowds lined the route of the state procession to the decorated station.

Their Majesties and the princesses rode in an open landau drawn by four grays.

Standard Lowered

The royal standard fluttering atop Buckingham Palace was lowered as the carriage passed the wrought iron gates into the Mall. It won't be seen again in the United Kingdom until the King and Queen return.

At the station, decorated with flags and bunting and small maple trees. the King was met by Queen Mary, whom he kissed on both cheeks.

On the platform the King conversed earnestly with Viscount Halifax, the Foreign Minister. His Majesty turned and said something to Prime Minister Chamberlain and Mr. Chamberlain laughed. The jest was inaudible to newspapermen nearby.

Earlier, at Buckingham Palace, a detachment of the King's Guard in scarlet uniforms and bearskins presented arms as the carriage drove past the forecourt.

The Royal party was preceded by a captain's escort of lifeguards, sunshine glinting on their burnished breastplates and helmets.

Mall Is Crowded.

A roar of cheering which was quickly taken up along the whole length of the crowded Mall greeted the Sovereigns when they left Buckingham Palace to begin their long journey.

The King and Queen faced the line of route and the Princess sat opposite them as their carriage passed the cheering crowds.

The demonstrations of affection were continued throughout Whitehall, along Bridge street and on Westminster Bridge. The Royal party reached Waterloo station just after 12.30 p.m. (7.30 a.m. E.D.T.) and entered the York Road entrance.

York Road and the station precincts were jammed with onlookers. The heavy press of the crowd shortly before the arrival of the Royal party gave the police a little trouble and it was with difficulty that the road was kept clear.

U. S. Navy Announces Cancellation of Trip

Washington, May 6—(AP) —Three United States battleships and 1,400 midshipmen will be kept out of possible trouble zones in European waters as the result of a naval order published today.

Without explanation, the navy announced cancellation of plans to route the annual three-month practice cruise of the midshipmen to Europe. A new itinerary will keep the Naval Academy students on this side of the Atlantic.

Every year for more than a decade the Academy's first and third classes have cruised to Europe for summer training. They were scheduled to sail from Annapolis, Md., June 2 and to return August 31, after visiting British, Dutch and Baltic ports.

Russia's Ambassador to London Discusses Counter-Proposals

London, May 6—(AP)— Ivan Maisky, Russia's Ambassador to London, called on Foreign Secretary Viscount Halifax today and discussed Great Britain's counter-proposals to the Moscow government on its participation in the Anglo-French system of security pacts.

The government was said by one responsible source to have accepted in principle a Soviet proposal for a mutual assistance alliance among Britain, France and Russia but to have sought modification of Moscow's wider suggestions for a comprehensive collective guaranty to smaller nations.

Foreign office spokesmen, however, refused today to confirm or deny this or other reports on the nature of the British reply.

It was stated by authoritative sources that the British note contained acceptance of the principle of a triple military alliance among Russia, France and Great Britain. In other quarters it was said the principle of an alliance merely had been accepted as a "basis for discussion" on the form which Russian participation in the bloc would take.

The note was approved by the Cabinet Foreign Affairs Committee yesterday and was expected to be delivered to the Soviet Foreign office by Ambassador Sir William Seeds today. Britain was said to have offered to sign a pact in which she, France and Russia would stand together in the event of any one of the three being attacked.

Any attack on Soviet Russia in the Far East was understood to be excluded from the British plan however.

The note also was reported to contain a proposal that Russia give separate promises to aid Rumania and Poland "If and when" they need help. In effect the proposal, if accepted by Moscow, would reinforce Anglo-French guarantees to aid those two countries in resisting any action threatening their independence.

City and District News

S. A. COMMITTEE HOLDS MEETING

An interesting meeting of the Special Names Committee for The Salvation Army Building Campaign Fund, was held in the Y.M.C.A. last night. Mr. H. W. Ackerman is chairman of this committee. It was particularly pointed out that if $3,000 is raised in this campaign, it is the intention of The Salvation Army to build a new Citadel in Belleville, costing around $15,000. The spending of this amount of money would naturally be of much benefit to Belleville, therefore it is sincerely hoped the campaign will be an outstanding success. This committee will commence their work right away.

MANY TRIPS PLANNED FOR THE WEEK-END

Local garages which have been doing a good spring business in car tuning up during the past week or so report arrangements are being ostensibly made by local car owners for the first of the week-end holiday trips through the district tomorrow. Providing fine weather continues, it is expected that roads through the section will be well filled with automobiles. Woods of the district are expected to be visited for the first wild flowers of the season, and a few hardy younger souls of Belleville are engaging in the survey of the possibilities of the season's first swim in the bay.

LICENCE PLATE ON POLICE CAR TAKEN

The height of something or other was seen in Belleville recently when thieves are believed to have stolen the rear licence plate of the Ontario Provincial Police cruiser automobile. According to O. P. P. authorities, the licence was firmly affixed to the rear of the vehicle on Thursday night, it is positively known, but today the licence was found to be missing. "We do not believe it could have shaken loose and the car is properly garaged in a downtown garage every night," explained O.P.P. heads as they puzzled over the missing licence plate today. The matter was then reported to headquarters in Toronto.

BAY LEVEL SHOWS RISE OF THREE INCHES

A further rise of nearly three inches in the record high water level of the Bay of Quinte was registered at the dock of the South End Yachting Club this week. Many of the low water docks along the harbor front are at present well covered by the water.

1,100 CHILDREN NOW REGISTERED

A preliminary check by the special School Children's Excursion to Kingston committee made this morning revealed that up to the present a total of 1,100 public and separate school children of Belleville had been registered for this memorable trip to Kingston by the Canadian National Railways on the morning of May 21st.

It was further reported that application had been made the committee by officials of the Prince of Wales School in Thurlow for accommodation for sixty children of that school and twenty-five children from the Foxboro school.

A communication to the Kingston committee on arrangements today asked accommodation for 1200 pupils from Belleville on this special excursion.

ELECTED PRESIDENT

CATCHES LARGE TROUT

The boys who afishing would go last Saturday and came back with nothing but stories of high water and bad luck must doff their hats to Ted Renouf, New Toronto, who to date has caught the daddy of the 1939 edition of speckled trout.

Renouf, with friends, was fishing in the district north of Brighton (he refuses to give the exact location) when a beauty weighing one and one-half pounds and measuring 14 1-2 inches took his lure. Other members of the party succeeded in getting some fine fish but none that would compare with the one hauled in by Renouf.

Fire in Front Seat Of Car Gives Local Citizens a Scare

Fire breaking out under the front seat of the automobile in which they were riding gave four Belleville residents the scare of their lives yesterday.

Returning from Smith's Falls where they had attended the 100th anniversary of the founding of the Smith's Falls Lodge A.F. & A.M. Messrs. John Cook, Charles Cochrane, Harry Broughton and Harold McElrath, members of Moira Lodge No. 11, discovered smoke arising from the vicinity of the front seat, when about five miles west of Kingston.

A minute later flames broke out and when the driver hurriedly stopped the car, the quartette jumped to safety. Quickly regaining their composure they conducted a strenuous twenty-minute fight with the flames finally reducing the blaze. The car was not damaged mechanically and the party was able to return to Belleville without assistance. The front seat of the car was damaged by the fire, which it is believed started from the vicinity of the battery.

Claim Loamy Soil Is Best for Lawns

Probably no other single factor has any greater influence on the appearance of the property than the condition of the lawn. It is often referred to as the outdoor carpet.

A loamy soil is best, but where clay is encountered it is well to have the first three or four inches incorporated with sand of pulverized peat. Underdrainage will also help. Sandy soil should be improved with a top dressing of good soil or well rotted manure.

Where soil is poor a good fertiliser may be made up of four parts sulphate of ammonia, three parts acid phosphate, or steamed bone meal, and one part of muriate of potash. Apply this at the rate of 300 pounds per acre, or 1 ounce per square yard of lawn. Work well into the soil by raking. This may be used twice during the growing season, applied during wet weather or any time where plenty of water is available.

A standard lawn grass mixture consists of Kentucky blue grass and white Dutch clover. This gives for general purposes the most satisfactory lawn. Kentucky blue grass will withstand more drought, careless cutting and abuse than any lawn grass in common use. In addition, it will make a very fine lawn when good treatment is accorded.

The seed should be sown in the early spring, or mid-August or September. It is simply sowed broadcast and raked in with a fine rake. After this a good rolling is desirable, followed by a good watering if possible.

Sow the seed at the rate of four to six bushels per acre of Kentucky blue to which may be added one to two pounds of white Dutch clover and sometimes a bushel of Timothy is added to give results the first year. Eventually the Kentucky blue grass is the only occupant of the land. A small area of 50 x 100 feet, or 5,000 square feet will require about one peck of Kentucky blue and one good handful of white Dutch clover.

A well kept lawn needs rolling, especially in early spring, before the lawn gets too dry. This will assist in levelling and repeated rollings during summer will keep it in good condition. Rolling when the lawn is dry is of little avail.

If a good lawn is to be maintained plant food is necessary in some form. Probably a couple of times during the summer will suffice for the applications already mentioned. Where irrigation or watering can be practised, the lawn can always be maintained in a green vigorous condition. One heavy soaking once a week is far superior to a light sprinkling every night.

If winter killing occurs, making the lawn patchy, this may be quickly remedied by loosening the soil of the killed areas and sowing some more seed which may be raked in and then covered with a sifted loam and rolled.

It is good practise, where a lawn is thin, to apply a little seed each fall, which will materially assist in maintaining that dense turf so much desired.

Further information may be obtained from John F. Clark, Horticultural Specialist, Ontario Department of Agriculture, Parliament Buildings, Toronto.

MENTAL LAPSE

After calling on a man who works on the fourth floor of an ancient office building on lower Fourth Avenue, a friend of ours rang for the elevator, which eventually appeared from upstairs. The operator, an elderly, thoughtful man, closed the door and hesitated. Then he turned to the passengers and said apologetically: "I seem to have forgotten. Which way were we going?"—The New Yorker.

Regulations That Must be Observed on the Excursion For Children to Kingston

General instructions received by the committee in charge of the rail excursion of Belleville public and separate school children to Kingston on Sunday, May 21st from the Kingston Municipal Board of Education which Kingston body has been charged with the arrangements for receiving children there from the various Ontario municipalities note that the following regulations must be observed.

Daylight Saving time will be used in the mention of all stated time.

Pupils must be accompanied to Kingston by teachers or adults officially appointed to be in charge.

Seats only will be provided at the George T. Richardson Memorial Stadium. Belleville pupils and those in charge have been notified that their own lunches must be brought.

Water will be provided at convenient hydrants.

Seating at the Stadium in Kingston will commence at nine o'clock.

The Stadium gates will be closed at eleven. Children must be in their places by eleven.

The Union Jack, size six by eight inches, is the flag approved by the committee.

General instructions will be given at the Stadium over a loud speaker public address system, with particular instructions on how to leave the grounds and avoid crowding.

It is desirable that each group arriving at the Stadium display a banner showing the name of the town, county or district they represent.

The Royal automobile containing Their Majesties will be the second car to enter the Stadium grounds.

God Save the King will not be sung on the arrival of Their Majesties.

3,000 Scotch Pine Completes Pine Cliff Forest Reserve

15,000 Seedlings Have Been Planted in Last Seven Years

IN SIDNEY TWP.

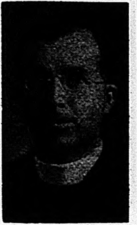
With the planting of 3,000 Scotch Pine seedlings this month, Pine Cliff Forest Reserve in the Township of Sidney stands completed bringing seven years of reforestation to a close.

The recent dry years have taken a heavy toll of the young trees with the result that replantings have been necessary. Trees planted seven years ago are ten to twelve feet in height while those of more recent planting show proportionate growth. It is estimated that there are now 15,000 living trees in this plantation mainly of the Scotch Pine variety, but there are also several thousands of White and Red Pine with a few Butternuts and Walnuts.

The original name of the farm of which this young forest is a part was Oak Cliff due to the fact that a steep hill was covered with White and Black Oak. It is hoped that the new name of Pine Cliff will be as appropriate as this forest continues in growth.

The township road bordering this reserve has a commanding view of the townships of Sidney and Thurlow, the City of Belleville and even into Prince Edward County.

For the last seven years the plan of reforesting has been carried out under the direction of K. M. Bird, local school principal.



REV. DR. J. SEMPLE, who is showing much interest in The Salvation Army Building Campaign Fund.

BROILERS FEATURE MARKET TODAY

Range in Price 45c to $1.15 per Pair — Eggs Sell at 23 Cents

Brilliant May sunshine, warm breezes and all the ingredients that go to make a perfect Spring day, by far the most seasonal experienced thus far, enhanced the colorful greens, yellows and reds of Spring flowers and produce at the city market today, where one of the largest Saturday crowds of the season took advantage of a better-than-usual offering of produce.

Young, tender, meaty broiler chickens headed the hit parade of produce today with prices ranging from as low as 45c to $1.15 per pair. The varied quality of the birds attracted the fancy of shoppers and by a late hour stocks were practically depleted. Other chicken supplies were fair with yearling birds selling at from $1. to $1.25 each. Fowl and other species of hen of uncertain age were offered from 60c each.

Other price tones remained fairly steady. Egg prices were firm with extra select "A" selling at 23c. Ungraded stocks and some mediums were quoted at 21c and 22c the dozen.

Home-cooking booths were well patronized with some lady vendors in the inside market offering fresh rhubard from the garden at 10c a bunch. Farmers' butter was quoted at 50 and 55c for two-pound rolls with "singles" going at 25c and 30c.

The birght fresh colors of pansy plants in full blossom added a distinct spring-like background to the greens of new cabbage, tomato and onion shoots on the outside market. Pansies were offered at twenty-five cents per small box with gladioli shoots going at fifteen cents for the same quantity. Small cabbage shoots were offered at 15 cents the small flat with onions going at the same price. Tomato seedlings were offered at $1.00 the flat with transplanted plants in flats of fifty selling at 60 cents each.

Staple winter vegetables were offered in gradually diminishing stocks with parsnips, carrots, turnips and beets selling at 50 cents the bushel lot.

Potato prices showed little or no change from quotations of a week ago. There were planty to choose from with offerings being the heaviest seen in weks. Good quality "spuds" could be bought for $1.35 per bag with average quality selling at from $1.15 to $1.25 per 90-pound bag.

Northern Spy apples were offered at from $1.50 to $1.75 per hamper-lot with cooking varieties being available from 80 cents per bushel.

Lovers of fish had plenty to enthuse over today with a fine offering being displayed for their benefit. Fresh whitefish and lake trout were offered at 20 and 22 cents the pound with mudcats quoted at two pounds for 15 cents. Pike could be had for 10 cents the pound and "suckers" or mullets at four fish for 25 cents. Large panfish were offered at 25 cents the dozen.

Six-weeks old pigs were again plentiful with no change being noted in the $5.50 to $6.00 quotations of a week ago.

Refugee Question To be Discussed

On Sunday evening at 8.30 o'clock at the Victoria Avenue Baptist Church, a public meeting will be addressed by Raymond Booth of the Society of Friends, Toronto, and Constance Hayward, executive secretary of the Canadian National Committee on Refugees and Victims of Political Persecution. This problem of the refugees from Europe will be discussed.

Police Blotter

With the advent of fine spring weather, that tends to tempt motor owners to uncover the family "gas buggy" and enjoy the spring-like atmosphere, increased parking is daily being seen along Front street with the result that the city police department was forced to more rigidly enforce the city parking bylaw, that provides parking for a period of only one hour in the downtown area.

Yesterday, following a police check up, several delinquent motorists who had carelessly parked their automobiles in the downtown area and went about their personal business for a greater period than sixty minutes, returned to find police stickers affixed to the windshields of their vehicles, instructing them to report at the police station. No warnings will be given motorists violating the one hour parking bylaw this year, all will be subject to conviction and a fine, Chief Kidd stated today.

Alleged to have been causing a disturbance in the east end of the city James McGarry, transient, was arrested ast evening on a charge of intoxication. He was remanded until Monday.

While patrolling his beat at 2.30 a.m. this morning, P. C. Evans found a bag of coke abandoned on South John street. The coke is believed to have been stolen and dropped in transit. The bag was taken to the police station for safe keeping.

Chief Kidd revealed today charges of selling adulterated maple syrup, contrary to section 4 of the Maple Industries Act, had been preferred against William Wong, local Chinese restaurant proprietor. The case will be heard in police court next week.

BROTHERS HELD FOR THEFT OF GAS

Carman and Amos Robertson of Newmarket Caught After Chase

Following a hectic police chase through the streets of east Belleville, city police arrested two brothers who gave their names as Carman and G. Amos Robertson, Newmarket, early today and later charged them with the theft of gasoline. When apprehended by Constables Evans and Arnott several empty tin cans, a funnel and two lengths of garden hose were found in the rear of the Robertson car.

Shortly before 3 a.m. today police received a call to the Nurses' Residence, in connection with the Belleville General Hospital, where residents stated two men had been seen siphoning gasoline from an automobile parked on the residence property. Constables Arnott and Evans hastened to the scene in time to see an automobile speed hastily away along Dufferin avenue. The police gave chase and after a hectic race finally halted the fleeing vehicle. Later at the police station Sergeant Arthur Harman took a statement from G. A. Robertson, police revealed today.

The Robertson car and all of the utensils that could be used in the siphoning of gasoline were held by police, while the Robertson brothers were remanded in custody.

TO START CAMPAIGN TO RAISE FUNDS FOR BANCROFT RINK

The 21st Battalion Club, Canadian Legion, of Bancroft will shortly launch a financial drive whereby it is hoped sufficient funds will be raised to erect a sports arena and skating rink within the confines of the northern village next Autumn.

According to the Bancroft Times, residents of the village are being asked to get solidly behind the movement so that the youth and age of the village can enjoy their sport in a modern enclosed building.

Tweed Farmer Fined For Cruelty to Horse

Ronald Fluke Charged With Working Horse Suffering With Large Sore

When his curiosity became aroused upon seeing a bull and horse hitched to a plow, Constable T. Taylor of the Humane Society investigated the queer sight in Hungerford Township recently and his investigations resulted in Ronald Fluke of Hungerford Township being hailed into county police court at Tweed yesterday on a charge of cruelty to animals.

Fluke appeared before Magistrate J. L. Lloyd charged that he did use a horse for plowing purposes which had an open wound some four inches in diameter beneath the horse's col-

"The wound did not seem to bother the animal," pleaded Fluke in defence.

"It looks like a clear case of extreme cruelty to me," came back His Worship as he fined the accused man $10 and costs and warned him not to use the horse again until the wound had healed.

Philip Simmons, Tweed, was convicted of being found in possession of illicit liquor, commonly referred to as 'moonshine'. Unable to pay the assessed fine of $100 and costs, Simmons was given four months in the common jail in default.

"Where did you get this moonshine?" asked Crown Attorney B. C. Donnan, K.C.

"I found it underneath a woodpile," replied Simmons.

"I don't believe that story," interjected His Worship.

"Well, that's my story," added Simmons as he shrugged his shoulders.

PICTON

Kiwanis Club of Picton to Operate Softball League

Picton, May 5.—A softball league in Picton was definitely assured when the sports committee reported at the Kiwanis Club yesterday. Five teams have signified their intention of entering and May 10 was set as the closing date for entries. Each team may sign fifteen players and the eleven-inch ball will be used.

The club made plans for a celebration on May 24. This will be in the evening at the fair grounds when softball, fireworks and a model airplane flying contest will be features. Proceeds are for work among underprivileged children. The club decided to supply glasses to an underprivileged child.

The Glen Allen, the Hepburn Bros. freighter, arrived here yesterday morning, leaving later for Montreal on her first trip of the season. The boat was overhauled at Cornwall during the winter and called at Bay of Quinte ports before coming here for canned goods. Capt. Ben Bowen of Trenton is in command.

Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth Leavens visited at her mother's, Mrs. Annie McCullough's on Wednesday.

The W. A. meeting was held at the home of Mrs. J. Haight with a very good attendance.

Mrs. Allen McGarvey is spending a few days with Mrs. Sarah McCullough.

Mr. John McCullough, Belleville took dinner with his brother, Albert McCullough, on Thursday.

Mr. Harold Mouck was in Napanee on Saturday.

Mr. Harold McCullough has recently had his building wired for electricity.

Police Blotter

Found in a dazed condition and his clothes water-soaked, Roger Mallory, 56 Murney St., was found by police wandering in the vicinity of the Canadian National Railway bridge shortly before midnight last night. Mallory was taken to the police station by P.C. Thomson where he related a tale of having been beaten by two transients and robbed of $1.25.

Mallory informed the police he had met up with the two strangers earlier in the evening and had consumed some wine, later to be attacked by the men, beaten and robbed. Later he fell into the Moira River as he attempted to cross the railway bridge, he added. City police obtained a description of the two alleged assailants and scoured the city in a futile effort to locate them. Mallory was later taken home.

Refusing to pay for a taxi ride ordered subsequently resulted in a local woman being apprehended and detained at the police station for questioning last evening. Later a charge of intoxication was preferred, the woman being allowed to return home with instructions to appear in police court next Monday.

A decrease of transients seeking shelter at the police station was noted last night when only eleven were housed in the cell block.

"Germans of all classes realize they have raised world-wide indignation against them by the Jewish persecution."—Sir Philip Gibbs.

Let's All Get Together In Clean Up Campaign

Clean Up, Paint Up, Plant Up, and all the other ups are now to the fore, and with spring well advanced and fine weather present and prospective householders and business men get the urge to Brighten Up, Paint Up, Clean Up, and Plant Up. Hence the Belleville Chamber of Commerce will launch the annual spring clean up campaign Monday next for a Paint Up, Clean Up, Plant, Up Campaign which will if fully co-operated in make Belleville the Spotless Town it deserves to be. Canada is preparing to present its brightest face for the visit of the King and Queen and even if Their Majesties do not stop here we will have the satisfaction of being prepared should they change their minds, or circumstances permit a change of plans to include Belleville. In any event this Clean Up,- Paint Up, Plant Up, Campaign will make us feel better, look better and contribute to better health, better times and better feeling.

This is a campaign in which every citizen has a part and the Chamber of Commerce will appreciate active assistance, helpful suggestions, and co-operation all along the line.

His Worship Mayor Bone has issued a proclamation asking all citizens to cooperate in this Campaign.

Let's get together.

PAINT UP! CLEAN UP! PLANT UP FIX UP!

History Up to Date, New Modern Encyclopedia Is Now Available

Ontario Intelligencer Readers Get New Publication at Reduced Price. "A Book a Week" Habit Begins Strong and is Growing Every day. Brisk Demand for Volume No. 1

Great interest is being taken in the offer to readers of this newspaper of the new Standard American Encyclopedia at a price which amounts to little more than a gift. Brisk demand for Volume 1 has developed and recipients are delighted with the book which more than bears out advance notices.

Many readers are no doubt planning to get A BOOK A WEEK habit, using the Courtesy Coupon in the large newspaper announcement for Volume 1, and saving five regular coupons from the Daily Ontario Intelligencer for Volume 2 and succeeding volumes until the entire set of fifteen volumes is acquired.

With the Courtesy Coupon and 59c Volume 1 is acquired, while five regular coupons and 59c will secure each succeeding volume.

The set comprises 15 volumes and will be made available to all readers of this paper on the book-a-week plan. You sign no contract and you are not obligated to continue getting a book a week if you decide to discontinue getting them. But once you get Volume 1 we are sure you will not want to miss the other succeeding volumes — the value is so exceptional.

Over 50,000 subjects are dealt with and the set contains over 5.000 illustrations. The binding is most attractive, and the set will make a handsome addition to your book shelf. It is something you will be proud to own. It will be the envy and admiration of all your friends, who will be amazed when you tell them how little it cost you.

This is how the book-a-week plan works. All you need do is to save a coupon a day out of the Ontario Intelligencer and present these coupons together with the small additional sum required to any of the redemption stations which will be listed in the paper next week.

If you are a regular subscriber to the paper you may obtain the complete set right away if you especially desire it, but we wish to point out that it will cost you the same whether you get it all at once, or on the book-a-week plan.

The set is thoroughly international in its scope, the British Empire and Canada in particular, being given the prominence which we as Canadians think it deserves. There are no less than six pages devoted to the Coronation of our present King and two whole pages are devoted to pictures of the Royal Family.

Volume 1 contains many things of interest to us. With world events moving so rapidly, the 16 full page coloured maps contained therein show at a glance just where the changes in frontiers are taking place. It also gives the complete story of the abdication of King Edward the VIII, one of the most sensational events in the history of the Empire and certainly in our times. You probably heard his speech over the air, but have forgotten the actual words, even though you may have retained vivid memories of the main points of the speech itself. (You will find the complete speech in Volume 1)

And in the same volume you will find also the Story of the history of Abyssinia, the history of Aviation, of Agriculture and a host of other things of equal interest and importance to young and old alike.

THEIR MAJESTIES ARE ON THE WAY

This has been a memorable day in Empire history and one of the unforgettable days in the lives of Their Majesties King George and Queen Elizabeth for the British Isles have said farewell and wished a prosperous voyage to the King and Queen as they make their way down the English Channel to the Atlantic in their crossing to Canada for the first royal tour in the Dominion's history. On this side of the ocean millions of Canadians await the coming of their Sovereigns and the people of the United States prepare to welcome their royal guests and show them American hospitality.

The eyes of the Empire peoples are centred on the royal journey, their thoughts are with the rulers as they cross the sea.

These coming days at sea will furnish an opportunity for rest and relaxation for Their Majesties as they approach the long series of public functions n which the people of Canada will by millions greet them and pay them homage. Prayers from every portion of the world will rise for a calm and happy travel across the Atlantic in the lovely month of May.

As the Empress of Australia bearing the King and Queen and the royal retinue draws closer and closer to Canada, the work of preparation will continue in Canada for the receptions to be tendered their Majesties. In the Homeland the royal progress across the sea and through the Dominion will be followed hour by hour with intense interest.

That the occasion may be one of the happiest in the lives of the King and Queen is the prayer of all British subjects and friends of the British Empire throughout the world. The events of the coming days and weeks will be a source of great happiness and joy to the people of Canada and of the kindly neighboring republic, the United States.

EUROPEAN NEWS

News of the British acceptance of the Russian plan of a triple military allionce of Britain, France and Russia, with a supplementary proposal as to protection of Poland and Rumania against any possible aggressor was one of yesterday's developments following hard upon the "release" of Commissar of Foreign Affairs Maxim Litvinoff by Moscow.

The expected international news yesterday of course was the rejection by Polish Foreign Minister Beck of the German plan for Danzig and the fifteen-mile "Corridor" across the Polish Corridor to join the Reich with its province of Eastern Prussia and its recently retaken Memel. But Beck did not close the door on discussions.

German reaction to the Beck address of rejection was a statement that it was unsatisfactory to Germany.

The fourth piece of news international was Virginio Gayda's remark that Italy would seek to remain neutral in the German-Polish dispute and so be free to allow Mussolini to act as mediator and possibly to urge Warsaw to some concessions.

This is the kaleidoscopic view of European affairs within a few hours though both the Russian and the Polish questions have been germinating for a long time, being vital matters in the present political construction of Europe.

LATE W. G. MORROW'S BEQUESTS

The late William George Morrow, manufacturer and philanthropist of Peterborough made many bequests to educational, religious and other institutions besides private legacies. At the time of his death he was chairman of the Board of Governors of Albert College and in his will appears a benefaction for that institution.

Members of the college board appreciated the services of Mr. Morrow as a governor and as the chairman of the board for his experience in business and municipal life, his high idealism, and his interest in education made him an able chairman.

Other institutions will have shared by his givings, among them institutions in Peterborough.

Men who have the wide experience that Mr. Morrow had in municipal and financial life, and such an interest in progress and Christian culture and at the same time have the means of making gifts such as he has given, do an invaluable service to the generation in which they live and to the generations which follow them, because as used by such organizations and institutions these benefactions continue to radiate influence in known and unknown ways upon many lives and for more than one generation.

NOSTALAGIA

It's springtime in the homeland, and it's there that I would go,
To the highlands and the islands, and the scenes I used to know.
I'd like to feel the western breeze blow soft from off the sea,
An' hear the mavis singin' in the gloamin' o'er the lea.

I'd like to tread the road that runs along the Firth o' Clyde,
Through a' the bonnie country where Ayrshire folk abide;
I long to see the heather hills, to view a highland glen
That is forever haunted by Charlie and his men.

I'd like to see the Cullins on the misty Isle o' Skye,
And hear upon a lonely moor the curlew's plaintive cry;
And when I see the sun set o'er hills I love the best,
My soul shall find its peace again, my heart shall find its rest.

NEARLY ONE AND A HALF MILLION DOLLARS IN HOUSING LOANS ($1,403,379) were approved in April an increase of 69 per cent over approvals for April, 1938. So reports Finance Minister Dunning in regard to the National Housing Act. The number of family housing units financed totalled 438, compared with 235, an increase of 86 per cent. Average loan for the month was $3,204 per unit; 32 per cent were financed by loans of $2,500 or less, and 80 per cent by loans of $3,500 or less. Housing Act loans approved to April 30 totalled $32,032,273, with Ontario leading all the provinces with a total of $15,121,305 invested in new homes. Looks like prosperity, plenty and abundant, is on the way back.

Several handsome new autos are bouncing about the streets these days. Can you imagine anything which would settle one's dinner better than a fast ride in an auto upon the "smooth" streets of Belleville?

A large crowd was at the armouries last evening to witness a fifteen-mile race in which seven competitors started, but only two went the entire distance. At a few minutes after nine o'clock Col. Thomas Stewart started the runners on their long jaunt. The following started in the race: H. Vickers, L. Vickers, E. Wallace, C. Wallace, H. Groves, A. Burman, and F. Moxam. Eleven laps around the interior of the Armouries constituted a mile. At the start all the boys ran fast and Harold Vickers soon set the pace and took the lead, which he maintained to the finish. His time was given as 1.40. Charles Wallace was the only other contestant to finish. P. J. Jennings was referee.

Bonuses to Manufacturers. The following advertisement has been inserted in leading newspapers: "The City of Belleville offers special inducements to manufacturers seeking a location. Besides its situation on the Bay of Quinte, in the centre of one of the wealthiest agricultural districts in Ontario, possessing superior facilities for shipping by water, it is the principal terminus of the Midland Railway System, which extends its branches to several points on the Georgian Bay, and through the lumber country in and beyond the Muskoka District. It is also the most important station between Montreal and Toronto on the main line of the Grand Trunk. Besides the natural advantages for manufacturing operations, the city offers inducements to parties seeking location. Exemption from taxes, free site for building and money aid on certain conditions. Quiet Chat With R. B. Bennett "Boy, take this card to the Right Honorable Mr. Bennett," said the desk man at the Mayfair Hotel when I called to see the former Prime Minister of Canada.

Mr. Bennett is inhabiting the Mayfair pending the alteration and furnishing of the country house he recently bought in Surrey. It is an old house and bringing it up to Canadian standards of ease and comfort involves considerable fuss with the walls, floors and plumbing, not to mention an investment in furniture and decorative items.

As a bachelor of wealth and elegant tastes, Mr. Bennett is hugely enjoying the arrangement of his new establishment. He has lived most of his life in hotels and putting a house of his own in order is clearly an adventure to his taste.

One incident of his invasion of Surrey has amused him. An aged dweller in Dorking has recalled that 75 years ago there was a footpath across the land which is now Mr. Bennett's domain. Though nobody has used it since Gladstone's first premiership, the old inhabitant wants the public right-of-way proclaimed and preserved. What will come of his application to the local council is in doubt but Mr. Bennett evidently doesn't mind. The footpath issue rather pleases him. It is all part of the jolly game of getting to know England and the English.

About Mr. Bennett since he came to London there have been many reports. One was that he, along with Stanley Bruce of Australia, and possibly General Smuts, was to enter the House of Lords and there speak the mind of the overseas Empire. Another put him in the House of Commons and in a reconstructed cabinet . . .

From a long conversation with Mr. Bennett—it lasted two hours—I gathered that he has put aside political ambition. At any rate, he apparently does not want office. Probably no one has ever doubted the intensity of Mr. Bennett's canadian patriotism, but it may surprise some to know that there was a break in his voice when he said: "If I were well enough for active politics I would be in my own country." Mr. Bennett melts when he talks about Canada. If you ask him why he left it, he will say that he could only escape hard work in politics by migrating. He came to England for a quiet life, he explains, and is enjoying it very much. His quiet life, of course, is not a dull one but includes what would be to a man of lesser stamina an almost furious social round.

Mr. Bennett thinks the British public is extraordinarily alert and well posted on events of the day, and he puts it down to the fact that the average Englishman carefully reads two or even three newspapers a day. Mr. Bennett even likes journalists now. One of his evenings here was at the London Press Club, a festive place where abstainers like Mr. Bennett are rare indeed, and he pronounced his journalistic hosts on that occasion a most interesting crowd. Talking about this, Mr. Bennett was almost jolly and convivial.

His observations on current politics, Canadian and British, were not for publication but one may quote what he said about some British public men. He greatly admires Mr. Chamberlain. "His brain is packed in ice," he said. "His impulses are completely controlled by his reason. Probably the only time he let himself go was in his Birmingham speech when he was really indignant. That was the greatest speech of his life. To understand Mr. Chamberlain you must know that he constantly thinks about what war would mean to this country. He thinks of women and children being killed in air raids." Mr. Bennett spoke with authority about the mind of Mr. Chamberlain. They had talked both before and after the speech at Birmingham.

Mr. Bennett also admires Winston Churchill. He is pleased that Mr. Churchill is to be the chief speaker at a Conservative dinner where he will be officially welcomed to England. He thinks of Mr. Churchill as an adventurous man. "When I think of him," he said, "it isn't as the great House of Commons man, the stylist or the historian. I think of him as a man who was at the charge of Omdurman. Do you realize he's one of the few survivors of that day?"

The conversation was discursive and included Cockney humour, British wealth and its sources, the shipping industry, and the London theatre. Mr. Bennett much enjoyed Bernard Shaw's "Geneva," a skit on contemporary affairs. "What a brain Shaw has," he said. Mr. Bennett's choice of a play for a London visitor is this acidulated satire by an Irish Socialist.

Has Mr. Bennett mellowed and grown tolerant in retirement? As to that I cannot say but can only report that he looks happy and talked with me as amiably as if newspapers had never caused him a moment of exasperation. — By J. B. M. in Winnipeg Free Press.

THAT BODY OF YOURS

By James W. Barton, M.D.

The Cause of That Exhausted Feeling After Influenza

In addition to the great number of deaths that occurred during the influenza epidemic of 1918-19, there was a large number who were very slow in regaining their health and strength. Of course, many flu patients were attacked by bronchopneumonia and pneumonia, and it was only to be expected that they would be slow in recovering. Yet among those who were fortunate enough to escape these complications there were many who, though fully recovered from the 'flu, were unable for some weeks to resume their usual occupation.

What is the cause of this prolonged tiredness and exhaustion?

Many physicians believe that as most of the fatal cases of influenza were due to the fact that the heart could no longer do its work, the tiredness or exhaustion of those who recover from influenza is due to a great extent, to a 'tired' heart. And it is thus feeling of tiredness which prevents these individuals resuming their work for weeks or months that actually saves their lives because the heart has thus a real chance to regain its strength—its reserve power.

Dr. E. E. Wood in the South African Medical Journal reviews a number of cases he has seen where the heart trouble was caused by influenza. The influenza had not only weakened the heart muscle but had interfered with the rhythm or regularity of action of the heart. He makes a statement however that will lessen the worry of influenza patients.

"Attacks of influenza are so numerous and widespread that the majority of attacks can have little or no effect upon the heart, but it is quite possible that those frequent cases of tiredness or exhaustion are due to a mild and passing effect upon the heart. The action of influenza on the healthy muscular heart is mild, but it may produce a serious increase in any heart condition known or even unknown to be present. Dr. Wood suggests the use of the electrocardiograph in suspected cases.

"THE FLASHING STREAM"

Reports come from New York that the play "The Flashing Stream", has closed after a week's run. This is an unimportant item of intelligence in itself. Probably few people in these parts have heard of "The Flashing Stream".

It is a play by the English novelist Charles Morgan, and the interesting point is that it ran almost endlessly in London. Critics there raved of its virtues. They said that here was a drama that contributed to the glory (somewhat tarnished in late years) of English literature of the stage.

Then it was sent for presentation in New York. "The Flashing Stream" opened two weeks ago. To say that it was received with critical bronx cheers would be misleading, but it was praised with faint damns. And several of the play reviewers expatiated upon the curious tastes of the English critics.

This mystery of the occasional glaring differences in the tastes of New York critics (and audiences) and those of London is an interesting subject. It reminds one of the fate of an American play that had a similar experience last year. In February, 1938, Paul Osborne's fantasy, "On Borrowed Time" was opened in New York. It was hailed as a minor masterpiece.

Six months later it was produced in London. The Times critic said it was "beyond the pale of criticism". The other critics were harsh, the bitterest blast coming from Lionel Halves of the News-Chronicle, who rolled up his sleeves and hammered out this delicate tribute: "'On Borrowed Time', in short, is trite, overwinsome, confused, tricky, unconvincing, pathetic, ill-shaped, ingenuous, indeterminate, callow—and a calculated, bare-faced, blue-eyed bore."

What happens when a play crosses the Atlantic? We leave it to the hands-across-the-sea experts to decide. Surely it is not merely a case of critical differences of opinion.—Ottawa Citizen.

Capital Close-ups of Week

By ROSS MUNRO
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Ottawa, May 6—(CP)— While Conservatives challenge the government to call a general election and western Liberals revolt against the wheat legislation, a crisis with a laugh develops over a matter of masculine vanity.

Providing a light touch to ponderous parliamentary debates, the capital's high government officials, cabinet ministers and even members of the parliamentary press corps are turning into temperamental "glamor boys" on the problem of sartorial splendor for the King and Queen's four-day visit here.

A private tempest brews in the cabinet over the $1,200 Windsor uniforms supposed to be worn at several royal functions. An Eastern-Canada Minister refuses to purchase one of the fancy suits and there are reports others will join the dress rebellion. The Prime Minister along with Ministers Dunning, Howe, Lapointe, Mackenzie and Crerar already have Windsor uniforms and are trying to smooth out the trouble.

The decision of many Ottawa luminaries to acquire new morning clothes and evening dress for the royal visit has jumped the tailoring business to almost record proportions along Sparks and Bank Streets. Newsmen, particularly those assigned to cover the entire tour, are joining in the scramble for new formal clothes. Even grey toppers might be worn during the trip, probably for the first time in the history of Canadian journalism.

Straws in The Wind

The only major public question that has not been put through the parliamentary mill this session is the St. Lawrence waterways scheme and it is unlikely to come up before prorogation. There is considerable sympathy in the cabinet for the plan but it will not be formally taken up with Washington again for at least another year, according to Liberals who are interested in the project.

Waterways champions feel that if the rumored retirement from public life of Premier Hepburn of Ontario materializes the way will be clear for the launching of negotiations. Mr. Hepburn has consistently opposed it. But if he has any present plans for retirement he has not made them public.

The C.C.F. high command is jubilant over the victory in the Vancouver centre provincial by-election of Mrs. Laura Jamieson, the party's candidate. M. J. Coldwell, member for Rosetown-Biggar, says it confirms his opinion the C.C.F. is gathering strength all across Canada....

Political wiseacres try to figure out who will get the nine Senate appointments to be made probably before the election. Hon. J. C. Elliott, former Postmaster General, appears a certainty and possibly two cabinet ministers will go to the Upper House....

The press gallery lounge is one of the best barometers of activity in the Commons and Senate. When debates are dull, the lounge is crowded with bridge and cribbage sharps and the usual kibitzers but when the speeches pep up the room is deserted....

There was more mystery about the change in the government's wheat policy than any other piece of legislation this session. Lobbies hummed with incredible rumors and even western Liberal members were in the dark regarding details of the new bills until they were distributed....

The stage lost an artist when Arthur Slaght (Lib. Parry Sound) studied law and entered politics. He has the greatest flair for the dramatic of all Commons' members and intimates say he rehearses each speech, with gestures, in his hotel room before some friends, prior to delivering them in the Commons....

Royal Tour Previews

Fashion experts rule a woman cannot wear black in the presence of Their Majesties unless she is in mourning....A head waiter is being brought from England to look after royal meals at Rideau Hall.... One of the most impressive sights in the Dominion will be the broad Elgin Street approach to the National War Memorial, to be completed before Their Majesties' arrive....

One Western Ontario town where the royal train will stop 10 minutes is causing royal tour arrangers here a headache. Orders were sent to cover the platform at the station with "red carpet of best quality." The town fathers balked at this expense and are rounding up carpet from local churches. But the carpets are not all the same shade of red so it might be a peculiar combination underfoot for Their Majesties....

Columnist's Cuffnotes

Working at Laurier House, Felix Weiss, well-known sculptor, has completed a bust of Prime Minister Mackenzie King and it likely will be displayed at the Royal Academy in London. While sitting for the sculptor, the Prime Minister handled much of his correspondence, dictating to secretaries. Mr. Weiss has done busts of several other notable Canadians as well as the present King and the Duke of Windsor....

Hon. W. R. Motherwell (Lib. Melville) has found a supporter for the cause of wearing something on bald and semi-bald pates in the Commons. The former Minister of Agriculture wears a cap but Jean Francois Pouliot (Lib. Temiscouata) sports a new black Homburg— the first of its kind ever seen in the green chamber....

G. G. McGeer (Lib. Vancouver-Burrard) can't seem to forget he is a lawyer. In banking and commerce committee he was quoting from a section of an English banking commission report. "That is section 198?" queried Chairman W. H. Moore (Lib. Ontario). "Yes, My Lord," replied the B. C. Irishman..

Back from the Pan-American Tourist Association convention at which he was elected President, Leo Dolan, Chief of the Canadian Travel Bureau, tells this one—the Salvador delegation gave a cocktail party at which he was introduced to a dancer featured in the Salvador exhibit at the Frisco World's Fair. She had a sonorous Spanish name and when they got around to the "where were you born stage." Dolan said: "I'm from New Brunswick." Replied the dancer: "Well, its a small world. My real name is Lannigan and I was born in Nova Scotia."

Mrs. George Black (Con. Yukon) has pulled off another social-political coup. Entering a group of women at dinner she used the Liberal caucus room and all the flowers on the table were presented to her by a Liberal admirer, J. Fernand Fafard of Montmagny-L'Islet....

J. A. Marshall(S.C. Camrose) gives R. J. Deachman (Lib. Huron North) credit for this cynical couplet:

Hush, little deficit, don't you cry,
You'll be a crisis by and by....

Rt. Hon. George P. Graham, the Liberal-Senator from Brockville, shares a huge office in the centre block with Senator A. B. Copp, another Liberal from Sackville, N. B. It previously was used by the younger Senators for dances and parties.

Education in Make-up Needed

Don't scowl or sneer, at reading that the Vancouver Parent-Teacher Federation, in convention assembled, took time to discuss whether schoolgirls should be taught the art of "make-up." It comes nearer home than quadratic equations or the characteristics of the monocotyledons.

Nature is the one to blame. Nature erred in giving straight hair to females of the white race and curly hair to their colored sisters. Eyebrows are not of the correct arc or fineness. Instead of being on the brow, they should be away up on the forehead. Red pigments were omitted from the human cheek. It is the task of the young woman of today to correct these errors of nature.

A stroll along the downtown streets should convince the most old-fashioned of school trustees that education in the art of make-up is needed. A too-generous dip in the color pot, the wrong shade of rouge or lipstick, makes the effect ghastly or alarming. An eyebrow in the wrong place may put the whole face on the skew.. Tiring the optic nerves by too prolonged color work before the mirror may give a livid or Red Indian effect where soft hues were intended.

Whether we like it or not, make-up is here. All types of femininity use it. If education is to be practical and give aid in the work of life, how can it omit training in the most important task of every girl's daily routine?— Vancouver Province.

QUEEN TO LAY CORNER STONE

Her Majesty Queen Elizabeth has graciously consented to lay the corner stone of the new Supreme Court building, now under construction in Ottawa, on May 19. After laying the corner stone, Her Majesty will deliver a short speech which will be broadcast over a national network.

Boys' Grain Club Is Organized At Marmora

Marmora — A Boys Grain Club was formed at the Council Chamber on Tuesday evening under auspices of Marmora Agricultural Society. The club starts with a membership of fifteen. H. L. Fair, Agricultural Representative was present and conducted the organization part of the proceedings. Officers of the new club were elected as follows:

President, Michael McQuay; Vice president, Frank Hulsman; Secretary-treasurer, Cecil Bell; Supervisor, Mr. Irvin McCoy.

Oats will be the kind of grain to be planted this year. Nine boys selected Banner oats and six chose the Cartier variety. Each boy will purchase two bushels which is to be sown on approximately one acre of ground. Advice will be given in the treatment of the grain for smut and other things detrimental to the grain. Certified seed as purchased through the Agricultural office at Stirling will enable each boy to start off with high class seed. The ordinary grain will be judged in the field and also after it is threshed and each member will be required to exhibit a peck at Marmora Fair.

Mr. and Mrs. Keith Armstrong were called to Peterboro on Wednesday owing to the illness of the former's mother.

Miss Mary O'Neill of Queen's University is vacationing at her home here.

Mr. Donald Bailey spent Tuesday in Toronto.

Mr. S. Bertrand and Madeline spent Tuesday in Toronto.

The regular meeting of St. Paul's Laymen's Association was held in the hall on Wednesday evening under the chairmanship of H. R. Pearce, vice-president. Meeting opened with prayer by W. J. Cottrell. The guest speaker of the evening was Mayor Jamieson Bone of Belleville who touched on matters which formed the basis of the recent address given at the Ontario Mayors Association. Interesting discussions followed in the wake of a striking address and continued during the refreshment period which marked the close of the session.

Mr. and Mrs. W. Kerr have moved to their cottage at Crowe Lake.

Born, to Mr. and Mrs. Jerry McInroy on Monday, May 1st, a son.

The Dramatic Society of the Sacred Heart Church presented the play "Irish Eyes" at Bancroft on Wednesday evening at the Community Hall before a large audience. The cast was the same as for the presentation of the play in Marmora Town Hall on March 17 and the play was again heartily applauded. After the play a dance was held which was well patronized. Music was provided by Charles Campion, Bert Kouri and Eugene Reynolds and Harold Auger. Those taking part enjoyed a chicken supper at the Hotel Bancroft.

Rev. C. W. Hollingsworth and H. W. Sabine attended the May meeting of the Belleville Presbytery in Deseronto on Tuesday.

Mr. Stanley Pearce who spent the winter in Florida returned to the village last week end.

Collegiate News

On Thursday, May 4, after four in the Collegiate Auditorium one of the merriest and most rollicking comedies that the school has ever put on was staged by the Green Room Club under the apt direction of Jim Graham, himself one of the noble order of actors who are found in our midst.

The characters were: "Mother" (Ruth McClelland), "Betty" (Judy Scott), the daughter whose marriage was to take place that day to "Johnny" (Bob Gibson) the future bill-footer, and our "noble hero", "Teddy" (Ralph Atyeo), whose chief difficulties were to obtain the use of the bath and to retain his recently acquired dress suit from Johnny's (his had not appeared) clutching hands.

After a round of swift following quarrels our hero came through unscathed and much to the astonishment of the feminine half of the audience went through the throes of dressing, starting from practically rock bottom.

Towards the end we ascertained that Teddy got his bath, that his girl-friend was taking a bath when he called her and to "clinch" matters that the minister slipped on the soap in his bath and broke his back.

Altogether the bath was an important factor in the play — I wouldn't have missed such a hit of roaring hilarity for words—to say the least—as for our hero, we, of the gentler sex, hope that he was able to remove the dress suit without too much trouble.—M. E. C.

If any of those quiet students in which the school abounds have lately been shocked by the unusual uproar in our corridors, please forgive us. Some third form students are revelling in the general epidemic of correspondence that has besieged those fortunate individuals!

"Please, Miss Saunders, tell me what she says."

"Quick, someone, what does 'la plume' mean?"

"Who wants a French correspondent?" . . . Etc.

This correspondence has been lots of fun, however—to the girls. We offered to get the boys some nice French girls to write to, but they did not seem tempted by even those. Perhaps it is their French that is worrying them.

Our attempts at French may seem a little weird when they reach Denise, Helene, or Collette, but we do our best. And although the English that we get is, as a rule, very good, some of the expressions seem a little queer: "I love you very, very much" (the French are so very affectionate!) "Today it is Thursday" (Mais oui.), or "My father and mother are enough tall".

Les lettres sont tres interessantes. When we saw two hundred and twenty-five centimes' worth of stamps on our letters, we were afraid that our pen-friends were going bankrupt on our account, until we discovered that the postage equalled only about five cents. So our letters pass back and forth across the Atlantic, from Valence-sur-Baise, Rennes in Brittany, and other parts of France, to Belleville.

Well, good correspondence!—J. B.

JUST A LAND SAILOR

John Husted, 26-year-old, New Yorker, is shown (hands over face) with a detective after he had been arrested while masquerading in the uniform of a U.S. naval lieutenant. Husted, who failed three times in examinations for admission to the U.S. naval academy, had the bad judgment to stage his impersonation aboard the U.S.S. Philadelphia. The stripes and buttons adorning Husted's uniform were not quite in order and aroused the suspicions of Lieut. Leo. V. Nilon, of the Philadelphia. Husted's arrest followed.

Plainfield

Plainfield — Mrs. Jerry Hendrick (nee Reta Gow) whose home is in Rochester, but who has spent the past three weeks with friends here was the guest over the tea hour on Wednesday of her great uncle, Mr. Robert A. Hall. On Thursday Mrs. Hendrick took tea with Mrs. James Gilbert, Latta.

The Latta cheese factory has opened with Mr. Horace Palmer, who has manufactured cheese here for several summers again the operator of the factory.

Rev. J. P. Everson and Mr. Clarence Hall represented the Plainfield Pastoral charge at the Presbytery meeting held in Deseronto on Tuesday. Mr. Everson called on the Rev. Arthur Waite, pastor of the Deseronto United Church who has been ill for some months and found him making a gradual recovery. Mr. Waite who conducted anniversary services at Plainfield two years ago underwent a serious operation in Kingston General Hospital the end of January and has been confined to his bed ever since.

Mrs. Albert Weir of Hillier who has been with her father, Mr. Robert A. Hall, for some time following his illness of two months duration returned to her home at Hillier on Thursday.

Special choir practices are being held each week in the United Church in preparation for a Mother's Day service to be held May 14th.

The Young People held their meeting in the church on Tuesday evening. Mrs. Arthur P. Hall was in charge of the worship period. The minutes were read and the new minutes taken by Miss Evelyn Outwater in the absence of the regular secretary who came in later. A reading, "Figs and Thistles" was given by Mr. Allan Reid and one entitled "What every child should do" was given by Irvine Moore. Mrs. Fred Prindle gave a story—"Nails and How to Use Them" which was very interesting. Mr. Everson gave the fifth chapter of the study book, "The Church in Storm Centres", which dealt with city life, slums and summer camps. The offering was received by Miss Hazel Prindle and dedicated. Prayer was offered by the minister. The meeting which was in charge of Mrs. Everson was closed with a hymn and the Mizpah Benediction after which choir practice was held.

Seeding in this community is proceeding very slowly. Many farmers state that while the ground is dry on top there is little growth and in some places the frost is not yet out.

The annual meeting of the Plainfield Women's Institute which was to have been held on Thursday afternoon at the home of Mrs. Clarence Marshall was postponed for one week.

The residents of Plainfield had their thoughts turned toward the Glorious Twelfth of July on Monday evening when the thunder of the big drum continued to roll for the first time this season, from the Orange Hall during the regular meeting of the members of L. O. L. No. 179.

Among those who were present at the open meeting of the Canniffton W. M. S. on Thursday evening were: Mrs. Horace Palmer, Mrs. Joseph Gow, Mrs. Harry Harrison, Miss Phyllis Hall, Mrs. J. P. Everson, Mrs. Erle Denyes, Mrs. J. W. Hamilton, Miss Elsie Hamilton and Mrs. Wilbur Elliott. Miss Phyllis Hall contributed a solo and Mrs. Denyes gave a report of her visit to Lindsay a week ago where she attended the sessions of the Conference Branch of the Women's Missionary Society.

Arbor Day was duly observed by the pupils and teacher of Plainfield Public School on Friday.

AT THE McCARTHY

"THE LADY VANISHES"

Observant movie-goers will get an opportunity to catch a fleeting glimpse of a genius when they see "The Lady Vanishes", starring Margaret Lockwood, Michael Redgrave, Paul Lukas and Dame May Whitty at the McCarthy Theatre next.

The genius? None other than rotund and jovial Alfred Hitchcock who, incidentally directed the picture, and somehow manages to get mixed up in one scene of every film he makes. We're not telling just where he appears in "The Lady Vanishes", but we'll give a clue—it happens in one of the final scenes in the picture and the alert movie fan will be able to spot him.

The supporting cast of "The Lady Vanishes", includes, among others, Emile Boreo, Linden Travers, Googie Withers, Mary Clare, Naunton Wayne and Basil Radford.

"TANNHAUSER"

Lovers of symphonic music are in for an exceptional treat with the screening of "Tannhauser" on the same program with "The Lady Vanishes".

The McCarthy Theatre management proudly announce that this stirring subject is one of the finest films yet shown on their screen and that the unusual sound track, plus unusual photographic treatment, sets this picture apart from any and all former screen presentations of classical music. It features the National 122 piece Philharmonic Symphony Orchestra and a choir of 50 voices and was directed by Frederick Feher. No lover of music should miss this treat of Richard Wagner's "Tannhauser".

"The Young In Heart"

Janet Gaynor, Douglas Fairbanks Jr., Paulette Goddard, Roland (Topper) Young and Billie Burke in "The Young in Heart" is now showing for the last times at the McCarthy Theatre, plus an excellent program of short subjects, and for a fine evening in entertainment you should see "The Young in Heart".

AT THE BELLE

"Three Smart Girls Grow Up"

One Smart Girl is growing up. She's wearing higher heels, longer skirts, more grown-up hats. She's sixteen "going on seventeen," she'll tell you.

Definitely, Deanna Durbin is no longer a child.

Deanna celebrated her sixteenth birthday December 4, 1938. The young singing star, who is now on the Belle screen in her latest Universal production, "Three Smart Girls Grow Up," passed this milestone without any immediate manifestation of the transition into young adolescence. To those near her, though, the occasion emphasized the outward and inward changes which "sweet sixteen" have brought to Deanna.

Incident Revealed

Revealing and typifying these changes was a little incident during the making of "Three Smart Girls Grow Up", one of the sets had a highly polished floor and a big mirror against a wall. Dressed in an ice-blue and silver evening gown (her first formal on the screen), Deanna surveyed herself critically in the mirror, seriously studying the beautiful garment. Unaware that she was being observed, she whirled about in graceful attitudes, watching her reflections from the mirror and the polished floor.

And more recently, Deanna has been wearing lipstick. "Your lips look so dead without it," she explains.

Her clothes are more on the grown-up side, her mother declares. Deanna has abandoned the "beanie" hat, the bobby sox and the low heeled sandals which previously were her everyday attire. Now she favors tailored suits. "They are more dressed-up," she says.

Changes Diet

Deanna does not eat as much ice cream or candy as she formerly did, nor does she "piece" between meals. She does not drink coffee yet, however. Milk is still her beverage. And she had given up chewing gum

She has become quite interested in reading During the past year she has read "Gone With the Wind", "All This and Heaven Too," "Northwest Passage", "Rebecca", "The Citadel", "Madame Curie" and "White Banners."

She has learned to dance the fox trot and Lambeth Walk, but will not attempt "Jitterbug" steps. She has learned to drive a car and has already obtained her driver's license.

Remains Adolescent

But bearing in mind that Deanna is only sixteen, her producer, Joe Pasternak, is not yet casting her in roles of a highly romantic nature. "In Three Smart Girls Grow Up", she is seen as a young girl who tries to straighten out the tangled love affairs of her two older sisters, the roles played by Nan Grey and Helen Parrish. With them in the picture will be seen Robert Cummings, Charles Winninger, William Lundigan, Ernest Cossart, and Nella Walker. Henry Koster, who directed "Three Smart Girls," "100 Men and a Girl" and "The Rage of Paris" was at the megaphone.

Miss Jean Stobie, who is attending Branksome Hall, Toronto, is spending the week-end at her home here.

An enjoyable euchre party was held in St. George's Sunday School Hall on Thursday evening. Prizes for cards were won by Mrs. Dewey, ladies' first, Miss Warham, second, and Mrs. Muir, third; men's first, Mr. Exley, second, Mr. Hill. The door prizes were won by Mrs. Ford and Mrs. Collyer.

Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Middleton were in Peterborough for the funeral of the late Mr. Herbert Huffman.

Flight-Lieutenant and Mrs. Robert Cameron of Trenton, who were in Montreal to attend the annual Gunners' Ball held last evening by the Commandant and Officers of the 2nd Montreal Regiment, Royal Canadian Artillery, are spending the week-end the guests of Colonel and Mrs. J. J. Creelman.

Opening of the social season at the Bay of Quinte Country Club took place last evening with a bridge and dance the splendid success of which promises a fine year of social activities. The Commodores Orchestra provided a delightful dance program and the many guests spent an enjoyable evening at the club's first entertainment.

About one hundred and fifty children of the Primary Department of Christ Church, Sunday School, were entertained at a banquet in the Parish House last evening in charge of Mr. Everett Smith, S.S. superintendent; and Mr. Stan Scott, assistant superintendent. After an enjoyable dinner, the children had the pleasure of seeing a moving picture, shown for them in the Hall.

CHRIST CHURCH A.Y.P.A.

The regular weekly meeting of Christ Church A.Y.P.A. was held in the parish hall, Wednesday evening. It was decided to have a dance again next week as everyone enjoyed the last one so much.

The meeting was in the hands of George Darvel, the leader of group No. 4, who turned it over to Rev. Mr. Wright. The rector gave a most interesting and instructive talk on the signs and symbols of the Christian Church. When no one could think of any more questions to ask, games were played until closing.

Regular Meeting Of Argyll I. O. D. E.

The regular meeting of the Argyll Chapter I.O.D.E. held on Thursday afternoon was well attended. Mrs. H. P. Alford was in the chair.

It was decided to make a donation to the Girl Guides for the purchase of a First Aid Kit.

Plans were made for the annual Spring tea which is to be held at the spacious home of Mrs. E. A. Geen. This year's tea will be held early in June.

A Rummage sale will be held in the near future to procure funds for the welfare work.

At the conclusion of the business meeting, Mrs. Geen and Mrs. Wilson were hostesses at tea.

Mrs. M. Arthur President, Consecon

Consecon — The Consecon Home and School Association held their monthly meeting at the Schoolhouse on Tuesday May 2nd, at 8 P. M. with the President, Mrs. Malcolm Arthur in the chair.

The proceedings were opened by the singing of "O Canada" followed by a short prayer after which the secretary Mrs. Lorne Alyea read the minutes which were approved and community singing was enjoyed. Mrs. E. R. Logie of Belleville, who is Provincial Organizer for Prince Edward Co., conducted the installation of officers ceremony, including the following names and offices for 1939-40:

President, Mrs. Malcolm Arthur; Vice president, Mr. Ross Bush; Vice president, Mrs. O. VanLuven; Secretary, Mrs. Lorne Alyea; Treasurer, Mr. George Barr.

Standing Committees — Social convener, Mrs. Freeman French; Mrs. H. Sanders, Mrs. J. Viant, Mrs. Leonard Phillips.

Membership conveners, Mrs. Roy Taylor, Mrs. W. Zufelt, Mrs. Beecher Barrett, Mrs. A. Clark.

Hospitality conveners: Mr. Kenneth Hamilton, Mr. A. Ward, Mrs. Cecil Moreland, Mrs. K. Alyea.

Finance convener, Dr. O. Van Luven, Mr. George Barr, Mr. Earl Burris, Miss M. Howe, Mrs. Kenneth Alyea.

Music convener, Mr. Beecher Barrett.

Mrs. E. R. Logie then gave a very helpful and inspiring talk to the members, stressing the fact that religious training is not given the place in many homes in these days it was a generation ago. This could partly be accounted for by the fact that the parents are now those young people who in the past had their lives marred by the experience of the Great War, and were nervous and unsettled in life values ever since. She asked the parents to be careful to live sympathetically and intimately with the ambitions and the griefs of the children in their homes, so that in after years the children when grown up would still naturally turn to their parents for advice, knowing their problems will be kindly understood.

A new flag pole has been presented to the school by Mr. Sam Danford and the members of the Home and School Association agreed to share in the expenses of a new Union Jack with the School Trustees. The Gideon Bible Society through the kind services of Rev. H. Sanders presented the Public School at Consecon with 12 copies of the Bible, the presentation ceremony to be held in the school at a later date. The next and last meeting for the session will be on Tuesday, June 6th. After a pianoforte solo by Miss Muriel Howe and a reading by Mrs. Viant, the National Anthem was sung and refreshments were served during a social half hour.

Three new members joined making a total of 56. The collection amounted to 2.65.

Mr. and Mrs. Thos. Alexander, Mr. and Mrs. S. Danford and family, Mr. and Mrs. Clayton Weir and Max, Mr. and Mrs. W. Alexander and Mrs. Lydia Haight, Wellington, spent Sunday with Mr. and Mrs. Stanley Herrington.

Mr. Roderick McLean, Hamilton, spent the week end with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. McLean.

Rev. Terrill, Mrs. Terrill and Catharine Colborne called on a number of friends in the village on Tuesday and spent Tuesday night with Mr. and Mrs. John Palmer.

Mr. and Mrs. Ken. Alyea spent the tea hour on Saturday with Mr. and Mrs. Ross Burris.

Friends of Mrs. Ted Carter are glad to see her home from Belleville hospital after her recent operation.

"...And Here is Where You Will See the Quintuplets"

". . . . . nd here is where you will ... Although they are not making the trip, the Royal Princesses, Elizabeth, LEFT, and Margaret Rose, feel that they must put their unofficial "O.K." on the Canadian-United States tour that will be taken by their royal parents, the King and Queen. This unusual picture shows the entire family poring over a map of North America with considerable contemplative enjoyment. The royal family were pictured thus in the garden of Windsor Castle.

MRS. ROOSEVELT PREPARES FOR ROYAL VISITORS

Library Corner

by K. G.

"Reaching for the Stars" by Nora Waln and "Through Embassy Eyes" by Martha Dodd add the personal reaction to the mysteries and novelties of the Third Reich of two women resident in Germany to that of Madelaine Kent whose book "I Married a German" was added to the library collection recently. Mrs. Waln, a Quaker, went with her husband to Germany in 1934, making friends in the Rhine Valley, Saxony, Vienna, the Black Forest, Czechoslovakia and Dresden. Her husband's work as a musician led her to the circle of artists and music lovers but she could not overlook the persecution, the obedience without mercy which clouded so many German households. She left four years later with vivid impressions of the German scene. She says "Much in Germany has already gone, but brave men and women there hold up the edifice of civilization, and their support is an educated populace, a populace waking to realization of the danger . . . They need the aid we can give them — our prayers, our friendship and all the recognition and support that our statesmen can devise".

Martha Dodd, daughter of the former United States ambassador to Germany saw a good deal of the surface of official Germany. Her book "Through Embassy Eyes" tells of the joys and griefs that come to a quiet professor's family when it is suddenly hurled into the bustling diplomatic life of a great capital. She went to Germany in 1933 pro-fascist in sympathy, but by the winter of 1937 had become entirely disillusioned and returned with her family to America sounding a note of alarm. She entered Germany a young girl, curious, still flexible, still impressionable; she left it four and a half years later an earnest understanding woman making a confession of faith in a just freedom and in the struggle against dishonorable barbarism.

Carl Knauff, Director of Knauff Studios in New York City presents practical decorative methods in "Refurnishing the Home". Detailed but simply worded advice is given the amateur beginning with budgeting of expense and going through all the problems of renewing and brightening the home that usually assail the homemaker at this time of year. The Home Institute of the New York Herald Tribune presents "Young America's Cook Book", a book of menus, recipes and novel ideas for the young host or hostess. The young people will find help whether they wish to entertain morning, noon or night, formally or informally, indoors or out. The book is simply arranged and unusually well illustrated.

John D. Littlepage is an American mining engineer who tells an unusual story of Russia in his book "In Search of Soviet Gold". From 1927 to 1937 he served as trouble shooter in chief to the Soviet Union's gold trust, during which period it became the second largest gold-producing power in the world. Written in collaboration with Demaree Bess, for many years Moscow correspondent for the Christian Science Monitor, the book is a record of how a wilderness was converted into industrial communities. The author had no interest in what he calls the new type of politics around him and it never irritated him to the point where he lost pleasure in efficient engineering. Consequently it is a story full of colour and planned adventure — not all of which he planned himself. But, in spite of sabotage and a few poorly-aimed shots, he managed to have a good deal of fun out of carrying gold to Moscow.

ACREAGE BONUS

Maybe Lost $25,000,000

This year's wheat crop may entail a loss of $25,000,000, as indicated in the budget speech, and Mr. Gardiner now thinks this "promises to be reasonable estimate" of the loss, as prices at the moment are advancing. (Earlier in the present session Mr. Gardiner estimated the loss on wheat this year at $48,000,000.)

The Agriculture Minister dealt generally with the wheat situation last night as he moved second reading of his acreage bonus bill, which is designed to apply a modified and government-backed form of crop insurance on the prairies.

That bill is one of the chief planks in the legislative wheat program being sponsored by the government. The most important and contentious bill of the lot, which empowers the Wheat Board to pay an initial price of 70 cents a bushel, will be debated next.

Earlier yesterday the commons gave third reading to a broad measure sponsored by Mr. Gardiner, placing government credit behind the co-operative marketing of agricultural products.

No Claim on That Ground

Mr. Gardiner emphasized that subventions for an industry were far from new. Maritime and Alberta coal and the Nova Scotia steel industry had been getting subventions for years.

He took strong exception to the theory of some westerners that aid to the wheat industry was merely in compensation for the burden of the tariff. He did not believe there was any claim on that ground.

He did remind the east, though, that it was pressure from the Dominion government in wartime which was responsible for the opening up to cultivation of much pasture land, which the government was now spending $4,000,000 to rehabilitate.

"I am not going to advocate that the farmers of Western Canada should get less than 80 cents a bushel for their wheat," he said, "but I am going to state that for 30 years western farmers have had an average price of 90 cents a bushel for No. 1 northern at his farm.

Wants to Help

"I am not in favor of setting up any system of marketing the crop of Western Canada which will obtain for the farmers of Western Canada over the next 30 years a smaller average price for their wheat than has obtained for the last 30 years."

If he had not been confident that the Prairies could maintain its farming population, he declared, he would not have asked the Canadian people to pay $4,000,000 a year rehabilitation or to put $25,000,000 to $50,000,000 into the area last year, to have time to work out a more permanent policy.

Nor would he have urged inauguration of a new, sounder policy, under which "we will pay in periods of difficulty in the future in order to bring the farmers through those distressing times without the necessity of accumulating more and more debt."

Held Country Together

Conservative leader Manion felt the first duty of public men was to try to hold this country together as one nation, but he wanted to remind the House that, while he recognized the great wealth the West had contributed, the East had also contributed substantially to the West.

Dr. Manion traced much of the wheat difficulty to the efforts of France, Germany and Italy to attain self-sufficiency. There subsidies for domestic production cut world wheat trade from 740,000,000 bushels a year average from 1922-27 to 543,000,000 bushels a year during the period 1932-37.

The Conservative leader said he recognized the tariff could not help the wheat grower but he felt "the price being put on protection by the West is absurd."

There had been compensation both ways between East and West. The East had contributed to the West; the lowest freight rates in the world; a coal bonus; the Hudson Bay Railway; wheat assistance; drought assistance; seed relief.

He emphasized he was not being critical. When aid was needed, the East had given it with the utmost willingness.

Urges Long Range Plan

The former Conservative government had provided a five-cent wheat bonus, created the Wheat Board, set a minimum price of 87 1-2 cents, amended the Farm Loan Act, introduced the Farmers' Crediters Arrangement Act.

He believed wheat stabilization operations of the Board under John I. MacFarland had saved the West $100,000,000 although profits had not been as great as they might have been because the present government was in such a hurry to dispose of the wheat in 1935.

He urged a long range plan to stabilize the wheat industry, not just an emergency plan. There was a limit to what the country could contribute to the support of any industry. A basic plan should be worked out with the assistance of farmers' organizations.

Elie Bertrand, (Lib.-Prescott), submitted the dairy industry was in as dire straits as the wheat industry at the moment. Since 1931 dairy products had become more important than wheat in Canada's economy. However, he assured members that easterners thought the whole agricultural problem should be considered as an entity. He contended it was unfair to peg the price of wheat and not that of other agricultural products.

Cited Drops in Prices

He cited the recent drop in Montreal milk prices to the producers from $2.15 to $1.75 for 100 pounds, while surplus milk to be used for cheese and butter brought only about 75 cents, although it cost $1.24 to $1.28 to produce 100 pounds of milk.

Mr. Bertrand sounded a warning to wheat growers not to go too far and ask too much.

Another part of the agriculture industry was equally in need of help, faced with prices which did not meet the cost of production. More counties were interested in dairying than in wheat, which made it possible for their representatives in the House to outvote those from the wheat areas.

He did not mean, he said, that the East would not support legislation to aid wheat. But wheat producers should remember they were not the only ones with problems.

Miss Agnes Macphail (UFO Labor-Grey-Bruce) said eastern farmers would not be satisfied with the legislation. They wanted boards which would enable them to control their own products. Agriculture was working to a two-price system which would prevent world prices from depressing domestic prices where a small proportion of a product was exported.

Air Marshal Bishop Visits Trenton Airport

Trenton, Ont., May 6—(CP)—Flying a Gruaman amphibian plane, Air Marshal W. A. Bishop landed on the field at the Royal Canadian Air Force base near Trenton yesterday with Mrs. Bishop.

The Air Marshall and Mrs. Bishop were honored last night at a banquet in the officers' mess. They will fly today to Port Hope, where Air Marshal Bishop will inspect Trinity College cadets. They paid an unofficial visit yesterday to Royal Military College, where Air Marshal Bishop was graduated in 1914 just before going overseas to establish himself as one of the great fliers of the war.

MISS NAPOLEON

By Violet M. Methley

"I simply daren't have my austere Republicanism undermined any further," Wilson Hall joined them laughing. "Can you imagine it, Mrs. Struan, they gave me a golden bowl studded with turquoises, when I wanted a pot for turpentine to clean my brushes."

"Well, we shall be delighted to have you back, shan't we, Ranny?" Chrissie said, smiling.

"Of course." Struan's tones were brusque. "But you're losing all the polo, Hall, and it's worth watching; the best match this season."

"Doesn't my little friend in the car want to see the game, Your Highness?" Hall asked, and the Maharajah nodded.

Leonie Loses No Time

"Krishn!" he called, and at once, as though the signal had been awaited, a small figure scrambled out of the car and came towards them shyly. It was a boy, six or seven years old, whose olive skin, brilliant dark eyes, and clearly-carved features were amazingly like those of the Maharajah. This resemblance was rather comically heightened by the fact that the child was dressed as an exact miniature of his father, from the silver-threaded blue puggri, with its emerald clasp to the diminutive shining patent shoes.

"This is my only son, Miss Valence," Zindia said, his voice and eyes growing deeper, softer. He added something in his own tongue, and the little boy went obediently from one to the other of the group, extending a tiny brown hand.

"Does he speak English?" Leonie asked, and her tones held the unmistakable interest of a real child lover.

"Not yet. I want him to learn both English and French before he goes to Europe for his education and I am trying to find a suitable tutor."

"Would you consider a governess instead, Your Highness? Because if so, we might be able to come to some arrangement," Leonie spoke so bluntly, so unconcernedly that Chrissie glanced at her as though uncertain whether she was joking. But she went on in the same even voice.

"I am half French by birth and a teacher by profession, as my friends here will tell you. Also, I am extremely fond of children; I'm sure I should get on with the Prince."

She smiled down at the little boy as she spoke and he responded instantly, slipping his hand confidently into hers.

"You see, we are friends already, Your Highness," Leonie raised her head, met the Marharajah's dark eyes with her steady grey ones. He spoke after a perceptible pause.

"I see—yes. Would you really be willing to become Krishn's governess?"

"I think so. I came to India for a certain purpose, not only for a pleasure trip: I can't afford to waste time."

"Surely you can carry out that purpose, whatever it is, just as well by staying with us," Struan's voice was low and harsh. Having spoken he set his lips, stood staring straight in front of him.

"I don't fancy I can. Perhaps life with you and Chrissie is too easy," a smile flickered round Leonie's mouth as she looked from one to the other. "If one road turns out a blind alley, there are always others."

"Listening to you, Miss Valence, I can quite understand how extremely annoying the Sphinx was when she wouldn't give a straight answer!" Hall complained with mock exasperation.

His effort to lighten the atmosphere was a failure. Struan continued to glower, Chrissie looked wistful and unhappy, only the Maharajah laughed softly, showing his splendid teeth.

"Is it your inference that Miss Valence belongs to the East?" he said. "If so I take it as a compliment.... And I hope that she will give me, at least, that straight answer you speak of, when I have consulted my mother. You will understand that this is necessary, Miss Valence, since you would become a resident at the Palace."

"We will both think the plan over then," Leonie acquiesced. "I quite see that the Maharani must approve."

"Good! And I have a proposal to make!" The Maharajah swung round to face Chrissie. "Mrs. Struan, you did not see my house and gardens at their best, and I should wish Miss Valence to visit Khotalghar—and my mother—before she comes to a decision. So.. here is my plan. Allow me a few days for preparation and I w... give a ball—a gala. It is quite time that I entertained all my Pathapore friends again. But you four must stay longer, come the day before and remain afterwards, to rest and see all I can show you."

"That would be very nice...." Chrissie hesitated, glancing at her husband uneasily.

"Very—but I'm afraid I can't spare the time myself, your Highness," Struan said curtly. "I am busy just now."

"I am sorry," the Maharajah's tones were gravely courteous. "I hope you may after all find it possible: I could give you some good shooting, or pig-sticking perhaps. Well, I must be off now. Come, Krishn!"

With the stateliness of a luxury liner the huge car purred out of the enclosure and away along the red-dusted road to Khotalghar, Krishn's small face staring from the window.

"I think I'll go home and lie down for a bit before dinner," Chrissie rose wearily as she spoke. "Are you coming, Leonie?"

"I'll just look at the papers in the reading-room first—unless you want me," Leonie answered.

"Of course I don't. No—there's no need for you men to come either. Honestly, Mr. Hall, I'd rather you didn't! I shall be all changed and rested and beautified by the time I see you again at dinner time. At the moment, I don't feel a bit inclined to look pleasant or talk prettily!"

Chrissie laughed, but under the lightness of her words Hall felt that the girl really wished to be alone. As for Struan, he only nodded absently.

X X X

Sauntering alone upon the wide verandah, a long chair allured Hall. He subsided into it, lay gazing through half-shut lids at the gardens. The soft thud of tennis balls on the adjacent courts, the shouts of the players, were rather soothing at a distance; gradually Hall's eyelids closed completely.

He woke with a start, only gradually becoming conscious of voices close at hand in the reading-room, voices which he recognized.

That, for instance, was Struan speaking.

"You didn't mean what you said, Leonie—about going away—leaving us?"

"I meant exactly what I said."

Infatuation

Her voice sounded extraordinarily unperturbed after the man's strained, jangling tones.

"But, hang it all—you can't —not like that! I—we—couldn't do without you...."

"Couldn't you? Well, but I'd say you'd managed it for a good many years....both of you."

Struan muttered something under his breath. Leonie responded placidly.

"You seem mad about something!"

"Don't pretend innocence!"

"Pretend!"

"Yes! You know perfectly well what has upset me. The way you encouraged that bounder—"

"The Maharajah? Really, Ranny, you talk in the most extraordinary way. I've never met anyone with more perfect manners than his."

"The slimy brute—curse him!" Struan burst out furiously.

"That's ridiculous. And I hope you'll try to be civil to my future employer."

"Leonie," suddenly Struan's tones were pleading. "You don't seriously mean to take on the job of governess to that kid?"

"I certainly do—if I can get it. I'm sure the salary would be princely! And I like the child —and his father."

"Curse them both!"

"It really sounds as though you were jealous of the Maharajah!" Leonie laughed.

Hall, wide awake now, expected an indignant outbreak from Struan. Instead, after a long pause, he spoke in a smothered voice.

"You're driving me crazy."

With a convulsive movement the eavesdropper bent forward, pressing his fingers into both ears. The two in the reading-room would certainly hear if he made any movement to escape, but to listen any longer was utterly intolerable; he had overheard far too much as it was.

Inside the room, Leonie and Struan still confronted each other. "If that's so, isn't it all the more reason why I should leave your house?" The girl's voice was hard.

"I suppose so."

"Wouldn't that be best?" Leonie asked inexorably.

"I'm past thinking of it in that way, I tell you. I don't want to love you," he told her fiercely, "but you hold me. You make me forget what I owe to Chrissie, forget everything. I've not even the satisfaction of saying that you've drawn me on. I don't believe you care a hoot for me, do you?"

She met his look strangely.

"That is a question it's better I should not answer," she said deliberately.

"What do you mean by that?"

"It might only hurt you more."

"I don't wonder Hall called you a Sphinx!" Struan laughed again. "Will you promise me this—that you won't go off to Khotalghar without warning, that you'll tell me what you decide to do, beforehand?"

"Yes, I'll promise you that. Don't be unreasonable. The separation will be very good for you—for both of us, perhaps."

"Oh, all right! I'll agree."

Leonie rose, shaking down the clinging folds of the blue dress, picking up her gloves and sunshade.

She went out of the room without another word, and Struan followed her. Outside on the verandah, Hall let his hands fall upon his knees.

"I felt that I'd rather die than hear any more of what they were saying," he thought. "But now — I'd give all I have in the world to have listened longer."

CHAPTER IX

"A KIND OF EASTERN NAPOLEON"

Hall found it even harder than he had expected to show no trace in his manner that evening of the memory of that fragment of overheard unfinished conversation.

There were strangers to dinner, he noted with a sense of relief as he joined the group on the verandah for cocktails. One was an elderly Englishwoman, her tanned skin contrasting stridently with snow-white hair and protruding pale blue eyes, who was staying with the doctor and his wife and vigorously collecting personal impressions for a book on India, as she saw, heard and smelt it.

The other guest, invariably known as "Young Jones," was an unbelieveably youthful - looking subaltern in the British cavalry regiment stationed at Pathapore.

The inordinate length and curliness of young Jones's eyelashes were a constant theme for chaff, taken as a rule in perfect good part by the victim. But today the times seemed to be out of joint for Jones as well as others.

"Don't brood over them too much, Tim," Chrissie was saying, laughing up into the boy's gloomy face. "Remember every girl who sees them envies you those thorns in the flesh!"

"I'm not—I wasn't..Oh, for goodness' sake, don't rot me, Mrs. Struan!" young Jones burst out, scowling miserably.

"I'm sorry, Tim," Chrissie said gently, and Struan glanced up with a gleam of impatient anger in his eyes.

"I should have thought you could take a joke better than that, Jones," he said harshly.

The lad muttered something under his breath, then swung round to face Chrissie.

"I'm awfully sorry, Mrs. Struan," he said "I....you know I'd not be rude to you for words, only — only...."

There came a quick firm step and Leonie's voice.

"Have I been keeping you people? I'm sorry."

She was wearing a black dress, which gave Hall somehow the impression of deliberate self-effacement. Chrissie this evening, with a little colour in her cheeks and a becoming gown of golden brown silk, was the more noticeable of the two. She stood up and took young Jones's arm.

"We're not going to be formal," she said; "Ranny, you'll bring Miss Weatherfield, and Leonie will look after Mr. Hall."

Hall found himself talking rather feverishly to counterbalance the silence of the other two men. Miss Weatherfield, he soon discovered, could be relied upon for steady conversation on almost any subject, and Leonie supported her by a quiet question or remark now and then. Chrissie was trying to draw on young Jones to discuss the afternoon's polo, making mistakes which on any other occasion would have stirred the boy to delighted and derisive laughter. But today he sat glum and silent, his eyes fixed on his plate.

Miss Weatherfield, flitting from subject to subject like a rather heavy-footed butterfly, suddenly alighted with a jerk disconcertingly unexpected upon an awkward topic.

"I was interested to see the Maharajah at the Club this afternoon," she said. "The Doherty's were telling me a great deal about him; of course the doctor has lived goodness knows how long in this part of the world, hasn't he? I suppose Khotalghar is a wonderful place—the Palace I mean."

"You will have a chance of seeing for yourself I expect," Chrissie told her. "The Maharajah talked this afternoon of giving a ball to the district, and the Dohertys are sure to be asked."

"Indeed!" Miss Weatherfield looked gratified. "That will be a splendid opportunity to form my own impressions. Zindia must be a strange character....from what I heard."

"Gentleman Jack" Washburn Disqualified in Main Bout With McDougall at Arena

Used Adhesive Tape and Referee Dunlop Called Whole Thing Off

LATE IN STARTING

Wrestlers Held up at Bowmanville Due to Car Accident

"Gentleman Jack" Washburn, the Tennesse Terror, failed to impress a Belleville wrestling audience of his alleged ring terrorism last night when he was disqualified in the main bout of the evening's wrestling show at the Hume Arena which saw Scotty McDougall, the perennial favourite in Belleville's ring grappling business, declared the winner of the advertised feature bout of the evening after Washburn employed the use of a foreign substance, namely adhesive tape, upon the eyes of McDougall, subsequently blinding the aging Scotchman and rendering him hors de combat, but the winner, upon the disqualification of Washburn.

A patient crowd of some 500 fans waited two hours for the belated wrestlers, who were detained owing to a motor accident at Bowmanville, during which Referee Al Dunlop's automobile was badly wrecked and one of the contestants injured. Upon hiring a taxi cab however, the contestants arrived at the Hume Arena shortly after 10.00 p.m. and the show commenced after the Palmateer twins had entertained the patrons with four rounds of spirited boxing, interspersed with musical entertainment.

In the main bout Washburn outgroaned McDougall like nobody's business and also out-roughed him with the employment of rubbing adhesive tape, which was wound around his wrist, over his opponent's eyes, partially blinding the Scot early in the picture. McDougall weathered this illegal practice, however, and subsequently gained a reinforced toe hold to force the Tennessee Terror to concede the initial fall of the bout after something like 9.25 minutes of alleged grappling.

Washburn returned more determined than ever to employ his unorthodox method of attack in the second round and despite the fact that Referee Dunlop tried in vain to strip him of the adhesive tape around his wrist, the Tennessee Terror again applied the foreign substance with successful vengeance and again rendered McDougall hors de combat and literally useless before Referee Dunlop waved Washburn to the sidelines and declared McDougall the winner with Washburn being declared disqualified and the loser. So rough did Washburn become at times, that McDougall lay on the canvas trying to remember whether or not he had turned off the light in the home bathroom, but after alternative grunts and groans McDougall's arm was lifted in victory as Washburn stomped most ferociously from the ring in what was supposed to be disgust.

However, in the semi-final bout a much different picture was painted. Suffering from a leg injury sustained during the early night's auto accident, Mike Kimisky, of Buffalo, made things rather interesting for the small edition of Howard Cantonine efforts, Joe Conkle ,the former Red Devil. Conkle surely gave the injured Kimisky the proverbial works from all conceivable angles and won the bout, but only after Kimisky had won the first fall with a reverse double leg Nelson. Conkle won the second fall with a flying mare and press and the final drop with a pile driver.

In the opening bout Jack Cox of Toronto, lost to Mike Veroni, Windsor, as the latter gained a Japanese inside leg-lock. Al Dunlop was the referee of the night while Bert Wells was the timekeeper and Allan Meagher the announcer of the evening. The show concluded long after the stroke of twelve.

Highlighting the entertainment furnished during the delay, was the smart four round boxnig bout staged by the diminutive Palmateer brothers of this city. The clever footwork, clean punching and all-round scientific display caught the fancy of the crowd and they cheered the youngsters to the echo. At time they stood toe to toe and slugged and again they showed results of clever training with their ability to throw and ward off punches. They gave everything they had in a smart scientific display of leather-pushing and made a distinct hit with the customers. Bert Wells was the third man in the ring and his signal, that the bout was a draw met with popular approval. As an added attraction, the paperweight punchers would feature any future card.

CALLING 'EM

Between the Lines

with
Ken J. Colling

The Collegiate campus resembled, perhaps on a small scale, a major league training camp last evening. At one end a softball game was in progress between the "Tiremen" and the "Milkmen", the latter being the junior O.A.S.A. entry sponsored this year by Howard Clarke's Citizens' Dairy. At the other end of the field an array of basketballers were tossing the old pill around, limbering up the old soup-bones. A goodly crowd of railbirds were taking in the proceedings and getting a pre-season glance at their favorite summer diversion. The sharp crack of the ball striking a catcher's mitt resounded with the occasional dull thud of a bat connecting with a softball for a bingle or so.

What impressed us mostly, however, was the outstanding array of baseball pitchers working out, six in all. There were three lefthanders pouring 'em in, including "Lefty" Weeks, who was sick the greater part of last year, but who seems to be headed towards a splendid season in 1939. Sammy Ellis, another rangy portsider from Trenton and Bert Neakes, a third lefthander, who played junior last year. Of this trio what made the fans comment mostly was the fact each hurler stands close to six feet tall and they all look like splendid mound timber. Joe Kelleher, Bud Wilkins and another righthander also displayed their wares in as impressive a workout. Although it may be slightly early in the season to call the shots, we do not remember seeing such a splendid array of pitching talent in Belleville for many a year. We have always favored long rangy hurlers and for the greater part this year's roster of Belleville moundsmen measure up well to this standard. After a couple of more nights of limbering up exercises the intermediates will no doubt get down to some more serious practice at the Exhibition Park next week.

Secretary Joe Shortt informed us today an extension had been granted to those desirous of entering teams in the various Ki-Y Softball groups. All entries must be in the hands of the officials at the "Y" tonight, however. On Monday evening the team managers will convene with the Ki-Y executive at the "Y" and all schedules drafted and adopted.

"Red" Townsend's junior softballers gave notice they will be a tough aggregation to beat in the forthcoming city softball league. Last night the "Tiremen" had to come from behind to tie the kids at eight-all. Townsend put on display his new pitching find, the elongated Steve Hook, former Kitchener junior softball hurler, and the kid made quite an impression, especially in the clutches. Each team used two hurlers, Skipper Kemp starting Harold Dracup and finishing up with Gordie Robson, who incidentally should be in for a good season this year following a major operation last winter. Lum Carson, the perennial junior hurler, pitched one frame for the "Milkmen", but was forced to retire when he strained his leg. Some heavy clubbing was seen as the "Tiremen" out-hit the kids 14 to 11. Barriage and Henn hit for the circuit for the Kempmen, while Mansfield clubbed a brace of four baggers for the kids' cause.

"Star" McDonald, Belleville angling-casting-fireman, received his trophy, won at the recent Anglers' Club contest, during yesterday's physical training period of the firefighters at the "Y". "Star" was given quite a ribbing by his fellow firefighters, but took the verbal blast with a fine sense of humor.

The two hour delay in starting last night's professional wrestling bouts in no way assisted the advancement of the pastime in Belleville. It is hard enough to interest the fans in this type of sport without having the contestants holding up the show. Unfortunately their delay was caused through a motor accident, but professional athletes should plan to arrive at the scene of their activities in plenty of time to assure appearance, not leaving their departure from a central point until the last minute. As it was the two Palmateer kids entertained the patient crowd with some spirited boxing awaiting the belated wrestlers.

Insofar as the actual wrestling bouts were concerned, the semi-final bout actually stole the show with the ferocious Joe Conkle, formerly known as the Red Devil, winning over Mike Kimisky in a fast agile bout. Incidentally Kimisky sustained a severe leg injury and lost at least a quart of blood in the motor accident, that belated the show. Fortunately Kimisky was the only wrestler injured. The trip proved rather expensive to Referee Al Dunlop (the people's choice as the night's villain even though he was the referee)insofar as it was Dunlop's car that was badly wrecked at Bowmanville, cased by a dog running in front of the line of traffic.

Wrestling fans were seen last night from all parts of the Quinte area, and we agree with them that a disqualification in the main bout was not the best advertisement for the sport that fills in between hockey and summer sports. Scotty McDougall, the perennial crowd pleaser, tried his best to give the fans a legitimate admission worth, but "Gentleman Jack" Washburn was in no mood to wrestle in an orthodox manner last night, with the ultimate result the grappler from the south did not live up to his reputation as the Tennessee Terror, but reverted to illegal tactics and subsequently had to be disqualified leaving McDougall the winner.

If you enjoy spills and thrills and have nothing else to do over the week-end, drop out around Holloway Sunday afternoon and take in the Quinte Motorcycle Club trials. There are no races connected with the picture, only cross country trials of endurance, but they are said to be interesting and carry an air of durability and interest.

Our "inkslinging" maple knockers did not fare so well at the Recreation alleys last night. The office trundlers downed the Belleville-Sargent quintette to win the second half of the major "B" schedule, but when the second or moneyed game rolled around it found the printers rolling in the gutter and the "lockmakers" crowned league champions for 1938-39. Incidentally we were welcomed by a lot of long faces here in the office this ayem—no doubt the boys' faces were just getting over that scarlet hue.

ORIOLES IN NEED OF SOME HURLING

Team in Second Division but Possesses General All Round Club

There's the same old war whoop echoing from Baltimore around the International Baseball League this season—if we only had some pitching.

The Baltimore Park with its short fences is known as a paradise for sluggers and a graveyard for pitchers. The Orioles are in the circuit's second division again now and the most obvious reason for it seems to be pitching weakness. Only three starting moundsmen have gone the route in 10 games.

On the other hand, Baltimore has been blanked only once so far, piled up as many as 6 hits in one contest and collected a total of 14 home runs in seven games on the home lot. And, as they demonstrated at Montreal yesterday, the Orioles can play effective ball when they get co-operation from the mound department.

It was the veteran southpaw Carl Fischer, who provided the good flinging yesterday. Knocked out in his two previous starts, he checked the second-place Royals with three hits and walked two to earn a 6-0 victory.

Newark Bears bunched their hits effectively to beat the Rochester Red Wings as Johnny Haley and George Barley collaborated on a six-hit pitching job.

Syracuse and Toronto were rained out while Jersey City and Buffalo set back their game to create a doubleheader Aug. 15.

Louis Board of Strategy Will See That Champ Is Supplied With Opponents

Louis board of strategy hpeoh

By Central Press Canadian

Chicago, May 6 — Tony Galento in June, Max Baer or Lou Nova in September, and then what?

That was one of the questions asked Joe Louis when the heavyweight champion returned recently from his sixth title defence — a one round knockout of Jack Roper in Los Angeles, April 17.

Louis looked blank, but Jack Blackburn, his trainer, said:

Oh, we don't know. You'll have to ask Julian (Julian Black, one of Joe's managers). They'll dig up some one. They always have."

John Roxborough

By "they" Blackburn means Louis' board of strategy, which includes Mike Jacobs, Bill Farnsworth, Ed Frayne, and John Roxborough.

The Galento contest is scheduled in Yankee stadium June 28. Baer and Nova meet in an elimination match, also in Yankee stadium, June 1.

Louis was given a great reception when he detrained from the Pacific coast in Dearborn station in Chicago. The champion and his wife had to fight their way out of the train shed, his admirers crowding him every step of the way.

Joe's schedule calls for him to do some light, preliminary training in Stevensville, Michigan summer resort, until May 31, when he is to head for New York to attend the Baer-Nova bout. He expects to establish a training camp at Pompton Lakes, N.J., immediately thereafter.

The Roper massacre, which has created quite a stir in California, something most everyone outside the state predicted would happen when the match was first announced, has not changed the mien of the cold, seemingly unimaginative Louis.

Regardless of the calibre of some of Louis' challengers, such as Roper and a couple of guys named Thomas, the Brown Bomber will go down in history as one of the greatest boxers to hold the heavyweight championship.

No one, not even the eminent Jack Dempsey, can match Louis' record since he left the amateur ranks five years ago. Former champions and the number of times each successfully defended the crown follow:

James J. Braddock, none; Max Baer, none; Primo Carnera, two; Jack Sharkey, one Max Schmeling, two; Gene Tunney, two; Jack Dempsey, five; Jess Willard, none; Jack Johnson, six; Tommy Burns, one; James J. Jeffries, three; Bob Fitzsimmons, none; James J. Corbett, none; John L. Sullivan, eighteen, three of which were draw decisions.

SARGENTS WIN BOWLING TITLE.

Ont. Intell. Trundlers Had to be Content With Winning Second Half

The Belleville Sargents are official champions of the Major B bowling league of the Recreation Alleys for the season, when they defeated the Ontario Intelligencer in the roll off last night after the Printers had won the second half of the schedule by defeating the Sargents by a total of 22 pins. In the roll off the Sargents certainly went to town rolling a nice 3275 with Gar Anderson and Dan Doran leading the way. "Dinny" Doran was high man for the two games with scores 692, 829, a smart bit of rolling in any man's league. Gar Anderson was close behind with totals of 642 and 786.

Reg. Hardwick easily was high man for the "printers" with 664 and 670, most consistent, but the other members of the team were away off color. This does not in any way distract from the fine showing of the Sargents. They are worthy champions. They came through the first half by defeating the Inkslingers and were on top through practically the whole of the second half and were only nosed out in the playoff game by a measly 22 pins so one can see they were quite the best over a long stretch. "Dinny" Doran and Gar Anderson have carried the mail all season for the Hardware men and both trundlers are likely to move up to the Major A next season. The season has been a successful one, the boys have had a lot of fun and the league will officially close the season with a banquet in the near future. The scores:

TOMMY PEDDER BETTERS RECORD

Increased Mark 14 Pounds but the Record is Not Official

Although it was not recognised as an official test, Tommy Pedder bettered the Canadian weightlifting championship, at 123 pounds, by 14 pounds in an exhibition lift at the Prince of Wales School last evening. Pedder, the North American titleholder as a bantamweight bested the press by seven pounds, equalled the snatch and bettered the jerk by an additional seven pounds to aggregate a total lift of 575 pounds, which is 14 pounds in access to the present Canadian championship in the bantam class. To conclude the exhibition of strength staged by the members of the Hastings County Weightlifting Club, Pedder added to his prowess by supporting 2,000 pounds on his chest while supported only with his hands and feet while in an 'all fours position', another remarkable feat of strength.

Cooper in the heavyweight class bettered his club record of 755 pounds total, Cooper preparing for the Canadian weightlifting championships at Toronto next Friday. Several contests of strength were presented to an interested audience by the members of the Hastings Weightlifting Club last evening.

The results of the contests were as follows: 1st contest: Albert Shortt outlifted Arnold Eaves, Shortt lifting 89 pounds press, 80 snatch and 116 jerk for a total of 285 pounds; Eaves lifted 63 pounds press, 62 snatch and 80 jerk for a total of 206.

2nd. contest won by Leon Shortt in a close exhibition over Vic Mason and Bill McMurter. The results:

	Press	Snatch	Jerk	Tota.
Shortt ...	150	140	200	490
Mason ..	141	150	193	484
McMurter	156	140	170	466

Jack Cooper lifted 226 press; 242 snatch and 287 jerk for a total of 755 pounds, a remarkable lift for a first-year pupil even in the heavyweight ranks.

In the third contest the results were:

	Press	Snatch	Jerk	Total
J. Pepper	160	160	213	533
McQuaid	160	160	200	520
Edmunds	150	160	200	510

In an exhibition lift Pedder lifted 177 pounds press, 170 snatch and 227 jerk for a total of 575 pounds in the bantam class, bettering the existing Canadian record by 14 pounds, but the lift was not official.

Yesterday's Stars

Sam Chapman, Athletics—Hit for cycle (homer, triple, double, single) as Philadelphia beat Browns 10-5.

Hal Trosky, Indians — Batted in both runs to give Cleveland 2-1 victory over Yankees.

Whitlow Wyatt, Dodgers—Pitched effective seven-hit ball and batted in two runs to get third victory of season against Cubs.

Larry Rosenthal, White Sox — homered in sixth inning to give Chicago 2-1 victory over Senators.

Harry Craft, Reds—Singled home winning run in 13th inning against Bees.

BULK OF MONEY ON JOHNSTOWN

Churchill Downs All Dressed up for 65th Running of Kentucky Derby

Louisville, K.Y., May 6 (AP)—Seventy thousand hearts will pump in swing time for a couple of minutes today while the cream of the three-year-olds drum around the historic Churchill Downs track in the 65th running of the Kentucky Derby.

Ten—or, at the least, eight — thoroughbreds will leap from the barrier at a little after 6.30 p.m. E.D.T. and begin the 4-mile struggle for the garland of roses and nearly $50,000 in cash.

Bulk of the Derby money will be riding on Johnstown, the bay colt of William Woodward's that won the Wood Memorial last week and ran such a sensational Derby trial five days ago that those who witnessed it still are gasping. The big rugged fellow has become such a predominant favorite that he might face the barrier less than an even-money choice in the mutual machines.

When the last strains of "My Old Kentucky Hame" die on the breeze and the starting bell clangs, the general expectation seems to be that Johnstown will bully his way right to the front of the pack, give his tail a few tosses as he comes past the bellowing crowd the first time, and then settle down to run his pursuers into the ground.

Two horses, Challedon and Technician are considered the outstanding threats to Johnstown's peace of mind. Challedon, owned by W. L. Brann of Maryland, is expected to reach the post second favorite at about 4 to 1, with Technician around 6 to 1.

Sports Roundup

By EDDIE BRIETZ

New York, May 6 (AP)—What can you do but pick Johnstown out there in Kentucky today? . . . Lou Nova intends fighting Max Baer just like Jimmy Braddock did—left hand him silly. (That's what Doc Robb, Jim's old trainer, is doing in the Nova menage). . . . The Giants say Vandermeer has lost his old zing.

Golf tip: The night before he left for the British amateur last year Charlie Yates ran through a traffic light and got a ticket. . . . He pulled the same stunt the night before leaving this year. . . . George Selkirk of Huntsville, Ont., has fallen heir to two of Lou Gehrig's old bats and is making hay with 'em.

While the Dodger directors were celebrating getting out of the red by electing Larry MacPhail president, etc., rival scouts slipped over to Brooklyn and got the rights to three St. John's University stars—they're all pips.

Here is how the Yanks (minus Di Maggio and Gehrig) "disintegrated" against Detroit the other day—the news says the Yanks scored a touchdown in the first, a safety in the second, another safety in the fifth, a field goal in the sixth and a touchdown and field goal in the seventh . . . final score, Yanks 22, Detroit 2.

HOW TO KEEP SCORE

IN CLOSING — KNOW YOUR RULES !

By Central Press Canadian

In this series, which concludes with this article, we have described the scoring method of experts, using text, diagram and example to provide a formula for those fans who desire to become scorebook keepers.

Today we will retrace the outline of the five foregoing articles, covering the highlights of scoring and pointing out specific important scoring rules.

First, establish your code of batting and fielding symbols for use in the running score. Second, accustom yourself to one specific system of scoring and stick to it, expanding and elaborating only when you have mastered the fundamentals.

Finally, try to remember the scoring solutions to special situations that will arise in almost every game. Baseball is now an exact science and there is sound and proper way to score any development.

.. .. Don't Penalize the daring, digging fielder who "tries for everything" by charging him with an error on a hard-to-get ball. The ball may be a terrific line drive that "handcuffs," or paralyzes, the fielder who stops the ball. In such cases the batter should always be credited with a hit. No error is charged against the fielder who makes a valiant stab at the hard-hit ball, even if he gets his hands on the ball and it gets away from him.

When a base runner is forced out, the batter does not get base hit credit. On a "fielder's choice," when a fielder elects to try to retire a base runner instead of the batter, no hit is recorded—only a time at bat, unless the scorer thinks that even perfect fielding could not have retired the batter at first. Again, a case of personal judgment.

There are other special rules which should be mentioned.

When a base runner is retired by being hit with a batted ball, the fielder nearest the ball gets credit for the put-out.

An assist goes to each player handling the ball even when there is no put-out because of an error.

No error is charged against the catcher if he throws wild attempting to prevent a stolen base—unless the runner gets still another base because of the throw. No error is charged to the pitcher for a wild pitch, a balk or passed ball.

Incomplete Double Play

No error is charged against the catcher or infielder who tries to complete a double play unless he throws so wildly that the runner takes an extra base. A player who muffs a ball in such a case gets an error, however.

If a fielder muffs a fly ball, but recovers in time to force out a base runner, there is no error. Credit the pitcher with a strike-out in the summary if he fans a batter but the catcher drops the third strike and the man reaches first safely. The catcher gets an error.

The first baseman gets an error if he fails to touch the base before the runner, providing he actually has had ample time to do so.

"Indifference" on the part of the defensive team rules out credit to the runner for a stolen base.

In an attempted double or triple steal, when one runner is thrown out, nobody gets credit for a stolen base.

With this working plan at his finger-tips, the amateur scorer should be ready to enter the inner sanctum of baseball's happiest followers—the scorebook keepers.

THE END

Boston Red Sox Puts Together Longest Win Streak of Season Running Their Total to Six

Joe Cronin Getting Excellent Pitching and Hitting in the Clutches

BEES STILL ON TOP

Reds, However, Stop Boston in Thirteenth Frame. by 4 to 3

By JUDSON BAILEY

The longest winning streak in the major baseball leagues this spring is six games and it seems appropriate that it has landed Boston Red Sox in first place in the American League today.

A week ago the Red Sox moved into a tie for the lead when the Yankees lost a couple of games in a row and then two idle days gave the top perch back to New York. Yet here the boys are—bigger and bolder than ever the minute the champions make a mistake.

The Yankees' mistake was giving two bases on balls in the eleventh inning yesterday. Hal Trosky came to bat and doubled one of the runners home for a 2-1 triumph by Cleveland Indians to spoil an otherwise well-pitched six-hit game for Lefty Gomez.

Boston's answer was a 4-1 victory over Detroit on the three-hit hurling of Rookie Woodrow Rich. It was the second time Rich started and finished a game. In his debut the Little Rock recruit licked Philadelphia Athletics on six hits.

Hurdles Difficulties.

The team has hurled difficulties without breaking its winning stride. Manager Joe Cronin was in a hitting slump, but has come out of it and helped Rich with a home run yesterday. Ted Williams, Freshman outfield sensation, and Slugger Jimmie Foxx had severe colds and were left behind when the team moved from Philadelphia to Cleveland. But cold weather kept the club idle and the invalids got well. Foxx hit a homer yesterday and two doubles the day before while Williams homered twice Thursday.

More surprising than that they are leading their league in that the Red Sox are doing it at the same time Boston Bees are on top in the National League. Research by some joyous New Englanders has brought to light the fact this hadn't happened for 25 years.

Lose In 13th.

The Bees have lost their last two games, so it is possible it may not happen for another quarter of a century. Cincinnati Reds got three runs off Jim Turner in the first two innings yesterday and although Al Simmons hit a home run with one on to tie the score in the third, the Bees couldn't come through and the Reds triumphed in the 13th inning on a run singled home by Harry Craf.

Pittsburgh Pirates won their fourth straight by beating the Phillies 10-7 while Brooklyn Dodgers handed Chicago Cubs their seventh straight setback in eight games 6-3 on some clever pitching by Rookie Whitlow Wyatt. The Cardinals turned the tables on New York Giants 7-5 with Curt Davis giving six hits, two of them homers by Bob Seeds.

In the other American League games Chicago White Sox squeezed past Washington Senators 2-1 on a homer by John Rosenthal and the Athletics out-walloped the St. Louis Browns 10-5 in a game which included 28 hits, three of them homers.

POLES SEE NO NEED

In his speech Beck declared Poland would not surrender her rights in Danzig and would not permit herself to be cut off from the Baltic. He cited Poland's willingness not to interfere with the ideological and cultural rights of the German majority there, and her offer of a Polish-German guarantee of the continued free status of the city to replace League of Nations supervision.

He rejected proposals to surrender sovereignty over a right of way connecting Germany proper with East Prussia, but declared willingness to negotiate on transit privileges.

Three days before the arrival of the Lithuanian General, Stanislas Rasztikis for a two-day visit to Warsaw at the invitation of Marshal Edward Smigly-Rydz, the army organ Polska Zbrojna published an article virtually inviting Lithuania to consider forming a military alliance with Poland.

There have been distinct signs of efforts to normalize Polish-Lithuanian contacts since Chancellor Hitler annexed Memel, even though a little more than a year ago Poland forced Lithuania to re-establish diplomatic relations with Warsaw under a threat of war if she refused.

BY-LAW NUMBER 3457
THE CORPORATION OF THE CITY OF BELLEVILLE
A BY-LAW FOR SMOKE PREVENTION WITHIN THE LIMITS OF THE CITY OF BELLEVILLE

The Council of The Corporation of the City of Belleville enacts as follows:—

1. No owner, lessee, tenant, agent, manager or occupant of any premises in, or of a steam boiler in connection with which a fire is burning, and no person who operates, uses or causes or permits to be used any furnace or fire within the limits of the City of Belleville, shall permit the emission to the atmosphere from such fire of opaque or dense smoke for a period of more than six minutes in any one hour, or at any other point than the opening to the atmosphere of the flue, stack or chimney. Nothing herein contained shall apply to a furnace or fire used in connection with the reduction, refining or smelting of ores or minerals or the manufacture of cement, or to dwelling houses, except apartment houses.

2. No person shall incur a penalty for an infraction of this By-law until ninety days after notice from The Corporation of the existence of such By-law, and such notice may be given by publication of the By-law in the Ontario Gazette, and in a daily newspaper published in the City of Belleville for four successive weeks.

3. Any person convicted of a breach of any of the provisions of this By-law shall forfeit and pay, at the discretion of the convicting Magistrate, a penalty not exceeding the sum of Twenty Five Dollars (exclusive of costs), for each offence; and in default of payment of the said penalty and costs forthwith, the said penalty and costs, or costs only, may be levied by distress and sale of the goods and chattels of the offender; and in case of there being no distress found out of which such penalty can be levied, the convicting Magistrate may commit the offender to the common Gaol of the County of Hastings, with or without hard labour, for any period not exceeding six calendar months, unless the said penalty and costs (if any), including the costs of said distress and of the committal and conveyance of the offender to the said gaol, are sooner paid.

4. This By-law shall come into force and take effect ninety days after publication in The Ontario Gazette and in The Ontario Intelligencer, published in the City of Belleville.

BY-LAW read a FIRST time this 3rd day of April, A.D. 1939.

BY-LAW read a SECOND time this 3rd day of April, A.D. 1939.

BY-LAW read a THIRD time and FINALLY PASSED this 3rd day of April, A.D. 1939.

SIR HARRY STONOR ATTENDED 5 RULERS

London, May 6 (CP)—Sir Harry Stonor, who attended five British sovereigns in various capacities, and had been an extra groom-in-waiting to King George VI. since 1936, died in London last night on the eve of his Majesty's departure for Canada.

He was 79 and had been in the royal household for 56 years. One of the closest friends of King George V, he invariably accompanied him to race meetings.

On the eve of their departure for an unprecedented visit to Canada and the United States, the King and Queen summoned two Canadian photographers to Windsor Castle to take special pictures for Canadian and American newspapers. There, along with the royal princesses, their majesties strolled about the beautiful grounds while cameras recorded the pleasant scene. The two Canadians photographing, by royal command, the four most eminent persons in the empire, were Gerald Richardson of Toronto, and Lawrie Audrain, formerly of Winnipeg. Herewith is reproduced one of the pictures they made, along with the story of the event by Mathew H. Halton, noted foreign correspondent, who arranged the details.

King, Queen and Princesses Graciously Pose Amid Old-World Grandeur

LONDON (by cable)

Gerald Richardson of Toronto, who is 30 years old and takes pictures, and Lawrie Audrain of Winnipeg, who is 28 years old and also takes pictures, are only two of the five hundred million citizens of the British Empire. With myself we make three subjects of the King. But today Gerry, Lawrie and I are a little different from the rest of the five hundred million because we have been received at ancient and historic Windsor Castle by the pleasant and handsome royal couple who will arrive soon in their great dominion beyond the seas.

Gerald Richardson, and Lawrie Audrain are brilliant young photographers and now they are the first Canadian photographers to have been granted sittings by Albert Frederick Arthur George, King of Canada, and by the radiant and attractive Elizabeth, Queen of Canada, and by the Princess Elizabeth Alexandra Mary of York, a charming girl on whose shoulders lies such high destiny, and by elfin little Princess Margaret Rose, who has asked us questions and looked up into our eyes.

At Buckingham Palace, Lawrie and I walked with the King and Queen and their children and took a hundred pictures of them and talked of such different things as the art of photography and the danger of war, the color of the Princesses' hair and the world crisis, spring flowers and the visit to Canada, and at last we were permitted to tell our story, and here it is.

"Lawrie," I said—to begin at the end—when we came out like conquerors, "do you agree that radiant is the only word to describe the Queen?" Lawrie shook his head vehemently and said "a knockout"! The "Queen is a knockout," he said.

"But that's unparliamentary language," I advised. "Queens are always radiant or regal or majestic, but never knockouts. This is for publication and you can hardly describe the Queen as a knockout, can you?" "Yeah," said Lawrie, and at the risk of lese majeste and impeachment I pass his verdict on to you, who will soon be seeing for yourselves.

Now I can begin at the beginning.

The day came when newspapers and periodicals of Canada and the United States started asking urgently for new pictures of the King and Queen.

The day came when their Majesties graciously decided it would be fitting in view of this year's unprecedented odyssey of a reigning British king to the new world, that a Canadian photographer should be commanded to take photographs of the King and Queen of Canada on behalf of Canadian papers.

The day came when, without ceremony or fanfare, a letter carrying that splendid red coat of arms came into this office and bore the words "Their Majesties wish that your photographer should come to Buckingham Palace at half-past two tomorrow to take photographs in color and in black and white."

And the hour came when, like conquerors but trembling a little, we went to Buckingham Palace and trod those famous corridors, walked with their Majesties and their daughters in the lovely palace gardens and in the gorgeous Bow room and forgot to bow or genuflect or whatever farflung Canadians are supposed to do when sovereigns offer their hands, and for an hour or two were received, if you like, by the King and Queen, Not for our several merits, of course, but on behalf of all Canadian and United States papers, we were received by the head man and head woman of the whole five hundred millions of us. We received no sashes of merit or stars of India, but we photographed the King and Queen and the charming princesses, their daughters.

We had only one sleepless night and one apoplectic morning to make our preparations. Not until 12 o'clock did we get our special high-powered color film through the customs. Not until 1 o'clock did we have a camera that would take the films. Not until 2 o'clock were we sure that nothing had gone wrong, and at that we weren't sure. And not until we actually were talking to their Majesties of Canada did we know whether we were going to be taking pictures of the King and Queen inside or out, in daylight or in the throne rooms, formally or informally. But at half-past two we were there waiting with cameras everywhere, inside and out, in the beautiful gardens behind the palace and in the great Bow room inside, and then came the King and Queen.

It was the second day of the state visit to London of President and Madame Lebrun of France, titular heads of the other great partner of that entente cordiale on which our freedom today is based. It was President Lebrun's great day. He had gone off to the Guildhall to be the recipient of all those gaudy antique honors which only London can provide, and in order as it were not to steal the show, King George and Queen Elizabeth had stayed home to have a quiet minute to themselves. And this quiet minute was just the time to give Canada her sittings. And there we were.

The King, alert as a thoroughbred, and the Queen, radiant and charming, and the Princess Elizabeth, of high destiny, and Princess Margaret of the impish eyes, came out from the Bow room and walked down the steps toward the cameras. There were not only Canada's cameras, for we didn't have honors quite all to ourselves that day. There were movie cameras, making the first film ever taken of their British Majesties strolling in their gardens with their daughters and Dookie, their favorite dog. "It looks as though we were going to be photographed," observed the King drily, when he saw us all.

There was the King, King of five hundred millions, or at least four hundred and ninety-seven millions, first citizen of the British Empire. The man, a compound of Norman, Plantagenet, Tudor, Stuart and Guelph, who next month was to go to Canada and probably bring the house down, and be the first of all of a long, glittering line of British kings to visit as king the greatest of his great dominions beyond the seas.

The King was tall, upright, smiling, and if I say he was regal I'm not being fulsome. It may be that any British king, by virtue of his exalted position and name, would seem regal to three of his five hundred million subjects, but anyway regal he was, and he bowed to us with the courtesy that sits so handsomely on a king, and I remembered the time that King George the Fifth bowed to me and raised his hat. Today his son wore a black coat, or jacket as we say in England, and black shoes, and someone whispered to me that the King had his shoes polished in the old-fashioned way with a bone polisher, I think he said every morning. He wore no hat and his thick brown hair was blowing in the wind. Remind me later to tell you what the Queen told me about her hair. The sun was shining brightly, but a chilly wind was blowing. The King moved easily, with the walk of a man highstrung but confident. His browned face was a picture of health. If this meeting had been at the north pole and unexpected, you would have known that here was a son of George the Fifth.

With him were the Queen and the princesses, the three roses of Scotland and of York.

The Queen is a lovely and radiant woman and we shall probably use the same adjectives again. During that hour she spent most of her energies going out of her way to be helpful and kind to the photographers who had the biggest sittings of their lives and now had to work like swift machines, with sitters who, as one of us said, "can't be pushed around like ordinary people". She was dressed in a kind of mauve blue outfit, hat and all, though experts on these things would probably call it cyclamen blue. Her dress and light coat were of cyclamen blue and so was her becoming hat with a wide brim, very simple and very pretty, though perhaps queens and their clothes shouldn't be described as pretty.

When the Queen approached me the first time and offered her hand and talked, that was the time I forgot to bow low, the time when I addressed her as "your Majesty", which is a solecism or something (though not impeachable), because, strangely enough, kings and queens never hear themselves called "your Majesty" they only hear "sir" and "ma'am"; but this time they heard "your Majesty" because we were just farflung Canadians — well, when she came up and offered her hand, I saw that she had very black hair (though it isn't black, as she told me herself later—remind me of that) and a rounded, radiant face (I stick by that "radiant") and very bright blue eyes and a soft, quiet, friendly voice without benefit of haw-haw accent. So I wholeheartedly give you the Queen.

Princesses Elizabeth and Margaret Rose, the world's highest destined child and her little sister, were dressed in pink, or maybe rose. That won't tell women anything, but to me they were dressed in pink—or maybe rose—pink coats, pink dresses, pink hats, and short stockings or socks. They aren't like their pictures, not to me—though of course they're like the pictures we took. In their pictures they look like happy but rather robust children, whereas I was impressed by the delicacy of their features and coloring. They look much like each other and much like Queen Mary and much like their father. Elizabeth is 13 now and Margaret is 9. Elizabeth is tall and slim and bears gracefully and unaffectedly her destiny that is to be. To say these children are "natural" would hardly be the right word. "Natural" girls of that age in that position might be self-conscious and would very probably giggle. These two must have had a very fine and skilful upbringing to be princesses and yet to be so genuine and unspoiled.

The King and Queen and princesses and their aged and irascible little dog strolled down the steps and the cameras clicked. They talked to us for a moment, then we posed the four most eminent people in the British Empire at a little table against a carved stone balustrade, and the stage was set. Mr. Alan Lascelles, the King's assistant private secretary, spread out a map of Canada on the table before them and they pored over it, smiling and chatting as the cameras clicked again. The King traced on the map the royal route across the Dominion and back for the benefit of the eager princesses, who are staying behind. The wind blew his hair over his eyes and the cameras caught Princess Elizabeth reaching to brush it back. I could see caption writers going all out over that one—"O daddy, let me fix your hair".

My eyes weren't always on the royal party, but sometimes dwelt anxiously on the photographers. They moved like automatons and for a time were cool as a Scipio directing a battle. But not always. When we left the lawns and went into the Bow room for interior photographs, and the King and Queen talked to Lawrie for the first time, he lost his calm a little and there followed scenes such as this:

The royal party were posed informally on a settee, their Welsh Corgi was moving at their feet and wouldn't keep still. Lawrie left his camera and approached the settee, fixed the Queen with his eye and stammered words: "Your Majesty, much though I love ——"

There was a second of silence. Now what's he trying to say, I wondered. But Queen Elizabeth was quicker on the uptake. She smiled and said coaxingly one word. "dogs",

"Dogs," confirmed Lawrie. "Much though I love dogs, this photograph must have a half-second exposure and I'm afraid the dog might move."

So someone called the dog, but he wouldn't budge. "He wants to be in your pictures," said Princess Elizabeth. "Madam," I ventured, "shall I pick him up?" "I'm afraid he would bite you," replied the Queen. "Shall I take him out?" asked Princess Elizabeth, indicating another great room. "Goodness, no," said the Queen, "he might bite someone else." But at this moment Dookie realized that he was de trop and crept grumbling away.

There was another episode in that famous room when we of Toronto and Winnipeg and Pincher Creek, of all people, saw the King and Queen and their daughters laughing before a mirror and combing their hair. Colonel's Lady and Judy O'Grady are sisters under their skins, it seems, and the Queen of Canada, like any one of the rest of you, has to go to a mirror and comb her hair when she comes in out of the wind to have her picture taken. The Queen's hair is black and shining, the princesses honey colored. "Madam," I said, "there is a disagreement among the royal photographers about the color of your hair. Some say it's black, others dark brown. I see it's black." "No," replied her radiant Majesty, smiling, "it's dark brown, I think." She looked down at her daughter's hair —though she doesn't have to look far to find Princess Elizabeth, who is now nearly as tall as herself. It's a pity, said the Queen, that the princesses' hair always comes out in photographs so much darker than it really it. Princess Margaret Rose looked up and nodded agreement. And as we talked the King strolled over and chatted and effortlessly put us at ease and took us from the subject of hairdressing to more important things.

So that's how it is when Canadians meet their King and Queen. At first the King merely nods while the Queen smiles and says "How do you do." But soon the Queen walks up to you and offers her hand and starts talking, and it's then you forget what not to say. You start saying how kind it is of her and the King to go to this trouble and suddenly the King is there, too, smiling, joking, and asking questions: the King of Canada who is now to visit a country where no British King has been before as King, and so to make history.

With the King and his family on a halcyon day some time later, we had another sitting, but this time it was at Windsor Castle, which is easily the most magnificent and picturesque royal residence on earth, and set in just such a paradise of English country as the English dream of when they are thousands of miles from home.

On a steep hill is the castle and it has everything that comes to mind when you think of English antiquity: great castellated walls and hoary keeps and brooding towers; an exquisite chapel, which houses the body of George the Fifth and the banners of Europe's oldest order of chivalry; a lovely horseshoe cloister of mellow-bricked Tudor houses; and a hundred passages and chambers and galleries and gardens and vaults alive with ghosts of history. Below lazes the Thames through sleepy Windsor town and just across the Thames are the dormitories and playing fields of Eton, where Britain's upper class striplings go to school. And from the terrace of the castle as far as the eye can see stretches this English Eden of woodland and green velvet parkland, and you look over to copper-roofed Frogmore, where Queen Victoria lies, and over toward the royal lodge where the royal family go for their only completely private week-ends, and over toward the great cosmopolis of London, 30 miles away through the spring haze.

On the terrace there, which is just in front of the famous state apartments and now was a riot of wallflowers, I marshalled my army, composed of Gerry and Lawrie and told them for the seventh time not to be afraid to ask their Majesties to do anything that was necessary; and then down the wide steps came the King, the Queen and the princesses, the King hand in hand with Margaret Rose, who tried not to dance too gaily, but failed to be demure. In that incomparable setting and with such subjects to pose for their subjects, our cameras began shooting again.

This time the King wore an informal country suit, grayish blue in color, and with a checked pattern, and the Queen a beautiful ensemble the color of blue pearls, if there is such a color, and the princesses the same pink suits as at Buckingham Palace, which shows that even the most exalted young ladies have to wear their clothes more than once. It was a very handsome royal family which posed for us that day, though posed may be too strong a word, because the royal four were simply themselves. One of them posed, though, and that was the gay child Margaret Rose. She posed gladly. "That's childhood for you," said the Queen in her soft voice.

The Queen is a lovely woman and charming and intelligent, and she shakes hands without mental reservations. Her eyes are bright sapphire blue, her complexion is fresh, her voice is very soft and warm and a wee bit Scottish; and she talked to us as if we were friends. So did the King—the King and Emperor of the four hundred and ninety-seven million. It can't be easy to be a King or Queen and yet be so natural and unposed.

Every half hour the King and Queen were receiving messages about Europe's grim crisis, yet they had time and energy to be very gracious with us. In fact, we talked there on that lovely terrace about the world crisis, the King and Queen acting as if we knew as much about it as they did, and the Queen said in her grave pleasant voice what a shame it would be if the Canadian trip could not be made. "Three to one you go," I said, and she nodded. "I think so, too," she said.

The King is a handsome, fresh-looking man, exuding a kind of clean healthiness. He seems lean and strong and at ease, but reserved and free from false heartiness as he strolls with you and talks. He had bigger things on his mind than taking pictures, but he was consideration itself. Only 10 minutes after our sitting he was hurrying to London to hear a report from the prime minister on Europe's fast disintegrating state.

We posed our royal hosts against the yellow wallflowers, against the great white castle whose stones are mortared with history, and on a bank against the blue sky. At least, I posed them with the help of suggestions from the King and Queen, because Gerry and Lawrie were very busy and perhaps a little awed.

"After all," says Gerry, "you can't push the King and Queen around."— — —"May we have one now with the King and Princess Elizabeth alone?" "Will the Princess Margaret please look at the camera." "Yes, madam, that's perfect."

You are supposed to say ma'am, pronounced mahm, but it didn't sound right to me so I made history and said madam— — —I worked hard, not really knowing anything about this art. But the King and Queen knew about it and gave me lots of help—once I asked the King if photography were still one of his hobbies. "I like it," he said, "but I have no time for it now."

When it was over the King and Queen didn't hurry impatiently away, but chatted for a few minutes and I told them about the Rockies they were going to see and the flawless jewel of Lake Louise and the prairies and the Northern Ontario wilderness. "You're all three born Canadians?" asked the King, and I called my army over to shake hands with their sovereigns. Gerry and Lawrie took a few more pictures, close-ups of the princesses, and the tall pleasant young heir presumptive to the throne told me it was too bad she could not come to Canada with her daddy and mummy. We thanked them at last and they strolled into the castle after shaking hands with us again and Margaret Rose shook hands twice and waved to us from the steps.

Once I asked an equerry if the King and Queen regarded this visit to Canada as an ordeal. "Heavens, no," he said. "They look forward to it with the greatest of pleasure. The King and Queen can stand ordeals. They have to. But they don't regard this as an ordeal."

On this day at Windsor Castle I put the same questions to their Majesties themselves. The King laughed and said immediately: "Of course it won't be an ordeal." The Queen was almost indignant. "The idea," she said, "it's one of the great things of our lives."

We decided that if there were more kings and queens like George and Elizabeth there would be more kings and queens.

WALL STREET CLOSE

New York, May 6 (AP)—The stock market engine sputtered and almost died as traders found little buying fuel in either European or domestic news.

While minor fractional gains predominated during the greater part of the two-hour proceedings, numerous issues were unchanged and a smattering of negligible minus signs was in evidence at the close. Transfers were about 150,000 shares.

Support was accorded Bethlehem Steel, Chrysler, Montgomery Ward, United Aircraft, North American, Anaconda, American Smelting, N. Y. Central, Texas Corp., Goodyear, Eastman Kodak and Philip Morris.

Inclined to lag were U.S. Steel, General Motors, Santa Fe, American Telephone and Consolidated Edison.

Bonds were unusually quiet, but selectivity improved. Commodities generally exhibited rising tendencies.

TORONTO STOCKS CLOSE

Toronto, May 6—(CP)— Content to hold its position, the Toronto stock market showed little in the way of action in the final session of the week. Only about 150,000 shares changed hands. Prices at the close were practically unchanged.

In the industrial section the utilities and banks showed general strength while the steel, foods and liquors were steady and the senior oils a bit heavy. Losses of minimum fractions were boarded by British American Oil, Imperial Oil and International Petroleum. National Steel Car firmed about a point. Laura Secord firmed a minor fraction.

Pend Oreille, down 7 cents, was about the only weak spot in the base metal group. Hudson Bay was firmer.

The gold group boarded no adjustments greater than five cents. Macassa, Pamour and Little Long Lac weakened 5 cents. Prices were off slightly for Augite, Bankfield, Paymaster and Gunnar.

Western oils held unchanged but for narrow gains for Home and Highwood.

Colony Houses for Pigs Prove Success

It is difficult to rotate a hog pasture if the farmer is obliged to depend on the barn for necessary shelter. There has been much success in raising pigs in a colony hours.

The colony house can easily be moved to the pasture field. This feature is of particular advantage in the control of internal parasites.

Some good lots of hogs received during the week of May 5th, are as follows:

RUSSIA'S

TAKE 3 RUSSIA.. .. ..

The British offer modified reported Russian proposals embracing any act of aggression in eastern Europe which the Soviet made to original Anglo-French requests for her participation in their bloc.

British circles were anxious to see how their latest proposals would be received by the new regime in the Commissariat of Foreign Affairs at Moscow. There had been no indication received in London whether Premier Vyacheslaff Molotoff, now at the helm of Soviet foreign relations, would be willing to carry on the negotiations which Maxim Litvinoff began before his sudden resignation this week.

In this connection British observers believed the summoning of the Supreme Soviet—Russia's "parliament"—to meet May 25 was significant and might produce an announcement on the Soviet's participation in the moves for European security.

Public Appearance On Hotel Balcony Is Anticipated

Quebec, May 6. (CP)—Quebec City chapters of the Imperial Order Daughters of the Empire announced last night a Royal visit "scrap book" competition for school pupils. Prizes will be awarded for the most striking, original and neatest collection of newspaper clippings and pictures covering the Canadian and United States visit of their Majesties.

Montreal, May 6 (CP)—The King will participate in a scene reminiscent of Buckingham Palace during the royal visit here May 16, it was learned last night. His Majesty will appear on the balcony of the hotel (Windsor) where the Montreal civic banquet to the King and Queen will take place. The King will make his public appearance on the balcony at 6.45 p.m., shortly before the banquet.

Toronto, May 6 (CP)—David Williamson, 41-year-old Toronto war veteran, will meet Queen Elizabeth, whom he knew when both were children, when the Queen visits here May 22. H has received an invitation for a personal meeting with Her Majesty in the Lieutenant-Governor's chambers at the Ontario Legislature. Williamson was a shepherd's boy on the estate of the Queen's father, Lord Glamis.

Victoria, May 6 (CP)—The city council chamber here where Aldermen and their wives will meet the King and Queen May 30, is being redecorated. Replacement of old panelling, new wallpaper and a panelling behind the mayor's dais to carry the royal drapes is almost completed.

Trail, B.C., May 6 (CP)—The Trail School Board has decided there will be no classes here May 29 in honor of the visit of the King and Queen to British Columbia. A civic holiday is being considered.

MACDONALD TRIAL NOW ADJOURNED UNTIL MONDAY

Brother-in-law of Dead Man Identifies Mickey as "Trigger Man"

(By William H. Hogg Canadian Press Staff Writer).

Toronto, May 6 (CP)—The MacDonald murder trial today stood adjourned for the weekend and on Monday the Crown will continue its attempt to link two Toronto brothers with the gangland murder of bookie Jimmy Windsor. The brothers—Mickey, 31, and 19-year-old old Alex—face a joint murder indictment and indications are the trial will continue through next week.

Only one of an expected parade of identification witnesses had testified at yesterday's adjournment. He was Windsor's brother-in-law, John McDermott who definitely identified Mickey MacDonald as the partially masked gunman who fired the fatal shot into Windsor's abdomen the night of Jan. 7.

Three men invaded the bookie's North Toronto home that night, according to McDermott, and he pointed out Alex as another of the gangsters, stating that he also was armed. At the same time he gave emphatic denial to a defence suggestion that four Italians, now under arrest as shake-down racketeers were the guilty gunman.

Defence Counsel Isadore Levinter introduced the names of the Italian quartet into proceedings after McDermott admitted he knew the men as frequenters of Windsor's barbeque in Lansing, just north of Toronto. They are Coben, Spizzeri, Spaticinni and Pallanti, all of whom face extortion charges in another court.

McDermott admitted he knew of a shake-down racket going on in Toronto in which bookies and other small-time crooks were forced to make payments for "protection." But, he said he had discussed their operations with Windsor and the latter was not afraid of them.

The witness would not agree that the Italians' descriptions tallied with those contained in a police circular on the Windsor slayers and in answer to the direct qustion "did any of that group of Italians take part in the murder," McDermott replied: "definitely not." He said they were "well known at the house and wouldn't come there."

Mr. Justice G. F. McFarland halted Levinter's questioning as he sought to show vengeance was the motive behind Windsor's murder. McDermott agreed that the slayer either "had some vengeance in his heart," or "he got excited."

EDWARD S. ROGERS DIES IN TORONTO

Credited With Marketing World's First Electric Radio

Toronto, May 6—(CP)—Edward Samuel Rogers, 38, credited with marketing the world's first electric radio and President of Rogers-Majestic Corporation, died early today from an internal hemorrhage.

Interested in electricity and radio from early youth, Rogers in 1925 produced the first "light socket" radio and put it on the market. At his death he was Vice-President of the Standard Radio Company and Rogers Radio Tubes, Ltd.

He also pioneered in radio broadcasting through the early Toronto station 3-BP which later grew into the present CFRB which Rogers headed. His interest in radio began through experiments as a high school student in 1911 and he carried them on after being graduated from the University of Toronto's school of practical science.

Surviving are his widow, the former Velma Taylor of Woodstock, Ont., and a six-year-old son, Samuel. Rogers was a member of the Royal Canadian Yacht Club and the Granite Club.

OBITUARY

LATE ELWELL B. BELL

Many friends were present at the funeral of Elwell Burton Bell, late residence, 271 William St., which took place from the Martin Funeral Home, Church Street, on Friday afternoon, May 5th. The service in the chapel and at the graveside in Riverview Cemetery, Napanee, was conducted by the Rev. D. T. McClintock, pastor of the Tabernacle Church.

The bearers at Belleville were Messrs. George S. Kerr, William Brooks, William Kelly, George Thompson, William Hall and Seldon Ketcheson, all members of Moira Encampment, No. 59, Belleville.

The late Mr. Bell was also a member of the I.O.O.F. Lodge, No. 86, Napanee. The bearers at Napanee were all members of the Oddfellows Order in that town and were as follows: Messrs Charles Giles, Russell Galbraith, Fred Barrett, James Gilbert, Thomas Herrington and Clarence Vine.

BABY BORN IN STREET CAR

Toronto, May 6—(CP)—For the first time in the 18-year history of mission, a baby was born today on a street car.

Mrs. Adolphus Armstrong, 26, Toronto, gave birth to an eight-pound girl on a Church Street trolley at 6:41 a.m. Mother and babe were taken to the Salvation Army Hospital nearby where both were reported "doing well." The mother was on her way to the same hospital at the time.

ROYAL PALACE

Their Majesties stepped from their car onto a crimson carpet spread broadly in front of the gang plank, also covered in crimson, as a battery of cameras and television transmitters went into action.

The commander in chief of Portsmouth, Admiral of the Fleet the Earl of Cork and Orrery stepped forward to receive his sovereign. After a brief inspection of the naval guard of honor, Their Majesties boarded the Empress to shouts of "bon voyage" and "good luck". The crowd sang "For They Are Jully Good Fellows" and the marine band struck up strains of "O Canada" and "Land of Hope and Glory."

Their Majesties boarded the liner at 2.42 p.m. as a royal salute was fired and the royal standard was unfurled above the ship.

Vice-Admiral Sir Dudley North officially greeted Their Majesties aboard the liner which will be their "palace afloat" for the next nine days.

Sir Dudley, accompanying the King as commander of the royal squadron, presented L. C. Patterson, European Manager of the Canadian Pacific Railway; Captain R. N. Stuart, London Manager of the Canadian Pacific Steamships, and Captain A. R. Meikle to Their Majesties. Captain Meikle will command the Empress across the Atlantic.

Princesses Elizabeth and Margaret Rose walked behind their parents at the civic reception. The crowd was surprised as well as pleased for it had been expected the children would go directly to the dock with other members of the royal family.

The Princesses said good bye to their parents aboard the liner—the first they have ever boarded —and will return to London with other members of the regal party.

With Their Majesties at the dock were Queen Mary, the Duke and Duchess of Gloucester and the Duke and Duchess of Kent.

The young Princesses, Elizabeth and Margaret Rose, used their handkerchiefs to wave goodbye to their parents for nearly 15 minutes as the Empress slowly was pulled away from the dock by tugs.

The shore band played "God Save The King" while the ship's band played "O Canada."

Members of the royal family, including Queen Mary who will pass her 72nd birthday during Their Majesties' absence, formed a semicircle around the Princesses.

The royal standard was unfurled as the liner moved out into the channel.

Their Majesties sailed on the six-week-long trip that will take them across the breadth of Canada and back, into the eastern United States and briefly to Newfoundland after a triumphant journey from London.

"God Bless You" People Shout

Cheering crowds massed along the route their special train took from Waterloo station to Portsmouth. Additional thousands of their subjects greeted their arrival at the naval base, where the King received the golden keys of the Portsmouth garrison.

At all points hearty shouts of "God bless you" and "a happy voyage" broke through the cheering.

Repulse Escorts Part of Way

The 32,000-ton battle cruiser Repulse, originally selected to take Their Majesties across the Atlantic, towered over other vessels in Portsmouth harbor.

Escorted by the 9,100-ton cruisers Southampton and Glasgow, and with the Repulse as an added escort for part of the way, the Empress of Australia headed west through the English channel.

Before she could turn into the broad channel leading around the Isle of Wight into the English Channel, the liner had to thread her way through more than a mile of narrow waterways. Added thousands of spectators there massed on the shores and cheered.

Flagship Leads Into Channel

Outside the port, the vessel was escorted in the Channel to Portland, powerful south coast naval base where the major portion of the British Home Fleet has been concentrated because of the tense international situation.

From Portland, Admiral Sir Charles Forbes, Commander-in-Chief of the Home Fleet, in his flagship, the battleship Nelson, led the main division of the fleet out into the Channel.

Turning about, battleships, cruisers, aircraft carriers and cruisers formed two long lines through which the Empress of Australia passed while each warship fired a 21-gun salute and officers and men cheered the Royal party. Squadrons of seaplanes roared over the vessel.

In The Guildhall

During the civic reception ceremonies the approach to the Guildhall was lined by royal marines in navy blue and red and gold uniforms and white helmets. In the square the drums, band and bagpipes of the First Battalion of the King's Own Scottish Borderers played the National Anthem while the colors were lowered. Afterwards the King inspected a guard of honor formed by the battalion.

The Queen, accompanied by the two Princesses, walked up the first flight of steps leading to the Guildhall and was presented with a bouquet of flowers. Her Majesty chatted for a few moments with the Deputy Lord Mayor, Councillor F. J. Spickernell, who received the King and Queen at Portsmouth on the occasion of the coronation fleet review.

SPEED FIRST PICTURES OF ROYAL FAMILY TAKEN BY CANADIAN

The first pictures ever taken of the royal family by a Canadian photographer are in the parcel that Murray Sinclair of Star Newspaper Service holds as he steps from a plane at the Island airport, Toronto. These pictures, available to all Canadian newspapers, were rushed across the Atlantic by the liner Normandie and flown from New York to Toronto. On the way home, after having had the honor of being the first Canadian photographer to photograph the royal family, for Canadian newspapers is Gerald Richardson, RIGHT, staff photographer of Star Newspaper Service.

STORM TROOPERS EJECT AUDIENCE

National Unity Party Holds Noisy Meeting in Massey Hall

Toronto, May 6—(CP)—Several members of the audience were escorted from Massey Hall last night by Storm Troopers of the National Unity Party for attempting to disrupt the party's meeting, addressed by Leader Adrien Arcand.

There were frequent interruptions during the meeting but no violence. Some members of the audience were rushed out after objecting to anti-semitic statements.

The noisiest incident of the night occurred as the meeting opened. Someone demanded that the National Anthem be sung.

"We always sing God Save the King at the end of our meetings", the Secretary, Joseph Farr, replied.

Others demand that God Save the King be sung and finally someone started to sing it. The whole audience rose and joined.

Outside there were minor disturbances but police officers had a quiet time. Not far away a meeting of the League for Peace and Democracy was held. Twenty-seven officers broke up a street-corner assembly.

"You can't hold a meeting here," said Sergeant Andrew McKinney, "move along, please."

The crowd obeyed quickly.

Eight men walked noisily from the top gallery of the hall to the street outside. As they reached the street, one of them shouted to the blue-shirted party members: — "You're nothing but a bunch of Nazi agitators and spies. I detest you."

BACHELOR NEGRO ACTS AS PORTER

Well-Educated and a Musician Will Assist in Serving King and Queen

Calgary, Many 6—(CP)— Porter Robert S. Strong, 50-year-old Calgary musician, last night left for Montreal where he will join the dining car staff serving the royal train during the visit of the King and Queen.

On part of his trip east, Strong, a handsome friendly and well-educated bachelor Negro, will give up-to-the-minute service to passengers. At Saskatoon, he will stop over until Monday and then take the Canadian National Railways transcontinental train to Montreal.

Strong, who celebrates his 17th anniversary as a railway porter this month, is a Great War veteran and British subject. Born in St. Paul, he has made Calgary his residence for almost 20 years.

Only once has he acted as porter to members of a royal family. "About four or five years ago I attended a Spanish Prince and Princess when they travelled incognito across Canada to Vancouver."

The Calgary porter has been assigned to the compartment car "Atlantic." "I consider it a very great honor and privilege to serve persons of the King and Queen's retinue," Strong said. "But, I don't think I will have time to play my favorite music of Bach, Beethoven and C. Franck, French musician."

Piano and organ playing were taught Strong by M. Knight, Calgary, Cliff Higgin, Calgary choir leader, and Henry Caron, prominent Winnipegger.

"I also received training in French and German languages, church history and religious music," he said.

THREE DROWNED NEAR EDMONTON

Crossing the Saskatchewan River When Flat-Bottomed Boat Capsized

Edmonton, May 6—(CP)—Three youths drowned here last night when an old flat-bottomed row-boat in which they were crossing the North Saskatchewan River capsized.

Those drowned were: Alphonse Prasch, 17; his brother, Rudolph Prasch, 13; and Jack Steinberg, 16.

The youths, residents of Beverly, a suburb on the northeastern outskirts, saw a chicken coop being burned on the other side of the river and, their curiosity aroused, decided to go to the fire.

In mid-stream the boat began to leak. An eyewitness said the Prasch brothers apparently became panicky and jumped into the stream. Neither could swin, Steinberg, who could swim a little, followed but the brothers apparently dragged him under.

NEGOTIATIONS

The semi-official mouthpiece of the German Foreign Office, Deutsche Diplomatisch-Politische Korrespondenz, said that the new Polish-British assistance pact shows "an unmistakeable tendency toward a coalition directed exclusively against Germany" and "it is a parallel to the Czech-French-Soviet system...."

Germans Allege Attacks

Adding an important factor to the situation was the publication of reports in German papers of alleged attacks on German and German property and "abuse of the Fuehrer" in Poland. The official news agency reported a "stream of German refugees as a result of Polish terrorism" and said "the German population of the village of Wolz was terrorized by Polish bands in an unbelievable way."

The official news agency reported a Polish demonstration in which an effigy of Hitler on a gallows was carried in a parade.

The agency said a Polish district official made a speech in which he said: "Germans can be insulted, mistreated and even killed. Nobody will be held responsible for it."

The confiscation of German newspapers in Warsaw was reported to Germany's controlled press under the line, "the truth shall not come to light."

A government spokesman said: "The idea of a joint administration of the Free City, hinted at by Beck, is not to be discussed. As the Fuehrer said in his Reichstag speech of April 28, Danzig is a German city. We do not deny Poland's right to access to the sea. That is why we are prepared to give Poland a free harbor in Danzig. We are also ready to respect the rights of the Polish minority in Danzig. The door has not been closed to further negotiations."

Milan, Italy, May 6—(AP)— The Foreign Ministers of Italy and Germany met here today to chart axis policies after Poland's rejection of German demands on Danzig and Pomorze (Polish Corridor).

Indications from Italian sources were that Foreign Minister Count Ciano, in his talks with the German Foreign Minister, Joachim Von Ribbentrop, would seek a peaceful way out of the dispute between Italy's axis partner and Poland, a traditional friend of Italy.

Diplomats in Rome expected Count Ciano would counsel moderation in his talks with Von Ribbentrop. There was a possibility he would offer Italian mediation. The Italian press urged a peaceful solution.

While newspaper articles admonished Poland to heed the German demands, which many articles characterized as "just," the usually authoritative journalist, Virginio Gayda, stressed Italy's friendship for Poland. Italy supported Poland's desire for a common frontier with Hungary in the break up of Czecho-Slovakia.

Gayda's assurances that Italy desired to remain neutral in the dispute were accepted by diplomats as an indication Italy was offering herself as a mediator.

There was no evidence, however, that Italy would break with Germany on Poland's behalf in the event of a showdown.

Historic Windsor Is Background For Royal Pictures

"We posed our hosts against the great white castle whose stones are mortared with history," writes M. H. Halton, who accompanied the photographers to Windsor and Buckingham. "It was a very handsome royal family which posed for us that day," writes Mr. Halton, with regard to this photograph, taken at Windsor. "The King wore an informal country suit, grayish-blue in color and with a checked pattern, the Queen, a beautiful ensemble the color of blue pearls." The princesses are wearing pink, a favorite shade.

BELLEVILLE HAD FIVE P.C. OF POPULATION ON RELIEF IN 1937

Belleville was not too badly off in the matter of relief in 1937, it is shown in the annual report of the Department of Municipal Affairs for the Province, which reports points out that in the year 1937 an average of 9.3 per cent of the population of Ontario cities was on relief.

Windsor, according to the report had the highest average at 15.3 per cent, Woodstock, the lowest at 2.7 per cent.

Belleville was reported to have 5 per cent, Peterborough and Kingston both with 5.4 per cent. of the population on relief.

Other cities and percentages are—Sudbury 3.1; Sarnia 3.2; Owen Sound 3.6; Galt 3.8; Chatham 3.9; Sault Ste. Marie 4.2; St. Thomas 4.9; Kitchener 5.3; London 6.4; Port William 6.5; Stratford 7; Welland, 7.3; North Bay 7.5; Oshawa and Guelph 7.7; Port Arthur 8.2; Hamilton 8.3; Toronto 10.3; Ottawa 11.2; Brantford 12.5.

GRASS FIRE SWEEPS FIFTY ACRE AREA

Trenton, Ont., (Special) — A spectacular blaze that sent flames shooting high in the air razed a grassy area of some fifty acres near the old munitions plant here on Thursday evening. The fire swept wiht lightning-like rapidity thru' the dry grass and was halted by members of the local fire department when within a few yards of the Central Bridge Company plant. No property damage was done.

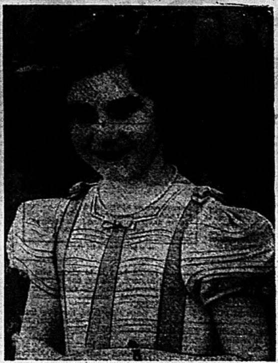
The gay child—Princess Margaret Rose—Posed Gladly

"Would the Princess Margaret Rose pose alone, please?" "All right, I'm ready. Let me see. How should I stand?"

"No, I don't think I was smiling quite right that time. Would you like to try that one over again . . ."

"I think this is better, but don't click it for a minute and I'll try and find just the right smile."



"There—that's better, I'm sure. I was smiling when the camera went 'click' and I didn't move the tiniest bit."

Although the troubled state of Europe and last-minute preparations for the visit to North America crowded upon him, the King found time to pose for this and other pictures with the Queen and the princesses. Yet there was little posing — this gracious royal family were simply "themselves".

3 MEN RESCUED FROM DROWNING

Burr's Residents Picked Up by M. Greatrix After Boat Capsizes

Burr's May 6—(Special)—Rescued in the nick of time from the icy waters of West Lake, the other day, Wallace Bowers, local resident and two companions are recuperating in their homes near here from their immersion.

The timely arrival of a boat manned by M. Greatrix who answered their cries for help, prevented what might have been a drowning tragedy as all three men were exhausted [illegible] picked up after clinging to the hull of the boat for nearly an hour. Bowers was unable to walk when he reached shore.

The men were fishing when the boat suddenly capsized. Unable to swim but a few strokes, they floundered in the water and managed to cling to the overturned boat. Bowers' attempt to climb on the hull resulted in the boat capsizing once more. Again they managed to reach the boat and to cling to it until their cries for assistance brought Greatrix racing to the scene.

Encumbered by heavy hip-rubber boots and leather coat, Bowers grew weak from his efforts, and the fact that his foot struck a submerged rock is said to be the reason that the accident did not result in tragedy. After reaching shore, Bowers was rushed to the Greatrix home where he was given restoratives.

BELLEVILLE MOTOR CLUB REPORTS SURPLUS OF $448

The most encouraging financial report submitted since 1929, presented by the treasurer at the annual meeting of the Belleville Motor Club held in the Chamber of Commerce rooms on Thursday evening showed a cash surplus of $448.00.

Officers elected at the meeting for the current year are: President; H. O. Trusdale; First Vice-President, F. A. Pinkston; Second Vice-President, T. D. Ruston; Secretary-Treasurer, J. O. Herity.

Directors: J. G. Skelcher, C. W. Burr, J. B. Boyce, W. H. Middleton; T. J. Herity and Geo. B. Smith.

President Trusdale and First Vice-President F. A. Pinkston were chosen to represent the Belleville Club on the executive of the Ontario Motor League.

British Subjects Held in Berlin

Berlin, May 6—(AP)—Arrest of three British subjects, one a woman, was reported in Austria today.

An Englishwoman named Miss Church was arrested in Vienna, charged with violating the German Foreign Currency laws. She was reported to be confined now in a prison hospital.

The two men, named Whitehead and Allen, were arrested at Graz for undisclosed reasons.

Officials at the British Consulate said they knew nothing further about the identity of the three.

THE COUNTESS ENJOYS "HELLSAPOPPIN"

Countess von Haugwitz-Reventlow, the former Barbara Hutton, Woolworth heiress, appears to be very amused by the wise-cracks of clown Dippy Diers, as she witnesses a performance of "Hellzapoppin" in New York.

PRACTICAL JOKERS

Julian Huxley told me a curious little fact about the zoo the other day. It appears that the zoo telephone has to be disconnected on April 1 every year because hundreds of calls are put through: "Can I speak to Mr. Lion?" "Does Mr. C. Lion (or Mr. Wolf or Mr. Beaver or Mr. G. Raffe or Mr. L. E. Phant) live there?" Apparently the technique is to leave a message for a friend asking him to ring up one or other of these plausible names at the zoo number. Mr. Huxley tells me that Dr. Vevers, the assistant director of the zoo, missed an urgent call one day because the operator thought someone was asking for Dr. Beaver and promptly disconnected the calls. It would be impossible to employ anyone named Lion or Beaver on the staff of the zoo.—New Statesman and Nation, London.

POLES WILL STAND BY THEIR RIGHTS

Pope Pius Might Try to Mediate Between Germany and Poland

Warsaw, May 6—(CP)—Reports of possible mediation both by the Vatican and Italy were given little consideration. Rumors Pope Pius might try to mediate between Poland and Germany were received with skepticism as Catholic leaders said they had no information of such an undertaking.

The rumors apparently were "based largely on the meeting yesterday between Chancellor Hitler and Monsignor Cesare Orsenigo, Papal Nuncio to Germany. To reports of possible Italian mediation, the Socialist newspaper Robotnik commented that "Poland is not Czecho-Slovakia."

Apparently reflecting the general attitude of the press, the newspaper Kurjer Czerwony declared that "the world now agrees that Berlin must give proof that it actually wants an understanding with Poland."

As proof of Poland's ancient right to the Free City of Danzig the Kurjer Warszawski published what was reputed to be an 18th century German map of Danzig made in Nuremberg. It had the caption: "A general view and description of the Polish States fortified and the commercial town of Danzig and its surroundings."

Poland, declared the National Democrats' Warszawski Dziennick, still has unsatisfied claims against Germany. It contended that Polish possessions on the Baltic were a minimum for the nation's continued existence.

"For us," it said, "Danzig is a Polish town historically, geographically and economically. The maximum concession we can make for the German section of its population is to agree that it shall have the political standard of a Free City."

No More Clocks

By MINNIE POWERS

For the hundredth time that morning, it seemed to her, Martha Fleming went stumbling up the stairs. She bore her invalid mother's lunch on a tray as she had done each noon for the past ten years.

That morning the alarm clock had awakened her at six-thirty. With steel cold fury she hated the clock. The day would come when she would beat it to pieces with the hammer. This was one of the vague satantic ideas that swarmed in the worn-out woman's subconscious mind.

Some time later, her own toast, coffee and egg (gone stale) had been consumed perfunctorily, without zest. From time immemorial, it seemed, all her lackluster meals had been eaten alone off the kitchen table end. She almost never got out. Long since had friends and neighbors ceased coming. There was Shorty, but he always ate at home.

More automaton than human being, the burnt-out Martha waited on her mother that morning as usual, toting hot water, soap and towels from the bathroom. Each morning the invalid, a wrinkled, fishy dead weight between the sheets, had to be bathed and rubbed completely.

When it came to her own bed... Ah! that was something different. The sheets and blankets Martha smoothed with strokes that were caresses. Patted the pillows as she would pat the cheeks of a beloved. Her bed! The very compendium of heart's desire. How many more dreary, distasteful years, she asked herself wistfully that morning, before she could surrender utterly to the seduction of her luxurious, lavender-scented bed? Now it was noon. Her mother must be read to every day. The poor soul!

Clump, clump, clump went the leaden feet to the last step. Reaching the door, Martha went into the sick room and was about to place the tray on the bedside stand as usual when her glance rested an instant on the white face. Martha emitted a husky scream. Her hands let the heavy tray slip and crash to the floor. Her mother was dead.

Sounds of scream and crash occasioned, in the room below, the hurried clatter of feet to the foot of the stairs. It was Shorty, the kid next door, who tended the Fleming furnace, shoveled the snow and ran Martha's errands..

Up the staircase he called with a show of friendly concern: "Wha-sa matter? Need any help?"

For a brief space there was no answer, then Martha's flat voice reached the boy's ears: "Come up here, will you?"

Shorty leaped the stairs three at a time and presently stood beside gray Martha Fleming. Pointing to the bed with a claw-like finger, the woman said: "Look, she's dead!"

Gingerly, Shorty essayed a step forward and peered down at the glassy eyes. "Holy smokes! So she is. But look!" Reaching down he loosened a paper from the rigid fingers of the dead woman. A dull pencil stub lay on the white counterpane.

Together they opened and read the letter. Martha's stiff lips haltingly framed the words:

"Dear Martha:

I feel my end is near. You have been a faithful daughter and nurse. Before your pa died, he and I staled up some of his savings in a box in the dining room. Take the pick axe and dig open the second panel from the right on the east wall. Take the money now and make something of your life..."

The scrawl ended there. Martha and the boy stared at each other. "Holy cow!" ejaculated Shorty. Martha swayed but did not faint. She found her footing and her voice. Her wits obeyed her. "See here, Shorty," she said in a low tone "promise me you won't mention this note to a soul. Come to me the day after the funeral and help me, with the pick, I mean, and the—the box, will you? I'll make it worth your while."

"Will I? Oh boy, will I? and I'll take care of everything now, Martha. The undertaker, neighbors, preacher you know—everything."

It was the day after the funeral. A sickly 25-watt ceiling bulb afforded the only light in the room, for the drawn shades excluded daylight.

Shorty wielded the axe. Martha stood by in decent black, nervously twisting her shiny hands. Her breath was fluttery and she kept glancing about with apprehension.

Lighting a match now and then, the pecking went on. Little by little the cement fell away. A match flared. The boy thrust it through the wall and stared.

"There she is!" Way in he reached, hefted the box, found he could not lift it out with one hand, so impatiently resumed his work. At length it was possible to thrust in both arms.

Martha fetched a pencil and pad. "Count it!" she commanded.

When the gold was stacked in piles, the boy grinned, consulted his penciled figures. "Well, Martha, it amounts to nine thousand dollars. Gee! Wha'cha goin' to do with it? Travel?"

Martha's countenance wore a queer beatific expression and her faded eyes were gazing far beyond Shorty. "Me?" she said in a hushed tone, almost reverent. "Oh, I shall have me a housekeeper-nurse and take to my own bed at last...Maybe for good. And there won't be any alarm clock .... I smashed it this morning!"

Little Benny's Note Book

After supper ma said to pop, O deer, Willyum, I've searched through this paper 5 times, and if there's anything in it, it must require a microscope.

That's a way I feel about the paper sometimes, pop said, and ma said, I mean anything about the play I was in last week. Oscar Peebles the dramatic critic is a personel friend of Mrs. Hannah Mabel Pabst the authoress and directer, and he promised her without fail he would have something in Sattiday's paper, so we all gave Mrs. Papst our photographs to give him just to help with a little publicity, but I dont even see a line, much less a picture. Here, Willyum, see if you can find it, she said.

And she handed him the paper and pop looked all over it, saying, If it's anywhere in this paper it must be right behind an advertisement.

Of course I only had 2 words to speak, so personly I'm not much effected, but just a same I'd like to give that old Oscar Peebles a good shake, ma said, and pop said, By gollies if it was up to me I know what I'd write.

And he pretended to read it out of the paper, saying, Mrs. Willyum P. Potts was the star, belle and shining light of a little play given by the Dawters of Cleopattera last week. She was a combination of Mrs. Siddons, Mrs. Fisk, David Barrick and Groucho Marks, with the best features of each.

Now Willyum dont exaggerate, remember I only had 2 words to say, ma said, and pop pretended to read some more, saying, It is true her part consisted of but 2 words yet the tufted tittlebird has only 2 notes, yet what a world of meaning and a wealth of song it pores into them, and the humble peanut whissle has only 2 notes, yet what indiscribeable longing and hope they stir in the harts of countless millions.

Willyum, such flattery, even in jest, ma said.

Sounding as if she felt better instead of worse.

QUEEN'S MEDICAL STUDENT SWALLOWS 4 LIVE MICE

Kingston, Ont., May 5 (CP)—Swallowers of goldfish shrank into insignificance here yesterday afternoon when it was learned that a Queen's University student had swallowed four live mice. Jack Pickup, a member of the third year in medicine, swallowed the mice one after the other and then topped them off with a couple of bottles of soft drink.

The mice were two days old and were two inches long. He held them by the tails and then gulped them down.

ESKIMO FAMILY BRINGS ALONG REINDEER MEAT

Chicago, May 5 (AP)—The Mayokok family isn't taking any chances of going without their favorite dish while attending the New York World's Fair. Mr. and Mrs. Mayokok and their youngsters, Weokana, Tumassuk, Ongoona and Argustuk, are taking reindeer meat along with them. The Eskimo family arrived here from Cape Prince of Wales, Alaska, travelling 6,000 miles by dogsled, airplane, steamship and train.

GREAT BRITAIN READY TO ACT AS MEDIATOR

Turco-British Military Alliance Will Be Announced

Terms of Treaty Stronger Than in Other Alliances

London and Ankara Will Simultaneously Make Announcement on Wednesday or Thursday

NEW LINK IN BLOC

Anglo - French Guarantees to Poland, Rumania and Greece Do Not Go so Far as New Pact

By J. F. SANDERSON

Canadian Press Staff Writer

London, May 8—(CP Cable)— A military alliance of limited scope between Great Britain and Turkey will be announced this week, possibly on Wednesday or Thursday. The announcement will be made simultaneously in London and Ankara.

The alliance will constitute another step in Britain's anti-aggression front, but its terms will be much stronger than the Anglo-French guarantees to Poland, Rumania and Greece.

Provisions Expected

Three main provisions of the alliance are reported to be:

1. Turkey will line up with Britain in any war in the Mediterranean area in which Italy is on the opposite side.

2. Turkey will fight alongside Britain in any war in the Balkan area providing Anglo-Russian negotiations now in progress result in a satisfactory agreement.

3. In return, Britain, and probably France, will extend territorial guarantees to Turkey.

An informed source expressed the opinion that the alliance actually would mean that Turkey would enter any Mediterranean or Balkan war in which Itay and Britain were

Why the Weather!

By Major A. H. Thiessen

Hurricanes! To most people a storm is a storm. Storms differ from one another only in intensity. That is generally so if observations are made from only one point. But viewed as a whole the West Indian hurricanes (the season for which is just commencing) differ greatly in some details from our north temperate cyclones which travel across this continent giving us first warm and rain ollowed by cooler and dry weather. Some of the important differences are: hurricanes in their whole area have no great temperature change but do have very high wind speeds and torrential rains; while with our northern storms the temperatures are high in the eastern half and low in the western and wind speed much less than with hurricanes.

PACT IS VIEWED AS A MANOEUVRE TO PREVENT BLOC

France Believes Germany and Italy Have Three Definite Aims

LEADERS WORRIED

Paris, May 8—(AP)—France today viewed the Italian-German pact of Milan as a manoeuvre to prevent effective formation of a European anti-aggression front.

Informed French circles believed Germany and Italy, now to be bound in a political and military alliance rather than the informal axis relationship, had three immediate aims:

1. To have Premier Mussolini intervene in the Polish-German dispute over the Free City of Danzig as he did in last September's crisis in German-Czecho-Slovak relations with the resulting annexation of the Sudetenland by the Reich.

2. To set up a "macedonian free state" in Yugoslavia while Croat-Serb minority negotiations break down—the free state to be Italy's "political domain" in "reward" for supporting Chancellor Hitler.

German Press Claims Move Crushing Blow Against 'Encirclement' Policy

Berlin, May 8—(AP)—Officials hailed the new German-Italian military pact today as a "mighty bulwark of steel guarding European peace" and took the occasion to direct Poland's attention to its implications.

Whether or not a new ideological reshuffling is bringing Germany closer to Soviet Russia, the reaction to the agreement indicated plainly it was aimed not at the old Nazi bugaboo of Communism but at what Nazis call the "encirclement powers" especially Great Britain and France.

FAMILY SENT BACK TWICE IN 2 DAYS

Chatham, Ont., May 8—(CP)—For the second time in two days Ridgetown has sent a mother and children back to Leamington, according to word received here today. The family in question arrived in Ridgetown sometime ago from Leamington. The Kent municipality protested and Saturday afternoon transported parents, children and furniture to Leamington. The latter place kept the father and after a long argument in which Government Inspector Weese is said to have taken part, permitted the furniture to be left in town. The mother and children however arrived back in Ridgetown about Saturday midnight. It is reported here the mother and children were sent back again to Leamington Sunday night.

Palatial Liner Encounters Stiff Breeze But Royal Couple Prove to be Good Sailors

By R. K. CARNEGIE

Canadian Press Staff Writer

Aboard R.M.S. Empress of Australia, May 8—(CP)—The King and Queen are good sailors. They proved it yesterday when this palatial liner taking them to Canada encountered a stiff breeze and did considerable pitching with the result several persons were unable to attend Divine service.

Their Majesties, however, were present at the service in the main dining room. Following the custom of the sea, Captain A. R. Meikle, commander of the Empress of Australia, conducted the service and Purser D. P. Armour read the scripture. The King and Queen joined heartily in the responsive readings. There was no sermon.

For Their Majesties it was a day of rest after weeks of preparing for their visit to Canada, the United States and Newfoundland and the excitement of their departure from Portsmouth on Saturday. The Empress will dock at Quebec May 15.

Wore Lounge Suit

His Majesty wore a blue lounge suit with white pin stripe at the service. He heard Captain Meikle pray "most heartily we beseech Thee to hold our most gracious sovereign Lord King George." It was the same prayer that went up from tiny churches, great cathedrals and ships on the seven seas for the first British monarch ever to visit his people in Canada.

Captain Meikle prayed "we humbly beseech Thee to bless our gracious Queen Elizabeth." The Queen sat beside her husband. Behind them was the whole royal suite. Her Majesty wore a salmon pink costume with brown fur and grey suede shoes.

Her Majesty selected the hymns. They were: "New Every Morning is the Love" "King of Love My Shepherd is;" "Fight The Good Fight."

Naval Prayer Used

The naval prayer was used asking God to 'preserve us from the dangers of the sea and from the violence of the enemy that we may be safeguarded unto our most gracious Sovereign, Lord and King, George VI, and his Dominions and security for such as pass on the seas upon

GERMAN-POLISH RECONCILIATION BELIEVED NEAR

Opined Duce Would Not Have Signed Pact if War Was Imminent

RELATIONS FIXED

Milan, Italy, May 8—(AP)— Hope for German-Polish reconciliation grew in Italian political circles today as Fascists pondered the implications of their new military and political alliance with Germany.

Informed Fascists who expressed this hope reasoned that Premier Mussolini would not have agreed to such an alliance as was announced yesterday if he had expected it to involve him in an eastern European conflict almost as soon as it was signed.

The announcement yesterday at the end of two days of talks between Count Galeazzo Ciano and Joachim von Ribbentrop, Italian and German Foreign Ministers, said "it was decided to establish the relation of the two states of the axis definitely as well as from the formal point of view in a political and military pact."

The general optimism displayed in official quarters over the likelihood of a pacific solution of the Danzig question between Berlin and Warsaw was taken as indicating Italy was satisfied that Germany would not attempt a solution by force.

Given Definite Assurance

Some observers believed Count Ciano received definite assurances to this effect from Von Ribbentrop before giving Italy's assent to the pact of Milan. The statement in the official communique that the accord was intended to "contribute effectively to assuring peace in Europe" was cited in support of this view.

Fascists also hailed the agreement as demonstrating, first, that the Rome-Berlin axis was destined to remain intact despite foreign speculation on its fragility and, second, that the axis powers were carrying out their determination not to go on the defensive in face of the more vigorous policy adopted recently by Great Britain and France.

One authoritative Fascist insisted, however, that the pact was "not directed against anyone". The precise terms of the agreement probably will be decided on within two Brockville, Ont., May 8—(CP)—William Miller, 68, died here Saturday night after lengthy illness. He was a well-known Eastern Ontario newspaperman and worked on the editorial staff of the Brockville Times for 25 years.

In 1919 he was appointed to the local customs office where he served until his superannuation two years ago. Surviving are his widow, one daughter, Mae of Brockville, and three brothers, Nicholas of Lincoln, Nebraska, Samuel of Augusta Township, Ontario, and Richard of Brockville.

PARLIAMENT MAY CREATE DISCOUNT MORTGAGE BANK

In Order to Finish Business This Week House Sits on Saturday

BILL UNDER FIRE

Ottawa, May 8—(CP)—Parliament today swings into its final week before arrival of the King and Queen and the big question uppermost in the minds of members is whether sessional business will be concluded in the next six days so the King may prorogue the Canadian parliament for the first time in history.

In an effort to get finished by next week-end the House sat six hours on Saturday, from 11 a.m. to 6 p.m. with an hour for lunch but the result did not increase expectations of winding up this week.

Carleton Place, Ont., May 8—(CP)—T. A. Thompson of Almonte, Conservative member of parliament for Lanark, was re-nominated by the National Conservative Association of Lanark County here Saturday to contest the next general election.

He defeated Joseph H. Ebbs, former Sheriff of Lanark County, who moved Mr. Thompson's nomination be made unanimous and pledged his support to the candidate. The vote was 324 for Mr. Thompson and 139 for Mr. Ebbs.

T. A. Rogers, Perth barrister and John W. Ford, Smith's Falls barrister also were nominated but declined to stand.

105-Year Old Man Dead at Windsor

Windsor, Ont., May 8 (CP) — One of Canada's oldest residents, William Neal, 105, died in hospital here yesterday after an illness of five months. A native of London, Ont., Mr. Neal lived in the Windsor district most of his life and worked for the Canadian Steel Corporation until eight years ago.

"I used to drink quite a bit—that's what helped me live so long," the centenarian told reporters recently. "I enjoy life still. I don't want to live too long though. I figure fifty years more would be just about right."

He is survived by a son and four daughters, all of Windsor district.

The squadron went into fog formation with the Empress leading, followed in single file by the cruisers Southampton and Glasgow and the warship Repulse.

Visibility cleared somewhat and two hours later normal speed was resumed. At eight o'clock G.M.T. (four a.m. E.D.T.) the squadron was 300 miles west of the Irish coast.

Palace Quite Lonely

London, May 8—(AP)—Palaces can be just as lonely as ordinary houses when parents have gone away, leaving two little girls behind.

So Princesses Elizabeth and Margaret Rose yesterday—the first Sunday of their separation from their parents—visited their grandmother, Queen Mary, at her residence, Marlborough House.

The Princesses attended church with Queen Mary and later went to the Royal Academy with relatives, including the former Queen of Spain, and then to tea and back to Marlborough House in time for radio messages from their mother aboard the Empress of Australia Bound for Canada.

Queen Mary helped the Princesses reply.

POLICE INFORMED OF MAN'S ARREST

Donald R. Edward Wanted for Holdup of Bank in Richmond on July 19

Ottawa, May 8—(CP)—Informed of the arrest of Donald R. Edward in Everett, Wash., Sergeant R. P. LaBelle of the Ontario Provincial Police said here last night "that's the man we've been looking for" in connection with the armed holdup of the Bank of Nova Scotia at Richmond, Ont., last July 19.

"We have a warrant for his arrest for that holdup," he added. Three men with sawed-off shotguns and revolvers robbed the bank of $12,000 and escaped in a fast car. Two of the bandits, Melville and Oscar Campbell, were arrested and sentenced to nine and 12 years respectively in Kingston Penitentiary.

Police authorities said extradition proceedings probably will be taken to return Edward to Canada to stand trial. It was pointed out, however, that if he is convicted of the forgery charge on which he was arrested in Everett he could not be extradited until he served the sentence given him in the United States.

Windsor Italian Tells Police He's Tired of Carrying Bombs

Windsor, Ont., May 8—(CP)—Angelo Pagnan, 45, of Windsor, was arrested today and held for investigation after two hand-made bombs and some dynamite were found in his possession. Police said Pagnan, a native of Italy, went to the police station here and told officers he was "tired of carrying these around."

Pagnan told police he stole the explosives while working for the Industrial Construction Company in Northern Ontario. Beside the bombs, two half-sticks of dynamite, 22 blasting caps and three extra fuses were found on his person. Pagnan said he planned to use the crude bombs made of dynamite powder, brown paper and a fuse, to kill fish.

Royal Canadian Mounted Police are investigating.

British Ambassador Pays Visit to Molotoff at Moscow to Present British Reply

By J. F. SANDERSON

Canadian Press Staff Writer

London, May 8—(CP Cable) — The British Government stands ready to act as mediator in the dispute between Germany and Poland over the future status of the Free City of Danzig, Richard Butler, Under-Secretary for Foreign Affairs, indicated in the House of Commons today.

The British Government "are at all times ready to lend their good offices at the request of any of the interested parties," Mr. Butler declared when answering questions relating to Danzig.

"The status of Danzig is regulated by treaty," the Under-Secretary said. "The question of any change in status is in practice a matter in the first instance for parties most directly interested in a treaty settlement. It is for them to agree upon the method by which they should proceed.

Stands for Arbitration

"It has been repeatedly made clear that His Majesty's Government stand for settlement of international differences by friendly negotiation, arbitration or other peaceful means," Mr. Butler said.

Prime Minister Chamberlain, in response to a question whether the government was prepared to take steps toward arbitration, said the Polish Government is aware that the British Government would welcome an amicable settlement "and I have no reason to doubt that they are alive to the importance of the matter (of arbitration)."

The dispute between Poland and Germany over the status of the Free City, nominally under League of Nations supervision but dominated by a local Nazi administration, reached a critical stage last month when Germany proposed annexation of the Baltic seaport and asked Poland for a motor road across the Polish corridor to link East Prussia with Germany proper.

Kingston Cyclist Visits World's Fair

New York, May 8—(CP)— After a quick "once over" of the New York World's Fair Thomas Cuddon, 60-year-old cyclist from Kingston, headed towards home today on the racing bike which has "taken him all over the States."

Dusty and sunburned the veteran wheelsman arrived at the Fair yesterday afternoon but did not have the price of admission. A passerby paid the tolls and Cuddon headed straight for the press building to register his latest cycle tour. He said he just had some "tea and cakes" on the way to New York.

Cuddon is a sandblaster and when business is slow he mounts his bicycle, bids goodbye to his wife and four children and takes to the road. He financed his trip home by auctioning autographed pictures.

D. MACDONALD IS IDENTIFIED AS THE "TRIGGER MAN"

Mrs. Edith Warner Says Accused is Man Who Shot Windsor

TELLS OF CRIME

Toronto, May 8—(CP)— Mrs. Edith Warner, blonde, fashionably-dressed sister of bookmaker James Windsor, was called to the witness stand by the crown as the MacDonald murder trial resumed today. Mickey MacDonald, 31, and his 19-year-old brother, Alex, are charged with Windsor's murder Jan. 7.

Mrs. Warner said she had lived in the Windsor house with her husband and their baby for about a year. She related the events of Jan. 7, telling how her sister, Mrs. John McDermott, answered a knock at the front door. Mrs. McDermott returned with a man following her.

"He went up to Jimmy and said: 'All right, Windsor, get out to the car.'"

The man held a gun in one hand and a handkerchief up to his face," Mrs. Warner testified.

"He wanted Jimmy to open the box and Jimmy said: 'What's all this about?' He demanded again to open the box and Jimmy said: 'don't get tough about it.' He went to get up and the man said 'maybe this will bring you,' and there was a shot."

Took off Handkerchief

After shooting Windsor, the gunman took the handkerchief from his face and put it in his pocket, Mrs. Warner said. He then "helped" Windsor into the hall. An electric stove blocked her view of the hallway, but she saw a second man enter the kitchen. He, too, was armed and stood directly in front of her. His face was partly masked by a handkerchief.

"He told my husband and my brother-in-law to keep quiet or they would get the same," Mrs. Warner testified.

JAPANESE PLANES CAUSE GREAT LOSS

Shanghai, May 8—(AP)—Japanese warplanes caused great loss of life and property today in repeated attacks along the south China coast.

Authorities closed business places and ordered the people to move inland to escape the raids, which Chinese officials said were "reckless" attempts to break Chinese morale.

A nincrease of activity of Japanese armed forces was noted near Amoy. Warships were constantly coming and going and aircraft were passing.

PILOT OFFICERS HOLD "WING DINNER"

Thirty pilot officers of the Royal Canadian Air Force, together with eighteen instructors, held a "Wing Dinner" at the Royal York Hotel, Toronto, on Saturday evening to celebrate the fact they will receive their wings this week. Pilot Officer John Stevenson, a senior member of the class was chairman of the dinner, and among those present was Squadron Leader, Dave Harding of the Trenton base.

CONTINUE WORK OF TREE PLANTING

Relief workers continued this week the work of replanting the majority of 16,000 assorted trees sent by the Ontario Forestry Department on Zwick's Island. Several thousand trees are to be planted in this location, while other sites are also being surveyed in the city by experts of the department now in the city assisting in the work of planting. All trees received have been immediately planted in stock rows on the island where they are being carefully guarded.

DOCK WAREHOUSE DOORS REPAIRED

Heavy sliding doors of the Government dock warehouse which have become loose and well worn with constant use were undergoing repairs this morning. Painting of the warehouse which started last week is well underway and other minor repairs are also being undertaken.

MRS. W. H. EARLE WINS CONGOLEUM RUG

The Thompson Furniture and House Furnishings Company prize rug in the Congoleum contest was won by Mrs. W. H. Earle, 268 Coleman Street.

NO FREE PICK-UP OF LEAVES AFTER NEXT WEDNESDAY

Notice was served by the city department of public works today that residents of the city are being given until May 10th. to place their rakings of leaves and other lawn litter at the curbs for free pickup by the department trucks. After this date if such pickups are needed they will be charged to the property concerned. After this date regular street flushing will be commenced in the residential sections.

8 NICE TROUT CAUGHT

With the receding of the flood waters of the northern areas well under way, anglers for speckled trout are gradually coming into their own.

Two Church Street fishermen who left the city early Saturday morning for the haunts of the finny beauties in the north, came back with stories of good catches — and eight trout that measured between ten and twelve inches to substantiate their stories. "The trout were fairly plentiful," one stated, although he refused to mention just what part of the north he was in, "and we threw back at least twelve which were under regulation size."

FINDS OLD SIGN

Reminiscent of the good old days when residents of this city were thrilling to the overseas exploits of the famous Belleville Kiltie Band, an old sign that bears the inscription in faded gold letters "Office of the Belleville Kiltie Band," was unearthed the other day by workmen cleaning out an attic in the Front Street building that formerly housed the Dominion Hotel.

And by a strange coincidence, the old relic was found by Jamie Clark, well-known local piper and war-veteran and himself a member of the famous musical organization that emblazoned the name of Belleville on the scroll of the musical world of long ago.

3 CASES LISTED ON THE DOCKET

Mr. Justice Urquhart to Preside at Non-Jury Sittings

Three cases are listed for trial at the Non-Jury Sittings of the Supreme Court of Ontario, which opened at the Court House before the Honourable Mr. Justice Urquhart in Belleville today.

Sheriff J. D. O'Flynn tendered the list of cases to be heard, which included one damage action and two motions for divorce.

The damage case of Lepore vs. John and Harry Rigby, has been in the courts on a previous occasion, being the result of a motor accident, which occurred in Belleville some months ago. It was adjourned for settlement by judgment at the last sittings. The firm of Porter, Payne and Arnott, appeared on behalf of the plaintiffs, while Cameron and Cameron represented the defendants.

A motion for divorce, Gatcum vs. Gatcum is undefended, the firm of Porter, Payne and Arnott representing the plaintiff. The only other case is also a divorce action of Waymark vs. Waymark, also uncontested with G. M. Gordon K.C., Peterboro, appearing for the plaintiff.

Albert College Service is Held At Victoria Ave. Baptist Church

Rev. C. T. Olmstead Preaches on "Narrow Way" Leading to Life

With the faculty and student body of Albert College in attendance at a special service in Victoria Ave., Baptist Church Sunday evening the minister, Rev. C. T. Olmstead, speaking on his theme "The Ways of Life", likened life to a journey during which every man decides the way in which his soul should go.

"Where do we go from here?" is a familiar phrase of today" declared the minister "and the answer to that question depends on the individual".

Pressing his point, the speaker enlarged on the words of Christ in His Sermon on the Mount as recorded in the seventh chapter of St. Matthew's gospel: "Enter ye in at the straight gate: for wide is the gate, and broad is the way, that leadeth to destruction and many there be which go in thereat: because straight is the gate and narrow is the way which leadeth unto life, and few there be that find it'.

Easy Way is Dangerous

The preacher stated that it was easy to follow the crowd down the broad highway of selfish pleasure and sin but this path of least resistance leads to death and destruction. The narrow way to life everlasting was strewn with certain obstacles but these obstacles had to be met and overcome by the individual. "I like to think of the way that has to be traversed in single file", pursued the speaker "because it follows in the path that Jesus Himself trod and leads us by way of the Cross and ultimately to Himself. You young people of today are the leaders of tomorrow. The kind of leadership you choose to give depends on you."

Dr. Bert Howard and Dean McMullen assisted in the service. Dr. Howard offered the evening prayer and the benediction while Dean McMullen read the Scripture lesson. The anthem "We Would See Jesus" was rendered very effectively by the choir.

Communion Tray Dedicated at Remembrance Service

A large congregation attended the morning devotions when a special remembrance service was observed in connection with the administration of the Lord's Supper. A beautiful communion tray, presented to the church by Mrs. Edgar Vermilyea in memory of her parents, Henry and Margaret Alford, was dedicated to the service of God. This as presented on behalf of Mrs. Vermilyea by Chairman of Deacons Mr. G. H. Bray and accepted by Rev. C. T. Olmstead, who eulogized the lives of the departed loved ones in a brief but impressive remembrance address.

Prayer was offered for the safety of the King and Queen during their voyage to Canada. The congregation sang a special hymn in honor of Their Majesties.

NEW STAMPS WILL BE ON SALE MAY 15TH

New postage stamps of the one cent, two cent and three cent denominations will be issued and placed on sale at the local post office on May 15, it is announced through the local Postmaster following instructions from Ottawa. The new stamps are to commemorate the Royal Visit to Canada, and bear the likeness of the King and Queen on the three cent issue, the two little princesses on the one cent issue, and the new Canadian memorial at Ottawa, on the two cent stamp.

Retail Merchants' Association Gives Grant Of $25 to the S. A.

One of the first tangible results of the Salvation Army Building Campaign came rather unexpectedly on Sunday evening when Major B. Bourne of S. A. Headquarters staff, Toronto, who is directing the campaign was privileged to address the audience at the McCarthy theatre attending the sacred concert. Major Bourne applauded by the gathering on his references to the work of the "Army" and Alderman Laurie Lewis, on behalf of the Retail Merchants who have been sponsoring the concerts, announced that this body would make a grant of twenty-five dollars to the building campaign fund. Mr. Lewis spoke in eulogy of the noble work of the Salvation Army.

Police Blotter

Contrary to early reports police revealed today that Herbert Emerson, Sidney St., was not as seriously injured as at first believed after being knocked down by an automobile near the upper bridge on Saturday night. Mr. Emerson sustained a cut on the head and abrasions of the left ear, the result of being knocked to the pavement. The occupants of the car stopped and picked Mr. Emerson up, later driving him home. Police are seeking the identity of the driver of the car, however.

Cyril Martin, 58 1-2 Catherine St., reported the theft of the radiator cap from off his parked automobile. The vehicle was parked on Pinnacle St., Saturday night at which time the cap was removed.

Mrs. Florence Lovering, apartment No. 6 of 238 1-2 Front St. reported the theft of a gold brooch, found to be missing from her apartment after a boarder had left her lodging house.

Fine weather, which proved inviting for sleeping out-of-doors to the more hardy, resulted in a general decrease of transients seeking shelter at the police station last night, when only nine appeared in quest of lodgings. On Saturday night, however, 17 were accommodated.

Obituary

MISS ALICE HUME
(Seymour Twp.)

A well known and highly respected resident of Hastings County for many years in the person of Miss Alice Hume, died suddenly at the home of her brother Alex Hume, Seymour Township, on Saturday night. Miss Hume had suffered an attack of flu early in the spring and was improving rapidly but a heart condition developed late on Saturday night and she succumbed before medical aid could be summoned.

The late Miss Hume was born in Seymour Township, 69 years ago, being the daughter of the late Thomas and Jane Hume and for many years made her home in that vicinity and received her early education. She developed a love for art and music and became most proficient in both. Receiving her music degree she taught music and art for many years in her native township and Stirling, where she resided for almost twenty years. A faithful member of the Methodist Church and later the United Church, she took an active interest in all church work especially the work of the Women's Missionary Society. The late Miss Hume was a former president of this Society and a life member for many years and was also identified with the work of the Sunday School having taught many years and a large number in Stirling and community owe their early Christian training to this talented woman. At present she is a member of Stephen's Church on the Seymour Circuit and until ill health prevented was an active worker and regular attendant at the service.

Having a penchant for writing, Miss Hume for many years was a correspondent for the Ontario Intelligencer from Stirling district and on her removal to Seymour she continued to send her weekly bulletins writing her last budget just one week ago. Surviving are three brothers, Alex Hume of Campbellford with whom she resided on the homstead, John Hume of Goderich, William Hume of Campbellford, also two sisters, Mrs. William Rahnie of Campbellford and Mrs. Charles Rannie of Fort William. Another sister, Mrs. Bissonette of Stirling predeceased her some years ago. The funeral will be held from her late residence on Tuesday afternoon at 2.00 p.m. Standard Time to Burnbrae United Church, where the funeral service will be conducted by Dr. C. S. Reddick and interment will be made in Burnbrae cemetery.

JOSEPH MARKHAM
(Thurlow)

On Saturday, May 6th., Joseph Markham passed away at his late residence in the 2nd. concession of Thurlow Township after a lengthy illness.

The late Mr. Markham, who was in his 80th. year, was born in England, and had lived in this locality for 32 years. When age and health permitted he was engaged as a cement worker. In religion he was a member of the Centre Street United Church and well respected.

Surviving him are his wife, who formerly was Miss Blanche Stapley; one daughter, Miss Betty Markham at home; three step-daughters, Mrs. Joseph Shamerhorn, Thurlow Township; Mrs. Cora Lucas, Belleville, and Mrs. L. Clement, Belleville; two step-sons, Wilfred Stapley, Thurlow Township, and Oscar Stapley, at home.

The funeral took place this Monday afternoon, and interment was made in Belleville Cemetery.

LATE MRS. SARAH J. HOARD
(Rawdon)

Sunday afternoon May 7th., the funeral of Mrs. Sarah Jane Hoard, widow of Rueben Hoard, took place from the residence of her son, Mr. Ross Hoard, in the 2nd. concession of Rawdon Township, to Mt. Pleasant United Church where an impressive service was conducted by a former pastor the Rev. F. G. Joblin of Scugog, Ont., assisted by the present pastor the Rev. J. E. Beckel. Many friends were present at the service.

Interment was made in Mt. Pleasant Cemetery; the same ministers conducted the service at the graveside.

The bearers were Messrs. G. W. Hagerman, F. Jeffs, John Holmes, Don. Campbell, Frank Hutcheson and Frank Smith.

LEVI BURNETT

At the advanced age of 95 years, Levi Burnett passed away at his late residence, 53 Albion Street, Belleville, on Saturday, May 6th. He was born at Fern's Point, near Cornwall, Ont., and had resided in this district for 77 years. In religion he was a member of St. Michael's Church and was well respected.

Surviving him are two sons, Percy Burnett, Belleville, and Edward Burnett, California.

The funeral announcement is made elsewhere in this paper.

MRS. MARY A. KENT
(Thurlow)

Mrs. Mary Ann Kent, widow of William W. Kent, passed away on Saturday, May 6th., at the Belleville General Hospital. She had been in failing health for some time.

The late Mrs. Kent, who was in her 79th year, was born in Rawdon Township, her parents being the late Mr. and Mrs. Alexander McMullen. The greater part of her life was passed in the 2nd. concession of Thurlow Township and she was well respected in the community. In religion she was a member of the United Church.

Surviving her are one son, William A. Kent, Thurlow Township; three grand-daughters, Mrs. Wilfred Stapley, Thurlow Township; Miss Gertie Kent, Niagara Falls, and Miss June Kent of Belleville; one grandson, Grenville Kent, Mayfield Heights, Ohio; three sisters, Mrs. S. Smith, Toronto; Mrs. H. Black, Toronto, and Mrs. M. McKee, Wisconsin; three brothers, William McMullen, Sidney Township, Elias McMullen, Oshawa, and Bolter McMullen, Winnipeg.

The funeral took place this Monday afternoon and interment was made in Belleville cemetery.

CHARLES SWEET
(Stirling)

Stirling, May 8—(Special)— Citizens of Stirling and district were shocked to learn of the sudden passing on Saturday of Charles Sweet prominent Stirling resident. Deceased was in apparent good health. He was in his 78th year. After spending the morning at work in his garden he suffered a heart attack from which he failed to rally.

Born in Madoc Township, son of the late Mr. and Mrs. John Sweet, he spent the greater part of his life in Rawdon Township, farming and moved to Stirling nine years ago. He was a prominent member of St. Thomas' Anglican Church, where for eight years he officiated as Warden.

Surviving are his widow, formerly Mary Jane Tanner, two sons, James H. Sweet, Belleville, and William John, Winnipeg, and one sister, Mrs. Charles Froats, Niagara Falls, Ontario.

The funeral service will take place on Tuesday, May 9th at St. Thomas' Anglican Church with Rev. Canon Swayne conducting. Interment will be made in St. Thomas' Cemetery.

LATE HELEN PARANUIK
(Marmora)

Marmora — (Special)—Failing to recover from the after effects of pneumonia, Helen, youngest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Paranuik, of Marmora Township, passed away at her home on Thursday morning in the third year of her age. Besides her sorrowing parents she is survived by five brothers and four sisters all at home, namely, Caston, John, George, Michael, Thomas, Mary, Annie, Eugenie and Elizabeth. The funeral was conducted by Rev. Father H. J. Farrell on Friday and interment took place in the Sacred Heart Cemetery.

FRANCES BEVERLY KILLEEN ROSS

One of the most impressive funerals held in St. Michael's Church took place yesterday when hundreds of people paid a final tribute to the late Beverly Killeen Ross, eldest daughter of Employment Superintendent and Mrs. W. D. Ross, 20 Grier Street, who succumbed to injuries received in a motor accident on Thursday last. The funeral was held from the residence of her grandmother, Mrs. J. V. Ross, 23 Geddes Street.

Many beautiful floral tributes bore testimony to the popularity of the deceased girl who was a highly esteemed student at St. Michael's School. Long lines of automobiles were further mute tributes to the popular young student.

Right Rev. Monsignor J. F. Nicholson, V.G., conducted the service at St. Michael's Church and at the graveside.

Honorary pallbearers were Bruce Lynch, Gerald Donaghue, Dennis O'Connor, Billy Brooks, Charley Doran and John Di Genoa. Active pallbearers included, Stanley Schrieder, Jack Schrieder, Jos. Whalen, Tommy Hutchinson, Francis Peets and Clifford Bedard.

MRS. MARY WRINGE
(Read)

One of Tyendinaga's most highly respected citizens passed away at her residence on the 7th concession of the township today Monday, May 8th., 1939, when Mrs. Mary Wringe, succumbed after a lengthy illness.

The late Mrs. Wringe was in her 77th year.

Born in Tyendinaga Township the daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Timothy Horrigan, the deceased resided in her native township all her life. A devoted member of St. Charles Roman Catholic Church at Read, the late Mrs. Wringe was a valued associate of many of the church's organization.

Left to mourn her passing are her husband, Matthew Wringe, four sons, John, Gerry, D. J. and Mack Wringe, all of Tyendinaga township, six daughters, Mrs. F. J. Naphan, Sault Ste. Marie; Mrs. A. Taylor and Mrs. H. Ryan both of Detroit, Mich., Mrs. A. M. Hunter, St. Louis, Mo.; Mrs. (Dr.) A. C. Blackwell and Mrs. W. Shaw both of Toronto. Another daugther Mrs. A. H. Eberline, Detroit, is deceased.

The funeral notice is elsewhere in this edition.

GREATER CARE USED IN DYNAMITE SALES

More care is being exercised in the matter of sales of dynamite and other explosives by local hardware shops recently since the first of the dynamite scares in various parts of the Province. Now the purchaser of the dynamite has to be identified by the clerk, and leave his name and address at the time of the purchase.

Summer-like Week-End Lures Hundreds to Country

Temperature of Eighty Degrees Gives Citizens a Chance to Enjoy Outdoor Activities

SIDE ROADS POPULAR

Strawberries and cream, asparagus on toast, water lapping gently on golden beaches, trout flies floating on sun-kissed pools, the dip of a paddle alongside a lazy canoe, straw hats, bathing suits, long cool drinks. Not here perhaps, but visions of these summer delights were brought vividly home yesterday as a Belleville citizenry, while not exactly sweltering, enjoyed the hottest day of the current season.

With the thermometer hovering around the eighty-in-the-shade mark residents of the city promptly forgot steam-heated apartments and houses, taxes, raking of lawns, and even their jobs as they left the city for the great outdoors. Family cars and other vehicular contrivances, in some cases lunch-packed, followed the winding trails of the countryside in the sheer joy of a real Spring day.

Off the beaten highways they went to seek the cool of summer camp and cottage. Fishing tackle went into swift action. Spiralling smoke curling blue into a sky as blue as itself marked in many cases the opening of summer cottages. Along the Bay of Quinte and other popular summer places little groups took advantage of the perfect weather.

Near Oak Lake parties were noticed shirt-sleeved, and in one case a group of young ladies apparelled in shorts strolled through woods showing the first greens of Spring foliage and the gay colors of early flowers.

Along the banks of the Moira River, in the dark cool shade of wayside trees, parties were noticed enjoying the brilliant sunshine and balmy breezes that whispered through the dark green of tall pines. Youngsters attired in summer rompers and cool clothing gamboled in long grass in anticipation of the delightful days ahead. Heads of families were noted reclining on grassy couches enjoying to the full the grand weather that yesterday heralded the approach of summer.

Many Go Fishing

Motor-minded residents streamed along highways, byways and country sideroads in a parade that has never been equalled this year. From the time the first pink flush of dawn anglers on their way to the northern streams and other hideouts of the speckled beauties until the cool of the evening set in, a steady vehicular parade chugged along the beaten paths. American cars from numerous states in the union, the advance guard of one of the greatest influxes of tourists expected in years were noted in large numbers. Cars of high and low degrees from the stately '39 model to the chugging snorting vintage of the early twenties, joined the Spring parade in the sheer joy of motor living.

Pedestrians, and others unfortunate perhaps in not owning automobiles "got out" in the country. They strolled along the highways and other roads adjacent to the city. They sat by the waters of Quinte near the Bay Bridge. Surrounding towns, villages and community deserted house and home, for pure Spring air in the largest numbers of the season. In the waters of West Lake, Wellington, two high school youths dived off a pier for the first dip of the season.

The Outlet Beach was well patronized as Prince Edward County and other residents sought the cool breezes of Lake Ontario. It was a grand day and one enjoyed by both old and young, rich and poor, the healthy and infirm, and one that it is hoped will be the forerunner of weather long-anticipated by a winter-weary citizenry.

Few Highway Fatalities
By the Canadian Press

Showers were forecast for Southern Ontario today, after the warmest week end of the Spring and the greatest rush to the highways this year.

In the summer-like weather that descended on the Province Saturday and continued through Sunday, thousands of motorists took to the open road for the season's first real outing. Traffic officials expressed pleasure at the infrequency of accidents in the face of the large number of automobiles on the highways.

A more summer-like sign was a series of bush fires from the north of the Province to the south. Residents of the Grand Bend district on Lake Huron hoped today for rain to quench a wide-spread, smouldering blaze, while Sudbury district forest rangers welcomed showers that extinguished seven scattered fires.

Of five violent deaths during the week end, only two occurred in traffic. Martin Sherk of New Glasgow died in hospital at nearby St. Thomas Saturday night after falling from his bicycle on No. 3 Highway, striking his head on the pavement. Verner Segerberg was killed while driving a truck into Port Arthur after a Saturday night dance.

Three Drowned

Three persons were drowned. Elsie Sproule, eight, fell into West Harbor at Port Hope while playing and four-year-old Charles Watson fell into a ditch near his father's farm at Holland Landing, 27 miles north of Toronto. Moses White, 57-year-old Indian of the Sarnia Reserve, was found dead from drowning Saturday night in a rowboat, his face immersed in the water of the St. Clair River. White's companion, Wallace Washington, was arrested by police on a charge of intoxication.

When the Ontario Forestry branch at Sudbury began its air patrols Saturday, seven fires were discovered in woodlands made tinder-dry by warm weather. They were brought under control quickly and showers of rain last night were believed to have ended their danger.

Hundreds of firefighters were able to go to bed last night after trying for many hours to subdue flames that threatened summer cottages near Grand Bend, midway between Sarnia and Goderich on Lake Huron. Starting from a small brush fire, th eblaze swept over 10 square miles of bushland and was heading for the summer resort colony when the wind changed.

Fire departments from nearby Forest and Dashwood joined district residents and summer residents who had come to the resort to open up their cottages. "Back-fires" were lighted and spades were put to good use to stop the progress of the flames.

When the wind changed, the blaze headed for the Aux Sauble River and a cleared spot. When the breeze went down, it appeared the danger to the cottages was over, but guards stood around the smouldering fire all night to watch for a new outbreak or a change in the wind.

Near Brantford two farmhouses were burned down. From one the flames spread through a woodlot and leaped across a road to the opposite farm.

Just outside Tillsonburg a huge woodlot was destroyed by fire and for a time houses on the town's outskirts were threatened. In this case, too, volunteer firefighters were largely responsible for preventing spread of the flames.

THROWS SELF FROM BICYCLE TO ESCAPE CAR

Kingston, Ont., May 8—(CP) — Orval Jackson, son of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Jackson, of Enterprise, 30 miles northwest of here, escaped possible serious injury when his bicycle was struck by an automobile and practically demolished Saturday. The young man was just leaving the village when he met a car, followed by another car. Partially blinded by the lights of the first car, Jackson did not notice the second until he was almost on top of it. He threw himself backwards and sideways from his wheel into the ditch at the side of the road. The bicycle went under the car and was smashed. The boy was uninjured.

APPEAL IS HEARD FOR ORGANIZATION FOR REFUGEES

Miss C. Hayward and Mr. R. Booth Address Public Meeting — Committee to be Formed

Steps towards the organization of a city and district organization on the European refugee problem were taken on Sunday evening at Victoria Avenue Baptist Church at a public meeting following church services. Miss Constance Hayward, executive secretary of the Canadian National Committee on Refugees and Victims of Political Persecution and Mr. Raymond Booth of the Society of Friends, Toronto, addressed the gathering.

"The refugee problem is steadily growing worse," Miss Hayward stated. "The avowed aim of the Nazi Government of Germany is to pauperize the Jewish population". Many are impoverished, she said, and are dependent upon the charity of Germans whose sympathy with suffering humanity outweighs their fear of the Gestapo.

Gentile and Jew Refugees

There are estimated to be between 200,000 and 800,000 non-Aryans in Germany, that is, those with at least one grandparent a Jew. This fact is a denial of the claim that the Jewish people cannot be assimilated, Miss Hayward remarked. The Gentile refugee in Germany has an even more difficult time than the Jew because those Germans who oppose Nazism when they come to seek passports to permit them to leave the country, run the risk of more intense persecution as they have to reveal their opposition to the Government. So, Miss Hayward noted, many Gentile refugees have been busy searching records to find at least one Jewish grandparent, for they have discovered their plight is even more severe than that of the Jewish.

Today it is estimated there are two million refugees, Jewish and Gentile. Many have swarmed over the frontiers into neighboring countries, but these nations cannot provide for all the refugees. Britain has been taking them in from these countries. For the time there must be found places to which these people can go. Hence Canadians feel that they must have a part in alleviating the woes of these people and in finding them permanent homes.

To Impress Government

The attitude of the Ottawa Government is that the people must express their viewpoint. So information about refugees is being secured and the people are being asked for an expression of their views for the purpose of impressing the Canadian Government. Miss Hayward said "We are really not taking enough interest to make any contribution to the refugee program. Our work is only just started and it cannot be done by a small national committee".

Mr. Raymond Booth made an appeal on behalf of both children and adult refugees. "The problem of the children should touch the heartstrings of everyone". He told of parents taking their children across the borders out of Germany under cover of darkness and intentionally losing their children in the woodlands and forests near the border, so that they might be found and have an opportunity of living out their own lives outside of Germany. Parents had tagged their children and bought tickets for Holland and put the children on trains, never to see them again. They did this so that their children might have a chance to live, and grow up outside Germany.

Appeal for Adoption

"We want a chance to bring some of these unfortunate children here", he said.

A Danzig fugitive told Mr. Booth yesterday he was glad to see his children laugh again because they were now in a land that permitted freedom.

It is not only a Christian act but also sound economy to take in refugees, Mr. Booth declared. "Think of the resources you have to call on in getting one of these children his or her first breakfast—the farms, transportation, stores, and so on and on. Every consumer is an employee of labor when he buys anything."

"I think the Canadian people will take them in. If there is an unused bedroom in your home, if your children have grownup and gone out into the world and you are getting older, you can take a child in and do this much for charity."

Mr. Booth pointed out that economists say that Canada could do with a large popuation. If Canada had twenty millions of inhabitants instead of just over ten millions, "we should have twice the number of things for as a population grows, there is a more rapid increase in the number of things which it can produce which it now imports.

How much Britain did for the Huguenots during the persecutions some centuries ago was indicated by Mr. Booth who said that Britain took in sixteen persons for every village. Canada has taken in so far but one one-hundred-and-sixtieth of what Britain proportionately did in the time of the Huguenot persecutions.

"We are not asking for hordes of newcomers, but are asking for people who come with skill and abilities that will enrich us beyond our conception."

The case was cited of a Czech with $41,000 who wanted to come to come to Canada and start an industry which would manufacture women's costume jewellery. Mr. Booth thought this an opportunity for some Canadian city to secure a new industry.

A small committee is planned to become the nucleus of a larger committee to organize in Belleville. Dr. Semple of Bridge Street United Church said he had had two inquiries regarding adoption of children. Rev. C. T. Olmstead of Victoria Avenue Baptist Church and Rev. D. T. McClintock took part in the discussion.

How Women in Their 40's Can Attract Men

Here's good advice for a woman during her change (usually from 38 to 52), who fears she'll lose her appeal to men, who worries about hot flashes, loss of pep, dizzy spells, upset nerves and moody spells.

Just get more fresh air, 8 hrs. sleep and if you need a reliable "WOMAN'S" tonic take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, made especially for women. It helps Nature build up physical resistance, thus helps give more vivacity to enjoy life and assist calming jittery nerves and those disturbing symptoms that often accompany change of life.

Pinkham's is WELL WORTH trying.

Efforts Made to Have Children Entrain on Pinnacle St. May 21

Efforts are being made by the special committee in charge of the Belleville school children's excursion to Kingston on May 21st to have the entrainment of the children take place on that morning in Belleville on Pinnacle Street at the Market Square where the special train may be placed if plans of the committee with the Canadian National Railways mature. This will avoid the fatiguing walk to the North Station for the little ones.

In a communication received today from the Kingston Municipal Board of Education by the local secretary it was announced that accommodation had been reserved for at least 1,000 Belleville school children. It was pointed out that teachers or other supervisors of the children will be allocated to the ratio of one teacher or supervisor to fifty children to enter the Richardson Memorial Stadium. "If the Belleville contingent desires to bring their own band, it is quite all right, in fact it might be very helpful to marching the group from the train to the stadium grounds," it was stated by R. T. Atkinson, secretary of the Kingston Board.

Today the following chairmen of the various schools had been appointed by the Belleville committee, and residents wishing more information on the Kingston visit are asked to communicate personally or by telephone.

Girl Dies of Burns In Rescue Attempt

Stouffville, Ont., May 8—(CP)— Ruth Dowswell, 18, died early Sunday from burns suffered when she tried to rescue cattle from her father's barn here during a fire. Her father, Arthur Dowswell, was badly burned.

The girl ran from the house Saturday afternoon when she noticed the barn on fire. She had freed six cattle when her fother joined her. Intent on freeing the cattle, they did not notice their exit was closed by a wall of flames.

"It didn't look so bad near the floor and I told Ruth to get down low and make a dash for it," her father said today. "She must have stumbled, because when I got out, she rolled out of the door." Her rolling put out the flames on her dress.

She was taken to hospital and died several hours later. Her father said he believed only his heavier clothing saved him from a similar fate.

YOUTHFUL "PEEPING TOM" CAPTURED

Toronto, May 8—(CP)—Squads of police rushed to the scene last night telephoned there was a "peeping tom" on the roof of a nearby building. By some hard climbing two officers managed to capture a 14-year-old boy whom they charged with vagrancy. The fire department had been called before the police solved the problem of getting their prisoner from his precarious position. They lowered him by the arms to a third storey window.

'ON THE DEEP'

Their Majesties the King and Queen are now travelling on that mighty deep, the Atlantic, which until about four hundred and fifty years ago held hidden behind the veil of the unknown the great New World of North and South America. The British sovereigns are traversing waters on which British seamen especially from the time of the Renaissance have sailed, among them the great admirals whose names are bound with the history of Empire and exploration and development. Names like John and Sebastion Cabot, Drake, Hawkins, Frobisher, Nelson come to mind as the Empress of Australia brings to Canadian shores the heads of the Empire. When those men made history, the ocean separated the Old and the New World, today with modern transportation they are the link which binds together all civilization of the two worlds.

Through all history even in ancient times and for the past four hundred and some years particularly the sea has developed the British race in body and in spirit; courage, daring are fibre of the Empire. Heroic Englishmen, Welshmen, Scots and Irishmen born in these happy isles of Britain which have inspired freedom and a love of the sea have found their way to all parts of the world. In their wake have come freedom, civilization, culture and Christianity.

So when King George Sixth and Queen Elizabeth take the great ocean ways they follow the inspiration of their race, they are at home upon the ocean. King George himself knows the wondrous marvels of the sea, its appeal to all seamen whether in the Royal Navy or in the Merchant Marine.

As the present "ocean palace" of the King and Queen sailed through the channel, news of the progress of the royal party brought names familiar to every one who knows his history of England and the British navy, names that live for their association with freedom, civilization and commerce.

May halycon days accompany Their Majesties on their ocean crossing.

ROMANCE AND PREMIERSHIP

Prime Minister Chamberlain has a bone to pick with the dictators. They have disturbed his reading of romantic literature, one of the favorite pastimes of the British statesman. In a recent speech Mr. Chamberlain said the dictators leave so little time for him to read because of their numerous speeches for days together. "Often I cannot read for twenty minutes without a visitor coming in and saying 'he has done it again,' he said.

Leaving dictators, Mr. Chamberlain stated that he thought that "we are even more in need of that kind of literature (romantic literature) than they were in 1912."

Mr. Chamberlain has a clear penchant for the romantic, he explained, because it "takes me out of my daily life and away into a world as remote from reality as possible. For that reason I always find solace in the great romances, some of them by distinguished authors. My favorite romances are those of the elder Dumas and that long and superb series left us by Joseph Conrad."

The head of the British Government prefers to read only that poetry that is in the form of drama "as we find it in our own immortal Shakespeare."

So Mr. Chamberlain finds relaxation and comfort and sees a life which offers a change from the great field of practical, national and international politics. Though claiming himself as a realist in politics, he can find strength in romance as written by Dumas, the author of "The Three Musketeers", "The Count of Monte Cristo" and countless other works with which so many are familiar. In this love for Dumas, the great Englishman of today meets on a common footing many modern readers.

The great movement of life which Mr. Chamberlain sees about him in the sphere of national and international affairs finds him studying the poetry and drama of the other Englishman—Shakespeare, who depicted man in a world of action and in every situation of life and who gave the truest expression of life in literature. So Mr. Chamberlain loves poetry that is drama, because drama is life. In these plays and in the romances of Dumas and the stories of the sea of that sailor, the Pole, who became a naturalized Englishman and wrote most brilliant English, Mr. Chamberlain not only catches that ebb and flow and surge of human character in action, but also he is able to assume something of an attitude of supreme wisdom as he sees characters expressing themselves in events and events becoming the expression of character. Then too there is the great charm of looking upon life through the eyes of superior creators of character and plot.

This is a healthy relief to the tedious routine of public life, where results are not as clearly marked as in fiction. In those works that the Prime Minister studies he is able to gain inspiration and balance between the ideal and the practical world.

It would spell an easier saner world if the dictators would sit down and read some of their own national literatures. Signor Mussolini could read Dante's "Divine Comedy", particularly the "Paradise" or he could brush up his Latin to read the odes of Horace or the story of the Fall of Troy as told by the Roman Virgil. Herr Hitler could take time off thinking of racialism to read the story of "Nathan the Wise" by Lessing, the German, who taught the great lesson of the brotherhood of man in the character of Nathan the Jew. Probably dictators would become a little milder and broader if they read such works as these or as Mr. Chamberlain reads.

THE PASSERBY

By Ranson Caygill

One morning in the snow and sleet
I passed an old man on the street,
He looked so utterly forlorn,
Dressed in a suit in tatters torn;
His face the picture of despair,
With eyes that had a glassy stare.
But did I give the man a smile?
Or did I stop to talk awhile
To ask him if he needed food?
As I, professing Christian, should.
No, I just thought of him as scum,
A man brought low by vice and rum;
An idle loafer and a sot,
And well deserving all he got.
So I kept on, my head held high,
And soon forgot the passerby.
But sometime later that same day
I heard one of my neighbors say:
"They found a man an hour ago,
A poor old tramp—dead in the snow."
I hurried to the morgue—'twas he
For whom I'd shown no sympathy.
"He was a bum," the police said,
"'Tis best for him that he is dead."
But I felt bad, for in my heart
I knew I'd played a rotten part,
I had not practised as I should
The doctrines of good Brotherhood.

HAZEL HURST, THE YOUNG LADY FROM OGDENSBURG, who visited Belleville some months ago guided by her "seeing Eye", has been out in California and as a result the Golden State has now an organization known as the "Hazel Hurst Foundation", which lists as members of the Board of Directors prominent men of Southern California. Headquarters of the newly organized Foundation for rehabilitation of the visually handicapped, and training of guide dogs is at the Vista del Arroyo Hotel at Pasadena. Miss Hurst is blind and through the good offices of the Rotary Club of Ogdensburg, New York, she was able to take a course in the New Jersey college for the blind, where she also acquired her "Seeing Eye", the trained canine who has been Miss Hurst's vision in many lands, for she is a great traveller, attending the annual convention of International Rotary in France a year or so ago, and travelling all around Paris, despite the terrific traffic Miss Hurst is a courageous, clever girl who was determined not to let even blindness hold her down, and her constant companion, "Babe", the "Seeing Eye" is also as clever as they make them, being almost uncanny in the way she carries out instructions of her mistress. These dogs are trained in New Jersey, and are valued at $150 at least, in money but are above price in the use they are to blind persons in protecting them from harm and guiding them in the densest traffic. Hats off to Hazel Hurst and her "Seeing Eye", Babe.

GET ACQUAINTED — The tragedy of many fathers in relation to their sons is that they miss the opportunity held out by those formative years from 8 to 18. Such fathers realize on some bitter day that the young man in long trousers who sits at the table where a friendly, worshipping little boy once sat is a stranger . . . One basic reason is that this lad has seen his father only as a harassed and irritable man, the boss at all times. The father who has taken forethought has built up a different conception in his son's mind. He is a citizen of the world outside the home, a splendid and understanding friend, worthy of confidences. From such a father a son never really wanders far.—Howard Stephenson in the Rotarian Magazine.

Ald. Thomas Hanley is in Madoc today on business.

The members of the Ramblers' Wheel Club will have a run this evening and will meet at the market square at 7 o'clock.

Mr. Robert Gordon, Reeve of Hungerford, was in town today.

A young boy named Arthur Watts was playing with some of his companions on Saturday evening in a barn in the rear of the Kyle House when he fell off a beam and broke his right arm near the wrist. Dr. Willson attended to his injury.

The steamer Quinte was in port this morning.

The annual meeting of the Yacht Club will be held at the Hub Hotel this evening.

Travelling Three Miles High

Comfortable travel at heights above the capricious and weather-shaken lower strata of the atmosphere nears realization as skilled workers at the Fairey factory begin construction of the first "supercharged" fuselage for the new F.C.-1 four-engined airliners. Fourteen of these 19-ton monoplanes are on order for use on European and Empire routes; they are designed to cruise at 220/230 m.p.h. and to operate with up to 30 passengers on board at a height of 15,000 feet—level with the summit of Mont Blanc, Europe's highest mountain.

Aircraft designers have long looked high in search of better performance and more comfortable travelling conditions. In the thin air of sub-stratosphere levels between 15,000 and 30,000 feet, higher speeds may be obtained with less expenditure of engine power. Unfortunately, in the attentuated air, which is reached from sea-level in a few minutes, breathing becomes labored and none but the physically fit may endure with impunity the several effects of great height, even below levels at which the use of oxygen-apparatus becomes essential.

These obstacles are overcome in the design of the F.C.-1, which has a special supercharged "pressure" cabin. Passengers and cargo are carried as it were, in a flying cylinder wherein air is maintained at sea-level rating. The airliner is thereby rendered free to give swifter and more economical service, while the passengers are protected from discomfort from thin air and the changeable weather and storms of the lower atmosphere.

Immensely difficult problems called for safe and practical solution in planning the "sub-stratosphere" airliner. Structurally, the cabin must be enormously strong and every joint air-tight; mechanically, the design of doors, windows, controls and of the supercharging apparatus must be perfect; physiologically, the volume of air and the pressure maintained must be exactly suited to the comfort of all categories of passenger—young or old, fit or ailing. More remote problems such as efficient and dependable fuel supply for the power plant also demanded close attention.

After years of intensive research and experiment the engineers are convinced that all major difficulties are overcome in the design of the F.C.-1. Air is supplied to the sealed cabin at sea-level pressure by the action of two superchargers, driven by two of the four engines. Compressed air is forced through an inlet valve at a given pressure; should the pressure get too high an outlet valve to the cabin provides relief. The superchargers are designed to deliver 20 cubic feet of conditioned air a minute for every passenger, a quantity more than double what is actually needed, and indicating that even the complete failure of one supercharger would not affect, or be noticed by, the passengers.

Every safeguard is provided against leakage through the hermetically sealed walls. Many thousands of rivets go to unite the metal skin covering of the fuselage and each will be heavily sealed by use of material which has been thoroughly tested in water under pressures much higher than atmospheric pressures. The sealing material is laid along every seam where sheets of metal meet or overlap, so that the rivets, as they go through, are coated with the material and the rest is squeezed tightly between the edges of the metal sheets. Incidentally, the work done in evolving watertight, buoyant fuselages for Fleet Air Arm airplanes has been of marked benefit in planning the high-flying airliners.

The Fairey company's calculations show that power required to fly at 15,000 feet is only 85 per cent. of that required to fly at the same speed at sea-level. The consequent saving of fuel by an F.C.-1 airliner on a 1,000-mile trip at 15,000 feet, over an otherwise identical flight made at 7,000 feet amounts to 500 pounds in weight—a useful addition to payload. Rate of climb of a normal airliner today is about 300 feet a minute; the aircraft could climb much more quickly but the passengers would probably be unpleasantly affected by the rapid change in atmospheric density. At this rate of climb 50 minutes' flying are needed to reach 15,000 feet. Descent to sea-level must, in the interests of passenger comfort, take just as long. Hence, ascent and descent during a journey at an operational height of 15,000 feet would need 1 hour 40 minutes, equivalent at 200 m.p.h. to 330 miles flown. On a 500-mile flight, therefore, a present-day airliner would spend more than half the journey getting to and from 15,000 feet.

In comparison, the F.C.-1 will be able to cover more than 80 per cent. of the journey at operational height of 15,000 feet and full cruising speed. It will safely ascend 15,000 feet, without discomfort to the passengers in the supercharged cabin, in 15 minutes. On the postulated 500-mile flight the F.C.-1 would need only 100 miles to gain and to lose height. For the major part of the journey the engines would give full efficiency at their appropriate operating height, and the aircraft would be flying under optimum conditions.

The "pressure" fuselage of the F.C.-1 comprises the freight compartments as well as the passenger quarters. Even in small details of comfort the system confers advantages; for example, afternoon tea cannot be brewed at the atmospheric pressure normally prevailing at 15,000 feet because the fall in pressure from 14.7 pounds per square inch at sea-level to 8.3 pounds per square inch is associated with a drop in the boiling point of water from 212 deg. (Fahrenheit) to 174 deg. The air-tight hatches will be closed and the pressure pumps set to work before the airplane leaves the ground.

Maximum speed in level flight of the F.C.-1 will be about 275 miles an hour. Its non-stop range will extend, according to the pay-load carried, between 500 and 1,700 miles. —From The British Aircraft Society Journal.

THAT BODY OF YOURS

By James W. Barton, M.D.

If Overweight Use Your Own Fat Instead of Fat Foods

There are many overweights who refuse to believe that drinking water or other liquids will maintain and increase weight. I have known overweights who insist that water just goes into body and comes right out again as urine, perspiration, breath and wastes from bowel. Believe that water is good for them (and rightly so) but refuse to believe that it can maintain and increase weight, forgetting the fact that fat tissue holds a great amount of water.

Some of these overweights who take a Turkish bath get weighed immediately afterwards and find, to their joy, that they have lost three pounds of weight. They feel so thirsty however that they eagerly drink a great amount of water and find, when they are about to depart from the establishment, that they are just as heavy as before taking the Turkish bath.

When the boxer who must remove some weight for a bout takes the Turkish bath, he avoids water or drinks very little until the time of weighing in, after which he may take a drink of water.

Just as some overweights refuse to believe that fat holds water, there are others who believe that the body needs fat foods to be used for energy purposes, and, although trying to reduce weight, refuse to do without some butter and cream. They do not know that the depot or storehouse of fat they have on their bodies supplies the fat the body needs for its purposes and they will not only lose this much fat but also the extra weight of the water that the fat is holding in its tissues.

You have likely heard the story of the overweight who asked his butcher to show him twenty pounds of fat. After looking at this mass of fat, a satisfied smile spread over his face as he told the butcher that this was the amount of fat he had lost over a period of four months. That fat at the butchers is the same as his own fat.

The fat on the overweight body is just as real and can be easily burned up in the body as the fat meat, butter, or cream that is eaten. And it is this point—using your own fat instead of fat food—that is the secret of reducing excess weight safely.

Regular helpings of meat, fish, or eggs, plenty of leafy vegetables, small amounts of bread, sugar and potatoes, and using up your own body fat, supplies the body with all its food needs.

KICK THEM OUT

The Danish Ministry of Justice has ordered the expulsion of three Nazi youths accused of secretly posting propaganda bills in Denmark.

The 3,700,000 Danes, whose country borders on Germany, are no more afraid of Berlin than they are of Moscow whose propagandists are even more active in Europe than the Nazis are.

They boot subversive agents over the border.

Why, then, should 130,000,000 Americans with 3,000 miles of ocean between them and Europe, take the efforts of Communists or Nazis to overthrow their form of government lying down?

The Danes, too, are democratic, and they welcome well behaved foreigners to their country, but they stand for no foolishness.

We have much to learn, if we wish to maintain domestic peace and preserve the American system of government, from Scandinavian self-reliance, courage and determination to uphold the institutions that Scandinavia has found by experience to be suited to its peoples. — Detroit Free Press.

Viscount Gort V.C., D.S.O., M.C.

In these days of threatening war, when a British army is pledged to aid troubled nations, it may be of interest, even to civilians, to know something of the man who stands at the head of the British land forces and carries the heavy responsibility of Chief of the Imperial General Staff. It is he who is now in close consultation with that fine soldier, General Gamelin, head of the French Army. Much may depend upon their meetings.

John Standish Surtees Prendergast Vereker, Sixth Viscount Gort, Baron Kiltarton of Gort, was born in 1886, educated at Harrow School and the Royal Military College at Sandhurst, and entered the Army in 1905 as an Ensign in the Grenadier Guards. He served with them in the Great War, rising to the command of a Battalion. In 1930 he became Lieutenant-Colonel of his Regiment, and in 1932 he was appointed Director of Training in India, which post he filled with great success until 1936, when he was named Commandant of the Staff College at Camberley. When the energetic Secretary of State for War, Leslie Hore-Belisha, decided to make sweeping changes in the organization of the Army, he looked about for the officer most capable of filling the senior appointment of Chief of the Imperial General Staff, and First Military Member of the Army Council. He chose Lord Gort, though the latter was junior to several other officers. There is a story of the first meeting of these two men. They collided on a ski trail in Switzerland, and both being masters of fluent English, their speech, one to the other, did not lack vigor. The storm over, they became friends. Hore-Belisha learned to know the soldier, and to realize his fine professional ability.

Lord Gort is of medium height, of fair complexion, with light red hair and moustache. He is a man of iron will, quick and precise in his speech, and has no hesitation in saying exactly what he means. So much so that in his regimental days he was somewhat irreverently called Lord Gort almighty by the junior officers. None the less he is of kindly disposition, always giving credit where it is due, and he possesses the saving grace of humor. He is a man of independent means, and could live a life of ease if he chose; but his sense of duty and his love for the profession caused him to accept the heavy burden which is his to carry. His recreation is the very peaceful one of yachting. The family records go back to 1169, when Maurice Prendergast, from Pembrokeshire, "a righte valiaunte ceptain", landed in Ireland, and became owner of an estate in County Galway. Later on the family name was changed to Vereker.

"Il a gagne ses epaulettes." In September, 1918, while commanding the 1st Battalion Grenadier Guards, he won the Victoria Cross for conspicuous bravery under fire. He was leading his men, when a shell burst close by wounding him severely in the arm (he had already been twice wounded, earlier in the war). He lost much blood, but refused to leave his battalion until forced to do so by weakness. After having his wound dressed at a first aid post, he returned to the field and carried on until he collapsed, but his cool, able leadership by that time made a success of a difficult operation. Besides the Victoria Cross, Lord Gort won the Distinguished Service Order (with two bars), the Military Cross, and was mentioned in despatches eight times. He can be justly called a fighting soldier. He is also a Knight Commander of the Bath, a Commander of the British Empire, and a Member of the Royal Victorian Order.

He is the type of officer who insists on seeing for himself. The reports of others do not suffice. He frequently spent the night in visiting the forward trenches in the battle line to assure himself that all was well, and on one occasion, when a battalion commander, he personally guided several platoons into position for attack. No trouble was too great for him to take in training his men and in seeing to their welfare. His command was always in a very high state of efficiency. So skilful was his handling of his troops that the casualties among them were usually less than anticipated. He was trusted absolutely by those senior to him and by his men. His keenness, technical knowledge of his profession, and his strong character make him an admirable Chief of Staff. Under his guidance one may be sure that the military power of England will be made ready for any test, a knowledge which comforts in these times of Teutonic boastfulness.—F. S. M. in Montreal Gazette.

Ship's Cat Becomes a Mother

It is a very dull day indeed when we can't turn up some sort of an animal story on the United States Lines' pier, so here is the tale of Minnie, the cat, who jumped ship at Boston and has never quite been the same since.

Minnie's antecedents are somewhat clouded. She wandered aboard the American Trader at the Chelsea docks a few months ago bearing a tiny mouse in her mouth, settled down in a quiet corner by the forecastle and in an extremely fastidious fashion proceeded to make a meal. Thereafter Minnie became the ship's cat, sharing the crew's attention with Blackie, who took the intrusion with as good grace as might have been expected under the circumstances.

Minnie, it seems now, is a flighty doxie and when the Trader was en route to London she presented the ship with five kittens. Thereafter Blackie became extremely sniffish doing his best to point out to Capt. Milde the sort of a cat they had adopted. The Trader calls at Boston on her way from the other side and when she made port Minnie was at the gangplank brushing past customs and immigration officials without so much as a by your leave in her haste to get ashore.

The ship discharged cargo and passengers at Boston and when sailing time came Minnie had not returned. The vessel cleared and almost immediately the five kittens set up a terrific mewing. Blackie staunch to the end, attempted to assuage their hunger pains, but he was working under a natural handicap. The crew then got busy and tried to feed the kittens with eye droppers of milk. Finally, in desperation, they turned to Capt. Milde and suggested that he send a wireless to the pier superintendent at Boston, asking that the wayward mother be located and shipped to New York. The situation was so acute that the seamen offered to stand the expense of the wireless and the express.

Capt. Milde had the message dispatched and there followed an exchange of information which ran up the bill to no mean proportions. It seemed that there were any number of cats on the Boston docks and the superintendent wasn't sure which one was Minnie. He buckled down to the task, however, and a few hours before the American Trader was scheduled to sail for England a crate arrived, bearing a disgruntled Minnie.

The box was opened and one of the sailors promptly carried Minnie to her kittens, happy in the thought that he was about to reunite a family. Well, Minnie had different ideas—picked up, undoubtedly on the Boston water front. She took one look at the kittens and promptly hopped out of their box, pretending that they had never met before.

The kittens did their best, following her about the deck for a day or so, and setting up some heart-rending howls. Minnie though would have none of them. The upshot of the whole business was that when the Trader again returned to New York the crew hopped on the first stray female cat they found, literally dragging her by the scruff of the neck to the orphaned children.

Minnie appears to be very well pleased with the arrangement and apparently feels no pangs of frustrated motherhood. Blackie goes his way in serene bachelorhood and the crew, it seems is now stuck with three cats instead of one.—By Robt. Wilder, Marine Reporter of New York Sun.

Yellow Perch Makes His Bow

Whenever the ice starts to break up in the spring the impatient angler begins making enquiries as to whether the perch are in. For months he has been looking forward to the day when the news would flash from lakeside to town that "the perch are biting", for this handsome fish normally opens the angling season each year.

The perch is generally found in abundance in most of the waters of the Province. It is a shapely, well-proportioned fish, its depth being about one-third of its length, and its back somewhat arched. The head looks small in proportion but the mouth is of moderate size, with small, sharp teeth and a projecting snout. The back is dark olive in color while the sides are a bright golden yellow, broken up into sections by half a dozen or more broad, dark, vertical bars. The coloration will vary somewhat under different conditions, but it is always sufficiently brilliant to classify the perch as one of the most beautiful of our fresh-water fishes.

The perch spawn in the early spring; during May mostly, but earlier where the temperature of the water is warmer. The eggs are deposited in an interesting formation, being laid in long, ribbon-like masses sometimes exceeding six feet in length and from one to three or four inches wide. The eggs are held together by a glutinous, or jelly-like substance, and are small in size, measuring about twelve to the inch.

The yellow perch travels in schools and it has been noted that the fish of the school are generally of a more or less uniform size. Its usual length is from about ten to fourteen inches and it weight varies from a half to two or more pounds. There is definite record of a 4¼-pound specimen having been caught in Delaware Bay. It prefers reasonably deep water, although after leaving its winter quarters subsequent to the break up it literally swarms about the piers, wharves and sheltered bays, where it provides excellent sport for men, women and children equipped with almost any kind of tackle.

As a sporting fish the perch is chiefly to be commended for the reason that it is easily caught. It can be taken with hook and line and almost any kind of natural bait, such as worms, grubs, grasshoppers, minnows or pieces of fish. The minnow appears to be the most popular bait. For those anglers who are skilled in the art, and fussy enough to demand refined tackle for all kinds of fishing, it will be found that the perch will, on occasion, rise freely to an artificial fly. Taken with a light rod, and the line, leader and hooks to correspond, the yellow perch will, under such circumstances put up quite a fight and provide the good sportsman with lots of fun.

As a table fish, there is fairly general agreement that the perch occupies a leading place among all of our fresh-water fishes. The flesh is sweet and of delicious flavor, and one does not readily tire of it. Because of this fact it is of considerable economic importance and commands a ready market. — Ontario Department Fish and Game Bulletin.

Independent Labor Party Of England Faces Extinction

Viscount Snowden and Ramsay Macdonald Received Starts in This Party

POWER SINCE 1893

By J. F. SANDERSON

Canadian Press Staff Writer

London, May 8—(CP Cable)—One of Britain's historical political forces, the Independent Labor party which gave Viscount Snowden and Ramsay MacDonald their starts in public life, faces virtual extinction.

A power in the land since 1893 when it was formed by two Scottish miners, Keir Hardie and Robert Smiley, the I.L.P. seems to be breaking up.

Already one quarter of its parliamentary force, G. Buchanan, has deserted to the official Labor party and two others, G. Stephen and Andrew McGovern, are flirting with the idea. That would leave only James Maxton, one of the most picturesque and best liked members of the House of Commons, as sole representative of the party.

The I.L.P. was formed seven years before Hardie persuaded the Trade Unions to enter politics as a Socialist movement and formed the official Labor party. In those days the I.L.P. was affiliated with the Labor movement chiefly as a propaganda agency in much the same way as the Fabian Society.

During the days of the Labor government, 1929-31, the I.L.P. was deeply critical of some of its legislation, believing its old leaders, Mr. MacDonald and Lord Snowden, had forgotten their Socialist principles. This clash eventually led to the I. L. P. breaking away from the official Labor movement to adopt an independent stand.

Now it looks as though Maxton, who was born a Tory and became Britain's No. 1 revolutionary— but always a smiling revolutionary who has no equal in Britain as a constitutional agitator—will become parliament's second one-man party. The other is the Scottish Communist, William Gallagher, who equals Maxton in his sincerity but lacks his abundant talents.

Music Pupils of Mrs. H. Harrison, Latta, in Recital

Plainfield — The people of Plainfield and community were treated to an unusual entertainment on Friday evening when the music pupils of Mrs. Harry Harrison, of Latta, gave a recital in the United Church. Although Mrs. Harrison taught music here for a number of years this is the first time her pupils have appeared en masse before the public. To many present it was their first experience at such a gathering and is sure to be a great inspiration as the value of music as a character builder and moulder of life's ways is more and more being realized. The program which was in charge of the Rev. J. P. Everson, opened with the Doxology and Invocation after which Mrs. Harrison said a few words in behalf of the pupils.

The following numbers were then given, piano, "Hear the Pennies Dropping," Miss Isobel Elliott; paino, "Good Morning Mary Sunshine," and "Three Little Kittens," Lorne Elliott; "Daisy" by Barbara Robson; "Yes Jesus Loves Me," was played and sung by Miss Evelyn Cross; "Tulip" by Miss Marion Coulter; "Wallflower" by Howard Elliott; "Violet," by Walter Elliott; "White Rose" by Miss Ilene Coulter; vocal solo, "Little Sir Echo," Mr. Harry Harrison; "Midnight Hours Waltz," Miss Marjorie Outwater; "Mocking Bird" Miss Shirley Robson; "Sweetheart Polka," Miss Ilene Carleton; "Flag Day March," Miss Marie Hall; "Little Boy Mozart and Minuet," Garth McCreary; piano, Misses Audrey and Olive Hall; "The Mill" Mrs. Anne Talford; "Longing for Home," Miss Lillian Kroch, of Belleville; "Gipsy Rondo" Miss Audrey Hall; "Flower Song" Miss Olive Hall; vocal solo, "I Promise You" Miss Phyllis Hall.

Mrs. Harry McCreary thanked the pupils for the splendid entertainment which was sponsored by Mrs. Harry Harrison in behalf of the Women's Institute. The proceeds amounted to $10.75. The evening was closed by the National Anthem.

EDEN SAYS AGGRESSORS HALT WORLD PROGRESS

Brighton, England, May 6 — (AP)—Anthony Eden, former Foreign Secretary, told a Rotary conference today that Great Britain opposed methods of "snatch and grab" by other nations because they halted world progress. Addressing 3,500 delegates at the meeting, he said "an aggressor state can plunder the whole world and live like a beggar but we have had more than enough of gangster tactics."

FIVE BABY SQUIRRELS ENTERTAIN BAR CUSTOMERS

Omaha, Neb., May 6 (AP)—Five baby squirrels have taken over Bill O'Neill's tavern. They pop from behind radiators, bounce up on the bar and give customers the show of their lives. O'Neill found them after their mother was killed by a car and named them: Emile, Yvonne, Annette, Marie and Cecile.

FAIL TO FIND PLANE

Aberdeen, Scotland, May 6 — (AP)—An all-night search failed to discover a wrecked Royal Air plane in the Clochnaben Mountains in which an injured pilot was reported trapped. An acting flying officer who was in the plane escaped and stumbled for four hours to a mountain farmhouse to tell the story of the crash. The plane, which left Montrose Airport, crashed yesterday morning. It was the 55th air force crash of the year.

Sault Ste. Marie, Ont., May 8—(CP)—Two children burned to death Saturday at Pumpkin Point on the St. Mary's River, 17 miles east of here. The children, Marie, five, and Donelda, four, daughters of Mr. and Mrs. Lidstone and their two boys were in Sault Ste. Marie. Mrs. L. Lidstone, grandmother of the children, took them out to the barn where they played with the kittens while she returned to the house.

When she looked out the next time the barn was in flames. Ontario Forestry Employees from the Lonely Lake post helped fight the flames and later recovered the bodies. Funeral services were held yesterday afternoon.

Single Chin

No Girl Can Be Pretty With More Than One'

JOY HODGES . . . fat cells get no chance to collect on her chin

By HELEN FOLETT

MRS. CHIN-CHIN has one chin too many. She first notices a little cross line, then a slight fulness. But she goes right on eating the good things of the table, and before she knows it her chin has taken unto itself a mate.

Something must be done at the early stages of this affliction. Allowed to go its wilful way, the skin becomes stretched and, except for plastic surgery, there is no satisfactory treatment. The blemish takes on the character of a wattle and that's no joke; it is a tragedy.

Here is what must be done after the usual face washing at night there should be a warm rinsing and the face patted lightly with the towel. Start at the collar bones and pass upward with brisk pressure. When a double chin is present, facial fibres need toning.

Trot out your heavy massage cream, spread it on with flattened fingers, being careful not to push the flesh in folds under the eyes. Treat that extra chin to firm rolling movements between thumb and first finger. Pressure of that kind dissolves the fat cells. Follow with a firm striking from collar bones to chin tip, from chin tip to the ears.

While the cream remains on friction with an ice cube to take up the skin slack. Every morning lave with cold water, dry, apply your favorite astringent.

Fight dandruff; don't let up until you are rid of it. It is a fungus growth and can prove stubborn. While it may not have a deplorable effect upon the health of the hair, it is an inviting tenement for bacteria that cause diseases of the scalp.

Brush the hair every night. Once a week apply hot mineral oil to the scalp and friction for five minutes. Next morning shampoo with melted soap, and be sure you use a bland product.

Never disturb dandruff with the teeth of a comb or lift the scales with the finger-nails. Both these practices can produce a rash that may be difficult to cure.

AT THE BELLE

"3 SMART GIRLS GROW UP"

Deanna Durbin has done it again.

In her fifth consecutive success, this 16-year-old singing star has bettered her former efforts. The record that seemed incredible has been accomplished.

When Deanna made "Three Smart Girls" some two and a half years ago, she came as a surprise star, a new entry in the Hollywood firmament. Her picture created a lot of discussion, the burden of which was that it was a fluke, and that she could not repeat.

Then she made "100 Men and a Girl" and lo and behold, it was acclaimed greater than "Three Smart Girls". And "Mad About Music", her third, was hailed with approval and the acclamation that she had surpassed her previous efforts.

Repeat Success

And then came "That Certain Age", and fans declared it was better than the others, but shook their heads. "She can't keep up like this," they said.

But now comes "Three Smart Grow Up" her fifth Universal picture, now on the Belle screen.

All there is to say is that it is superior to the others. We wonder if her sixth picture will surpass her fifth, the seventh the sixth and so on into the dim and distant future.

Deanna sings four songs in "Three Smart Girls Grow Up", beautiful, well-chosen numbers, semi classics. They are "The Last Rose of Summer" from Flotow's opera "Martha"; "La Capinera", by Sir Julius Benedict; "Invitation to the Dance", by Weber, with Charles Henderson's special vocal arrangement; and "Because", by Edward Teschemacher and Guy D'Hardelot.

But it is not her singing alone that makes Deanne's pictures screen events of the season. Without songs she would probably be voted one of the most popular actresses of the screen.

The story, Bruce Manning and Felix Jackson, differs from the original "Three Smart Girls". Deanna is seen as Penny Craig, who attempts to unsnarl the tangled love affairs of her two older sisters, with results both amusing and amazing.

Henry Koster, who piloted Deanne in the original "Three Smart Girls" and "100 Men and a Girl", directed the present picture. He has injected a wealth of detail and characterization, glowing personalities, speed of development and comedy into the offering.

The popular Belle newsreel, Walt Disney's funniest color cartoon "Practical Pig" and a clever screen novelty "Stranger Than Fiction" will be presented on the same program.

Charles Winninger and Deanna Durbin, reunited in Deanna's first "grown-up" motion picture story, "Three Smart Girls," now at the Belle

AT THE McCARTHY

"The Lady Vanishes"

A thriller as only Alfred Hitchcock can make them—based on one of the most exciting books ever written, "The Wheel Spins"— is now the current feature attraction on the screen of the McCarthy Theatre, with the change in title to "The Lady Vanishes" and starring Margaret Lockwood, as "Iris Henderson". Michael Redgrave as "Gilbert". Paul Lucas as "Dr. Hartz" and Dame May Whitty, as "Miss Froy" in the principal character parts, plus many more of the finest of stage and screen actors in other important roles.

"The Lady Vanishes" is the best directed picture of the year and is a story of universal appeal and interest to movie-goers that enjoy action-packed melodrama, excellent comedy and charming romance, for their screen entertainment. "The Lady Vanishes" is breaking attendance records—everywhere and many persons have been known to see the picture no less than five times—therefore please see it at your earliest convenience during the current days that it is playing at the McCarthy Theatre.

"Tannhauser"

Richard Wagner's famous overture of "Tannhauser" featuring the National 122-piece Philharmonic Symphony orchestra, and a chorus of 50 voices, will be presented in addition to the feature, at each performance. This is one of the finest subjects yet shown on the McCarthy screen and all lovers of musical entertainment will find "Tannhauser" to be the best musical treat they have heard or seen. Floyd Gibbon's the screen true adventure reporter will also thrill the McCarthy Theatre patrons in a marvelous manner in his latest story entitled "High Peril" which is also an offering on the program.

GOOD MANNERS

MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

About Betrothals

True it is that every engagement has its own special circumstances, but it's just as true that there are certain inviolable points of etiquette that the girl and the man and their families should know and respect. The spirit of every one of these accepted customs is the spirit of good taste to those most closely concerned with the engagement, and to the world. No matter who you are, no matter what your circumstances, whether your life is formal or informal, you can observe the spirit of the prescribed forms, and adapt them to your own life.

If you follow the star of good taste, you will be less likely to create unfortunate future handicaps.

Let's begin at the beginning of the engagement. Mary has said "yes" to John's thrilled and thrilling "will you marry me?" Mary tells the happy news to her mother and father, and John tells his mother and father.

Then John, if he is the well-brought-up man we hope he is, immediately goes to Mary's father, or to whoever else is head of her family, to "ask for his consent". Mary's father probably has a pretty good idea of what John has come to say, and he and John may talk over together the details that will concern the couple's future happiness . . . .

We hope that Mary's father approves of John. If he doesn't, the young lady may be faced with breaking the engagement or marrying without her parents' consent.

If a couple is determined to marry without their parents' consent, the honorable thing to do is, if possible to tell their parents that they are to be married on a certain date and give the parents a final opportunity of being present at the ceremony. This straightforwardness, even if it fails in what it wishes to accomplish, is better than an elopement and it leaves the future relationships easier to adjust.

Let's take the ideal situation, which, fortunately, is the usual one; the girl's family approves, the young man's family approves, and the engagement is officially decided on.

Now the important thing to know is the young man's family make the first social move. In other words, as soon as John tells them of his engagement, his mother and father go at once to call on the girl and her family. This is the important and significant call that welcomes the girl into the family circle. It should, if possible, be made within twenty-four hours after the parents have been told the news; both mother and father, if possible, should go, unless illness or absence from town prevents and the fiance's nearest relatives should make this call, if his parents are not at hand. Cordial letters are sent from out of town when calls are not feasible.

Our well-bred Mary and her mother promptly return the welcoming call, or Mary promptly answers the welcoming letters.

From everybody's point of view, cordial relations are thus established between the two families.

What follows these family announcements depends on family circumstances. Customarily the family of the bridegroom-to-be entertain his fiancee and her family, and this hospitality is returned by the family of the bride-to-be.

Then come the various ways of announcing the engagement to the world . . . and we'll talk about that in this column very soon.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

Famous Authority on Problems of Love and Marriage.

Have We a Man Famine

Well brought-up girls used to believe that if they did their best to look pretty and act likewise, the "right man" would in good time present himself and a happy marriage would follow.

Has the idea that a "right man" is a feature of every nice girl's destiny gone the way of belief in Santa Claus?

There are signs of it.

Girls of today seem to have the notion that in order to be sure of a lucky marriage, they sometimes have to take matters into their own hands.

That's why a good many of them have been interested in a suggestion made recently by Dr. Paul Popenoe, director of the Institute of Family Relations of Los Angeles, to the effect that unmarried Eastern girls would do well to take a trip to the West.

Not that Western boys make any better husbands. Simply that there are more of them. As Dr. Popenoe put it: "There is a surplus of marriageable young men in the West and a shortage in the East". A drift of lovely young creatures toward the West would even matters up and greatly increase the sum total of romance.

And why not?

If competition in the marriage market is as keen in the Eastern states as it is said to be, if there really aren't enough men to go around, there are certain types of girls who will either have to be old maids or follow Dr. Popenoe's advice. And some of these are girls who would make the best wives but whom shyness or lack of self-confidence temporarily hampers.

It goes without saying that it's the girls who believe in themselves who win the matrimonial prizes. Beauty isn't an essential, as you know. But the girl who has in herself and knows it, the ability to plan her own life, to choose her man and get him, needs of course no human help. Nor does she need to move an inch away from the village where she was born. So skillfully does she woo her appointed youth that he believes himself the wooer and the wedding comes off with a bang.

But we'll have to admit that all women haven't this art in sufficient degree, though we'd be badly off as a sex if many of us hadn't a dash of it. It's a helpless girl who can't delicately oil the wheels of romance when they seem to be going too slowly.

But a girl who isn't by nature aggressive, or who doesn't know how to dazzle the male, and who finds herself in a region where men are briskly competed for, may of course, lose out. Even though she may have the sweetest nature, the warmest heart and the maximum of domestic skill in her whole community, some ruthless self-seeker with no prettier a face is more than likely to out-distance her in the race for love.

So the girls who hope and wish to marry, but who aren't equipped for competition might do worse than think over the advice I have quoted. It's true that if you stay just where you are, the "right man" may appear. But you can't count on it. Whereas if you transfer yourself to a region where marriage for a normal girl is 100 per cent certain, you've lent a helping hand to destiny, at least.

If you don't actually solve your life-problem by the mere act of buying your ticket, as the pro-Western enthusiasts seem to imply, you have given yourself a considerably better chance.

My own idea is that the completely passive girl is pretty much outdated and that every woman does well to display some activity in regard to the matter that most concerns her. Let her study her opportunities, manipulate them if she needs to, and if she can, and make it easy for love to find its way to her.

Miss Soutar Gives Talk on Sorry Plight Of the Poor in City

At the regular May meeting of the W.M.S. on Friday afternoon at Bridge Street Church, Miss Soutar, as guests speaker gave a very dramatic picture of "The Storm Centres of Belleville" as seen from the V.O.N. point of view. She discussed the housing situation of certain sections in our city and told of the plight of a great number of parents endeavouring to raise families with unemployment added to the common pile of human miseries and defeats. She told of the inevitable rapid lowering of standards of morality created by people who live in such places.

We have no answer for the slums—physical or spiritual—of these people until we have an answer to our own slum thinking and secret living. Miss Soutar challenged the women to take responsibility, particularly for the daughters who are growing up in these unhappy homes.

Miss Soutar was introduced by Mrs. R. D. P. Davidson, and Mrs. Harrison extended to her the thanks of the Society. Two solos by Mrs. Houston were very much appreciated.

The devotional programme was introduced by prayer by Mrs. Semple, Scripture reading by Mrs. Ackerman and a reading by Mrs. Buchanan. Miss Lazelle Brown discharged the routine business and closed the meeting with prayer.

The Stars Say

For Tuesday, May 9

By GENEVIEVE KEMBLE

A DAY of stirring events, with much drastic action taking place, is the augury based on the exciting chain of lunar transits. Great activity of major importance may be confronted by delay, stubborn resistance and open hostility, as well as quarrels and bitter contention. Meeting such a similar fashion would not prove gainful, but the use of strategy, compromise and even subtle manipulation might prove fruitful. Remain cool.

Those whose birthday it is may find themselves involved in a series of conflicting events. There may be drastic action in connection with very important projects, but these are beset by open hostility, malice and strife. There may be profitable solutions through compromise, shrewdness, diplomacy or some sort of undercover agreement rather than fight and fury. Keep calm, use strategy.

A child born on this day may have a very forceful, commanding and ambitious temperament. While disposed to sweep all before it to gain its ends, it may see the value of rigid justice, compromise and less aggressive measures of conquest.

Once in a while a history-making costume comes along. This has happened with Molyneux's daytime ensemble in marine green woollen. The dress is fitted and very slim with a wide bow of white tussur at the neck. The matching wool bolero has high and wide pointed lapels. A narrow white stripe runs down the sides of the skirt.

Headlining the fashion bill is the coat with a tucked top. Done in woollen in black, navy or beige, the bodice has plain revers, usually with white pique. The skirt from the belted waist down is quite plain.

Something new is an afternoon frock of black crepe with a fringed capelet that is cleverly criss-crossed and tied around the waist. The capelet forms the sleeves.

The Morning After Taking Carter's Little Liver Pills

MISS NAPOLEON

By Violet M. Methley

"What did the Doctor tell you about him? It would be interesting to hear what kind of man the Maharajah is from one who knows him well." Leonie, as she spoke leaned forward, her chin resting on her clasped hands.

Miss Weatherfield shook down the clashing silver bangles which clustered thickly on her wrists with a gratified air. Here was her opportunity. Miss Weatherfield rather prided herself upon her powers of characterization.

Tension at the Party

"The Maharajah appears to have a subtle and complex nature," she began, and went on to speak of his Westernised education, those tendencies which appeared in his firebrand speeches which breathed the very spirit of a New Age...."

"Sedition, in fact," Struan interposed curtly.

"Oh, Captain Struan, not unless you would call Shelley seditious—and Wordsworth.... 'Joy was it in that dawn to be alive. And to be young was very heaven,' you know...."

"It isn't going to be any particular joy to be alive if Zindia and his sort get their way." Struan answered grimly. "But the Maharajah is one of the richest of the Indian Princes and has an extremely well drilled and quite considerable Army of his own. Also he is popular and has some of the qualities of a leader; if he elected to set himself up definitely on the wrong side—well, there might be nasty trouble, you see. So it's understood that we're all to be careful to keep in with him, to flatter him and kow-tow to him—and we do it."

"On the principle that it's wisest not to throw about lighted matches when you're sitting on a powder magazine!" Hall laughed.

"Then you don't think that he stands for Freedom and the New Spirit of Brotherhood?" Miss Weatherfield was clinging wistfully to her own conception.

"I think he'd stand as a kind of Eastern Napoleon against us if he got his chance—which he won't," Struan said.

"You're making him out extremely interesting," Leonie's voice was as calm as her face when Hall glanced involuntarily towards her to see the effect of Struan's words. Only in her eyes there was a curious glint. "I'm more than ever determined to go to Khotalghar now that I know the Maharajah isn't a tame Persian pussy-cat. Evidently he's a man."

"If you like the type," Struan tried to speak casually, but Hall, with the clue which he held could read the black anger and jealousy in his compressed lips and glowering look. "I never can understand how women—clever women, too— are taken in by these showy, plausible bounders, with velvet tongues—" "Hiding iron hands—or should it be a tiger's claws in this case? Anyway, I'm mixing up your metaphor shamefully," Leonie laughed.

"It's terribly hot in here, isn't it?" Chrissie moved restlessly. "Shan't we go out on the veranda for coffee?"

Young Jones was still moody; he had not joined the conversation at dinner, and now he leant over the railings, his long legs crossed, staring down into the dim garden.

To Chrissie's: "Coffee, Tim?" he returned a muttered. "No thanks," which in its turn drew the comment under breath from Struan:

"Sulky young cub!"

Possibly the boy overheard; in any case after a moment or two he threw away his cigarette end and stood up, speaking abruptly.

"Fraid I must be off, Mrs. Struan; I'm on duty tonight."

"Oh, I'm sorry you've got to go so early, Tim; come in again as soon as you like."

"I think I'll stroll along with you, if you don't mind, Jones," Hall said on a sudden impulse. "I've had no exercise today."

"All right," the boy spoke gruffly, but with no particular signs of unwillingness, and soon the two were walking along the acacia-bordered road. After a rather long pause, Hall spoke with apparent carelessness.

"Mrs. Struan is very charming, isn't she?"

"She's an angel!" Young Jones spoke abruptly in a muffled voice. "She's been—well, my mother died a couple of months ago, at home; I—I was frightfully fond of her, and it is pretty ghastly being out here. I'd only known Mrs. Struan a little while, but she—well, she was an angel," he ended lamely.

"I can quite believe it," Hall answered. "Struan is a lucky man."

"Yes—curse him! And she's a million times too good for him—getting himself talked about. It was as much as I could do to be civil to him tonight."

"You weren't very!" Hall chuckled.

"I'd been hearing the things they said down at the Club. He's always after that Miss Valance—"

"Steady!" This time Hall's voice was harder, colder. "You oughtn't to bring a woman's name into it, you know, Jones; and besides, I don't believe that Miss Valence is to blame," he broke off rather impotently.

"Sorry! I must sound a bit of a bounder," the boy muttered.

Hall managed to avoid laughing, he answered quietly:

"All right, Jones. I'm glad Mrs. Struan has such a staunch friend. Here's where we part, I suppose—good-night."

CHAPTER X

Struan at Work

Pathapore Society was stirred to its depths by the Maharajah's invitation. The tailor was bandied about from one bungalow to another, squatting on the veranda to concoct fancy dresses.

"But we are in the unique position of having a real live artist to design our costumes," Chrissie Struan boasted. "Only you simply must go as Doge Loredano yourself, Mr. Hall. We'll get some brocaded stuff in the bazaar for your robes, and I'm sure I could make his adorable cap myself—strings and all."

"After sue ha promise I can't refuse to take the part," Hall laughed. "What about Struan?"

"Ranny won't wear anything but evening-dress and Tim Jones says the same—so dull of them, isn't it?" Chrissie complained to Hall. "As for Leonie, she's making a mystery about her dress and won't let us see it till the night."

"Don't make it sound too thrilling!" Leonie spoke carelessly. "It's only that I happen to have a complete costume I got in New York at a theatrical place, so I thought it might as well be a mild surprise."

"What about yourself?" Hall asked Chrissie.

"I don't feel inclined to bother," Chrissie leaned back wearily.

"Well, I've got a suggestion," Hall frowned, studying her face. "There's a statute at Florence by Verrocchio—a most charming Renaissance Lady in a delightful dress. I've got some sketches somewhere. There is a twisted turbanlike headdress with veils and a gown folded round the shoulders—all blue and white it should be, very flowing. We mustn't skimp material."

After this discussion, business redoubled on the Struan verandah as Doge's robes for Hall and the Florentine lady's gown for Chrissie took shape. Struan and Leonie Valence, being no way concerned in these preparations, declared that they were better out of the way and went riding together daily.

These rides took them pretty constantly to the Experimental Flying Ground, where Struan had an office close to the hangars. There was little in the way of furniture, except a couple of chairs, a desk—and the contents of that desk. The place was only a hutment, with a narrow verandah where Leonie would sit reading or sketching, while Struan worked at his desk inside.

She sat there in the early morning of the day before the Khotalghar ball, on one of the canvas chairs from the office, with an upturned box beside it to hold her sketching materials, the tin of water, the paint-box and brushes. Upon the pad which lay on her knee was a half-finished, impressionistic sketch, blue and yellow sky and ground, with kites hovering overhead, and the outline of the big bird of man's making roughly blocked in where it squatted after Struan had completed a flight an hour before.

It was one of the machines which had come out from England in parts, to be assembled here under Struan's supervision; even as Leonie watched, the mechanics came out and began to run it back through the open door of the hangar.

Leaning back in her chair, Leonie stretched out her legs and turned her head slightly sideways, to look at Struan under her lazily-lowered eyelids. But partly hidden, the eyes were bright and keen, as she watched the young man frowning and intent over the blue-prints and designs on transparent, faintly-smelling oiled paper which littered the desk in front of him.

She spoke lightly.

"When are you going to take me for a flight, Ranny?"

"Can't be done here," Struan glanced up from his papers. "You know I'd love to, Leonie, but it's strictly forbidden to carry any passengers on Service machines. And, anyway, I wouldn't take the chance—with you."

"Well, I mean to fly somehow."

"You will—in time. Everyone will. But it's only in its beginning yet; there's still so much to do, so much to learn. That's the fascination of it, of course," his tones warmed to enthusiasm.

Leonie is Interested

"So much to learn that other countries already know, eh?" Leonie said softly.

"That they don't know! We started late, but we're going ahead of 'em all, and soon now America, Germany, France. We've got the men, we've got the plans!" he laughed.

"You seem very certain about it all."

"I am. We've been working on new lines, and the reports I've just had from home show that the latest type of fighting aeroplane is a bigger success even than we'd hoped. It's actually been built, and the tests give magnificent results. A new standard of stability and speed."

"That's wonderful, it's thrilling!" With a quick movement Leonie was beside him in the office. "Oh, I believe you've got the designs for the new flying machine there—haven't you? Do let me see; I've learned enough about aeroplane construction to understand a bit, I'm sure."

Flushed, her usual coolness gone, she was in a mood to carry a man away. But Struan's quickness as he swept the papers together was equal to Leonie's own. He slammed down the desk cover.

"Sorry, dear," he said. "I can't show those to anybody. They're not mine; they belong to the War Office. It's not a private matter, or...."

"Please....!"

He raised his eyes—slowly, unwillingly. She was smiling at him, that rare, enchanting smile, small white teeth just showing, a flush on her pale face, her eyes bright and eager.

Struan turned his eyes away and spoke resolutely.

"No! Once and for all. Don't ask me impossibilities, Leonie! you know I hate to refuse you."

"Ah, please...." she repeated softly.

The moment of silence between them was tense as a stretched wire. But in her eyes there was a strange gleam.

Without looking at her, Struan answered with harsh determination.

"No....!"

Another pause, but now it was as though the wire had snapped. Leonie spoke quietly, almost unconcernedly.

"Very well. It doesn't matter. I won't ask for anything again."

She turned away, stepped out on to the verandah and began to collect her painting materials. Inside the office, Struan locked the desk; without turning again, Leonie spoke.

"Hadn't we better have the horses out and start back?"

They rode back in silence towards Pathapore, through the heat haze which made even near objects dance and shimmer. Struan's seat was heavy in the saddle; he let the reins sag loosely, riding with a carelessness most unusual with him, which had its likely consequence. The horse put his foot into a rat's hole, stumbled, tried to recover, and, with only a slack grip on the reins to hold him up, come down heavily, throwing his rider clean over his head.

Leonie dismounted in a moment and knelt beside Struan where he lay full length in the sand, eyes closed. The horse scrambled to his feet and stood trembling and snorting.

"Only stunned...." Leonie said aloud, her steady fingers loosening the unconscious man's collar and tie. As she did so, her hands ceased their work for a moment, she remained staring down at him, a curious look on her face.

Then she sprang up, ran to her own horse and took from the leather case the tin water pot and a small piece of bread which she had brought to rub out pencil lines in her sketch.

Pressing and kneading this in her fingers, she knelt again beside Struan, bent low over him, her hands very busy. After a moment he stirred, half opened his eyes, then gave a gasp as Leonie splashed some water in his face.

"I'll save you the hackneyed question, "Where am I?" she laughed down at him. "Tommy threw you—but it was your own fault for riding so carelessly. You'll feel better directly; you were just knocked out for a minute. Don't hurry to get up. I'll sit here till you're ready and thank goodness it was no worse."

When Struan stood ready to mount, shaken but quite uninjured, Leonie returned to her own horse and replaced the empty water carrier in its case, before springing easily into the saddle, a curious exultant light in her eyes.

CHAPTER XI

Glamour

Some people called the Palace at Khotalghar a glorified wedding-cake, with its sugar-white minarets and cupolas. But that was only by day. Few, even of the most critical, could refuse to recognise the magical glamour of the buildings in the silver, moonlit brilliance of a tropical night.

Chrissie Struan, surveying the scene on the night of the ball drew her breath with amazed delight.

"How perfect! Like a dream of the other side of the moon—but we shall spoil it," she said. "Human beings don't fit into fairyland."

The Maharajah of Zindia tonight was entirely of the East, entirely a Prince. His dress was all white and silver; in the folds of his puggri shone an enormous square-cut diamond, silver slippers gleamed on his feet, a diamond-hilted dagger was thrust through a sash of woven silver.

"You look the Maharajah of the Moon, your Highness," Chrissie laughed. "But it's all just white magic. I hope you haven't engaged ordinary dance bands to play in—this."

"I have not," Zindia answered. "There will be a string orchestra in one of the ballrooms for those who wish to dance. But I hope its sounds will not be too discordant."

"I'm sure they won't. It's all wonderful. I wonder where Leonie is; she said her dress was very simple and she didn't need any help, but —ah!"

Chrissie ended abruptly, stood staring upwards to where in the marble-arched doorway just outside the door, a solitary figure stood.

Slim and erect, one hand thrust into the front of the plain grey coat, with a single ribbon and star in the buttonhole, falling open in front to show white breeches, white stockings, shapely feet in black pumps, with oval gold shoe-buckles, stood Leonie. The black three-cornered hat with the small tri-colour cockade, was drawn low over the forehead; beneath its shadow the eyes showed deep-set, brooding, the features clear-cut and pale as a sculptured face.

Chrissie spoke excitedly, yet hardly above her breath.

"Ranny, did you know about it? ....I didn't realize for a moment—but what a marvellous get-up! It doesn't look just like fancy dress, it's real somehow....Had she told you of it, Mr. Hall?"

But Hall did not answer. That feeling of actuality which Chrissie vaguely apprehended held him in a kind of spell. Academically, so to speak, he had accepted Leonie's story on first hearing it; he had never doubted that what she told him of her ancestry was true. If he had learned of her intention beforehand, he might have remarked casually that it was an excellent idea, that she would undoubtedly make a very good Napoleon.

Cincinnati Reds and Yankees Leading Respective Leagues After Week-End of Battling

Brooklyn Dodgers Now Second and Playing Smart Ball

TIGERS SEVENTH

Detroit Loses Seven in Row and a Grand Shakeup is Likely

(By Judson Bailey)
(Associated Press Sports Writer)

It may be possible to win baseball games on good pitching, the way Joe McCarthy insists his New York Yankees sew up their pennants, but the runs are what count and the fact Cincinnati's Reds and the Yanks themselves are in front today seems to prove it.

After a two-day stay in second place the Yankees climbed back on top yesterday by shellacking Chicago White Sox 15-4 and those four runs which Red Ruffing gave on nine hits would have won lots of games. So the fact that Joe Gordon hit a couple of home runs, once with one on and again with two on, was of more than passing importance.

Cincinnati bombarded the Phillies yesterday 13-4 although their ten hits were just one more than Paul Derringer gave. But Cincinnati's knocks included a home run by Frank McCormick with the bases loaded and another by Harry Craft with two on.

When the Reds returned to the top of the National League Saturday by beating Boston 6-4 they outhit the Bees a mere 13-11.

Dodgers Now Second

Brooklyn Dodgers moved into second place in the Senior circuit by beating St. Louis Cardinals 2-1 on four hits. One of these was a pinch single by Babe Phelps with the bases loaded and scored both Brooklyn runs. Similarly, Sammy Hale delivered a pinch single to score two runs in the 10th inning of Cleveland's game with Washington to give Bob Feller an 8-7 victory after the youngster did a rescue act.

Philadelphia Athletics had no trouble beating Detroit 10-3 and shoving the Tigers into seventh place in the American League after Earle Brucker homered with the bases loaded in the fifth inning.

On the other hand Boston Red Sox booted away their first place perch with three errors, which gave St. Louis Browns a 6-3 triumph.

Homers Not Necessary

New York Giants and Pittsburgh Pirates showed home runs aren't necessary if a team gets enough lesser blows at the proper times. The Giants got 16 for 26 bases to crumple Chicago Cubs, 10-3, while the Pirates plastered 14 against Boston Bees and won 9-2.

Boston Red Sox squeezed a 5-4 victory over Detroit Saturday. New York Yankees downed Cleveland 6-1 while Chicago White Sox outslugged Washington 14-12 and St. Louis Browns walloped Philadelphia Athletics 7-5.

In the National League Saturday Cincinnati defeated Boston 6-4 and the Giants trounced St. Louis 6-3 while Chicago ended a four-game slump with a 4-3 win over Brooklyn. Philadelphia shut out Pittsburgh 1-0 in the week-end's other contest.

German Tennis Team To Meet Poland In Second Round

Vienna, May 8.— (AP)—The victory of the German Davis Cup team over Switzerland, clinched yesterday when the Germans won the doubles to take a 3-0 lead, has created a delicate situation by pitting the Germans against Poland for the second round.

The leader of the German team said, however, that he did not believe the current political tension between the two countries would halt the matches, which are scheduled to be played at Warsaw in two weeks.

The German Official News Agency, in announcing the results, made no mention of the political situation, saying simply "Germany meets Poland in the second round."

Germany's team, featuring Henner Henkel and Georg Von Metaxa, is one of the favorites in the European zone, which involved 20 of the 26 challengers for the trophy held by the United States. Yugoslavia, another of the outstanding European contenders, also advanced yesterday as Franco Puncec and Demeter Mitic teamed for a doubles that brought a 3-0 lead against Ireland.

In other first-round matches decided yesterday, Hungary qualified to face the Yugoslavs by beating Rumania, 3-2, and Poland trimmed the Netherlands, 4-1. Great Britain and France are among the nations which drew byes into the second round.

Another in the long line of American League cast-offs to find his way into the National League is Lyn Lary, ABOVE, until his recent trade to Brooklyn Dodgers, a bench-warmer with Cleveland Indians, the fifth team he had seen service with in the American League. The Indians had rookie Jimmy Webb at short when they got rid of Lary. When the latter moved to Brooklyn the regular shortstop there was Leo Durocher, who also happens to be manager of the team.

Johnstown Has Chance To Turn in Great 3-Year-Old Record

(By Sid Feder Associated Press Sports Writer).

New York, May 8 (AP)—"This Johnstown," said sunny Jim Fitzsimmons today "may not be the greatest horse I've ever trained, but he has a chance to turn in the greatest three-year old record of all time."

The horse in question was William Woodward's big, good-looking bay colt, which won the Kentucky Derby Saturday by a sleeper jump and in the third fastest time in the 65-year history of the race before nearly 80,000 persons at Churchill Downs. The time was 2.03 2-5 for the 1 1-4 miles.

It was the first Derby ever run in two sections—the winner and the rest of the field. And, as a result Johnstown was being ranked with War Admiral today, as he headed for the Preakness at Pimlico track next Saturday.

"I say that up to now he's not the greatest of all I've ever had," the grey little master mind of the turf pointed out, "because he's only run up to 1 1-4 mile. Just wait till he goes after the 1 1-2 mile in the Belmont, and against the other colts again in the Preakness. Then we'll find out."

Up to now, Johnstown has had four three-year old outings and has won them by a total of something around 26 lengths. He outran all the early speed El Chico could muster Saturday in the first 3-16 miles, just about breaking the little fellow's heart.

He took the winner's purse of $46,350 in the field of eight, smallest starting Kentucky Derby group since the Great War. Heather Broom, the Earle Sande-trained Blazeface, and the surprising Viscounty trailed the two pace-setters. He and El Chico broke on top, raced head and head on the first trip past the clubhouse, then Johnstown made his bid and won by six lengths.

The big broad smile is worn by Joe Kuhel, first baseman with Chicago White Sox, who has ample cause to smile so far this season. About the best fielding first sacker in the majors, but never a devastating hitter, Joe has been wielding a potent bat since the start of the present campaign and while his average will no doubt descend somewhat later on, the hits that win games in the spring go into the records the same as those made in July and August.

NEWARK BEARS RIDE WIN STREAK INTO 2ND PLACE

Champions of Last Year Win Doubleheader from Montreal

LEAFS DRUB BISONS

Toronto Scores 17-2 Win With O'Neil Finally Using Coach Uhle

(By The Associated Press)

Newark Bears, after stumbling around the International League like a Joe Louis sparring partner, are getting into their stride. That stride, in case you have forgotten, is one that usually takes in championships along the way.

A week ago Johnny Neun's men were under the .500 mark. Today they have ridden a five-game winning streak into second place, just one game off the pace of Jersey City's Little Giants. Yesterday, before 20,352 fans, the biggest crowd the Montreal park has seen Marius Russo get revenge on the Royals and the breaks were with him. The Bears got only five hits of Bob Porter, just as many as Russo allowed, but they put three of them together for one run in the first inning and the left hander made that be enough to win, 1-0. From there Newark went on to take the night-cap, 6-5, as Mike Chartak saved the day with a brilliant catch that wiped out what would have been the tying run.

The Jerseys, meanwhile, were getting no better than an even break at Syracuse. Hy Vandenberg hung up his fourth straight to give the Little Giants the opener, 9-2, but Johnny Gee came back in the second game and, aided by extra base blows, hurled Syracuse to a 4-1 triumph.

Rochester Splits

Rochester and Baltimore also split a twin bill. Ken Raffensberger, just down from St. Louis Cardinals, scattered 10 hits to beat Baltimore in the first game, 7-3. The Orioles, with Dick West leading the way, then turned around and copped the nightcap, 6-2.

Toronto and Buffalo played only one game, but there was enough in it for two before it ended with Toronto the winner 17-2. Smith and Petoskey split eight of the Maple Leafs' 24 hits, and things got so bad for Buffalo at the finish that Manager Steve O'Neil, having used five pitchers, sent Coach Geo. Uhle to the mound for the last two innings.

On Saturday the Leafs dropped both ends of a doubleheader to Syracuse, the score being 4-3 in each game. Montreal beat Baltimore 6-5, while Newark Bears blanked Rochester 10-0 and Jersey City took the measure of Buffalo 10-7.

Sports Roundup

(By Eddie Brietz Associated Press Sports Writer).

New York, May 8 (AP)— The Pomonok Golf Club will hang out the "no book-making" sign during this year's United States Professional Golf Association tourney....Real reason Bill Terry and Ray Blades were fined a sawbuck each for fraternizing was because Blades got sassy when the umpire warned 'em to watch their step.

The other day the Medford (Mass.) Mercury printed caricatures of members of an all-star hockey team with this footnote: "Any resemblance between these caricatures and real persons, living or dead, is purely accidental."

Barney Ross has taken Joe Law, Chicago bantamweight, under his wing and will unveil him in the next month....Los Angeles may bob up with a Popeye Wood-Ceferino Garcia middleweight bout.. "Good Time Charlie" Friedman is trying to peddle silent Joe Hill, his deaf mute heavyweight, to one of the movie stars.

Wait and see if three of the remaining five spots in the rich Goodall round robin golf tourney don't go to Denny Shute, Harry Cooper and Johnny Revolta .... Walter Kozak, who almost broke the race bookies a few seasons back, has sworn off the ponies to return to the golf wars.

Yesterday's Stars

(By The Associated Press)

Earle Brucker, Athletics: Home run with bases full and turned game with Tigers in favor of Philadelphia 10-3.

Joe Gordon, Yankees: Hit two homers and a single to account for five runs in 15-4 rout of White Sox.

Buck Newsom, Browns: Knocked Red Sox out of American League lead, 6-3, by seven-hit hurling, fanning six batters, and himself doubling with one on in first inning.

Frank McCormick and Harry Craft, Reds: Former hit homer with bases full and latter hit for circuit with two on to help top Phils, 13-4.

Gus Suhr, Pirates: Batted in four runs, two coming on single with bases loaded, as Pittsburgh walloped Bees, 9-2.

Ligaroti, speedy South American horse owned by crooner Bing Crosby's stable, gets a pleasant welcome as he arrives at the Hollywood Turf Club prior to the opening of racing at the Inglewood track. Greeting him is Mary Campbell one of the community's socialites.

MOTORCYCLECLUB WINS CONTEST

Bert Pallant is Leading Rider of Trials at Halloway

Thrills, spills and excitement marked the opening motorcycle trials staged by the Quinte Motorcycle Club near Halloway yesterday. Upwards to 1,000 persons watched the tests, that included reliability, endurance and speed ability over one of the most treacherous courses as ever laid down by the Quinte M.C.C. Bert Pallant, of the home club, was declared winner of the trials and finished with the exceptionally fine record of only minus 85 points. Thirteen riders competed in the events with Ted Whitney of Kingston, finishing second to Pallant.

Hill-climbing, speed tests, cross-country endurances over trails never before traversed by mechanical bikes as well as hazardous courses in the other tests of reliability. Individual and team contests were included on the all-afternoon program with the Belleville team of B. Pallant, H. Cole and E. Tufts winning the team racing honors. Bernard Wilson won the speed hill-climbing event in ten seconds flat to give the complete honors of all events to the Quinte Motorcycle Club riders. Points were deducted for inability to negotiate the courses. The individual results of the riders were:

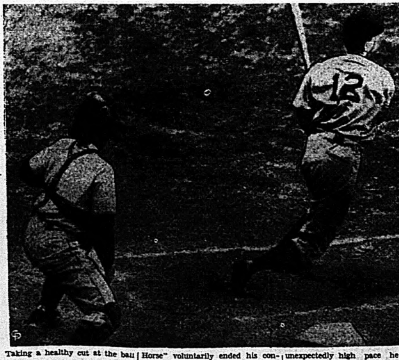
Bert Pallant	minus	85	Pts.
Ted Whitney	"	105	"
Elmer Tufts	"	110	"
Keith Chambers ..	"	115	"
Harris Cole	"	125	"
Walt Hamilton ..	"	135	"
Billy Ross	"	155	"
Ray Hay	"	155	"
Ted Wilkins	"	170	"
Charles Prizzone ..	"	210	"
Vernon May	"	220	"
A. Gragson	"	305	"
B. Wilson	"	305	"

Whitney and Gragson were the only two outside riders to compete in the competitions, these two riders being from Kingston. The remaining eleven are all members of the Quinte Motorcycle Club, although they reside in all parts of the Quinte district, ranging from Madoc to Picton. The winner, Bert Pallant, is also secretary-treasurer of the Quinte M.C.C.

WINS LITERARY PRIZE

London, May 8—(CP-Havas) — The Heinemann literary prize for 1939 was awarded yesterday to Mme. Camille Mayran for her novel: "La Dame En Noir" (The Woman in Black.)

Max Baer, the in-and-out, what-will-he-do-next! character of the ring, casts dubious eye at the left hand of stolid Lou Nova, whom he meets in a heavyweight bout on June 1 in New York, the object, according to promoter Mike Jacobs, being to secure a September opponent for Joe Louis. Both Baer and Nova are charter members of the He Has Beaten Tommy Farr club, their conquests of the winless Welshman in both instances being the last fights they had. This picture was taken after both men had been pronounced in good shape by the New York Boxing Commission.



Taking a healthy cut at the ball is Babe Dahlgren, replacement for Lou Gehrig as first baseman for New York Yankees, after the "Iron Horse" voluntarily ended his consecutive game record at 2,130. Dahlgren has been a Yankee first and third base sub for three years, but unless his batting maintains an unexpectedly high pace he will probably not take over permanently. This picture was taken during the Yanks' series with Detroit and the catcher is Birdy Tebbetts.

I HOPE I SEE A GOOD GAME TODAY!

CALLING 'EM

Between the Lines

with
Ken J. Colling

Three changes in baseball's playing code were made by the Rules Committee last winter and will be in vogue when the old baseball game resumes here. The new rules give pitcher more leeway on the mound and penalize the outfielder for intentionally dropping the ball to make a double play. The latter rule will also pertain to softball as well, we imagine. Insofar as the pitching changes are concerned—all the rule markers are doing is legalizing what the moundsmen have been doing for years—pitching with one foot behind the rubber and the other in contact with the slab.

Attention ye hurlers, the new rule now reads—adding the words—"but his pivot foot must be on or in front in contact with the pitcher's plate, his other foot may be directly behind, or in front (not on the side) of the pitcher's plate." Rule 27 section 1 was amended to read: "Preliminary to pitching, the pitcher shall take his position facing the batsman with both feet on the ground, but his pivot foot must be on or in front in contact with the pitcher's plate, his other foot may be directly behind or in front (not at the side) of the pitcher's plate, and in the act of delivering the ball he must keep one foot in contact with the pitcher's plate defined in Rule 9. He shall not raise either foot until in the act of delivering the ball to the batsman or to the base; nor may he make more than one step in such delivery. With a runner on first or second base, the pitcher must face the batsman with both hands holding the ball in front of him. If he indulges in a preliminary stretch by raising his hands above his head or out in front, he must return to a natural pitching position and stop before starting his delivery of the ball to the batsman."

The Rule 31, section 3, covering balks, was changed to conform with the amendment to Rule 27 and now reads; "any delivery of the ball to the bat by the pitcher while the pivot foot is back of and not in contact with the pitcher's plate."

Then there's Rule 48, section 2, referring to — "when base runners are out," has the following addition—"If before two are out, while first and second or first, second and third bases are occupied, an outfielder, in the judgment of the umpire, intentionally drops a fly ball or a line drive, he shall immediately rule the ball has been caught." However, base runners must "tag up" after the out has been declared before they can advance under this new ruling. This latter ruling will be applicable to softball as well as baseball, we presume. Players, as well as umpires, should acquaint themselves with these new rulings, which were adopted by the National Commission and thereby become regulations in all ball games for 1939.

How many balls do you think a big league umpire can carry in those capacious coat pockets of his and how much extra weight does he carry around on a hot summer's day as a result? Bill Dinneen, veteran American League arbiter, probably carries the greater number as a result of a special arrangement made for him last winter.

Dinneen can cart 19 balls in each pocket or 38 all at once. The pockets are made so that they balloon outward and stretch from just about four inches below the armpit to the seam at the bottom of the coat.

Our congratulations to George H. Campbell, sports Ed. of ye Oshawa Times, for the splendid supplement of last week, published in conjunction with the honour banquet tendered the Oshawa Generals, Memorial Cup winners. It was a fitting tribute to a great team, of which Marse Campbell seems to be a part of, bag and baggage.

Oldtime sport fans may recall the name of Thomas "Ironman" Foley, considered Collingwood's greatest oarsman, who died at his home over the week end in his 83rd year. Foley beat the famous Jake Gaudaur in his professional rowing debut in the so-called good old days.

During last Friday's wrestling show we were talking to "Gentleman Jack" Washburn, who got to reminiscing. "Things ain't like they used to be sonny. Why I recall the night I wrestled Jim Londos for the world's title in Toronto and as the loser's end of the purse, my share of the gate was $1,800.00," sadly recalled Washburn. Incidentally the grapplers will return for another hurl at things on Friday night. Eddie Kimisky, the lad, who made such a fine impression during last week's semi-final bout, will meet Frank Slavick, the agile Polish lad, who was always a favorite in Belleville. Two top-ranking heavies provided by the Queensbury A.C. (Jack Corcoran) are being sought for the main attraction.

We're Telling You—There wasn't much to the Kentucky Derby. Johnstown making a show of the spectacle....A goodly crowd of spectators took in Sunday's reliability tests staged by the Quinte Motorcycle Club, Bert Pallant, of the home club, proving the most efficient....The Cincinnati Reds continue to dominate the National League with the much despised Dodgers trailing closely... "Goddy" Rosen was benched yesterday in favour of Stainback. Heath got three safeties and the Leafs are well fortified in the Int. loop cellar berth.....They have 13 teams of minor league baseball teams operating in Kingston this year.

HOW TO OVERCOME ITCHING PILES

If you are annoyed with itching piles or rectal soreness, do not neglect the same or run the risk of an operation. Any itching, soreness or painful passage of stool, is nature's warning and proper treatment should be secured at once. For this purpose get from J. S. McKeown or any druggist, a package of Hemroid and use as directed. This formula, which is used internally, quickly relieves the itching and soreness and aids in healing the sore, tender spots. Hemroid is a physician's prescription and is highly recommended. It is easy to use and it seems the height of folly for anyone to risk an operation when a simple remedy, which is so pleasant to use may be had at such a reasonable cost.

OFFICIALS HAIL

The pact, result of talks by Italian and German Foreign Ministers, was described by the officialy-inspired commentary service Deutsche Dienst as a "crushing blow against the aggressive encirclement policy which England and France, with the cooperation of certain third states, have long pursued against the powers of the axis."

This authoritative service said the speech Friday of the Polish Foreign Minister, Colonel Joseph Beck, offered Germany and Italy "no occasion for revising their conception of the character of that policy, which London and Paris seek to establish as something obviously defensive."

Denied Demands

(Colonel Beck, before the Lower House of the Polish parliament, denied German demands for the return of the Free City of Danzig to the Reich and for a German-controlled route through Pomorze, the Polish Corridor).

Deutsche Dienst added:

"The result of Milan is the success of the constructive will of the axis powers which finds its expression in action and "not in empty words such as we recently heard from the other side of the great waters under the cloak of world benefaction.... (A reference to President Roosevelt's April 15 appeal to Chancellor Hitler and Premier Mussolini for non-aggression pledges to 31 specified nations).

Invincible Bulwark

"The German-Italian pact is an invincible bulwark against all the dangerous attempts of war agitators to dash Europe and the world into misfortune."

Diplomatic circles mentioned the possibility of closer relations between Russia and Germany, after years of hostility, and, consequently, the question of a new European alignment, with democracy replacing Communism as the main Nazi hate.

Diplomatic observers said "force of circumstance" seemed to be drawing Russia and Germany closer together, with several points of similarity noted in German and Soviet ideology. Poland was cited as one of these "circumstances."

PALATIAL LINER

Finance Minister Dunning introduced the government's anxiously-waited bill creating a government-backed mortgage discount bank, embodying a broad scheme of mortgage debt adjustment on a lower interest basis.

their lawful occasions."

The service ended with the National Anthem.

Included in the congregation were the ship's officers, bluejackets, marines and members of Their Majesties' staff.

After the service, the King walked leisurely along the deck with Admiral Sir Dudley North, commanding the royal squadron. The Queen followed, laughing and chatting with all she met. Her Majesty had a happy word and smile for all.

Like any ordinary ocean travellers, the King and Queen participated in the customary life-boat drill. At noon the ship's siren summoned passengers to their stations. The royal couple and their suite hurriedly donned life belts and lined up for inspection.

Enjoyed Sunshine

The royal couple sat on the deck of the gleaming white liner almost until luncheon, enjoying the bright sunshine and watching the escorting cruisers Glasgow and Southampton on either side of the Empress as the two cruisers plunged and rose with the waves.

They spent the afternoon reading and resting. In midafternoon the French liner Normandie passed. Radio greetings were exchanged between her and the Empress. The Canadian Pacific liner covered 283 miles in the first day's run.

The naval display made a pleasing picture. Always the same distance astern was the warship Repulse, which at first had been scheduled to bear the King and Queen to Canada. Revelling in the going, her great snout threw hills of spray as she wallowed through the seas.

Heard Ship's Orchestra

Last night the King and Queen dined with members of their suite and also listened to the ship's orchestra, consisting of musicians specially picked from other ships. The orchestra is under the leadership of Bunny Rowe, formerly of the liner Queen Mary.

The music included The Blue Danube, Snow White and The Desert Song.

Even in mid-Atlantic the royal passage has been arousing enthusiasm. The Empress of Australia passed five trawlers today and all hurried toward the big liner, saluting vigorously with their sirens.

PARLIAMENT MAY

That bill, with its broad implications, is expected to provoke extensive debate in the House. Then the government's wheat legislation is far from being through the House. The acreage bonus bill and the bill empowering the Canadian Wheat Board to pay an initial price of 70 cents a bushel are still under general discussion.

Only Sugar Coating

The House spent four hours Saturday afternoon on the two wheat bills, although only the acreage bonus measure was actually up for second reading. Six of the seven members who spoke attacked the bill.

T. C. Douglas (C.C.F. Weyburn) asserted the acreage bonus bill "a sugar coating to the bitter pill the West would have to swallow—the sabotaging of the Wheat Board," while Robert Fair (S. C. Battle River) claimed there was not only ample evidence that the government was opposed to wheat boards but also opposed to wheat pools "and in favor of the grain exchange."

One lone Liberal, Harry Leader (Portage La Prairie), declared his determined opposition to the 70-cent price. He announced he would vote against the Wheat Board bill for that reason.

Limitation Protested

Limitation of the 5,000-bushel limit which might be sold to the Board by any one producer drew the widest range of reaction. E. E. Perley (Con. Qu'Appelle) objected to any such limitation as a discrimination and suggested it be struck out.

Mr. Leader considered that limitation desirable to discourage large farms. At the other end of the scale, T. B. McNevin (Lib. Victoria, Ont.) urged cutting the maximum to 2,500 bushels because some farmers otherwise would get as high as $1,000 bonus.

Conservative leader Manion felt the most important thing was for the government to stand by the policy it decided upon so some stability might be given the wheat growing industry. While that policy was the government's responsibility, he suggested it be given a trial and hoped it would succeed.

Victor Quelch (S.C. Acadia) accused the government of "sabotaging agriculture" by letting the price fall during the depth of a depression. He argued the West was not getting fair treatment.

PACT IS VIEWED

3. To renew Fascist demands on France for a share in French North African holdings.

Leaders Rally People

French leaders rallied the people to meet "this war of nerves" which they said Italy and Germany were waging to prevent formation of an effective British-French bloc, including Russia.

Premier Mussolini's forthcoming speaker tour recalled his oratory of last September.

Yugoslav internal developments worried the French about as much as Danzig. With Italy firmly planted south of Yugoslavia through the conquest of Albania, and Germany on the north, minority troubles in Yugoslavia made the situation there "ripe for trouble," in the view of informed French circles.

Franco-Italian relations became worse with French expulsion of a third Italian consular agent in four days. Three other Italian residents at Toulon also were asked to leave.

Italian residents of France opposed to the Fascist regime in Italy continued, through their expatriate organizations, to declare readiness to fight for France in event of hostilities.

JOURNEY PRAISED BY SUNDAY TIMES

Says It Is Convincing Proof of Great Britain's "Completely Unaggressive Intentions"

London, May 8—(CP-Havas) — No more convincing proof of Great Britain's "completely unaggressive intentions" could be given than the departure of the King and Queen on their visit to Canada and the United States, the Sunday Times (Independent) said editorially yesterday.

"Germans or Italians, to whom we are described as war-mongers may well be led to ask themselves whether the King's action does not render such a theory incredible," the newspaper added.

"For our part, we sincerely hope that as he has gone forth in peace, so may he return in peace and that the fruits of his journey may be seen in a widening of mutual confidence and goodwill on both sides of the Atlantic."

Tension Forgotten

Anxiety over tension in Europe was momentarily forgotten as Sunday papers devoted the larger part of their space to accounts of the departure of Their Majesties.

Photographs of the little Princesses, Elizabeth and Margaret Rose, standing forlorn at the dock in Portsmouth, waving goodby to their parents, were widely published.

"Ever since the statute of Westminster threw the crown into higher relief as a symbol of union between the partners in the British commonwealth, it has been appropriate that its wearer should from time to time visit his Dominions in person," the Sunday Times said.

"He goes, it must be remembered, as King of Dominion who receives him first, but others no doubt will on subsequent occasions.

Visit on Invitation

"Yet while applauding his initiative, we cannot forget—nor will he—the example of those many happy journeys, equally unprecedented in their day, which King George V made to the Dominions before his accession, nor his visit with Queen Mary to India as Emperor-King for the historic Durbar in 1911.

"The visit to the United States is, of course, on the invitation of the American government. It originates entirely in the courtesy of the American government. But nobody doubts that President Roosevelt, in inviting, and the King, in accepting, have alike been most heartily supported by the newer friendliness between their peoples.....

"Freedom, tolerance, constitutionalism, peace—these are treasurers, which Americans and Englishmen prize in common in a world where none of them now goes unchallenged. "At this moment, the challenges to peace are such that ill-timed advice might have postponed the King's visit. Wisely he has kept to his timetable."

Smart Guy

By ALMEDA P. STERNER

Steve Miller slouched over and sat down abruptly on the hard bunk. His shoulders slumped inside his worn overcoat as the iron door slammed and the lock snapped shut behind him.

"I'll be bringing your supper pretty soon now," said the big sheriff mildly.

Steve glowered. Whatta break! A smart guy, who'd been around, chucked in the click by a hick county sheriff.

They had dragged him up before the desk and given him their puny version of the third degree. Wanted him to tell on his pal, did they? Steve Miller squealing? What a laugh that was!

What if he did know something about the Hershey Bank robbery? What if he even knew something about another bank robbery scheduled to take place tomorrow morning? Steve grinned. Thought he'd break down and tell all, did they?

The fools! Steve's thin lips curled in derision. They had been so preoccupied with the false information he gave them they hadn't even missed the heavy glass paper weight when he surreptitiously slid it into his coat pocket.

Mustn't hit too hard—didn't want to get mixed up with murder. Too much risk involved. That was the trouble with his pal, Spike—always too ready with a gun. Spike would go to Hunters Place tonight. God! Jennette was in Hunter's place now. Jennette of the sweeping black eyelashes and the dare-devil spirit. His own girl waiting there for him—and Spike coming alone.

In a frenzy of haste, Steve tore the woolen muffler from his neck and wrapped it about the paper weight. It would soften the blow somewhat. Ah, there was that hulking brute bringing his supper, now—whistling, too.

The sheriff stooped to set the platter of steaming food on a nearby stool and Steve swung with the paper weight. There was no sound save a dull thud as the heavy body sagged to the floor. Steve stepped over the motionless figure and out into the empty hall.

Selecting a hat from the rack, he pulled it jauntily on, appropriated the evening paper from a coat pocket and with a shrug, dropped his overcoat through the partly open door leading to the basement.

Steve walked boldly down the street. He in no way resembled the shabby man in the pulled down cap who had so lately been lodged in the jail.

The sudden shrill blast of a siren curdled the blood in his veins. He glanced about for a hiding place. There was none. The hand that clutched the newspaper grew clammy and cold but he strode on up the street. Somehow he managed to watch curiously as the open police car flashed by, siren screaming. Two men hunched low in the seat let their gaze pass negligently over Steve.

It was beginning to grow dark as Steve approached the highway. If he could pick up a ride, he might still make Hunter's Place before Spike.

His breath came faster as he took the familiar pose at the roadside, mechanically smiling face turned toward the rapidly approaching car, right arm held up, thumb jerking forward. His head cocked hopefully but the car rolled by in a cloud of dust. Steve smote his hands together in blind rage, but his feet automatically began to carry him down the road.

Steve Miller didn't give up so easily. There would be other cars along and he'd get the next one. He had a hunch. Almost always could depend on his hunches. "Yeah, here it comes now."

The driver leaned out. "Want a ride, Bo?"

"Yeah", said Steve in his most ingratiating manner.

"Just climb in back," invited the man, opening the door.

"Aw, thanks" mumbled Steve as he stepped in and sat down.

"Well, so here you are, fella!" said the big man in the shadowy corner of the seat beside him.

Steve's eyes bulged. "Why, Sheriff, how—how—" he stammered.

"I'd trouble you for my hat and evening paper," said the sheriff. "We spotted that paper the minute we saw you. A hitch-hiker don't ordinarily carry a newspaper."

But Steve's mind was not on the sheriff and his quips. There was Jennette, and there was Spike—

"Drive down this side of the county line to Hunter's Place," he said tonelessly. "You'll find a mug there you've been looking for."

Applause is due an enchanting evening frock done in black point d'esprit. The shirtwaist top has such an open neckline that it suggests an off-shoulder decolletage. Sleeves are long and full. Plaid taffeta is used for the belt and for the hemline of the wide skirt.

It deals with the most vital problems in a woman's life!

WALL STREET CLOSE

New York, May 8.—(AP)—Losses of fractions to two points were posted in today's stock market after an early modest advance proved short-lived.

Dealings were slow throughout, with transfers about 400,000 shares. Prices came back from the lows near the final hour and plus signs were to be seen here and there.

TORONTO STOCKS

Toronto, May 8 (CP)— An early moderate gain on Toronto exchange was not held today and by noon were nearer their opening prices. Volume was off to 165,000 shares.

Weakness in the New York market was the chief drag on the higher price industrials. Senior oils, Brazilian. Distillers Seagrams and National Steel Car posted losses.

Action in the golds appeared mainly in the penny issues. Reno changed hands in volume at a gain of four cents and God's Lake, Augite and Naybob ruled stronger. Calgary-Edmonton lost 5 cents and Home Oil held up around 2.16. Brown and Anglo-Canadian were steady.

LIVESTOCK

Toronto, May 8.—(CP)— Cattle trade was slow at mid-session on the Toronto Livestock market today with prices about steady on early sales. Calves were up 25 to 50 cents. No hog price was set while trading in sheep was slow.

Receipts reported by Dominion Livestock branch were —cattle 2,700; calves 1,060; hogs 1,480; sheep and lambs 960.

Medium to good butcher steers and heifers sold from $6 to $6.75 and butcher cows ranged from $4 to $5.25. Good bulls made $5 to $5.25. Light stockers were $5 to $5.70.

Choice veal calves traded at $8 to $8.50 with a few tops reaching up to $9. Common calves sold as low as $4.

Previous close on off-truck bacon hogs was $8.25.

Spring lambs sold at $7 to $11 each. No sales were recorded on feed-lot lambs.

Sheep ranged from $2 to $4.75 hundredweight.

Montreal, May 8—(CP)— Hog prices showed a firmer undertone on Montreal Livestock markets today while calves were slow and prices declined 50 cents. The Dominion Department of Agriculture reported that not enough cattle were sold to establish a price.

Receipts: cattle 1,160, calves 1,949, sheep 250, hogs 786.

The markets will be closed for trading on Tuesday, May 16.

The few cattle sold were in small lots with cows from $3-$5.50 or about steady and odd steers at $5.50-$7.50.

Prices ranged from $4-$7 for calves. Good veals made $6.50-$6.75, with an odd top at $7. Fair to medium quality calves in mixed lots brought around $5.50. The bulk of calves were of common to just plain quality and these sold at $4.25-$5 averaging close to $4.50.

Spring lambs lacking in both weight and quality sold at prices ranging from $4-$6 each. Light lambs are not wanted. Sheep were from $3-$5.50.

Hogs were 50 cents higher. Bacons made $9, fed and watered. Selects drew $1 premium with the regular cuts on off grades.

Nuffield Urges Cooperation With Chamberlain

Cowley, England, May 8 (CP)—Lord Nuffield, noted automobile manufacturer, today urged public cooperation with the government of Prime Minister Chamberlain.

Speaking at the annual meeting of his company, Morris Motors, Limited, he said: "Nothing can be gained at present by obstructive criticism of the government and its methods of grappling with a task which is perhaps heavier than any which has previously arisen in our country's history."

"Under a leader who has amply proven his entire ability to discharge the grave responsibilities with which his high office is loaded, our ministers are deserving of the highest praise for what they have done and what they are continuing to do," he said.

"I feel it is their right to be convinced that they can count upon the utmost good will and courageous co-operation of all of us in their efforts for the future of our empire."

Produce Unchanged

Toronto, May 8.—Price variations were slight during the past week's session of the Toronto open produce market. Butter firmed ¼c per pound about midweek and held steady at this advance to the close, while eggs were uneasy toward the close and cheese held even all week.

Fresh receipts showed the seasonal increase on the butter market last week, but offerings moved without difficulty under consistent demand. Dealers state that storage stocks locally have dwindled to small proportions, with the result that buyers are dependent on current arrivals for their supplies. The storage problem lies principally in Quebec. Limited offerings from the west were a contributing factor to the steady tone maintained on this market. More than one car was sold at 21¼c, but Friday bids below 21½c were refused and on Saturday a car was reported sold to an outside point at 21½c. It is reported that western shipments that ordinarily come east are being absorbed by the Pacific coast. Saturday, the market for Ontario creamery solids closed steady, with offerings fairly well cleaned up for the week-end. No. 1 grades traded at 21c and 38 score at 20½c.

Quiet trading toward the latter part of the week gave an easier tone to the egg market. Accumulation was not apparent due primarily to breaking operations and some storing. The market closed out the week at generally unchanged prices, with graded shipments quoted at 20½c for grade A-large; 18½c for medium, and 17½c for B and C grades. Eggs packed in ordinary cases were available at ½c below these levels.

Montreal, May 8. — Butter and cheese prices were slightly easier on open produce markets here last week, the Dominion Department of Agriculture reported.

Creamery butter prints to retailers sold for 21½–22 cents a pound and solids for 21-21½c.

Ontario colored cheese brought 10½c a pound. Receipts: 2,930 boxes, compared with 748 a year ago.

Graded egg shipments in used free cases were offered at 21½c a dozen for A-large; 20c for A-medium; 19c for A-pullets; 19-19½c for B-large and 17-17½c for C. Receipts: 15,425 cases, compared with 10,835 a year ago.

HAVE TILL SATURDAY

Toronto, May 8—(CP)—Toronto's 200 organized taxi drivers at a meeting early today voted to give their employers until next Saturday to answer their demands for a $15 weekly minimum wage for a 60-hour week and a 30 per cent commission rate on collections exceeding $45. In a strike a year ago, the drivers obtained a $12.50 minimum wage.

M. H. Nichols, representative of the men, said the employers had offered a $13.50 minimum wage for a 66-hour week.

PEACEFUL MEANS

It was after Poland's refusal of the German project that Great Britain guaranteed Poland against any threat to her independence.

At the time the guarantee was given it was indicated that Britain would leave it up to Poland to decide what constituted a threat to independence—in other words a transfer of Danzig to Germany would be a blow at her independence.

Observers expected, however, that Britain would urge Poland to try to conciliate in the event that hostilities were threatened over the issue.

In a brief reference to negotiations for inclusion of Russia in the Anglo-French anti-aggression front, Mr. Chamberlain confirmed that the British note replying to Soviet proposals for a military alliance had been sent to Sir William Seeds, the Ambassador in Moscow, for transmission to the Soviet Government.

While diplomatic exchanges were progressing, the government didn't think it right to disclose the contents of the note.

Co-operation with Russia

The Prime Minister added: "It is the purpose of the British Government to obtain the fullest co-operation with Russia in the policy we are pursuing."

Asked whether the negotiations had been affected by the resignation last Wednesday of Maxim Litvinoff as Soviet Foreign Commissar, Mr. Chamberlain replied:—

"I am not in a position to give a positive answer."

The House was in an uproar during discussion of the Soviet negotiations when Clement Attlee, Opposition Leader, asked:—

"Does the Prime Minister not realize that public opinion is disturbed by the contrast between the rapidity of acceptance of onerous obligations by this country and the the dilatory methods in seeking for lateral security?"

The Opposition cheered Mr. Attlee while Government supporters shouted for the Prime Minister when he replied:—

No Dilatory Methods

"I do not agree there have been any dilatory methods."

The Prime Minister said the government welcomed the terms of Foreign Minister Joseph Beck's speech before the Polish Parliament last Friday. The government has "due note of the proposals made by him."

Colonel Beck declined Chancellor Hitler's proposal for transfer of Danzig to the Reich, but reiterated his project for a joint Polish-German administration for the city. He left the door open for further negotiations with Germany conditional upon a show of peaceful intentions by the Reich.

Prolonged Anglo-Russian negotiations to bring the Soviet Union into the British-French line-up assumed new importance today in the light of a formal military alliance announced by Germany and Italy.

Arrangement Not Altered

Diplomatic observers expressed the opinion the new Rome-Berlin arrangement failed to alter materially the European alignment and regarded it as a "psychological attack."

Sir William Seeds, British Ambassador in Moscow, was instructed to present formally to Foreign Commissar Vyacheslaff Molotoff the British reply to the Soviet proposal of an Anglo-French-Russian military alliance.

Informed persons said the note was given to Soviet Ambassador Ivan Maisky in London Saturday and that Joseph Stalin already had conferred with advisers on the communication, reported to have suggested separate British-Russian-French guarantees to small nations of help aga'nst attack.

Views Pact Calmly.

The press viewed the Italo-German pact calmly. "What has long been a de facto alliance has now in effect become a de jure alliance," said the Daily Telegraph (Conservative.)

Some observers said the announcement at this time by Foreign Ministers Joachim von Ribbentrop of Germany and Count Galeazzo Ciano of Italy was an indication of how important the Axis powers consider the Anglo-Russian negotiations.

Suggestions in Berlin that a German - Soviet understanding might be in the wind was cited as another indication. Moscow remained silent on the point, however, and its attitude was not clear following the resignation last week of Maxim Litvinoff as Foreign Commissar.

A Moscow dispatch said that observers of Soviet diplomacy did not exclude the possibility of a German manoeuvre to pull Russia away from the Anglo-French bloc or, on the other hand, the possibility of a Russian manoeuvre to swing France and Great Britain into line with Moscow's views by letting them believe Chancellor Hitler had made an attractive approach to Moscow.

Visit to Molotoff

Moscow, May 8—(AP)—Sir William Seeds, British Ambassador in Moscow, visited Vyacheslaff Molotoff, Soviet Russian Premier and Foreign Commissar, today to present London's reply to Russia's security proposals.

They conferred for 30 minutes.

It was not disclosed whether Molotoff gave Sir William any assurance that Soviet policy remained unchanged with the sudden departure of Maxim Litvinoff as Foreign Commissar.

The brevity of their interview indicated extensive ground was not covered in the half-hour in which the British Ambassador transmitted London's reply.

In the absence of more detailed information it was assumed here that Molotoff merely had received the reply.

(In London it was said reliably that Sir William had instructions from the foreign office not to deliver the note unless he had specific assurances that Russia's reported offer of a military alliance had not been altered by the resignation of Litvinoff.)

FOG ENVELOPES

workers is making ready for the coming of King George and Queen Elizabeth. The stern city on the rock, with its massive citadel fronting the broad St. Lawrence river, is changing its sombre winter clothes for the brighter hues of spring.

At big Wolve's Cove dock to which the liner Empress of Australia will bring the King and Queen, a special enclosure has been hung with bright, silken draperies. There, the royal pair, stepping down from the liner, will receive the first greetings of Dominion and Provincial leaders.

Buildings Decorated

Far above Wolfe's Cove on the city's heights, the large, main legislature block where Their Majesties will be officially greeted, is being decorated with tri-colored bunting, flags and reproductions of the royal coat of arms. A huge, electrically-lighted crown to be set on the legislature tower is under construction.

At all points elsewhere in the city from historic Champlain Street which skirts the waterfront and leads away from Wolfe's Cove to downtown St. Sauveur, populous workers' district, the work of preparation is strikingly visible.

Preparation of the militia for the occasion has been evident for days in the presence on the streets of countless uniformed men hustling to and from barracks and parade grounds.

School children are being given singing lessons for a special demonstration on the Plains of Abraham, historic battleground.

D. MACDONALD

"I heard someone kicking Jimmy in the hall and someone said, 'Where's the bag?'"

Mrs. Warner said she asked Lorraine Bromell, a friend of Windsor's, to go and "for goodness sake give them what they want". The girl went to the hall but when she offered to get money from Windsor's pockets, the men said they already had that.

The No. 2 gunman ordered the occupants of the house upstairs at gunpoint after No. 1 gunman had called from the hall: "Come, Jim, let's go."

Had Grey Fedora Hat.

The man who shot Windsor wore a dark fitted coat and gray fedora hat. He spoke "the same as we do", in good English. His gun was "very long and dirty looking".

"I only saw his profile," Mrs. Warner said when asked if the man had a moustache.

The second man also carried a "long" revolver. He had "pretty blue eyes and nice, even eyebrows" and had a "nice tenor voice without an accent." He was about six feet tall, wore a dark, long overcoat and dark hat.

Mrs. Warner said she also had seen a third man. He was in the dining room.

At this point Mrs. Warner became faint and court attendants brought her a glass of water. She continued her testimony after a brief pause.

Sneering Grin on Face.

The No. 3 man was wearing a dark coat and green fedora hat. He had a "sneering grin on his face". He had a dark moustache and looked like an Italian.

McDermott gave the alarm on an extension phone upstairs, the phone downstairs having been pulled out of the wall, Mrs. Warner said. That same night, the household was taken to police headquarters and questioned.

The next night (a Sunday) witness picked out a photograph, a profile view, of "the killer." She didn't know whose it was at the time. There were 40 or 50 pictures. Later from a book of about 200 photographs, Mrs. Warner said she picked out the same profile view and learned for the first time it was a picture of Donald (Mickey) MacDonald.

At a police lineup of prisoners, Mrs. Warner was instructed to be "positively sure" before she identified anyone. She could not on the first occasion but on a Sunday she saw another lineup and "picked the profile of the man who did the killing at 247 Briar Hill."

The date of this identification was fixed as Jan. 22, the third lineup viewed by the identification witnesses.

Counsel Interrupts

Defence Counsel Frank Regan interrupted with the statement: "One of these witnesses said at the second lineup, 'that's the profile of the killer'."

In the same lineup witness had picked out the No. 2 gunman.

"So far as you know, did your brother have any enemies?" asked Crown Attorney J. W. McFadden.

The only weapon they had in the house was one "to go shooting with"—a rifle or shotgun. Some times Windsor carried "a lot of money," but witness didn't know how much he had the night he was murdered. The gunmen had taken his diamond ring and stick pin and watch.

Mrs. Warner didn't know of any box, but her brother used a bag to carry receipts home from the barbecue.

She identified Mickey MacDonald as "the man who did the shooting" and Alex as "the man who held us back."

on opposite sides.

Turkish Paper Suspended

(The newspaper Akcham in Ankara published a report Saturday that British-Turkish negotiations on security had succeeded and that the basis of the agreement was mutual assistance for security in the Mediterranean. The paper subsequently was ordered by the government to suspend publication.

(A communique was issued in the Turkish capital yesterday declaring the determination of Russia and Turkey "to strengthen further the bonds linking them." It followed conversations between Turkish leaders and Vladimir Potemkin, Soviet Vice-Commissar for Foreign Affairs, who has been conducting negotiations also with Balkan countries.)

POLES MAY SIGN WITH LITHUANIA

Non - Aggression or Even Formal Military Alliance Possible

Warsaw, May 8 (CP-Havas) — Possibility that a Polish-Lithuanian non-aggression pact—or even a formal military alliance between the two countries—might be concluded in the near future was mentioned by Polish newspapers today on the eve of the arrival here of General Stays Rastikis, Lithuanian Army Commanderin-Chief.

Significance of the scheduled arrival of the high-ranking commander here tomorrow was stressed by all newspapers in commenting on International developments. It was said that General Rastikis not only is top-ranking figure in the Lithuanian army but plays an important role in the foreign and internal policies of his country.

Attempts by Reich

The Kurjer Warszawski (Independent) said it had learned in Lithuanian political quarters that a non-aggression pact would be signed after the Lithuanian commander had concluded his talks here.

Other reports indicated a formal military alliance might be the outcome of the contacts between the Polish and Lithuanian military leaders.

What appear to be Reich moves to "encircle" Poland in the Northern Baltic area are drawing the close attention of military and other observers here. The fact that Germany concluded non-aggression pacts with Estonia and Latvia is viewed by many quarters here as proof that such an "encirclement" drive unquestionably is underway. Germany already has a non-aggression pact with Lithuania.

CATTLE EXPORTER DIES

Toronto, May 8—Herbert P. Kennedy, cattle exporter and head of the Union Stock Yards here, died at his home last night. He would have been 69 tomorrow.

Mr. Kennedy was proprietor of the Commission House which bore his name. He also was president and managing director of the Union Stock Yards in Edmonton and Saskatoon.

He was born in Peterborough and educated there. At 16 he started work with his father on the farm and took over the management within two years. He specialized in selling live stock.

Neutrality Policy To Discriminate Against Aggressor

Decide on Stand, He Advises, Before Crisis Arises

Washington, May 8 (AP)—James T. Shotwell, professor of international law at Columbia University, today urged adoption of a neutrality policy that would permit the United States to discriminate against an aggressor nation in time of war.

Shotwell, a native of Strathroy, Ont., told the Senate Foreign Relations Committee he was "in sympathy with" the neutrality bill proposed by Senator Elbert Thomas (Dem. Utah) which would allow the President to designate a treaty violator and recommend to Congress restrictions upon its trade with the United States.

Equality Provisions Criticized.

Criticizing neutrality law provisions which apply equally to all warring nations as surrounding "our neutral rights," the witness said that by providing special treatment for treaty-breaking aggressors "we would to some extent recover our freedom of action without at the same time misleading militaristic governments into the delusion that we had ceased to care for our rights."

Whatever neutrality action is taken, Shotwell emphasized, should be finished before a crisis arises. He urged the committee to avoid extreme policies—either extreme isolationism, which he said the present law represents, or internationalism, which he indicated would result from discharging all such legislation and relying upon international law.

Grey Owl Requests Beavers Be Allowed To Live in Peace

London, May 8 (C.P. Cable) — A request that his beavers be allowed to live in peace in Prince Albert National Park was contained in the will of Grey Owl, Canadian Indian naturalist who died April 13, 1938.

The will was probated in the name of Archie McNeil, Grey Owl's real name.

Leaving his wife, Yvonne, and their children 965 pounds (about $4,600) and his personal estate in England, Grey Owl asked his executors to help his first wife, Anahereo, if she ever is in need. Anahereo is a full-blooded Indian maiden whom Grey Owl married when he returned to Canada after serving in the Great War.

Referring to the beavers, the will said:

"In memory of the affection, fidelity, confidence and inspiration given me by these fellow creatures of the wild, I request the Canadian government that Jolly Roll and Rawhide and all other beavers that have been the object of my care and attention and at present in Prince Albert National Park, be allowed to live their natural lives in peace in their present habitat and under no circumstances be sold or parted with."

To the people of Canada he left his regalia, his original manuscripts, relics, souvenirs, equipment and weapons, requesting they be exhibited in Prince Albert National Park Museum in memory of his association with that part of Saskatchewan.

He asked the executors to keep in touch with Anahereo without her knowledge and to assist her if at any time she is found in need or ill.

Jap Ministers Favor Military Alliance

Tokyo, May 8—(AP)— Domei (Japanese) news agency said today that Lieut.-General Seishiro Itagaki, Minister of war, and General Kuniaki Koiso, Minister for Overseas Affairs, had told the Japanese press they favored conclusion of a military agreement with Germany and Italy.

Domei guardedly quoted General Itagaki as saying that if Germany desires "it is not impossible" for Japan to conclude an agreement similar to the Italian-German accord.

General Koiso was quoted as saying he believed negotiations were under way for such a pact but "whether such negotiations materialize depends on whether Italy and Germany fully understand Japan's position in East Asia as well as theirs in Europe."

Earlier Havas News Agency quoted General Koiso as saying that these negotiations were in progress.

SALARIES REVEALED OF OFFICIALS

Washington, May 8—(CP)—Walter Gifford received $209,350 as president of the American Telephone and Telegraph Company in 1938, heading the list of corporation executives whose compensation was reported today to the United States Securities Commission.

Robert C. Stanley, chairman of the Board of International Nickel of Canada, Ltd., received $204,700.

Nineteen corporation officials received between $100,000 and $200,000, while 65 received between $50,000 and $100,000.

William S. Knudsen, President of General Motors, got $193,713, of which $69,248 was a common stock bonus. Alfred P. Sloan, Jr., chairman, received $164,450.

TWO ROBERTSONS PLEAD GUILTY

Newmarket Pair Remanded Until Fingerprints Secured

Amos and Carman Robertson, brothers, residing at Newmarket, today pleaded guilty to charges of theft of gasoline, said by police to have been siphoned from a parked automobile near the Nurses' Residence in connection with the Belleville General Hospital last Friday night. At the request of Crown Attorney B. C. Donnan, K.C., sentence was reserved until Friday, the Robertsons being held in custody.

In clear voices the Robertsons entered pleas of guilty when confronted with the charge of stealing gasoline and also of taking a gas tank top, the property of Miss Youmans, of the Belleville Hospital staff. P. C. Arnott, who assisted Constable Evans in consummating the arrest of the Robertsons, stated in court today that when apprehended on Dufferin Ave., the Robertsons were found to be in possession of two empty cans and a length of hose in their car. "We found a five-gallon can sitting near Miss Youman's car with a length of hose leading from the can to the gas tank," said Constable Arnott.

"I want the finger print record of these men before sentence is passed," requested Crown Attorney Donnan, which prompted the magistrate to reserve sentence until Friday.

Gasoline found in the can was ordered returned to Miss Youmans while the articles suitable for stealing gasoline were ordered confiscated by the court. R. A. Pringle, local solicitor, appeared on behalf of the accused men.

James McGarry, transient, was given fourteen days in the common jail after pleading guilty to a charge of intoxication. Two other residents of the city, one a woman, received similar jail terms after being convicted of intoxication.

Splendid Musical Talent Features Concluding Concert

Jack Deacon, Belleville Male Chorus and D. Scriven Contribute Several Numbers

Culminating a series of concerts that for sheer musical entertainment has climaxed anything of its nature seen and heard in the city for some time, the final effort of the Belleville Municipal Band and assisting artists held in the McCarthy Theatre last night, attracted an audience that taxed the building to capacity.

Featured in a program that was outstanding in variety, versatility of its contributing artists and sheer musical beauty was the novel arrangement of "Chinatown" in which the percussion efforts of D. Scriven played an important part. The youthful drummer received spontaneous applause and was recalled three times to satisfy the audience.

The clarinet quartette of the band was heard in a sparkling number which caught the fancy of the large audience which gave generous applause answered by two further numbers by this clever group of musicians.

Jack Deacon's splendid voice was never heard to better advantage in two solos accompanied in brilliant style by Mary Conner Deacon while the Belleville Male Chorus under the baton of Mr. Ross Hunter, contributed numbers that drew well-merited applause. A melodic climax brought the concert to an end. This was easily one of the musical highlights of the evening that brought the Male Chorus and the band together in the tuneful number, "In a Monastery Garden". Another feature of the evening was the conducting of the band by guest conductors, themselves bandmasters of musical aggregations of surrounding communities. These included Messrs. H. Ketcheson, Frankford; Sidney Lockyer, Picton, and others. A cornet duet by Bandsman Albert Branson and Bandsman Albert Branscombe was well received.

Mr. Laurie Lewis, representing the Belleville Retail Merchants' Association, the sponsors of the series, acted as chairman and in the course of his remarks appealed in behalf of the Salvation Army building fund. He announced that the association had generously donated $25.00 of the evening's proceeds to the fund.

Twin Fillies Born

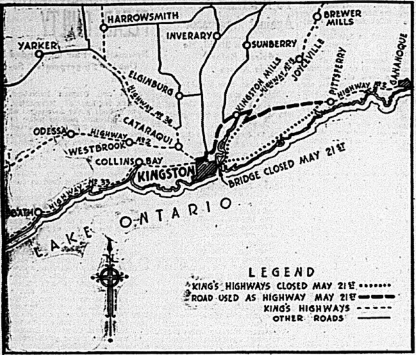
Ryckman's Corners, Ont., May 8. —Twin fillies—a rarity in the equine world—were born during the week-end on the farm of George M. Hendrie, well-known breeder of race horses. The farm is situated near Ancaster in the Hamilton District.

The brown fillies are by North Wales II out of Patchwork. The dam also is the mother of Patchpocket, considered a good handicap horse.

Dr. Eric Hill of Ancaster, veterinary in charge, said today they were the first twins to live any length of time in his 20 years of practice. He said that if the fillies live to sport silks it will be a great oddity in racing circles.

The dam cannot feed both her progeny and William Hendrie, nephew of the owner of the farm, will obtain a goat to supply milk for one of the pair. George Hendrie is at present in Kentucky.

"Safety and Comfort" Routes to Royal Celebrations



With the arrival of Their Majesties King George and Queen Elizabeth less than a week off, Ontario Minister of Highways Hon. T. B. McQuesten today reinforced his program for reducing highway accidents throughout the province during the Royal visit.

Mr. McQuesten said every effort was being made by his department to avoid any serious traffic mishaps which might mar the pleasure of Their Majesties' tour. The program was designed as a tribute to King George and his keen interest in accident prevention.

The highways minister urged all motorists to cooperate in attempts being made to prevent heavy congestion on roads leading to cities where the Royal party will pay formal and extended visits.

Mr. McQuesten pointed out that extra caution and courtesy would be required from motorists planning to go to Kingston to see the King and Queen when they visit there on May 21st.

The map above indicates traffic route changes which will be put into effect during Their Majesties' visit at Kingston. On that day, the bridge across the Cataraqui River at Kingston will be closed, so that motorists coming from the east to Kingston will have to leave Highway No. 2 just west of Pitts Ferry and enter Kingston from the north-east by way of Kingston Mills instead of by way of Barriefield. Traffic coming from the direction of Smith's Falls on No. 15 Highway will also enter the city by the same route through Kingston Mills.

$15,000 FIRE AT HAMILTON

Liggett's Drug Store Suffered Heaviest in Loss of Goods

Hamilton, Ont., May 8 (CP) — Fire broke out in the basement of a business block at King and Catharine Streets shortly after midnight, causing damage from fire, smoke and water estimated at $15,000.

The flames were confined mostly to the basement and stairway at the Catharine Street entrance. Heaviest damage was suffered by L. K. Liggett Company drug store, situated near the entrance. Fire Chief Kenneth Cassel said he believed the fire started when rubbish underneath the stairway became ignited, possibly by spontaneous combustion.

Fireman Ernie Cox suffered a cut wrist when glass fell from an upper window during the fire.

WOLVES KILL BUCK

Orangeville, Ont., May 8 (CP)—Reports of wild animal life returning to the townships of Mono and Essa were confirmed [illegible] J. J. Cochrane, Essa, found the mangled carcass of a buck deer on his farm. The body was partly eaten and badly mauled. Game officials agreed that wolves were the only animals to carry out such at attack.

BBC Will Not Carry Duke of Windsor's Speech at Verdun

London, May 8—(AP)—The British Broadcasting Corporation announced today it would not relay in the British Isles the broadcast the Duke of Windsor is to make tonight from Verdun, France.

The BBC gave no reason for its decision, reached after lengthy consideration. The announcement said the Duke's talk which, by invitation of the National Broadcasting Corporation, he is to address to the United States this evening "will not be broadcast in its (the BBC's) programs."

Britons will be able to pick up the message on short wave receivers. The speech will be broadcast on two European wavelengths.

Lord Beaverbrook's Daily Express, usually sympathetic to the Duke, expressed disapproval of the Duke's broadcast to America while the King is on his way there.

"The King is on his way to America. Any word spoken to the United States at present should come from him. It would have been better therefore for the Duke to wait."

The Duke arranged to speak 10 or 12 minutes, starting at 10 p.m. (5 p.m. E.D.T.)

Sources close to the Duke said the visit of the King and Queen to North America had no connection with the speech. They pointed out that Edward, since his abdication, had expressed the wish to perform a useful work. The speech is described as an "appeal to reason in the light of world conditions."

Toronto, May 8—(CP)—Canadian Broadcasting Corporation authorities here announced today the C. B. C. will not carry the broadcast the Duke of Windsor makes tonight from Verdun, France. In this the C.B.C. follows action of the British Broadcasting Corporation which announced it will not relay the speech in the British Isles.

As Poland Said "No" to Hitler

Colonel Josef Beck, monocled foreign minister of Poland, is shown as he addressed Polish parliament, giving his long-awaited reply to the demands of Reichsfuehrer Hitler of Germany in connection with the free city of Danzig and the Polish corridor. Col. Beck rejected in the name of Poland all of Germany's demands, which he called one-sided concessions". However, Col. Beck intimated that Poland was willing to negotiate an honorable settlement of differences between it and the Reich without recourse to force.

ROBBERS ENTER STIRLING STORE

$400 in Clothing and Cigarettes Taken from R. A. Patterson

Tearing out a portion of the side wall between stores, robbers entered the general store of R. A. Patterson, Stirling, and stole wearing apparel and cigarettes to the value of nearly $400.00 over the week end. The robbery was discovered by Mr. Patterson as he entered the store early Sunday morning. The cash register, containing some small change was not touched, however.

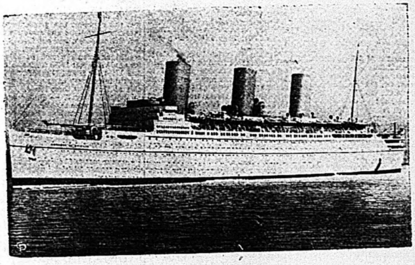
The robbers entered the hardware store of Clifford Hattan, that adjoins the Patterson store and in the hardware store obtained tools with which to bore through a wooden wall and subsequently break down a hole sufficiently large enough to permit a person to enter. No unnecessary noises or disturbances were heard during the early hours of Sunday morning when the robbery took place, nearby residents assured Provincial Constable Wm. McBrien and D. Carruthers upon their investigation yesterday. Strangely enough entrance to Mr. Patterson's store was gained in identically the same manner about five years ago when the store was robbed at that time.

Four suits of clothes, seven windbreaker jackets, four pairs of better class shoes, shirts, ties and other accessories were taken along with about $100.00 worth of cigarettes. Police believe the robbers made their escape in an automobile.

Seats for King and Queen in Legislature Await

Planned many weeks ago, in process of careful construction ever since, the special chairs upon which King George and Queen Elizabeth will sit in the Ontario Legislature at Queen's Park, are now completed. Hon. Norman Hipel thought of the idea— that the Speaker's chair which, by tradition, would be his property when he finally retired from that office, and the new one being built for his successor, James Clarke, be appropriately upholstered and decorated for the use of Their Majesties. A royal blue drape, emblazoned with crowns of gold, from Westminster Abbey, covers the panels and seats of the 300-pound mahogany chairs, each intricately carved. The chairs were made by the Rawlinson Furniture Co. of Toronto.

To Carry Royal Party on Return Trip to England



EMPRESS OF BRITAIN

As the King and Queen set sail from Portsmouth aboard the Empress of Australia, an announcement was made that the royal party would return to England, at the end of their Canadian-American visit, aboard the Empress of Britain, which is at present winding up a world's cruise. The 42,000-ton Empress of Britain will sail from New York on May 16 for Southampton for a general overhauling before sailing on the royal mission.

Russia Likely to Accept Principle of British Scheme to Guarantee Aid

London, May 9 (AP)—British negotiations for an understanding with Soviet Russia were believed today to have gained firmer ground because of an indicated increasing friendliness between Russia and Poland.

Polish suspicions of her big neighbor have impeded British efforts to bolster the Anglo-French front with Soviet military support. But announcement that Russia was sending an ambassador to the vacant Warsaw post was taken by diplomatic observers to indicate closer collaboration between the two nations now.

Optimism Seen.

Informed sources in London were optimistic therefore that the way was being cleared for Russia to strengthen the Anglo-French guarantee of Polish independence. These sources thought Russia was ready to accept the principle of Britain's scheme to guarantee aid to smaller powers, but that Russia now wanted a more detailed plan of how Britain, France and Russia would move in the event war broke out.

Why the Weather!

By Major A. H. Thiessen

Science Service Meteorologist

Plants and high temperature! While plants may endure a spell of very high temperature they will not grow when it is too hot. Plants are not active with temperatures over 90 degrees. What temperatures plants can endure depends upon their kind, condition and season. The dry seeds of plants, however, may survive temperatures as high as 212 degrees, but most plants live in temperatures below 105 degrees. While plants may survive a wide range of temperature, they are active only within a very narrow range.

ADMIT TALK WITH MOSCOW

Germans Say Negotiations Are Being Conducted With Soviet State

Berlin, May 9 (AP)—Officials admitted today that friendship negotiations were being conducted between Russia and Germany.

The success of these talks, it was said, depends apparently on whether Russia would continue to be a centre of propaganda for a Communist world revolution or whether the Soviet Union would become a "national state".

When these developments were first indicated last week, without official confirmation or denial, observers believed they meant the shift of German attacks from Russia to the democracies, whom Berlin accuses of trying to "encircle" Germany, and a German move to isolate Poland, with whom Germany is at odds over the return of the Free City of Danzig to the Reich.

Foreign Minister Joachim von Ribbentrop arrived in Munich today and prepared to proceed to nearby Berchtesgaden to report to Chancellor Hitler of the Milan conference and political pact.

Ottawa, May 9—(CP)—If manufacturers of Eastern Canada had lost the same amount since 1930 as the prairie farmers have, something would have been done about it long ago, Miss Agnes Macphail (U.F.O.-Lab. Grey Bruce) thinks.

From 1930 to 1937, income of the prairie farmers dropped off $2,500,000,000 altogether, and "that is a lot of money," she says. She thinks something more should be done about it than merely setting the guaranteed minimum price for western wheat this year at 70 cents a bushel.

NAME HIGHWAY FOR THE QUEEN

Toronto - Fort Erie Super-Highways to be "Queen Elizabeth Way"

Toronto, May 9—(CP)—With the gracious permission of Their Majesties, Ontario's new "super highway" from Toronto to Fort Erie will be named "Queen Elizabeth's Way."

Hon. T. B. McQuesten, Minister of Highways has been informed by Dr. O. D. Skelton, Under Secretary of State for External Affairs at Ottawa that the King's private secretary has granted the province's request. Their Majesties will travel over a section of the highway during their tour and the passage of the royal car will automatically interrupt an electric beam officially opening a new bridge at Henley, near St. Catharines, and formally inaugurating work on the new Rainbow Bridge at Niagara Falls.

With designation of the new highway as 'Queen Elidabeth's Way' the entire route will be unnumbered Mr. McQuesten explained. The name will apply to the entire route including the "Middle Road" from Toronto to Burlington, the new road through the Niagara Peninsula to Fort Erie and the connecting link through Niagara Falls to the Rainbow Bridge.

Although the road will not be completely paved for two or three years, it will be possible this year to drive over most of it including some sections which have only been gravelled.

Train Pronounced "Fit for a King" After a Trial Run to Smith's Falls

By LEON EDEL
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Montreal, May 9—(CP)—The blue and silver royal train which will carry the King and Queen across a continent returned to Montreal today after an all-night trial run to Smith's Falls, Ont., and back.

Seventy-five railway experts aboard, after watching the 12 cars and the powerful engine in operation, pronounced the train "fit for a King."

It started its run at 9.05 p.m. last night from the Canadian Pacific Railway Angus shops and covered the 120-odd miles to Smith's Falls in three and a half hours. The train's speed was gradually stepped up from 35 to 45 and finally 55 miles-an-hour.

On its return trip engine 2850 was given still freer rein and stepped up to 65 and finally 75 miles an hour.

Under W. E. Newman, chief mechanical engineer of the C.P.R., the technicians and experts covered every inch of the train. Its plumbing, ventilation, heating and air conditioning were tested; expert eyes watched the riding qualities of the locomotive; axles, brakes, buffer and draught gears were scrutinized. Nothing was found wanting.

Radios aboard the train were examined by Department of Transport officials while Bell Telephone representatives, as soon as the train drew up at the station at Smith's Falls, established prompt long distance phone connections. From this train King George and Queen Elizabeth will be able to telephone to any part of the world.

In the royal kitchen Chef James Patrick Morgan lovingly fingered kitchen utensils and puttered around, impatient to be at work for Their Majesties. Later he helped prepare a midnight meal for the 75 tired experts and the newspapermen aboard the train.

The train will remain at Angus shops until next week when it will be run down to Quebec to await the arrival of Their Majesties.

Royal Party Attends Cinema Aboard Ship And King Plays Tennis

By R. K. CARNEGIE
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Aboard R.M.S. Empress of Australia, May 9—(CP)—A southeast by south wind beat on the port side of the Empress of Australia today as she sped the King and Queen to Canada at 17 knots. The wind gave the ship quite a roll.

The King and Queen were proving good sailors. The King walked frequently yesterday and the Queen also braved the rough weather for occasional walks on deck. At noon today, Greenwich Mean Time (8 a.m. EDT), the Empress was 750 miles west of the Irish coast.

The royal party attended a cinema in the ship's main dining room last night and at Queen Elizabeth's special request, all members of the crew off duty, including firemen, sailors, stewards and officers, enjoyed the screening of a Walt Disney short and a Charlie Chan mystery feature.

The royal party and crew members alike laughed heartily at Disney's "A-hunting We Will Go" which was made more relastic by the rolling of the ship.

The Duke of Windsor's peace broadcast from France last night was not picked up by the ship's radios.

The King also played some deck tennis.

KREMLIN STUDIES LATE PROPOSALS OF BRITISH PACT

Mystery Over the Trend of Russian Foreign Policy Prolonged

Moscow, May 9—(AP)— The Kremlin today studied the latest British proposal for Soviet participation in the Anglo-French coalition and at the same time prolonged the mystery over the trend of Russian foreign policy.

Both British and Soviet sources maintained silence on the nature of a note handed to Foreign Commissar Wyacheslaff Molotoff yesterday by Sir William Seeds, the British Ambassador. It had been understood, however, that the note conveyed British counter-proposals to the Soviet suggestion if a far-reaching security plan based on a British-

3 Scandinavian Nations May Say 'No' to Hitler

Stockholm, May 9—(AP)—The Foreign Ministers of four Scandinavian countries—Norway, Sweden, Denmark and Finland—gathered today to consider Chancellor Hitler's proposal of non-aggression pacts.

At least three of the Ministers were believed prepared to give Germany a polite "no" on the grounds any pact would be a departure from the traditional Scandinavian policy of neutrality.

Norway, farthest from Germany geographically, was considered definitely opposed to a pact. Sweden and Finland were believed ready to join in a negative reply framed to avoid giving offence. Denmark, next door neighbor to Germany, has given no indication of her stand.

DUKE OF WINDSOR MAKES APPEAL FOR WORLD PEACE

War is Disaster Says Duke Who Hits Out at Propaganda

London, May 9—(CP)— Many Britons heard last night for the first time since Dec. 11, 1936, when he broadcast his abdication speech the voice of the Duke of Windsor.

Although the British Broadcasting Corporation did not carry the speech, many listeners tuned in on French stations which broadcast it.

At 10 p.m. an announcer introduced "His Royal Highness the Duke of Windsor" and for 10 minutes listeners heard his plea for peace. A press association correspondent said he detected a break in the Duke's voice as he spoke of "the millions of men who suffered and died."

The BBC decision was announced without explanation after a meeting attended by its director-general, Frederick Wolff Ogilvie, and government officials.

SENATOR BORAH TO LEAD DEBATE

Filibuster May be Set Up Against Neutrality Bill

Washington, May 9—(AP)— Reports of a United States Senate filibuster against the Pittman neutrality bill if it is approved by the foreign relations committee were heard today in congressional quarters.

Senator W. E. Borah was mentioned privately by some Senators as a likely leader in such a move. In response to inquiries, however, the Idaho Republican would say only that he was opposed to the bill.

"I would consider the cash and carry proposition as giving Great Britain control of our raw materials and munitions in time of great emergency," he said.

Democratic leader Alben Barkley said he had heard the measure would be "talked about as long as some Senators can stand on their feet."

The Pittman bill would re-enact virtually the same "cash-and-carry" provisions as those which recently expired, except that it would include munitions among the materials which could be sold to belligerents.

Britain, France Leave Decision To Poland, Report

Havas News Agency Hears Report Nazis Accept Vatican Proposal for Conference

TO RELIEVE TENSION

Pontiff Expresses Ardent Desire for Peace in Message to Powers Today

Paris, May 9—(AP)—France and Great Britain were reported in diplomatic circles today to have left to their ally, Poland, the final decision whether to act on proposals put forward by Pope Pius for negotiations to relieve the tension between Poland and Germany over Danzig.

In these circles it was said that Britain and France had let Poland know they were anxious to see the problem of the Free City settled by negotiation if possible.

The Pope's suggestions, diplomats said, were made to the German, Polish, British, French and Italian governments by Envoys of the Vatican acting on personal instructions from the Holy Father.

Britain More Receptive

The British government was understood to be more receptive to the Papal plan that the French government.

There was no indication in Paris diplomatic quarters as to what Poland's attitude would be.

Some informed sources said the announcement of a formal military alliance between Germany and Italy—at Milan Sunday—coming after the Vatican approaches were made might have stiffened Poland's attitude and weakened chances for her acceptance of the Pope's suggestions.

(Britain and France are pledged to go to Poland's aid whenever she resists any attack against her independence.)

Nazi Acceptance Reported

Berlin, May 9—(CP)—Havas news agency today quoted Nazi political sources as saying that Germany had accepted a Vatican proposal for a conference of representatives of interested powers in the German-Polish dispute over Danzig.

"The Papal Nuncio to the Reich was reported to have talked with Chancellor Hitler last Friday shortly after Foreign Minister Joseph Beck told the Polish parliament that Poland had refused a German proposition for annexation of Danzig and a motor road through the Polish Corridor.)

Nuncios Present Suggestions

Vatican City, May 9—(AP)— A Vatican news service announced today that Papal Nuncios in various capitals were conveying to the heads of governments the Pope's "ardent desire for peace."

The news service said Pope Pius, who always has interested himself in peace, did so today "more than ever" and was furthering the cause of peace "through normal diplomatic contacts."

"It is for this reason" the service said, "that in these days various nuncios have been in contact with

Books About Canada Provided For the King and Queen to Read

By LEON EDEL
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Montreal, May 9—(CP)— King George and Queen Elizabeth, in their brief moments of leisure during their continent-wide trip on the royal train will read books about Canada, Canadian bird life, Canadian art, music and literature. And there will be, in addition, the occasional murder mystery or topical book about current affairs, or memoirs and biography.

Lady Tweedsmuir sent the books to the royal train yesterday, one batch for the Queen and another for the King. A little browsing among them reveals interesting differences in the literary tastes of Their Majesties and the fact that both intend to read as many books as they can about Canada.

The Queen's bookshelf, for instance, has Marius Barbeau's book on Quebec, Taverner's "Birds of Canada", Phillips and Niven's "Color in The Rockies" and some of Mazo De La Roche's novels, including "Jalna" and "Growth of a Man."

Recently issued volumes include Nora Wain's book about Nazi Germany, "Reaching For The Stars," Dorothy Parker's "Here Lies—," Pearl Buck's "The Patriot." Lady Tweedsmuir's book "Scent of Water" is there and also Lord Tweedsmuir's ever popular mystery "Thirty Nine Steps." And there is Hall's "Canadian Cities of Romance."

The King's bookshelf shows he will be a serious student of Canada at close range, not only as an observer of it, but as one who will read fully about it.

Canadian books include Louis Hamilton's "Canada," W. R. Macaskill's "Out of Halifax", John Murray Gibbon's "Canadian Mosaic," Robson's "Canadian Landscape Painters", Longstreth's "to Nova Scotia," Cash's "I like British Columbia," "In New Brunswick We'll Find it," by Lowell Thomas and R. Nixon, "Canada Today And Tommorrow," and Longstreth's "Quebec, Montreal, Ottawa."

But the King's reading will not be all Canadian. Among the books one finds a play omnibus, a book of memoirs and Anne Morrow Lindbergh's "Listen, the Wind."

When the King surveys his bookshelf his eye will catch the yellow jacket of a mystery thriller which bears the title "Blood Royal" and which, when you place it on its side bears across the face of the cover the following inscription: "None so slippery as the steps to a throne." and inside, the slip cover assures the reader that Mr. Dornford Yates' novel is full of "thrills, mystery and romance."

'Anti-War' Message From British to German Civil Servants

Clacton-on-Sea, England, May 9—(AP)—British Civil Servants have broadcast an "anti-war" message to German Civil Servants over a secret station, it was disclosed today. W.J. Brown, secretary of the Civil Service Clerical Association, told the annual Association conference here that he had made an appeal recently over the "German Secret Freedom Station" the location of which he declined to disclose.

"I told them we neither desired to kill them nor be killed by them," Brown said, "but that we only wanted to live in peace."

Canada Hopes The King to Prorogue Parliament May 19

House May Have Morning Sittings

Ottawa, May 9 (CP)—An indication that Prime Minister Mackenzie King still has hope of the King proroguing parliament May 19 came today when the Prime Minister gave notices of motions for morning sittings of the Commons beginning on Thursday and a day-long sitting on Saturday.

It is expected the motions will be considered by the House tomorrow. Mr. Mackenzie King would have the House sit from 11 a.m. to 11 p.m. with a two-hour luncheon intermission at 1 p.m. and a two-hour dinner interval at 6 p.m. A separate motion calls for a Saturday sitting at the same hours.

It is reported that if the work is not done by Saturday night sittings will be held Monday and Tuesday despite the fact Mr. Mackenzie King and some of his ministers will be in Quebec Monday greeting the King and in Montreal Tuesday. Some ministers would remain in the capital.

Toronto, May 9—(CP)—Mike Porayko, Toronto, was sentenced today to 2 1-2 years in Kingston Penitentiary on a charge of illegal possession of a plate used for the manufacture of counterfeit $5 bills. John Martin, Toronto, convicted of a similar charge, was sentenced to two years.

WASH-OUT DELAYS TRAIN

Winnipeg, May 9—(CP)—A wash-out near Armstrong, Ont., 400 miles east of Winnipeg, has delayed the Canadian National Railways westbound Transcontinental Express eight hours, railway officials announced today. The train was due to arrive at 8.40 a.m. EST., (10.40 a.m. EDT).

CALF WEIGHS 20 POUNDS

Brantford, Ont., May 8—(CP)—Twenty inches high, two weeks old and weighing only 20 pounds, a calf owned by Wilfred Mason of the Cainsville District may be the smallest normal Holstein calf ever born in Canada.

The ordinary Holstein calf weighs 75 to 100 pounds, while this one weighed only 18 at birth. Because it hasn't learned to feed from its mother, the midget has been fed from a pitcher by Mason.

PARKING LOT AT REAR OF THEATRE

Work is proceeding on a new parking lot at the rear of the McCarthy Theatre, Vincent Freeman, manager of that theatre announced today. The lot will be lighted and there will be an attendant on duty at all times to see that cars are properly parked and also that chattels in the cars will not be removed. Workmen have been busy for some days levelling the lot and placing a top soil on the lot. The parking space in the city will be greatly increased by the addition of this space. "Anyone can use the lot at any time," stated Mr. Freeman.

TURN WADING POOL INTO FLOWER BED

In an effort to beautify the entrance to Victoria Park, in the vicinity of No. 1 Fire Hall, the present wading pool will be filled in with earth in the near future and a mammoth flower bed made, the Belleville Parks Board decided at their regular meeting last night. "The present wading pool is not used and is an eye-sore. We hope to make it into a spot of beauty in the nature of a mammoth flower pot, in which we intend to plant several kinds of flowers in design," revealed Chairman W. A. Woodley today. Originally the wading pool was constructed by the Kiwanis Club for the benefit of smaller children, too young to swim. Upon the erection of the Corby Baths, however, this widing pool was no longer necessary.

COMMITTEE HOLDS SPECIAL MEETING

At a special meeting of the committee named to arrange the visit of the Belleville school children to Kingston on May 21, being held in the Chamber of Commerce rooms at 4:30 this afternoon, further plans were laid by the committee for the visit. Reports of the various committee chairman on the final number of children expected to go were to be presented.

MORE WILD GEESE SEEN HEREABOUTS

The statement made by local bird lovers that more wild Canada geese have been observed in the Bay of Quinte this year than for many years past is amply supported by Patrick Webber, well known city hall amateur naturalist who declares that on a week-end inspection of the bay at Waterworks Cove near the filtration plant a flock of the geese estimated at about fifty of the birds were seen paddling and feeding in the shallow water. These wary birds this year have exhibited none of the flightiness and timidity generally associated with their nature.

INSPECTORS PAY OFFICES VISIT

Engaged in the annual inspection of the offices and books of the local Port of Customs and Excise, Inspector T. H. Glover, Peterborough, and Assistant Inspector M. M. Moore, Brockville, of the Dominion Excise staff are at present visiting in Belleville.

TRAPPING OUT OF SEASON IS COSTLY

Sanford Lawrence and John Terrion, both of Marmora Township, were convicted of trapping beaver out of season when they appeared before Magistrate J. L. Lloyd in County Police Court held at Madoc yesterday afternoon. A fine of $20 and costs was imposed in each incident.

"Did these men catch any beaver out of season?" queried Crown Attorney B. C. Donnan. The district game warden stated no beaver had been taken by the accused men, but traps had been set and the men admitted the beaver traps had been set by them, which is contrary to the Game and Fishing laws.

Several other minor cases were disposed of during the court sitting.

To Strengthen Rumanian Army

Bucharest, Rumania, May 9—(AP)—King Carol said today Rumania's army needed to be strengthened for defence both of her borders and her independence "in the present troubled times."

"I think it is really amazing how fair the critics are, and I mean that."—Katherine Hepburn.

J. OWEN HERITY NAMED GOVERNOR ROTARY DISTRICT

Receives Acclamation at Buffalo for 168th District

Belleville has been signally honored in the selection by acclamation at Buffalo Monday of J. Owen Herity, Manager of the Belleville Chamber of Commerce, and Past President of Belleville Rotary, as Governor of the 168th Rotary District, all Canadian. There were 1,200 delegates present, the Rotary District convention being held in the Statler Hotel, Buffalo. The nomination of Rotarian Herity was moved by Past President Ed. Simmons, of Trenton Rotary Club and sponsored by W. H. Hastie, President-elect Toronto Rotary Club and Bill Horton, President Gravenhurst Rotary Club. All other candidates withdrew and Governor Herity declared elected by acclamation, subject to confirmation at Rotary International Annual Convention in Cleveland in June, taking office July 1.

Rotary International District No. 168 is a new district the former district which included Belleville having grown so large as to be unwieldy. District No. 168 includes all the clubs between Belleville and Toronto, the Lake Huron district, Sudbury, North Bay and Northern Ontario to Val d'Or, the new mining town on the Quebec-Ontario border.
